For this the birds can be halved or quartered, or, better still, the breast fillets only used. Mutton kidneys and mushrooms are a great addition, but failing the latter small button onions can be used, and red wine should be added in the proportion of one wineglassful to every gill of rich brown sauce (or demi-glace), and two or three tablespoonfuls of good stock, to which has been added a teaspoonful of Lemco. If the kidneys and mushrooms are omitted two or three small smoked sausages cut into thick slices can be added. Proceed as for chicken, etc., en casserole, lightly frying in butter the pigeon fillets, the steak cut into neat even-sized wedges, and the kidneys, then straining this off and adding the sauce, stock, and wine, with a bouquet of herbs tied up with a bay-leaf, a blade of mace, and some peppercorns, and the onions or mushrooms; cover the casserole down closely, and stew in a slow oven for about an hour, adding a little more stock as that in the pan reduces. If no proper packing appliances for keeping the casserole hot en route are available, it can be reheated without injury to the contents if the casserole be placed in a pan of hot water and on a spirit stove, the water brought to the boil, and the casserole kept in this till the contents are thoroughly hot. For this reason casseroles are most useful shooting lunch dishes, especially as the weather gets colder and hot dishes are even more appreciated than now. At the same time, one hot thing in the menu is always liked, especially by elder men.

A SHOOTING LUNCHEON FOR THE TWELFTH.

MACEDOINE OF FISH IN ASPIC.

CASSEROLE OF PIGEONS AND STEAK.

CUTLETS A LA CONNAUGHT.

MAYONNAISE OF QUAILS.

LITTLE BAVAROIS AU KIRSCH.

CAKE AND PASTRY.

GERVAIS CHEESE.

CUTLETS A LA CONNAUGHT.

For this braise a neck of lamb or mutton and set it aside uncut till perfectly cold. The cutlets are then divided and trimmed neatly, then masked in aspic. If lamb, use mint aspic, made by mixing a bare gill of strongly-flavoured mint sauce with three gills of just liquid aspic jelly, then use to coat the cutlets before it sets. For mutton cutlets tomato aspic is, perhaps, the nicest. Arrange the cutlets round a tomato or other salad to taste, or a pile of asparagus heads or cold boiled green peas seasoned with oil, vinegar, pepper, and salt.

MAYONNAISE OF QUAILS.

Plainly roast some quails and set aside till cold, then take the fillets from them (the carcase pickings can be used up for coquilles, petites salades en caisses, or rechauffés). Lay the fillets on a bed of broken-up lettuce, seasoned with oil and vinegar, pour mayonnaise over the whole, and garnish with stuffed olives and plovers' eggs (bottled, of course, now). Another version of this dish is obtained by putting the inferior joints of the quail on the bed of lettuce, masking with mayonnaise, then using the fillets for garnish together with the olives and eggs, while round arrange little heaps of the following: Boil separately, then set aside till cold, equal parts of green peas and asparagus heads, with very young carrots and turnips cut into little olive or pea shapes; take the same quantity of canned flageolet beans and French beans, if available, rinsing them well before mixing them with the other vegetables. Now to half a pint of these mixed vegetables add three dessert-spoonfuls of capers and French gherkins cut into dice, a score or so of stoned olives farced with green butter, some well-washed and boned anchovies, a dessert-spoonful of very finely-minced chives, and a tablespoonful of finely-minced tarragon and chervil; mix all these with mayonnaise, then arrange in little heaps round the mound of lettuce and quail. Cold partridges or other birds are also very good like this.

LITTLE BAVAROIS AU KIRSCH.
(Specially prepared and photographed for this paper.)

LITTLE BAVAROIS AU KIRSCH.

Make a rich custard with a pint of milk, the yolks of eight eggs, eight ounces of castor sugar, and while the custard is still hot mix with it an ounce and a-half of finest leaf gelatine previously dissolved in a little warm milk. Pass the custard through a tammy or fine hair sieve into a bowl stood on ice, and whisk till the custard is on the point of solidifying, then mix with it half a pint of whipped cream flavoured with a sherry-glassful of Kirsch. Have ready some little moulds lined with clear bright jelly, fill them with the bavarois mixture, and set aside till firm. Do not unmould till at the luncheon-place. Those in the illustration were garnished with a glacé cherry stuck with a drop of just liquid jelly on the top of each after unmoulding, but this is not really necessary. The jelly lining of the moulds can also be omitted if wished. When a glassful of Benedictine takes the place of the Kirsch, this sweet appears as bavarois or crème à la monastère.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

POULE-AU-POT (Brittany).—This is M. Hermann Senn's recipe: Put a large fowl, trussed for boiling, breast downwards, into a fireproof china or earthenware casserole (you can get the latter in a large size for as little as 2s. at Shoolbred's, Tottenham Court Road, by the way), add the cleansed giblets, a pint of cold water, a carrot, a small onion, a blade of mace, a teaspoonful of salt, and ten peppercorns. Cover closely and stew gently, either in the oven or on the stove, till perfectly tender. Now take up the fowl, joint it, and return to the casserole (as you say you wish to serve it in this) after straining and seasoning the liquor it was cooked in. Have ready a garnish of small braised onions (kept whole and unbroken) and slices of young carrot, add these to the casserole, and serve very hot. Personally I prefer to use good stock instead of water for this dish, and to omit the salt till the liquor is seasoned at the last, when the addition of some rich, well-reduced supréme or other white sauce to the strained stock greatly improves the dish. I also find a bunch of herbs tied up with a bay-leaf and some mushroom powder a great addition, put in with the fowl at first.

CREAMED PEAS (La Belle).—Yes, this favourite American dish can be prepared in a chafing-dish on the dinner-table, and is, indeed, at its best under these circumstances, so it will be an excellent plat in your summer quarters. You can use either freshly-cooked peas or cold boiled or preserved ones. In the two last cases reheat them (after thoroughly rinsing first if preserved) in boiling water lightly salted, and with a sprig of fresh green mint in it. The peas are then strained off and put into the chafing-dish with a tablespoonful of good thick fresh cream for every gill of the peas, and a teaspoonful of finely-minced parsley, and just a little bit of butter is a good addition. Season with pepper and salt, and stir carefully over the spirit-lamp without allowing the cream to boil. It is best to fill the blazer with boiling water and heat the cream and peas au bain-marie.

SYBARITE.

Digitized by Google

MEDICAL men all over the country are rapidly becoming acquainted with the medicinal qualities of the high-class dry Cyders of Whimple, with the result that they are not only using these Cyders personally, but are constantly prescribing them in a variety of cases subject to dietic treatment.

It is a proved fact that regular consumers of Cyder are exempt from many distressing maladies, such as stone and gravel. Cyder is also an effective remedy for gout and rheumatism.

Not only the phosphorus, but the acids of the apple are of singular use for persons of sedentary habits, whose livers are apt to be slow of action. These acids aid the liver in its work of eliminating from the body the noxious matter which makes the brain heavy and dull, and causes rheumatism and other kindred ailments.

The Uses of Cyder:

(a) as a health giver.

(b) as a delicious beverage.

If you would drink Devonshire's Delicious Drink at its very best—if you would realise to the full what a really enjoyable drink Cyder is—you should procure only that brand which comes from the presses of Messrs. Whiteway & Co.

Whiteway's Cyders are made only of the pure juice from the finest English apples, and are absolutely free from chemical preservatives.

Write for Booklet, Price List, etc., to WHITEWAY, WHIMPLE, DEVON;
or 22 and 23, ALBERT EMBANKMENT, LONDON, S.W.

Henry Whiteway & Co., Ltd.

"CHEF" SAUCE

A rich creamy sauce that improves hot and cold joints and aids the digestion.

LAZENBY & SON, LTD.
18, Trinity Street, LONDON, S.E.

5H8

THE WHITE WINES OF ENGLAND.

BULMER'S Famous Herefordshire CIDERS and PERRY.

For a beautifully illustrated booklet on Cider, price list, and special booklet for invalids, apply

H. P. BULMER and CO., HEREFORD.

INSALL'S "COMPACTUM" TEA-BASKET.

Carries its own Water Supply.

27/6

With "Sirram" Fittings.

Fitted with kettle, stove and stand, tins for spirit and milk, water tank, canister for tea and sugar, provision box, 2 cups and saucers, butter bowl, 2 knives and 2 teaspoons.

Carriage paid. Cash with order.

ADVANTAGES.

Small size, being only 10½in. by 7½in. by 8½in. Separate Water Tank. Light Weight. Lid can be used as Tray. Kettle and Stove can be used in the Basket. Metal Lining.

ST. AUGUSTINE'S, BRISTOL. Trunk, Portmanteau, and Bag Manufacturers.

THE ESCOFFIER CARLTON DELICACIES,

TABLE & CULINARY SAUCES, PICKLES, SOUPS, & CHUTNEY.

MADE by the "CHEF-DE-CUISINE" to the CARLTON HOTEL, LONDON.

Booklet with choice Recipes may be had on application to your own Grocer, or from

6, RIDGMOUNT STREET, TOTTENHAM COURT RD., W.C.

7/10ths of ALL

Your little ills will find relief in

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

For HEADACHE,
For BILIOUSNESS,
For INDIGESTION,
For TORPID LIVER,
For CONSTIPATION,
For SALLOW SKIN,
For the COMPLEXION.

Very small, and easy to take as sugar. Purely Vegetable.

Genuine must have signature

PRICE 1s¼d.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

ECONOMY — HEALTH — PURITY

NO BEETROOT USED.

"GLEBE"

REFINED GENUINE

CANE SUGAR AND CANE GOLDEN SYRUP

GLEBE SUGAR REFINING CO., Greenock, Glasgow, and St. George's House, Eastcheap, London.

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

By inadvertence we omitted to mention that the photograph of Miss Gwladys Wilson, reproduced in our last issue, was taken by Langfier, Limited, 23A, Old Bond Street.

---

At Woodford, Essex, there has just been opened a high-class residential home and sanatorium for invalid gentlemen. Situated on the borders of Epping Forest, and commanding a magnificent view over a wide expanse of beautifully-wooded country, Eden Hall is a retreat where those suffering from alcoholic excess and the drug habit will find themselves rapidly brought back to health and strength, without experiencing any of the obnoxious restraint and supervision that render some other establishments unpopular.

---

August Bank Holiday arrangements by the London and South Western Railway include trips to the seaside, holidays afloat, and excursions inland, and passengers holding ordinary, tourist, and week-end tickets will find their every comfort and convenience thoroughly studied; and through the system of running all the principal trains in duplicate and triplicate, the company hope to avoid the enormous crush which has in the past been the only unpleasant feature of railway travelling. Programmes can be obtained of the Superintendent of the Line at Waterloo.

---

The gold key with which the opening ceremony at the Chatham Naval Hospital was performed, was presented to his Majesty enclosed in an elegantly-engraved silver casket. As will be seen by our illustration, the bow of the key consists of a shield supported by foliated scrolls, surmounted by the Royal crown, and the casket is of a chaste and pleasing design. Both key and casket, we understand, were designed and executed by Mr. James Gibbons of Wolverhampton.

THE KEY AND CASKET

Used in connection with the opening of the new Naval Hospital at Chatham.

---

The South Eastern and Chatham Railway make a great point of catering for travellers to the Continent, and their Bank Holiday arrangements include a large number of extra trains connecting London with Calais, Boulogne, and Ostend, by means of their comfortable cross-Channel boats. The home arrangements are also admirable, and every resort in the South-east of England is made accessible by one, two, three, four, and eight-day excursions. The special illustrated holiday programme contains full particulars of these excursions.

---

August in Denmark is a delightful month, and there will no doubt be many this week who will take advantage of the Great Eastern Railway Company's arrangement with Det Forenede Dampskibs Selakab of Copenhagen to visit the native country of the Queen, travelling vid Harwich. For those who prefer to stay in their own country, the Great Eastern Railway have made admirable arrangements, and it would be difficult to find a known or unknown resort between the Thames and the Wash that is not attainable by this line.

---

Very concise and complete is the information contained in the Great Central Railway Company's programme of excursion facilities from Marylebone to the Midlands and the North. Over 200 towns can be reached by week-end tickets, and the fares are wonderfully moderate. The Great Central Company's A.B.C. programmes are easily obtainable, and easy of reference. And being official, they are absolutely reliable.

---

The Great Northern Company's claim that they make "a speciality of holiday traffic" is fully borne out by their arrangements for the Bank Holiday excursions. Half, one, two, and three day trips figure largely in the list, and for those who are going for longer periods there are equally cheap express excursions to Yarmouth, Gorleston, Cromer, and other popular resorts served by this line.

---

The new turbine steamer "Dieppe" has been justifying all the nice things said of her on her maiden trip, and the popularity of the Newhaven-Dieppe route to the Continent will, no doubt, continue to grow even more rapidly than it has done in the past ten years. For those travelling to Switzerland or the Tyrol, the Riviera or Italy, the London, Brighton, and South Coast Company's route offers the attractions of comfort, speed, and moderate cost. For Normandy and Brittany, both of which are rapidly increasing in popularity as holiday resorts, the Newhaven-Dieppe route is admirably adapted. Last year over 213,000 passengers travelled over this route, and both day and night services being run at very convenient hours, and under most comfortable conditions, it would not be surprising to learn that this year's total already very nearly equals last year's.

---

For Scotland, Ireland, and the chief provincial towns in England and Ireland, the Midland Railway has arranged a splendid service of trains in connection not only with Bank Holiday, but with the August holiday season generally. To Ireland, vid Heysham, there are sixteen-day excursions starting every Thursday, and to Scotland, for seven, eight, or sixteen days, excursions start every fortnight from this week until September 29. This, of course, is in addition to the usual admirable service of trains and boats which is run by this company to the North and to Ireland. Full particulars of all these and other arrangements can be obtained at Derby, or at any of the London offices of the company.

---

Probably the cheapest travel tickets of the world are the season tickets available over the Belgian State Railways, which cover over 2,530 miles. Hitherto these tickets have only been procurable in Belgium, but Messrs. Dean and Dawson, the tourist agents, of 82, Strand, are now in a position to issue these season tickets on demand.

---

Despite the warm weather, the music-halls seem to continue to attract numerous and enthusiastic patrons. At the Palace, Patrice with her radiant smiles, and Harrigan, the tramp juggler, are the staple attractions, though there are several other very good turns. The Alhambra production, "Le Rêve," now plays rather more closely than on the first night, and the beautiful scenic effects are as marvellous as ever. The Tivoli brings an entirely new programme into existence next week, with Little Tich, Victoria Monks, and Gus Elen as the leading lights.

---

Messrs. Tuck have just issued twenty new sets of post-cards, and, the public having during the past twelve months shown a decided preference for "oilette" cards, it is only natural that the larger proportion of the new sets are done in that style. "Nothing but the best" fully describes Messrs. Tuck's cards, and higher praise than that it were not easy to give.

Amusements.

APOLLO THEATRE.
Henry Lowenfeld, Sole Proprietor.
Tom B. Davis, Lessee and Manager.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON
Every Evening at 8.15.
The Comic Opera, in Three Acts,
"VERONIQUE."
Matinee every Wednesday at 2.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. Frank Curzon.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
To-night at 8.15,
LADY MADCAP.
Matinee Every Wednesday at 2.15.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: Sir Charles Wyndham.
Sole Lessee and Manager: Mr. Frank Curzon.
On Wednesday Next, August 2, at 8.30, production of
WHAT THE BUTLER SAW.
By Edward A. Parry and Fredk. Mouillot.
Box Office now open. Telephone 4028 Gerrard.

DALY'S THEATRE.
Produced by Mr. George Edwardes.
To-night and Every Evening at 8.15.
Matinee Every Saturday at 2.30.
THE LITTLE MICHUS.
By A. Vanloo and G. Duval. Music by Andre Messager.
Adapted for the English stage by Henry Hamilton.
Lyrics by Percy Greenbank.
Box Office 10 to 10.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.
Managers: A. & S. Gatti & Charles Frohman.
Every Evening at 8.15,
THE CATCH OF THE SEASON,
By Seymour Hicks and Cosmo Hamilton.
The Vaudeville Theatre Company.
Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.

NEW THEATRE.
Proprietor: Sir Charles Wyndham.
To-night and Every Evening at 8.30,
CHARLES FROHMAN presents
LEAH KLESCHNA.
A Play in Five Acts, by C. M. S. McLellan.
Matinee Every Wednesday at 2.30.
Doors open at 8. Tel. 2473 and 2480 Gerrard.

GAIETY THEATRE.
Manager: Mr. Geo. Edwardes.
To-night and Every Evening at 8; doors open at 7.40.
A New Musical Play, entitled:
THE SPRING CHICKEN.
Box Office open from 10 to 10.

GARRICK THEATRE.
Mr. Arthur Bourchier, Lessee and Manager.
Every Evening at 8.30,
THE WALLS OF JERICHO.
By Alfred Sutro.
Matinee Every Wednesday at 2.30.

ROYAL ITALIAN CIRCUS, "HENGLER'S,"
Oxford Circus, W.
Largest Animal Circus. Over 200 Performing Animals.
Daily, 3 and 8.
Prices from 6d. . Children half-price all parts.

NAVAL, SHIPPING, AND FISHERIES EXHIBITION, EARL'S COURT.
11 a.m. to 11 p.m. Admission 1s.
Naval Construction, Armaments, Shipping & Fisheries
NELSON'S CENTENARY RELICS.
FISHING VILLAGE. Working Exhibits. Model of "Victory."
GRAND NAVAL AND MILITARY CONCERTS.
Go on board the full-size Cruiser.
Real Batteries of 4.7 Guns, Hotchkiss and Maxims. The Cruiser is manned by a crew of 150 Handy-men.
PANORAMA OF THE BATTLE OF TRAFALGAR.
West's "Our Navy." Maxim's Captive Flying Machine. Fairy Grotto. Indian Canoes. Burton's Great Red Indian Village—Chiefs, Squaws, and Papooses. Voyage in a Submarine. Vanderdecken's Haunted Cabin. Famous Sea Fights Miss de Rohan's Musical and Dramatic Sketches. Tillikum Canoe.

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. | | PAGE. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Mr. William Reed | 599 | The Traveller—By Heysham Route to the Isle of Man | 622 |
| The March of Events | 600 | Cricket | 624 |
| Sport and Pastime | 602 | The Goodwood Meeting | 626 |
| In Town and Country | 603 | The Racing Season | 627 |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 606 | The Country of the Castles | viii. |
| On the Links | 608 | Literary Notes | x. |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 613 | Leaves from a Collector's Note-book—LIII.—The Evolution of Worcester China. Its Literature and Museum | xii. |
| The Parisians of Paris | 614 | Motoring Notes | xiv. |
| Under the Burgee | 616 | Fashions of To-day and To-morrow | xvi. |
| Yachts of the Year | 617 | The King's Menu | xviii. |
| The Visit of the French Fleet | 618, 619, 628, vii. | Here, There, and Everywhere | xx. |
| The Seaside Season | 620 | | |
| Plays and Players | 621, 625 | | |

TO LIBRARIES, CLUBS, HOTELS, Etc.

A Reading Case for THE KING can be had post free on application to the Publishers, George Newnes, Limited, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.

HOUSES FOR SALE AND TO LET.

MESSRS. TROLLOPE'S REGISTER OF TOWN HOUSES, PROPERTIES FOR SALE OR TO BE LET, in Belgravia, Mayfair, South Kensington, Portman and other districts is now revised. A printed synopsis may be had on application to their offices:

WEST HALKIN STREET, Belgrave Square;

7, Hobart Place, Eaton Square; 14, Mount Street, Grosvenor Square; and 5, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.

N.B.—Special Lists of Town and Country Houses will be forwarded on receipt of applicants' requirements.

CHESHAM STREET.—A modernised HOUSE to be LET on Lease; moderate rent and small premium; ready for early occupation.—Apply to the Sole Agents, Messrs. TROLLOPE.

CLOSE TO ALBERT GATE.—Charming Small HOUSE, overlooking Lowndes Square, lately modernised and in excellent condition, with new drainage, etc., to be LET, for about ten years, at only £250 a year; small premium required. Early possession can be had.—Apply to the Agents, Messrs. TROLLOPE, West Halkin Street, and as above.

EATON PLACE.—One of the finest and best-built HOUSES in this favourite locality; recently had an expenditure of £3,000. The house is judiciously and tastefully fitted and decorated. Owner, living abroad, willing to assign Lease at £300 a year for a small premium.—Apply to the Agents, Messrs. TROLLOPE, West Halkin Street, and as above.

CADOGAN GARDENS.—To be SOLD, the Long Lease of a Modern RESIDENCE; eleven bedrooms, two bathrooms, four charming reception rooms; tiled basement. Moderate price. Also a similar Residence to be LET on Lease. £400 per annum and small premium.—Agents, Messrs. TROLLOPE, as above.

SEYMOUR STREET.—An exceedingly charming moderate-sized HOUSE, well lighted, with cheerful rooms, and tastefully decorated, to be LET on Lease. Moderate premium.—Apply to Messrs. TROLLOPE, West Halkin Street, and as above.

CHESTER SQUARE.—Great bargain.—To be SOLD; unexpired term 18½ years, ground rent £50; early possession.—Agents, Messrs. TROLLOPE, West Halkin Street, Belgrave Square, S.W., and as above.

25, RUTLAND GATE, S.W.—To be SOLD, one of the largest of these delightfully-situated HOUSES, central yet retired position. Twelve bed and dressing rooms, two bathrooms, double drawing room and boudoir on the first floor, double dining room, and large morning room in the wing on the ground floor, offices for a full establishment, two staircases. Lease 38 years at £90 ground rent. Price moderate.—Agents, Messrs. TROLLOPE, West Halkin Street, Belgrave Square, S.W., and as above.

EXCEPTIONAL OPPORTUNITY. OWNER TAKEN UP RESIDENCE ABROAD.

Unique detached Mansion, with the amenities of a Country House.

"MORTIMER HOUSE," EGERTON GARDENS, S.W.—To be SOLD, this charming PROPERTY, built in the Tudor style, exquisitely fitted, and well placed in large timbered and secluded garden, with tennis lawn, almost surrounded by gardens, situated in a fashionable neighbourhood, easily accessible from Hyde Park, the Houses of Parliament, etc. The Residence has thirteen bed and dressing rooms, a boudoir, and two bathrooms on two floors only, elegant reception rooms on the ground floor, spacious vestibule and grand staircase, compact and well-equipped domestic offices; detached stabling and garage, with rooms, etc., enclosed yard; the whole constituting a very comfortable abode for a gentleman or family of position. Early possession. Held for a term having 70½ years unexpired, at a moderate ground rent.—Agents, Messrs. TROLLOPE, West Halkin Street, and as above.

61, KENSINGTON COURT, W.—To be SOLD, this Freehold Corner MANSION, of a very special and unique character (in red brick with stone dressings), of three storeys with semi-basement, and having a total return frontage of about 116ft., with pleasant aspects. The Property is situated in a highly favourite neighbourhood, close to Kensington Gardens, Hyde Park, and within easy access of all fashionable resorts. The interior is delightfully bright, tastefully decorated in excellent style, and fully equipped; charming reception rooms on the ground floor, large central top-lighted vestibule, having galleried landing, with grand staircase in oak; library, sitting room, ten bed and dressing rooms, bathroom, etc., on the upper floors; extensive and well lighted offices, service lift; electric light, etc.; the whole forming a most perfect Residence.—Particulars and orders of Messrs. TROLLOPE, West Halkin Street, as above.

MESSRS. TROLLOPE beg to announce that they have some excellent Furnished TOWN HOUSES to be LET, for long or short periods, which they can specially recommend.—For particulars and cards to view, apply to Messrs. TROLLOPE, West Halkin Street, Belgrave Square, S.W., and as above.

BELGRAVE SQUARE (just out of).—A prettily decorated and Furnished HOUSE to be LET for a year; rent only 450 guineas; eight bedrooms, four charming reception rooms; electric light.

HANS PLACE.—To be LET, Furnished, to December or shorter period; rent about 8 guineas week.

WILTON CRESCENT.—One of the best and largest of these favourite HOUSES to be LET for a year; very large reception rooms; capital stabling; telephone; electric light.—Agents, Messrs. TROLLOPE.

HOTELS, etc.

ENGLISH HOTELS.

TORQUAY (Population 33,625).—PREMIER HEALTH RESORT. Unrivalled climate. Warm in winter. Sunshine-land. Charming drives and sheltered walks. 120 acres of public gardens. Piers.

TORQUAY. Irreproachable water supply and perfect sanitation. Theatre, concerts, and other musical attractions. Medicated baths of all kinds. Express trains from all parts.

For Illustrated Descriptive Books of Torquay, apply FREDK. S. HEX, Town Clerk.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

De Vere Hotel, from 10/6 per day. 'Phone 524.
Broadwalk Hotel, from 8/6 per day. ,, 858.
Prince of Wales' Hotel, from 10/6 per day. ,, 641. Kensington.

Electric Light. Lifts. Everything up to date. First-class cuisine.

BOURNEMOUTH HYDRO.

Sunny Site. Overlooking Sea. Every Bath. Ideal Residence.

ENGLISH HOTELS—Continued.

EASTBOURNE.

THE HYDRO HOTEL.—A select Residential Hotel on South Coast, 120ft. above sea level. Large gardens, close to the sea. Tennis. Croquet. Bowling Green. Spacious Lounges and Public Rooms. 70 Bedrooms, also Suites, luxuriously furnished, electric light throughout. High-class cuisine. Table d'Hôte or à la Carte. Separate tables. Lift. Billiards. Private 'Bus. Nearest to schools and Links. Close to Parades. Week End terms. Motor Garage with repairing Pits. Lit by Electric Light. For inclusive Tariff (Illustrated), also Programme of Amusements, address—O. F. BERGANN, Manager. Telegraphic Address: "Hydrotel, Eastbourne." Telephone, No. 143, Eastbourne. The new Turkish Baths will shortly be opened.

FOREIGN HOTELS.

BIARRITZ.

GRAND HOTEL.—Winter Season.—First-class establishment. Splendid situation, facing the sea. Patronised by the elité; rendezvous of English Society. Every comfort; excellent attendance and cooking.—MONTENAT, Manager.

AXENSTEIN (Lake Lucerne; 2,350ft. above sea level; electric railway Brunnen-Axenstein).—First-class Hotel. World-renowned climatic health resort; patronised by English society. "Axenstein is the loveliest spot I met with on my journey through Switzerland."—QUEEN VICTORIA.

FOREIGN HOTELS—Continued.

TENERIFFE

HAS THE FINEST WINTER CLIMATE IN THE WORLD.

THE First-class HOTELS there are
the QUISISANA at Santa Cruz,
the AGUERE and CONTINENTAL at La Laguna, and
the MARTIANEZ (late Grand) at Port Orotava.
All under the Management of C. H. TRENKEL. Prospectus, etc., on application.

SHIPPING.

MOROCCO, CANARY ISLANDS, and MADEIRA LINE OF STEAMERS; 24 days for 20 guineas.—For particulars write Messrs. FORWOOD BROS., 46, St. Mary Axe, E.C.

Patronised by H.M. The King.

DOVERCOURT BAY, ESSEX,
HOTEL ALEXANDRA.

The Finest Health and Pleasure Resort on the East Coast. Delightful Climate. Bracing Air. The Hotel, which has recently been visited by H.M. KING, is luxuriously Furnished. Charming Situation. Facing the Sea. Electric Light. Excellent Cuisine. Tennis, Croquet. Motor Garage and Pit. 1 hour 40 minutes express from London.

For Illustrated Tariff, apply A. H. THIEM, Proprietor.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

THE COLONEL TAKES THE 19TH (W)HOLE IN ONE!

Head Office: 11, SO. EXCHANGE PLACE, GLASGOW.

J. H. ROGER PROPR.

LESSEE OF

H.M. CUSTOMS (No. 15) BOND, JAMES WATT STREET, GLASGOW.

Special Quotations to Golf Clubs.

"COLONEL BOGEY" WHISKY.

GUARANTEED 7 YEARS OLD.

42/- PER DOZEN. CARRIAGE PAID.

THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.

Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS of every description, including TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT. MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.

Handsome Public Rooms, including 2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel. Telephone 56.

Terms from MANAGER.

CLEVEDON (Somerset).

SEASIDE HYDRO HOTEL.

Holiday, Health, and Pleasure Resort. Near Golf Links and Pier. Good centre for excursions by road, rail, or sea. Resident Physician. Fine Baths. Liberal Table.

SECRETARY, Hydro, Clevedon, Somerset.

LELANT, ST. IVES BAY, CORNWALL (close to golf links and station).—Furnished HOUSE, with plate and linen, to LET for Summer months; two large sitting rooms, six bedrooms, one dressing room, bathroom.—"T.B.H.," "Evelyns," Uxbridge.

SOUTHWOLD (best position on the Common; close to Golf Links).—To be LET, well Furnished, for August, the pretty and artistic HOUSE known as "Link's Cottage," containing square hall, two sitting and large recreation rooms, servants' sitting room, seven bedrooms (fourteen beds), bathroom; electric light and telephone.—Apply to Mrs. ROBINSON, on Property.

ON THE BOURNEMOUTH LINKS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations. High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hôte, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.

THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.

THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.

A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.

Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads. Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.

Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.

Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.

New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare, Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,

Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.

To be obtained from Thos. Cook, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON.

Telephone, 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade and commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.

Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors.

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL.

SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.

Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head.

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.

Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill.

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau, 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 30s. Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address: "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY,

Within easy access of London.

THE BUSH HOTEL.

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers, inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 1s. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable, being on sand.

DEVONSHIRE'S DELIGHTFUL DRINK.—The very best beverage for GOLFERS is WHITEWAY'S PURE CYDER. Refreshing, cooling, and a panacea for Gout, Rheumatism, and Obesity.

Booklets free from WHITEWAY'S, The Orchards, Whimple, Devon, and 22 and 23, Albert Embankment, S.W. Telephone 173 Hop.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

VULCAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E.

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer).

"'Is it a Private House or an Hotel?' is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels."

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGERESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29, Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

1, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

Club Houses can be efficiently and economically lighted by

ACETYLENE.

Write H. BAKER, 49, Victoria Street, S.W.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. Cox, New Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.
MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL.—Brinklea, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library, Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052.

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class. |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned, from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains.

ON BLUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY.

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.
Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Booklet and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

ZÜRICH.—DOLDER GRAND HOTEL, First-class English frequented house in extensive well-wooded grounds, 2,000ft. above sea level. Golf links in front of the hotel; tennis; motoring centre. Electric Tram and funicular service with Zürich Central Station (25 min.). Electro-magnetic therapeutical treatment (E. K. Muller's method).—Manager, E. DIELMANN.

SHERINGHAM, NORFOLK.

THE SHERINGHAM HOTEL,

ADJOINING GOLF LINKS (18 HOLES).

LARGEST HOTEL IN SHERINGHAM. Open all the year round. Handsome Dining Hall, 67ft. long. Numerous spacious Suites of Rooms commanding beautiful Sea and Land Views. Billiard and Smoking Rooms. Excellent and Improved Sanitary arrangements. Extensive Private Grounds. Lawn tennis, croquet. First-class Stables. Accommodation for Motors and Cycles. Through Trains from King's Cross, Peterborough, Birmingham, Leicester, etc.

Telegrams—"Sheringham Hotel, Sheringham."

National Telephone: No. 3. F. EDENS, Manager.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.
Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.
Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & Co.
Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.
MODERATE TARIFF.
Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months

Perfect Sanitary arrangements.
Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year.

Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel.—Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors, EMMERSON & HARRIS.

THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE

Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit.

Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE."
National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL.

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms.

Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

Digitized by Google

Judge for Yourself!

"There can be no two opinions,—

CRAVEN MIXTURE

MAINTAINS ITS FORTY YEARS' REPUTATION FOR SUPERIOR QUALITY, PERFECT AROMA, AND UNIVERSAL POPULARITY.

Ask for MILD AND EXTRA MILD.

J. M. BARRIE says—

"What I call the 'Arcadia' in 'My Lady Nicotine' is the Craven Mixture, and no other."

TRAVEL BY

WEST COAST ROUTE

BETWEEN . .

ENGLAND AND SCOTLAND.

Ellen's Isle. Loch Katrine.

SPEED and COMFORT.

Hundreds of Pleasure Tours Daily by Rail, Coach and Steamer, on London & North Western and Caledonian systems.

FISHING, SHOOTING, GOLFING, &c., &c., &c.

ACCELERATED TRAIN SERVICE:

LONDON (EUSTON), BIRMINGHAM, LIVERPOOL, AND MANCHESTER

WITH

GLASGOW (CENTRAL), EDINBURGH (PRINCES ST.), ABERDEEN, INVERNESS, OBAN, AND THE NORTH.

Descriptive Guide Books of West Coast Route on application to Mr. R. TURNBULL, Euston Station, London.

For Tourist Programmes and "Summer Tours in Scotland," "Oban and the Land of the Gael," "Through Scotland" Descriptive Guides, apply to Mr. G. Calthrop, Caledonian Railway, Glasgow.

Frederick Harrison, General Manager L. & N.W. Ry.
R. Millar, General Manager Caledonian Ry.

When selecting from your Jewellers a Patent

GOLD "SELF-CLOSING" BRACELET

be SURE that you get

SAUNDERS & SHEPHERD'S.

THE ORIGINAL MAKE, UNSURPASSED FOR BEAUTY OF DESIGNS, WORKMANSHIP AND FINISH.

N.B.—These Bracelets have for some time been stamped inside with S. & S.'s Trade Mark "FLEXINE."

Wholesale only—SAUNDERS & SHEPHERD, LTD., LONDON.

ST. JACOBS OIL

CURES

LUMBAGO, SCIATICA,

RHEUMATISM,

Neuralgia | Soreness
Bruises | Stiffness

And Bodily Aches and Pains.

In 1/1½ and 2/6 sizes.

Of all Chemists.

CONQUERS PAIN!

STAND NOT UPON THE ORDER OF YOUR GOING BUT GO

FOR YOUR HOLIDAY

BY

GREAT CENTRAL RY

YOU WILL FIND IT

RAPID TRAVEL IN LUXURY.

FOR IMPORTANT ALTERATIONS AND ACCELERATIONS OF TRAIN SERVICE SEE THE COMPANY'S AUGUST TIME TABLES.

NEW EXCURSION FACILITIES BY EXPRESS TRAINS FROM MARYLEBONE.

EVERY SATURDAY.

To Cleethorpes, Scarborough, Bridlington, Filey, Harrogate, and North-East Coast.

To Blackpool, Lytham, Fleetwood, Chester, Southport, Liverpool, Douglas (Isle of Man), and North-West Coast.

To Leicester, Nottingham, Sheffield, Huddersfield, Halifax, Bradford, York, Manchester, Liverpool, and numerous other towns in the MIDLANDS and the NORTH.

EVERY SUNDAY, MONDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY.

To Finmere, Brackley, Helmdon (for Washington's Ancestral Home), Rugby, Lutterworth, Leicester, Loughborough, &c.

EVERY MONDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY.

To Kineton (for Edge Hill Battlefield), and Stratford-on-Avon.—Shortest and Quickest Route.

WEEK-END TICKETS issued EVERY FRIDAY and SATURDAY to SEASIDE and PLEASURE RESORTS.

For particulars see A B C Programme to be obtained, free, at Marylebone Station, Town Offices and Agencies.

SAM FAY, General Manager

Digitized by Google

THE VISIT OF THE FRENCH FLEET.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICE.

VOL. XX. No. 445. SATURDAY, AUGUST 12th, 1905. PRICE 6D.

Brownings, Exeter.

MR. WILLIAM REED.

Prospective Liberal Candidate for the Tiverton Division of Devonshire.

(See page 613.)

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Digitized by Google

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 445. Saturday, Aug. 12, 1905.

Editorial Offices—20, TAVISTOCK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephones—No. 2,748 GERRARD, AND 7,961 CENTRAL.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS.—The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

THE KING AND HIS YACHTS.—Although it was at first stated that King Edward was by no means satisfied with the "Victoria and Albert," the alterations that have since been effected in that vessel have made her a very comfortable sea-boat, and a very palatial residence as well, and she is now quite satisfactory. On board her many distinguished personages have been entertained, and even the "Hohenzollern" has not seen more epoch-making interviews. Another of the King's yachts, the "Osborne," has now reached the end of her days, and her last service has been to accommodate some of the King's guests during the Cowes week. Her successor is a turbine boat, which has been built very quietly by one of the big private firms, and the old "Osborne" is to go the way of many a good ship before her, to the shipbreaker's yard, where she will be converted into old timber. Some parts of her will be preserved with the King's other relics at Virginia Water; but as a serviceable boat, the "Osborne," second of that name, is now at an end.

Crilb.

A CENTENARY CELEBRATION.
Nelson's flag-ship salutes the flag of France.

THE KING AND THE ACTOR.—It has been a matter for some comment that the King has not bestowed so many knighthoods or other distinctions upon the theatrical profession as it had seemed likely would be the case when he came to the throne. His Majesty's own feeling in this matter is admirably illustrated in a story which is now being told in the clubs, and which, therefore, may or may not be true. A certain actor-manager, who shall be nameless, happened to be in conversation with the King at a big Society function, and casually mentioned the feeling that prevailed in "the profession," that they had been rather slighted in this respect. "Surely, my dear sir," it is said the King replied, "you would rather go down to posterity as Mr. Thomas Jones the artist than as Sir Thomas Jones the knight." Perhaps on reflection the actor was inclined to agree with the King.

THE PRINCE AND ABERGELDIE.—After all the excitement of the christening ceremony, though that was a quicter function than had at first been expected, and the reception of the French Fleet at Cowes, the Prince and Princess of Wales will be glad to get away to Abergeldie. Though it is never the lot of Royalty to be absolutely en famille, it is in Scotland that they manage to get the most privacy, and at Abergeldie the Prince will get a little fishing. One may be allowed to wish him better luck this year than last, for it is an open secret that the Royal bait did not succeed in attracting a vast number of Dee salmon last year. But good sportsman that he is, the Prince takes the good and the bad with equal equanimity. But one wonders what it will be when Prince Edward takes to rod and line, for that young gentleman has a certain dictatorial way with him that the Scottish fish may not like. And if they come not to his lures the gillies may have some experience of the Royal displeasure that a certain governess wots of. But that is another story, and has been told in these columns before.

A WEST INDIAN BAND.—The Indian and Colonial Exhibition at the Crystal Palace has a new attraction. It is the band of the 1st West India Regiment. Not only is it a fine one from the musical point of view, but the performers are dressed in a picturesque uniform, which is something to see. Years ago, when the Sandwich Islands had a King, his Kanaka Band was so good that it beat all comers in a contest at San Francisco. It always played the mail steamer away, and those who enjoyed this pleasant experience will never forget it. The West Indian Band at the Crystal Palace has the same haunting quality. The native regiment to which it belongs has the longest tradition of any Colonial corps. It has fought at short intervals for over 100 years, and has a record which is worthy even of the British Army. It garrisons West African Stations, and played a fine part in all the Ashanti Wars. In one of them a private won the V.C. He is the only negro who holds it.

Digitized by Google

THE VISIT OF THE FRENCH FLEET.

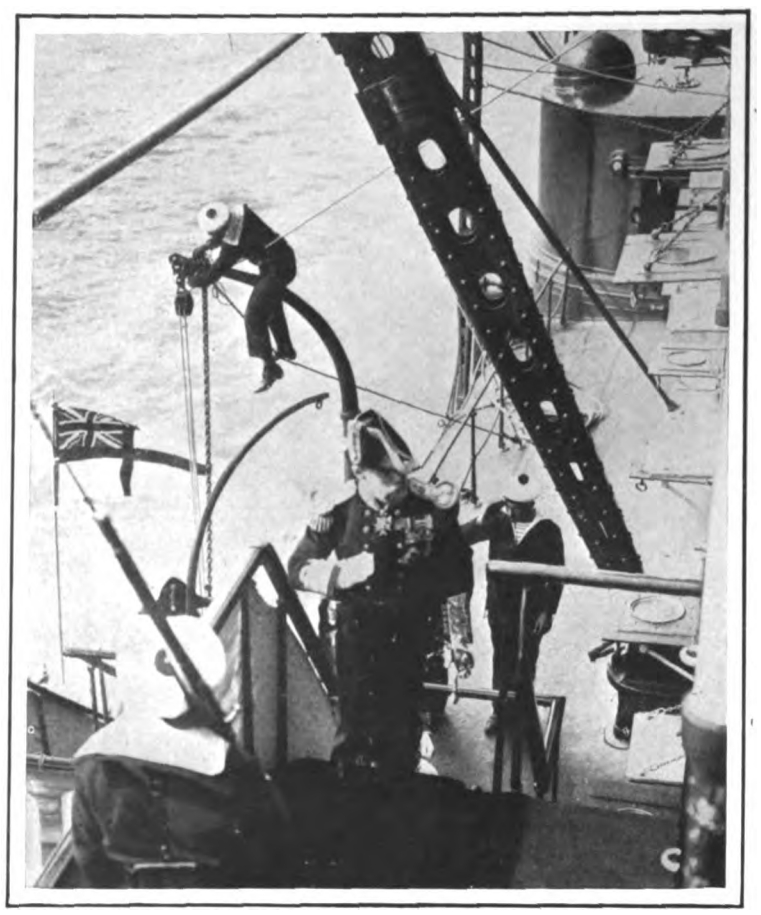
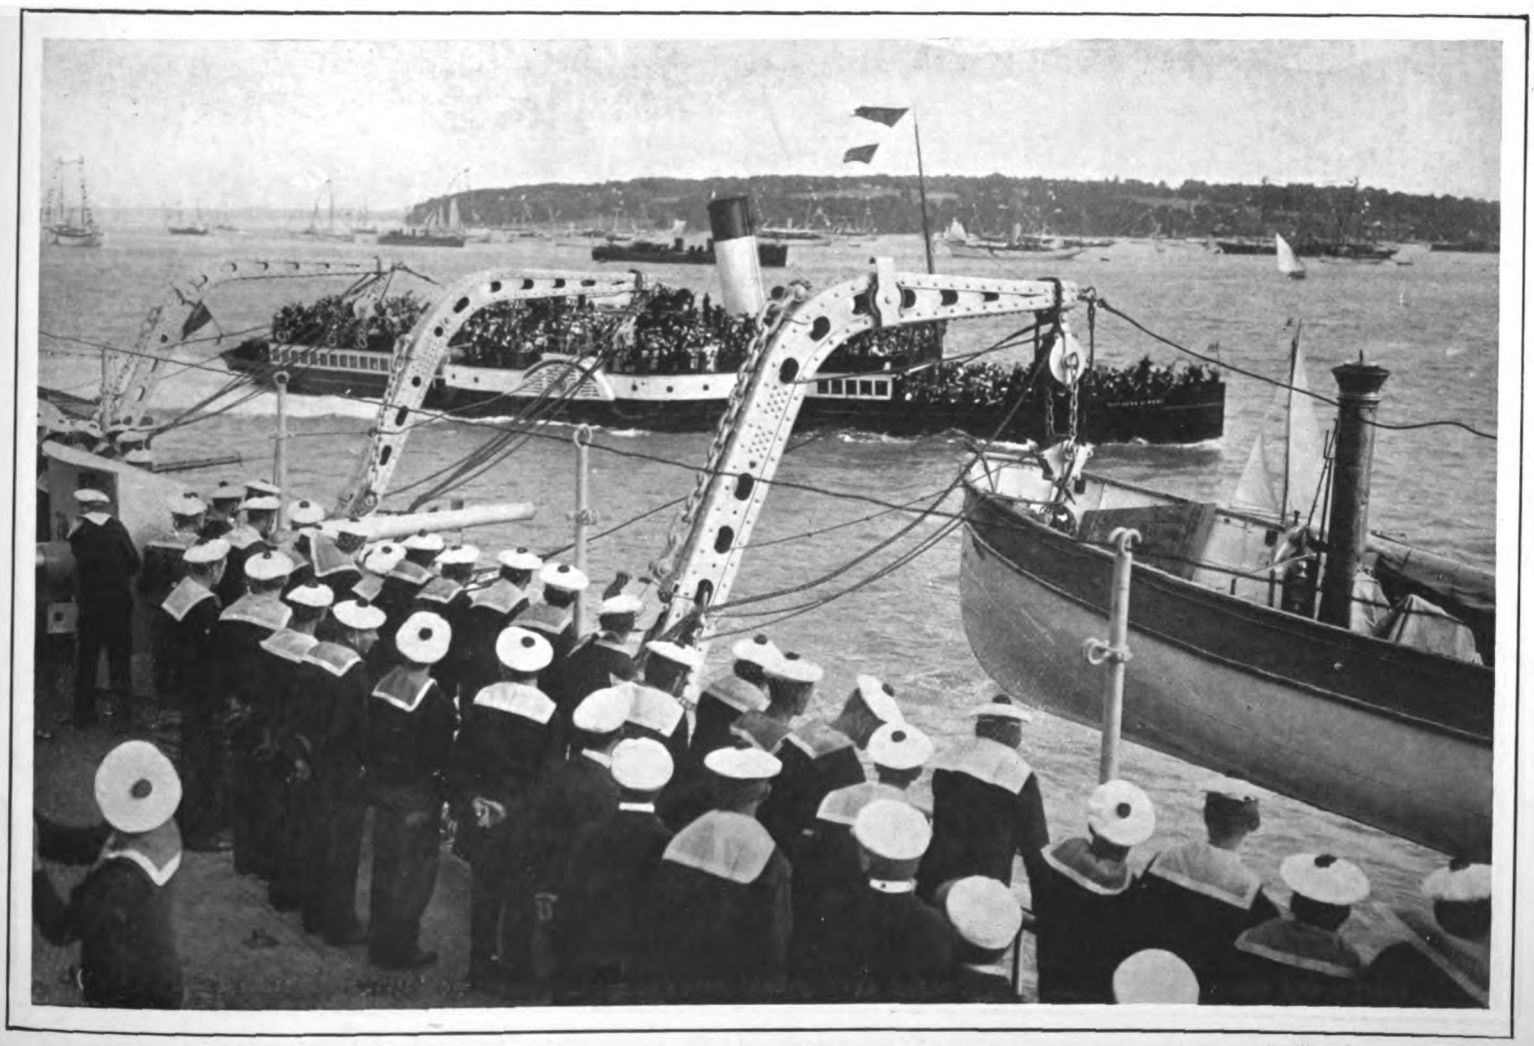
Admiral Caillard attends King Edward to the gangway.



Sir Arthur Wilson visits the French flag-ship.

Cribb.

ON BOARD THE "MASSENA"—WELCOMING THE NATIONAL GUESTS.



Cribb.

THE BRITISH PEOPLE CHEER THE FRENCH FLEET.

One of the "Hurrah!" boats passing the "Masséna" at the time that King Edward had gone on board to compliment Admiral Caillard on the fine appearance of his squadron.

Digitized by Google

SPORT AND PASTIME.

W. A. Rouch.

THE ARMY SPORTS AT ALDERSHOT AND ARCHERY AT SOUTHAMPTON.

(1) The hurdle race between Lieutenant Colonel A. Peterkin, R.A.M.C., and Colonel G. R. Savage, R.E., resulting in a dead heat. (2) In the obstacle race. (3) The Grand National Archery Meeting at Southampton: ladies crossing over. (4) The pole jump at Aldershot: Sapper R. McKay winning with 9-ft. 6-in. (5) Lady French distributing the prizes at Aldershot.

Digitized by Google

IN TOWN AND COUNTRY.

THE SUMMER SEASON AT HOME AND ABROAD.

(1) Driving in the Park: a handsome pair of chestnuts. (2) A smart turn-out. (3) A morning dip at Trouville. (4) The recent visit of the Australian team to Mr. Buchanan's country residence, Lavington House, Sussex. Their host is on the left-hand side of the box. (5) In the Ladies' Mile, Hyde Park.

(From copyright photographs by W. A. Rouch and Chasseau-Flaviens.

Digitized by Google

REVIEWING THE FRENCH FLEET.

Cribb, Southsea.

ADMIRAL CAILLARD'S SQUADRON SALUTES KING EDWARD.

On Wednesday, August 9, the King, in his Majesty's yacht "Victoria and Albert," steamed through the lines of the French and British Fleets anchored off Cowes. The men-of-war presented an imposing appearance, and the representatives of the great mercantile lines, with innumerable yachts, made a characteristically brilliant spectacle in the historic waters of the Solent.

Digitized by Google

THE BALTIC SEA.—It takes marvellous little to make a newspaper scare, and the question of the Baltic formed a nice little subject for discussion at the beginning of the silly season, and everybody talked about the cruise of the Channel Fleet in those waters as if it were an unprecedented affair. Yet to within a very few years ago the Reserve Squadron, which to some extent played the rôle now allotted to the Channel Fleet, annually made the Baltic the scene of one of its periodical cruises, and in those days no one found anything to say about "the danger of incidents." And for the mare clausum talk in which some papers indulged, there is sufficient reply in the Naval history of the years 1801 and 1806. And the wiseacres seem to have completely overlooked the fact that closed for ingress means closed for egress also, and Germany is not likely to shut up her new-made Fleet, as Russia has had to do with hers in the Black Sea. That would not suit the "our future lies on the water" school at all.

EARL'S COURT.—The instructive and interesting Naval, Shipping, and Fisheries Exhibition is so many sided that it is impossible to do justice to it in one visit. What may perhaps be called its commercial side, the exhibits of the great shipping and shipbuilding firms, is a most attractive feature, and the models of ships in the Ducal and Queen's Halls have certainly done much during this summer to instruct the general public in the outlines and general characteristics not only of our war fleet, but of the principal vessels of the Mercantile Navy. The Bank Holiday crowd, which always does justice to Earl's Court, enjoyed itself enormously this year, admiring the huge guns of the Vickers' exhibit and the torpedo-discharging apparatus shown by Messrs. Armstrong, Whitworth, and Co., as well as the numerous other interesting stands.

SECRETARIES OF STATE.—There are to-day nine gentlemen having the powers and privileges of Secretaries of State, though only five of them are officially styled so. And Mr. Balfour proposes to add a tenth to the list. It is now 800 years since the first Secretary of State was appointed, under Henry III., who apparently felt that, having established a Parliament, he must have a secretary for it. For a couple of centuries things went fairly smoothly with one secretary; but then, owing to pressure of work in France, two were deemed necessary, and two remained the rule until Elizabeth, in the spirit of economy which marked her early years, tried to do with one. She came back to two, however, and from then until 1794 there were always two, one dealing with matters pertaining to the Northern States of Europe, the other with the Southern States, as well as Home, Irish, and Colonial business. In 1794 a Secretaryship of State for War and the Colonies was created, and until 1854 continued to discharge the double duties. Then the Colonies were given a Secretary of State of their own, making four, and in 1858 India was separated from the Colonial Department, and Lord Stanley became the first head of the department.

THE "CORNSTALK."—The British Australasian is irate because the English journalist uses the term "Cornstalk" as though it were a nickname for the Australian. It is nothing of the kind, we are told. It is used only in reference to the native of New South Wales. The Victorian is "Gum-sucker"; the Queenslander "Banalander"; the South Australian "Croweater"; and the West Australian "Sand-groper." Now all these names may be expressive enough locally, but none of them conveys the same meaning to the outer world as "Cornstalk." Englishmen, in particular, have seized on it as suggesting that the Australian, alone of Colonials, has evolved a distinct physical type. Our contemporary complains that we might as well call Canadians New Englanders, and Mexicans Yankees, as call Australians from the several States "Cornstalks." But the parallel is absurd, seeing that the North American Continent is inhabited by three different nationalities, whereas the Island Continent is inhabited by only one. Moreover, the Yankee is strictly a New Englander, but the term is applied to all Americans without distinction. So will "Cornstalk" ever be applied to Australians.

THE PEACE NEGOTIATIONS.—The Japanese and Russian plenipotentiaries, upon whose forthcoming conference so much depends, have had an ideal site selected for the scene of their labours. The new general stores building at the Navy Yard, Portsmouth, N.H., has only recently been completed, and, being large and roomy, offers attractions in that direction. But, in addition to this, it is situated right in the Navy Yard, and no one, therefore, who is not officially authorised can get near the conference-rooms, and the Naval authorities may be relied upon to allow no interference with the comfort of their distinguished guests. In addition, there are excellent hotels in the neighbourhood, and the climate is very delightful.

THE FRENCH VISIT.—The early part of the visit of the French Fleet to Cowes has been so extremely successful that it seems almost impossible to add to the congratulations which have been showered upon those responsible for the arrangements. Yet a word must be said for the beautifully designed and produced programme. The illustrations by the Chevalier de Martino are exquisite, and lend a touch of brightness to what is, even without them, a model of what a programme should be. In the little pocket at the end of the book is a chart, which has been prepared by the Hydrographic Department, and is published by Mr. Potter, the Admiralty chart agent. And for those who were present at the Naval Review on Wednesday it was an invaluable aid.

HOSTESS TO ROYALTY.—Prince Arthur of Connaught was, a few days ago, the guest of Lady Anstruther at Carmichael House, her beautiful place in Lanarkshire. She is an Australian, tall and graceful in figure, and refined in features and colouring. Her husband, who was making a Colonial tour, met her in Sydney, and they were married there in 1901. Lady Anstruther is a daughter of Sir Frederick Darley, Chief Justice of New South Wales. He and his handsome wife were in England all the time the War Commission was sitting, for Sir Frederick was its only Colonial member. Just as they were about to return home Sir Windham Anstruther died suddenly, and their daughter was left a young widow with a baby in arms. This little child is also Sir Windham, and eleventh baronet of his line. He was two years old in April, and holds the curious title of Heritable Carver to the Court of Scotland.

Alice Hughes, 52, Gower Street.

MRS. PRYCE-JONES

Daughter of Lieutenant-Colonel Lewis and Lady Victoria Dawnay, was married on Saturday last to Lieutenant H. M. Pryce-Jones of the Coldstream Guards. The wedding took place at the Guards' Chapel, Wellington Barracks.

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

THE Eliminating Trials held off Sea View on August 1 for the purpose of selecting three boats to represent this country in the British International Cup at Arachon next month, once more illustrated the unreliability of the racing motor-boat, or perhaps it would be fairer to say the want of care and forethought of some of those who build and run them. So many garbled accounts, both of the race and the competing craft, have appeared in print that it may be of interest to give the true details at some length. Only six boats were entered for this very important event, and of these but four put in an appearance at the start. They were "Napier II.," the Yarrow-built boat which did so well at Monaco in the spring, and made the fastest time in the recent cross-Channel race; "Napier," with its light and graceful Saunders hull, constructed with three thin skins sewn together with copper wire; "Competitor," which is the old "Napier Minor," re-engined with a big Siddeley motor, and now the property of Lieutenant Mansfield-Cumming, R.N.; and, lastly, "Brooke I.," a new boat of the extreme type, with a Brooke engine, said to be of 300-h.p. "Napier II." was run, in a sense, as a makeshift, as the new boat entered by the Hon. John Scott-Montagu and Mr. Lionel de Rothschild was not completed in time for the race, and the Napier boat was placed at their disposal in its place. Mr. Montagu steered her, while Lord Howard de Walden was in charge of "Napier."

The course was from Sea View Pier-head to three mark-boats off Bembridge, returning to three other mark-boats moored between Sea View and Noman's Fort. The distance was officially stated to be five miles, which had to be covered seven times, but it is probable that the boats ran nearly six miles on each round of the course. "Competitor" was the only boat under weigh when the gun fired; but she was followed two minutes later by "Napier," whose share in the race was of a somewhat meteoric character. She had barely crossed the line when one of her steering-connections parted, and she charged a yacht lying at anchor. Luckily her speed was considerably reduced before the impact, but it speaks much for the strength of her Saunders hull that the damage was insignificant. She drifted about for an hour or two before she got going again, and had hardly proceeded a hundred yards before she again became unmanageable and fouled a yacht's cable with her propellor. It appears that the steel ropes connecting the wheel with the tiller had become corroded owing to the action of the sea-water, a defect which ought most certainly to have been discovered before the race. "Brooke I." started three minutes after gun-fire, but it was apparent that her huge engine was giving trouble. She is a type of craft only suited to the smoothest water, and it was lucky for her crew that the weather conditions were almost ideal. In her present trim she is little better than a death-trap, and her owners would be well advised to restrict her racing to the Broads and rivers. Her obvious unseaworthiness is increased by the fact that the engine weighs 50 per cent. more than the weight for which the hull was designed.

Topical.

THE ELIMINATING TRIALS OFF THE ISLE OF WIGHT.
The winner, "Napier II.," steered by the Hon. Scott-Montagu, M.P.

There still remained "Napier II.," which had blown a cylinder-head joint on her journey over in the morning. A quick repair was carried out with such materials as could be obtained locally, and she started only twenty minutes late, just after "Brooke I." had completed her first round. It was immediately apparent that she was by far the fastest boat in the race, and she finished the seven rounds of the course, with only one short stoppage, in 1-hr. 47-min. 24-sec. "Competitor" and "Brooke I." both broke down hopelessly after completing four rounds, the former, I believe, from a heated bearing, and the latter owing to the engine getting swamped by the spray. "Brooke I.," after drifting about for an hour or two, was picked up in a water-logged condition, and towed into Bembridge. "Competitor," which got going again, broke down once more on her voyage back to Southampton, and was taken in tow off Ryde. If the race itself had been somewhat tame, the salvage operations which succeeded it proved full of excitement for those who took part in them, and without going into details, which in no wise concern the official portion of the eliminating trial, I may say that there were moments when it seemed highly probable that neither "Brooke I." nor "Competitor" would ever make port. A flimsy racing shell, half full of water, and badly down by the head, is not an easy "tow" under any conditions, and the difficulty was considerably increased in the present case by the stiff breeze and choppy sea which prevailed in the late afternoon.

On the two days succeeding the Eliminating Race, the Motor-Yacht Club held its Reliability Trials in Southampton Water. Until the official report is issued it is impossible to give more than a few particulars of this very instructive competition. Thirty-three boats out of the thirty-seven entered put in an appearance at the start, and presented a very

Topical.

THE MOTOR-BOAT TRIALS OFF THE ISLE OF WIGHT.
Mr. Mawdsley Brooke's boat at full speed.

Digitized by Google

pretty spectacle as they crossed the line off Hythe Pier at the commencement of their ten hours' run. The majority were entered for what was called the "open" course, which, as I stated last week, took them well down into the Solent. This, however, had only to be covered once, the remainder of the time being spent in circumnavigating the "sheltered" course within Southampton Water itself. The absolute non-stop records. In several cases, however, the stoppages were of a temporary character, and due to defects which were easily remedied, a common source of trouble being choked fuel-pipes.

An unfortunate change came over the scene on Thursday, torrents of rain and half a gale of wind rendered Southampton Water suitable for testing the seaworthiness of any small Company, and an entirely open steam-launch by Simpson and Strickland. The racer "Napier" attempted the course, but her ignition mechanism was swamped by the spray, and she was taken in tow by another motor-craft. The so-called "sheltered" course was shortened to keep the craft within sight of the committee-boat, but as the weather grew worse the officials wisely decided to day was beautifully fine, and the absence of wind in the morning robbed the open course of its utility as a test of seaworthiness. Generally speaking, the boats presented a far more workmanlike appearance than last year, and "freak" designs were conspicuously absent. Of the thirty-three starters, thirty-one were still running at the end of the ten hours' trial, but only eighteen had succeeded in securing craft. In spite of the adverse conditions, twenty-six boats started, one of the absentees making a plucky but unsuccessful attempt to get out of the dock against the headwind and sea. Fourteen even succeeded in going round the open course, where a really heavy sea was running, and amongst these special mention should be made of the Blake and Thornycroft 25-footers, a 22-ft. boat by the Mitcham stop the competition at one o'clock. The five hours' running, however, under the conditions which prevailed, was equivalent to at least treble the time in normal weather, and the boats must be said to have acquitted themselves exceedingly well. Fourteen made absolute non-stops, and, as on the preceding day, minor defects were more numerous than serious breakdowns. RADIATOR.

Draycott Galleries.

MISS BILLIE BURKE ON HER MARTINI CAR.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

EDITED BY A. J. ROBERTSON.

THE fourteenth annual tournament for the Irish Open Championship (illustrations of which are given this week) was played last week over the course of the Royal Dublin Golf Club at Dollymount. There was an entry of seventy competitors, as compared with about 103 the previous year. The falling off in the entry is due to the fact that the officials of the Irish Golf Union, for some reason not easy to understand, changed the date of the fixture this year by making it come at the beginning of August instead of at the beginning of September, as in earlier years. It is understood that the change was primarily made in order to suit the convenience of many leading players from England and Scotland who generally figure each year in the Irish tournament; but if that was the main reason of the change, the result must convince the Irish golfers that it has not been a wise one. The later date has always provided a better entry than this year, for not only is the number of players does not reach the high standard of the earlier competitions.

* * *

The Irish Championship has always been looked upon among Scottish and English golfers as an admirable golfing holiday. It was taken as part of a general golfing tour round the Irish greens in the North of Ireland, for which so many cheap facilities are given by the railways and the steamboat companies. The beginning of August would thus appear to be an inconvenient date, for this year such well-known players from Scotland as Mr. W. B. Taylor, Mr. Angus Macdonald, and Mr. J. M. Williamson have not been able to cross the Channel owing to important competitions at home. But Mr. J. S. Worthington of Mid-Surrey, the holder of the title, was present to defend it,

Copyright.

THE WEMYSS CUP, INNERLEVEN.

Mr. William Shepherd, hon. secretary, and winner of the Wemyss Cup, Innerleven, with the lowest score on record in that competition. He has served twenty-four years in the Lothians and Perwickshire Yeomanry and the Fife Light Horse.

together with Mr. J. F. Mitchell of Musselburgh, the runner-up of last year.

* * *

The final round of thirty-six holes was played between Mr. H. A. Boyd (Portmarnock) and Mr. F. J. Mitchell, who was beaten in the final last year. There was not much to choose between the game of both players. It was good steady golf, in which first one and then the other got a lead, the first half of the match ending all square, with scores of 81 for Mr. Boyd and 82 for Mr. Mitchell. In the afternoon Mr. Mitchell had the best of the first nine holes, leading by one hole on the homeward journey. Mr. Boyd, however, played a dashing game homewards, and at the thirteenth hole led by 2. Mr. Boyd eventually won the Championship by 3 and 2 to play.

* * *

The Calcutta Cup was played for at St. Andrews last week. Throughout all his matches Mr. J. A. Shaw showed brilliant form, but in the final he was beaten by the Hon. R. Graham Murray after a close match. Through touching the line of the putt with his hand at one of the holes the umpire decided that Mr. Shaw had lost the hole. This decision seemed to upset Mr. Shaw, for he subsequently went off his game. The incident shows how watchful experienced players must be, even in the excitement of a hard match, to see that their methods of play on the putting green conform exactly with the letter and spirit of the rules.

* * *

There is reproduced this week a photograph of Mr. William Shepherd, hon. secretary of the Innerleven Golf Club, who won the Wemyss Cup at the recent spring meeting with an admirable 77 (36 and 41). It was suggested to Mr. Shepherd that a likeness of him after missing a putt of four or five feet, say, might be preferred by many readers; but he explained that putting of the kind hinted at was to him impossible. Mr. Shepherd's score is the lowest on record for this cup, the next being 79, made by Mr. William Henderson last year and again the other day. The present cup, given by the present Wemyss of Wemyss in 1881, succeeds one given by an ancestor away back in the earlier history of the club, which, fairly covered with the names of winners famous in their day, still remains among the

Copyright.

THE IRISH CHAMPIONSHIP.

A view of the Dollymount course on the way to the 7th tee; Mr. J. S. Worthington on the right.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

club's most highly-prized treasures. Among well-known winners of the present cup may be noted the veteran Mr. Charles Anderson of Fettykil, Mr. John Foggo, Mr. W. Norman Boase, Mr. A. G. Tait, the Rev. John Henderson of Collessie, and his even more formidable brother William, Mr. John McGibbon, and so on. Mr. Shepherd also won the Ramornie medal, played for by strokes, in 1902. Mr. Shepherd is well known in connection with the volunteers, with whom he has seen twenty-four years' service – first with the Lothians and Berwickshire Yeomanry, thereafter with the Fife Light Horse, and at present as Captain and Officer Commanding of No. 8 (Leven) Battery of the 1st Fife R.G.A V.—and his shooting record is a splendid one.

* * *

Last week at Elie, in Fifeshire, the Marquess of Headfort, playing a three-ball match with Mr. W. T. Armour and Mr. T. R. Outhwaite, took the short hole in one stroke. It is not an easy hole to play in three at any time. The caddies must have had a worthy rejoicing when the round was finished in toasting the marquess's health!

* * *

There has been some difficulty lately about turf on the links in the North of Scotland. The Aberdeen Club at Balgownie have had a controversy with the local authorities about the carting away of their turf, and the other day the Buckie Club sued a traction-engine proprietor in the Banff Court for damages amounting to £15, owing to the injury caused to the turf on the links by the passing of a traction-engine. The sheriff who tried the case held that though the proprietor of the traction-engine might be exercising a right which he possessed, in common with the fishermen to haul their boats up on the turf, he was not entitled to do so to the injury of the golfers using the ground. The damage to the links was assessed at £5, with expenses of the action.

* * *

The crowded state of the course at North Berwick is a fruitful subject of complaint at this season of the year. The latest wail comes from a lady who has lately been there in the hope of being able to enjoy a pleasant round of the links. Going over to North Berwick from Edinburgh last year, fairly late in the season, a lady golfer from the South, inexperienced in the crushes of the famous Scotch links, and believing that a full three hours and a-half would give her sufficient time to play round the eighteen holes and get lunch, met with a rude awakening. In the first place, ladies were not allowed to start until eleven o'clock, so that she had to watch singles, foursomes, and three-ball matches start before her, and, when fairly on the way, she and her partner, who were playing quickly and well, had to wait between every shot, and for five or ten minutes on each tee, so that, by the time they had played twelve holes, she had to abandon her game and run for her train back to Edinburgh, which she just managed to catch by forfeiting her lunch. This was on a day when the rain was falling all the time, and occasionally rather heavily, so the condition of affairs on a fine day is better imagined than described.

THE DOLLYMOUNT MEETING.

The Hon. E. Gibson and his partner on their way to the 9th hole.

* * *

Willie Park appears to be in extremely good form at present, certainly good enough to support the contention of many golfers that he would have been an admirable partner for Braid in the foursome match now going on against Vardon and Taylor. At Huntercombe last week he established a new record for this difficult course. Hitherto the record has been held by D. Stephenson, his assistant at Huntercombe, with a score of 72. Playing with Baron d'Erlanger, Willie Park went round in 70 strokes, a record which will not be easily lowered, considering the natural difficulties of the course.

* * *

The golf courses abroad are being visited by a large number of English and American golfers, and many important prize competitions are being held. At Ostend, where the season of fashion and social gaiety is still at its height, the golf links are being kept busy with the decision of prize tournaments. Among the lady players, the Prix des Coquelicots was won by Mme. Jules Morren with a handicap of 48, the second prize-winner being Mlle. Myriam Drugman with a handicap of 50. The mixed foursomes for the Prix du Littoral was won by Mme. L. de Hemptinne and M. Feyrick with a score of 107 – 24 = 83, the next couple being Mme. J. M. and Comte van der Maeten. In the Engadine golf is in full swing at Samaden, St. Moritz, and Maloja. At St. Moritz the usual weekly handicap was won by Mr. W. L. Richard with 75 – 6 = 69, and the mixed foursomes by Mr. H. L. Gaw and Mrs. Depew, while at Samaden Mr. H. C. Richard won with a net score of 74. At Interlaken Mr. Whitlock won the silver medal with 105 – 22 = 83.

THE IRISH CHAMPIONSHIP.

Mr A. B. Babington playing out of an awkward lie in his match last week.

Digitized by Google

The Ways of Golfers.

A DUOLOGUE.

By Mrs. Philip Champion de Crespigny.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ:
TOM AND OLIVE CHARTERIS, on their honeymoon.

SCENE: The 1st tee of the Newcomb-on-Sea Golf Links. Tom and Olive stroll up hand in hand. The former has two caddie-bags slung on his arm.

TOM (throwing down the bags and looking round at a wide stretch of sand-dune and blue sea beyond): What a ripping day! And not a soul on the links! We've got the whole place to ourselves.

OLIVE: And no caddies even. I hate caddies; they make me nervous. You had better give me a stroke a hole.

TOM: I don't expect I can give you so much, though my game's improved a lot since I took to it in earnest. I've got my handicap down to twenty-two by pure hard work and coaching.

OLIVE (withdrawing her hand and picking up her clubs): It must be a help, being coached.

TOM: You can coach yourself, from the books as well as anything. You can find out everything you're doing wrong.

OLIVE: Well, I'll take a stroke a hole to begin with, and if I find I'm getting beaten you can give me a bit more.

TOM (laughing): A capital sort of handicap, that.

(Olive pulls out her driver, tees up the ball, and takes her stance on the tee.)

TOM (just as she has addressed the ball for the last time before hitting off): Wait a bit; I think you've got your feet all wrong. (He pulls the "A.B.C. of Golf" out of his pocket, and opens it hurriedly.)

OLIVE: Bother my feet! Wait till I've driven off. (She addresses the ball again, and drives it about 100-yds. in the right direction. Tom closes the book and puts it back in his pocket.)

TOM: I'll tell you what you did wrong before you drive next time. (Tees up and picks out his driver.)

OLIVE: There was nothing wrong with my drive, anyhow.

TOM: There's nothing like doing things in the right way. (He takes his stance very carefully, and addresses the ball. On the point of hitting off he suddenly drops the driver and pulls the "A.B.C." out of his pocket.)

TOM: I never can remember whether one ought to keep one's right elbow in or out. (Shuffles over the pages and reads aloud)—"The arms should be held loosely out, just clear of the body, with the least suspicion of a curve at the elbow joints." No, that isn't it; I think it was further on. (Turns over some pages.)

OLIVE: You might look for it another time. We shall never start at this rate.

(Tom puts the book in his pocket and drives. He tops it, but it travels along the ground for some distance.)

TOM: I can't think what makes me do that. Good shot, Olive! You're on the green. (Plays his shot, topping it again, and it runs into a ditch guarding the green.)

TOM: The second time I've done that! (Picks the ball out, drops behind him, and pulls the "A.B.C." out of his pocket.) I must find out what I'm doing wrong. (Reads slowly)—"The most difficult stroke of all—um—um—is, undoubtedly, the half or quarter stroke" (Olive sits down patiently beside her ball), "the distance from thirty to one hundred yards of the hole, with a yawning bunker in the foreground." Very true, that's why I got in.

OLIVE: I wish you'd hole out, Tom. You can read it up afterwards.

TOM (cheerily): So I can. (Puts the book in his pocket and plays. They both hole out, Olive winning the hole, and move on to the next tee.)

OLIVE: My honour. And down hill. I love a down-hill drive. This is going to be a beauty. (She tees up, addresses the ball with deliberation, and draws the club slowly back for the drive.)

TOM (just behind her): "To acquire an easy and graceful stance and free unconstrained swing of the club, he should turn his toes slightly inwards. By taking——"

OLIVE (bringing the club down on the ball anyhow): Tom! I do wish you wouldn't put me off like that! I've missed the drive altogether. (She watches the ball disconsolately as it bounds down the hill into a sand bunker at the bottom.)

TOM (good humouredly): I'm sorry. But I knew you had your feet all wrong. You turn them out, you know, and the book says in distinctly.

OLIVE: I don't care a rap what the book says. It spoilt my drive.

TOM (making a tee with care): Still, one can't learn unless one studies the thing properly. (Drives a fairly good ball and follows Olive down the hill.)

OLIVE (standing at the edge of the bunker): I'm half buried, and I thought it was going to be such a good shot. (She plays two ineffectual strokes. Tom draws the "A.B.C." from his pocket, and she plays a third hastily, which lands her a yard or two beyond the sand.)

TOM (putting the book back): Well out! I didn't think you were going to do it.

OLIVE (grimly): No more did I when I saw the——

TOM: What?

OLIVE: Nothing.

(They play the hole out and end all square. Tom drives a good ball, and Olive tees up. As she begins to address the ball he pulls out the "A.B.C.")

TOM (pointing with one finger at Olive's feet): "The line B.—C. represents the position of the feet. The distance of the feet placed thus apart—um—um—should not be more than twenty inches." (Looks up.) Olive, I'm sure your feet are more than twenty inches apart; just look at them.

OLIVE (trying to keep calm): Thank you, but I've been taught to keep my eye on the ball, not on my feet.

TOM: But you needn't neglect either.

OLIVE (frigidly): Do you mean to suggest that I squint?

TOM: Not at all, of course not; but listen to what this capital little book says: "The position of the player's feet should have the left heel of the boot about seven inches to the left of the ball." (Pauses.)

OLIVE: If you've any final injunctions, perhaps you will mention them before I begin to address the ball again.

TOM (pocketing the book, and vaguely conscious that something is wrong): All right. Drive on. It'll keep. (Olive drives, tops badly, and walks after the ball in silence.)

TOM (pulling the book out again): There, that's what comes of having your feet too far apart.

(Olive walks on, plays a good second, and turning round to speak to Tom, finds he is still reading out from the book on the tee. She sits down resignedly, and waits for him to come up with her.)

TOM (cheerfully): I am sure you could cure yourself of that topping with a little trouble, Olive.

OLIVE (a little happier since her last shot): I didn't top it that time.

(Tom plays into the stream, lifts, and plays on to the green. Olive plays an approach shot, and is on the green with the like-with-the-stroke. Tom gets in a long putt, and Olive studies the line with great care before playing. She does not notice that Tom has pulled the "A.B.C." out of his pocket, and draws back her club to play the stroke for the half.)

TOM (suddenly): "Some players stand sideways——"

OLIVE (angrily, with a start): What the dickins do you want to do that for, Tom! Just when I'm going to play!

TOM (a little shocked): My dear girl!

OLIVE (shortly): I can't help it; you made me jump. (She resumes her putting, and misses the hole.) You made me miss that easy putt and lose the hole. (She catches up her bag and walks off to the next tee.)

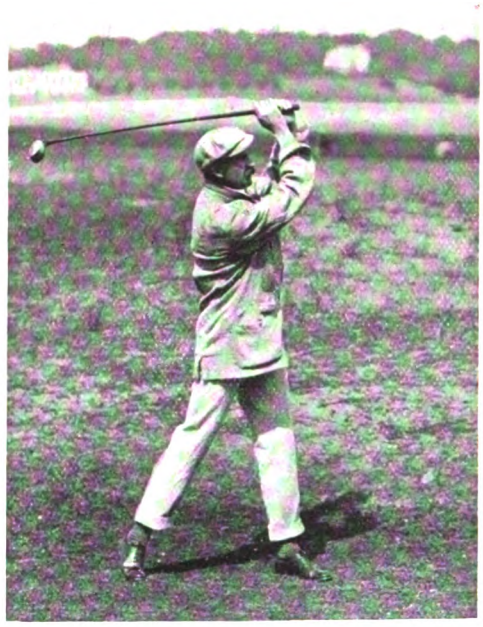
TOM: But if you stand sideways, the book says——

Mr. H. Easterbrook at the 1st tee.



Mr. J. S. Worthington (Mid-Surrey), last year's winner, driving at the 5th tee

Mr. C. E. Stuart (Ireland) driving at the 1st tee.

THE IRISH CHAMPIONSHIP MEETING AT TOLLYMOUNT.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

MIDDLESEX v. SUSSEX LADIES AT WIMBLEDON PARK.

(1) Mrs. Kennion driving. (2) Miss Sparrow driving from the 4th tee. (3) Miss Gardner putting. (4) Mrs. Durlacher driving. (5) The Sussex team: Standing, left to right—Mrs. F. W. Brown, Mrs. Kennion, Miss Gardner, Miss Gully, and Miss Johnson; seated—Miss Cary, Miss Starkie Bence, and Miss Chapman. (6) The Middlesex team: Standing, left to right—Miss Lloyd Roberts, Mrs. Weston, Mrs. Durlacher, and Miss Sant; seated—Mrs. Lloyd Roberts, Mrs. Hunter, and Miss Sparrow.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

Olive: I don't care what the book says. I'll stand on my head if I want to when I'm going to putt.

Tom (gruffly): Oh! I thought you wanted to learn the game.

Olive: So I do—but—I don't believe in books, and never shall.

(They drive off, and play the next hole in silence. Both miss their drives to the fourth hole, Olive sending hers about 10-yds. from the tee.)

Tom: You took your eye off the ball then. (Pulls out the "A.B.C.") "The first golfing maxim which he has now to fix in his memory is to keep his eye firmly fixed on the ball."

Olive (with sarcasm): I've heard that before. (Approaches the ball to play he second.)

Tom: Yes, but listen. "This does not mean——"

Olive (irately, facing him): I know exactly what it means (Tom attempts to speak, and she adds), and what it doesn't mean, too, so don't trouble to read any more. (She addresses the ball, while Tom stares at her in surprise. He pockets the book, and they proceed towards the next hole, which is on a high plateau close to the edge of a cliff overlooking the sea. Olive plays her approach shot into the middle of a sand bunker.)

Olive: Bother! I did think that was going to be a good one. (To herself) Whatever did I do?

Tom (cheerfully, pulling the "A.B.C." from his pocket): I'll tell you in a minute (he turns over a page or two rapidly). "In addressing the ball before the stroke is played, the beginner should carefully note one essential point of detail which is too commonly overlooked, even by fairly good golfers. It is——" (Olive turns away impatiently and plays, digging the club into the sand without moving the ball. Tom finishes) "to make certain of placing the head of the club——"

Olive (in the last stage of exasperation): Tom, if you go on reading out of that book I shall go home.

Tom (looks up surprised): Go home! But I thought you wanted to learn the game.

Olive (hotly): So I do; but books are no good at the best, and that one is the most idiotic I've ever come across. I'm not doing a single one of the things it says I am; and if I am, I certainly shouldn't learn how to cure it from that "A.B.C." (She plays with a good deal of temper, and lays the ball on the green.)

THE IRISH CHAMPIONSHIP MEETING.

Mr. Cecil Barcroft, a well-known member of the Royal Dublin Club, and a frequent player in the International Bar Tournaments.

Tom (following her, with the "A.B.C." still in his hand): I am sure it's a great help to be told what you're doing wrong.

Olive (viciously): Do you! Well, I don't: not out of a book. They're senseless, useless things, and you'll never persuade me to listen, so you may as well stop.

Tom: I think you're wrong. (Olive becomes absorbed in her putt as he turns over the leaves; she prepares to strike, when Tom reads suddenly) "Golf cannot be self-taught, and the cultivation of a good style——"

(Olive hits the ball wildly about a yard and a-half to the right of the hole. She then throws down her club, and walking deliberately up to Tom, catches the "A.B.C." from his hand and flings it over the cliff. They stare at each other a moment in silence.)

Tom: What the devil—(Olive draws back, and he adds defiantly)—Well, if you say "what the dickins," I don't see why I shouldn't say "what the devil." What's the difference?

Olive (with dignity): There's all the difference in the world. Nobody on this earth knows what a dickins is, so there can't be any harm in it. (She picks up her clubs and walks rapidly away. Tom lights a cigarette and walks off in the opposite direction.)

(Two hours later he returns to the hotel, and finds Olive alone in the sitting-room. She hastily puts both hands behind her back as he enters.)

Tom (eagerly): I am so sorry, darling. Say you forgive me. (He stretches out his hands to her, and Olive puts one of hers into them.)

Olive: Of course I forgive you, Tom. In fact——

Tom: It was awfully foolish of me. I didn't realise how I was aggravating you by reading out of that book. Of course, everybody isn't the same. I can quite understand that books are no use to some people—only irritating, in fact.

Olive (doubtfully): Well, Tom, you see——

Tom: I'll never worry you with that wretched little "A.B.C." again if you'll forgive me this time. (He draws her other hand from behind her.) Why! What in the name of conscience have you got there?

Olive (after a futile attempt to hide it again): It's—it's—the "A.B.C."

Tom: But you threw it over the cliff.

Olive: Yes, I know I did. But then (hesitates), well—I rather wanted to find out why I was topping so badly, so——

Tom: So?

Olive: So I went and bought another one at the railway station.

———

FIXTURES.

August 12.—Hanger Hill, Medal.
August 13.—Boulogne v. Le Touquet.
August 14.—Southwold, Ladies' Open Meeting.
August 16.—Royal Cromer, Open Amateur Meeting.
August 22.—Hunstanton, Ladies' Competition.
August 22-25.—Waveney Valley, Open Summer Meeting.
August 23.—Royal Guernsey, Tradesmen's Cup.
August 23-24.—Dieppe, Prix du Casino.

THE IRISH CHAMPIONSHIP.

A view of the Dollymount course at the 8th hole. The play is between Mr. G. R. Girdlestone (Royal Wimbledon), on the right, and Mr. Wilson (Royal Dublin), in the International match.

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. LVI.—Mr. William Henry Reed, Prospective Liberal Candidate for the Tiverton (North-East) Division of Devonshire.

IF the Parliamentary representation of Yorkshire at the commencement of the last century was notoriously inadequate, that of Devonshire, at any rate, was obviously redundant. Like the sister county of Cornwall, it was the ancient home of a number of small constituencies, commonly known as "close" or "pocket boroughs," the whole of which have disappeared into the limbo of things that were, and at the present time Fair Devon sends thirteen members to Westminster instead of twenty-six. Of these submerged electoral centres of the past few could boast of a more eventful career than Tiverton, which for a whole generation at least enjoyed the distinction of being known as "Palmerston's Borough," and as such became the subject of a not uninteresting or uninstructive volume. In 1805 the franchise, as far as this pleasant and picturesque little town was concerned, was vested absolutely in the Mayor (who, at the same time, discharged the duties of returning officer), together with eleven aldermen and a dozen assistants; but the contemporary chronicler adds a sly note to the effect that "the younger branches, etc., of the Harrowby family had long possessed their confidence," and at that particular time the choice of these fortunate corporators had fallen on the Right Honourable Richard Ryder and one Mr. Fitzhugh, who had shaken the Indian pagoda tree to some purpose, besides marrying a connection of Lord Harrowby, thereby qualifying himself for a seat for Tiverton on his relative's translation to the Upper House. The Reform Bill gave the citizens of Tiverton the privilege of "open election," and three years later Lord Palmerston won the seat, which, despite the perpetual heckling of Mr. William Rowcliffe, "Butcher and Chartist," and the assaults of many more formidable rivals, he held to the day of his death just thirty years later. Those were, indeed, halcyon days, when emancipated Tiverton returned the Premier of England to Parliament and the popular green jacket and orange cap were rarely missed on race days. The election of June, 1865, was a memorable one. Lord Palmerston headed the poll, and Mr. John Walrond, the Tory squire of Bradfield, beat Mr. Denman by three votes. Four months later Lord Palmerston, described in countless electioneering songs as "the Pride of Tiverton," died, and the future judge promptly regained his lost seat, defeating Sir John Hay, who, like Sir John Gorst, who came down to "prospect" it, is still happily alive. By the Redistribution Bill of 1884 the old borough, which had been the scene of so many exciting contests, and where Whig interests had generally prevailed, lost its separate existence, becoming merged in a new county division of curious shape, extending from Morebath on the north to the confines of Dawlish on the south, and including certain outlying portions of Exeter. In November, 1885, Colonel Walrond (son of Sir John Walrond, and now himself Sir William) won the new seat, which he has now held without opposition since 1892, but for which a very close contest may be confidently expected at the next General Election, when the Devonshire labourers are likely to declare themselves with no uncertain voice on the side of Free Trade and cheap food. In the person of Mr. William H. Reed, the enterprising proprietor of the prosperous paper-mills at Collumpton, Buckfastleigh, and Silverton, Mr. Lionel Walrond, the son of the late Chief Conservative Whip, and the grandson of Lord Palmerston's old antagonist and last colleague, will assuredly find a rival worthy of his steel.

Browning, Exeter.

MRS. W. REED

Wife of the Prospective Liberal Candidate for the Tiverton Division of Devonshire.

Although the accident of birth may give Cornwall some claim on Mr. Reed, for he first saw the light at Bodmin in the year that preceded the Great Exhibition, he comes on both sides of a good old Devonshire stock, his father hailing from Bovey Tracey, and his mother from Crediton. From the Blue Coat School at Wells he went straight into business, and just thirty years ago he started a paper-mill at Bathford, where the Box Brook, a tributary of the Avon, affords the necessary water-power. Three years later he married Miss Vickery of Weston-super-Mare, and is now the father of five sons and a daughter. The latter is already married, and earlier than most men Mr. Reed has attained the dignity of becoming a grandfather, while his eldest son has joined the business of which his father was the founder. The mills either founded or re-opened by Mr. Reed and his partner, Mr. C. King Smith at Cullompton (1883), Buckfastleigh (1889), and Silverton (1894) have all turned out a great commercial success, and their owners have acquired the reputation of producing super-calendered tinted papers, adapted for magazine and pamphlet covers, as well as printing paper of an exceptionally fine quality. They are said to make a special feature of turning out a given quantity of paper of a particular tint with unusual rapidity, and their assistance is consequently frequently invoked when the issue of some new magazine is contemplated. After Mr. Albert E. Dunn's great Municipal Liberal victory the civic fathers of "Ever Faithful" (in the outskirts of which Mr. Reed owns a roomy Georgian house standing in a pleasant garden shaded with cedars and other old-world trees) chose Mr. Reed as one of the new aldermen. Mr. Reed has identified himself with the fortunes of the Liberal cause in the Tiverton Division ever since the extinction of the borough twenty years ago. He has not only given constant proof of his ability as a speaker, but as a large employer of labour has set an excellent example to others by providing his workpeople with dwellings, which are regarded as models throughout East Devon. He is a convinced Free Trader, and a strong opponent of both Chinese labour in the Transvaal and the existing Education Act at home. He takes a deep interest in all questions which relate to the welfare and particularly to the housing of the poor, and would like to see greater facilities given for the compulsory purchase of land for cottage sites. He thinks the under-paying of the worker to be at once unprofitable and unjust. He believes in the wisdom of a policy which associates the employé in the profit realised by giving him bonuses in proportion to the output. For four generations the Reeds have been followers of John Wesley. Mr. Reed has helped the Methodist Church, first as organist and Sunday-school teacher, and later as member of the Synod and Treasurer of the Children's Fund for the Exeter District. Since he became prospective candidate for the Tiverton Division he has held over one hundred meetings in every part of it—from Bampton and Morebath to Christow on the borders of Dartmoor, and from Hemyock to Cruwys Morchard. The news of his activity must have disturbed the Conservatives, and the return of Sir John Heathcoat Amory (closely associated with the triumphs of Liberalism at Tiverton in the pre-1884 days) to the fold, coupled with the acceptance of the chairmanship of the Tiverton Liberal Association by Mr. Ian Amory, will probably convince the future squire of Bradfield that a hand-to-hand struggle awaits him in the near future.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

IN THE JARDIN DE PARIS.

I HAVE been assured that every good Englishman, when landing for the first time in Paris, pays a morning visit to Napoleon's grave, and spends the evening at the Jardin de Paris. I cannot vouch for the first, but I am sure of the second. I passed three consecutive nights at the Jardin for the greater glory of THE KING, watching my fellow-creatures, and I saw many curious sights, all the more curious, perhaps, because they were not mentioned in the programme.

The first impression of the place is that it has been specially made for strangers. It is in no way suggestive of the quintessence of Parisian devil-may-care gaiety. You will look in vain for Colette or Yvonne—fresh from the workshop—cheeks aglow and eyes bright, dancing themselves out of breath to the cheers of their male artist or student friends. To see this you must journey across one of the bridges to the left bank of the Seine, or climb up a steep, a very steep hill, to the heights of Montmartre, close to where the huge pretentious-looking church of the Sacré-Cœur frowns down upon Paris glittering at its feet. And even there you may be disappointed; for the Colettes and Yvonnes—I mean the genuine article—immortalised by poets and painters, are becoming a thing of the past. No, the Jardin de Paris is not Parisian; it is Cosmopolitan, and every country seems to display a strange eagerness to send its representatives there. A gentleman was pointed out to me, a Russian with a princely title, a nightly guest, comfortably lolling in one of the basket-chairs, in no way disturbed by the presence of three Japanese youths next to him. Germans, Americans, Dutchmen, Swedes, men of every shade, stroll or sit about, but the English element predominates. And whilst I pondered over this fact, it suddenly dawned upon me that the elderly British matrons I saw near the entrance must have come for a special purpose. Many of the young Englishmen, on this their first visit to the Capital, had no doubt been too busy to send a few lines home; and these sedate ladies could be no other than anxious mothers come over to see what had become of their hopefuls. Somebody must have told them that the best place to "lay their hands upon them" was the Jardin de Paris.

IN THE JARDIN DE PARIS.
Acrobats rehearsing in the morning.
(Specially photographed for THE KING.)

Although the crowd in the garden, with its heterogeneous elements, has such a weird fascination as to almost monopolise one's attention, the management, very thoughtfully, supply something more tangible in the way of amusement. It must even be said that they do things handsomely. Up to ten o'clock there is a capital variety entertainment, with comic, serio-comic, and sentimental singers, dancers, acrobats, and artists of every nationality. There is a biograph giving the siege of Port Arthur; there is a small circus; and music without interruption. There is enough, and to spare. When a big function takes place the management even send their artist to take snap-shots for the cinematograph, and those who attend that function in the afternoon have the pleasure of seeing themselves at night in effigy at the Jardin de Paris. This is very entertaining; yet it sometimes leads to complications. Thus, on the night of the Grand Steeple at Auteuil some smart society people were watching the animated pictures, when suddenly one of the ladies called out: "Tiens, voilà Henri!" Henri was her husband, supposed to be in Brussels, and the indiscreet photographer had betrayed him. It is a pity that the subsequent meeting between Henri and Mme. Henri could not have been added as a final tableau.

But it is ten o'clock, the band in the garden has struck up, the promenade has begun, and we have leisure to examine the physiognomy of the crowd. Like Mabille of former days, the Jardin de Paris is no "bal." The only dancing here is done by professionals, hired for the occasion. These ladies perpetuate the traditions of the time-honoured can-can. They are proud, poor things, of belonging to the "profession," even hovering on the bottom steps of the art-ladder; and they, moreover, have the satisfaction of being an object of envy of many of "ces dames" who frequent these gardens for other purposes than to view the entertainment.

To speak of the Jardin and ignore "ces dames" would be like describing Rome without mentioning the Pope. They do not figure on the programme, but they reckon themselves among the attractions, and would resent being overlooked. Yet, here again comes the question of rank; for "ces dames" also have their aristocracy. The "grande cocotte" does not come often, but she comes; and so does the society woman. And the lady of the great world and she of the half-world go there almost under identical conditions. Both arrive escorted by an army of male friends; the toilettes of both are in excellent taste, never showy. To distinguish one from the other would even sometimes be a most difficult matter were it not for the men. It is the men's attitude which proclaims the women's social status. Elegantly-dressed Virtue clings to her escort. With tastefully-dressed Vice it is not the same thing. She has her cavaliers, but she does not feel the want of moral protection, and this her escort realises as well as she does. The "grande dame" and the "grande cocotte" dress exceedingly well, and as they pass one another, each will say to her escort, "I wonder who made that woman's dress." And, after a while, it is the man who brings the desired information. He either asks the cocotte and tells his wife, or he asks his wife and tells the cocotte.

It is now midnight; the people are filing out of the garden, and as we wend our way towards the Madeleine we meet a merry party of students returning from a visit to Montmartre. There are five in the cab, three men and two women; but they have considerately given the ladies the best places—in the hood.

FRANCES KEYZER.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

SOME OF THE LAURÉATS AT THE CONSERVATOIRE.

(1) Mlle. Lagregrette, second prize in opera. (2) Mlle. Lamare, second prize in opera. (3) Mlle. Chenal, first prize in opera. (4) Mlle. Mancini, first prize in opera. These accomplished vocalists are regarded as some of the coming operatic stars in Paris.

(From photographs by Du Guy, Paris.)

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

COWES WEEK has for many years possessed a significance in yachting circles beyond the importance of its actual racing. Although half of the season is already past before the principal fixture is arrived at, it is at these regattas that many yachtsmen meet for the first time. With a portion of the season's racing already accomplished, owners have been enabled to form some estimate of the capabilities of their boats, and in discussing the probabilities of sport in the future are able to come to some decision whether to retain the old boat for another season or go in for a new craft, and oftentimes in years past plans for the following season's racing have been promulgated during this week, and in some instances orders for new vessels have been decided upon. This of course refers more particularly to those owners who go in for class racing. To anyone thinking of building a cruiser it is not so essential to know what others may be contemplating in the same direction, but to one desirous of entering a class it is most necessary to know that there will be a class in existence after having gone to the expense of building.

It remains yet to be seen if any development will take shape this year. Two years ago it was generally believed that the formation of a new class of 65-footers had been decided upon, and some names of prospective owners were freely mentioned, but when the following season came round there was but one boat of the class in existence, Zinita, which had been partially built in the preceding year for Messrs. Connell, who completed her and fitted her out for last season's racing, when, however, they had to be content with sailing in handicap matches.

Such a disappointment naturally makes any aspirants more than ever cautious about building in the absence of some definite assurance of having a competitor. Any development of the present week will, therefore, be watched with interest, as giving some reliable indication of next year's sport.

There is one very important factor that will be taken into consideration by any who may be contemplating new craft for next year, and that is the fact that the period for which the existing rating rule was fixed will be drawing to a close, and prospective builders will probably like to know what likelihood there may be of a continuity of the rule, or what would be its probable modifications. The international conference which is being arranged with the object of adopting a universal rating rule should do much to straighten matters out in this direction, while the adoption of such should do much to foster the sport generally.

The Prince of Wales has consented to preside at the international conference, and in some quarters hopes are entertained that this may be taken as indicative of a desire on his Royal Highness's part to take a more active interest in the sport in future. The Prince has never taken any keen interest in yachting, though he sailed a small rater on the Solent a few years ago. He has never owned a big vessel, but the knowledge that he intended doing so would be hailed with satisfaction by every section of yachtsmen, all of whom look back longingly to those years of grand sport when the royal cutter Britannia was sailing regularly at all the regattas around the coasts. It seems doubtful if ever the sport will reach that high standard again unless it receives some such impetus.

Robertson, Gourock.

SONYA.

52-footer, built in America this year from designs by N. Herreshoff, to the order of Mrs. Turner Farley. She has been most unfortunate, having already lost two masts, but has on one or two occasions shown a fine turn of speed, more particularly going to windward.

The Plymouth clubs did not fare particularly well this year in point of entries, as the result of changing their dates. For many years past these regattas have suffered through coming at the very end of the season, and the committees naturally wanted to do something to arrest the steady decline in entries which they were suffering. Ultimately, a proposal which had been put forward in previous years was adopted, and the dates were fixed for the last week in July in the belief that there would be an opportunity of catching the yachts on their return from the Irish regattas. This answered as far as the 52-footers were concerned, and there was some very interesting racing in this class, but there was an entire absence of any big cruisers. It is, of course, difficult to say how far this was attributable to the Clyde to Cowes race taking some of these vessels right past the port. In the true interests of the sport, however, one cannot help expressing a doubt as to the expediency of arranging such a race, apparently ignoring the claims of such old-established fixtures as those at Belfast and Kingstown, as well as Plymouth.

The change of date at Plymouth will probably be adhered to, and the clubs will hope for better support next season. The time of the year is better suited for the big regattas, while it was surprising to find what an amount of interest was manifested in the Port of Plymouth Regatta — the town fixture. The Hoe, which commands a magnificent view of the Sound, and whence all the racing can be seen, was densely crowded with thousands of people.

The clubs acted in a very sporting manner. When the races for the big cruisers failed to attract any entries, the value of the prizes in the race for 52-footers was increased.

CORINTHIAN.

REGATTA FIXTURES.

August 12.—Royal Portsmouth Corinthian Yacht Club.
August 15-18.—Royal Victoria Yacht Club. Ryde
August 19.—Royal Southern Yacht Club.
August 21-22.—Royal Albert Yacht Club. Southsea.
August 23.—Royal Southampton Yacht Club.
August 26.—Royal Dorset Yacht Club. Weymouth.
August 28.—Torbay Royal Regatta.
August 29.—Royal Torbay Yacht Club.
September 1-2.—Royal Dart Yacht Club.

Digitized by Google

YACHTS OF THE YEAR.

Debenham.

ADELA

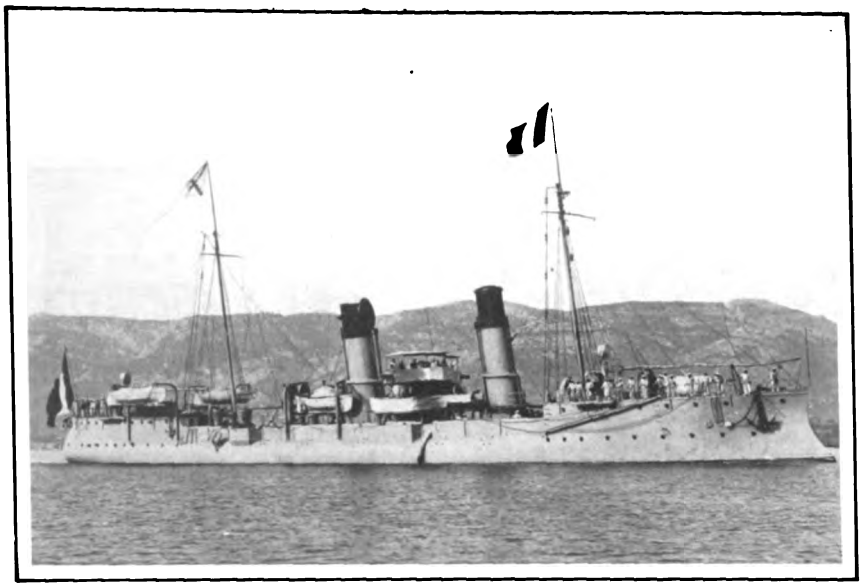
Schooner, 234 tons. Built two years ago by Fay and Co., from designs by W. G. Storey, for Mr. C. T. Cayley, Rear-Commodore of the Royal London Yacht Club. She is of substantial construction, and designed with a view to comfort rather than speed, but takes part in cruiser handicaps. She won the race from Cowes to the Clyde.

Digitized by Google



THE CRUISER "CASSINI"

Built at Havre, and launched in 1894. She displaces 958 tons, and has a speed of 21 knots. Her heaviest gun is a 3·9-in.

The Visit of

MASSENA
CAPT. ST. PAUL DE SINÇAY.
JAUREGUIBERRY
CAPT. RABOUIN.
CARNOT
CAPT. LE CLERC.
BOUVINES
CAPT. LAMSON.
AMIRAL TREHOUART
CAPT. SCHILLING.
HENRI IV.
CAPT. EPHAY.
GLOIRE
CAPT. JACQUET.
CONDÉ
CAPT. SOMBORN.
AMIRAL AUBE
CAPT. LEFEVRE.

Bourgault. VICE-ADMIRA.

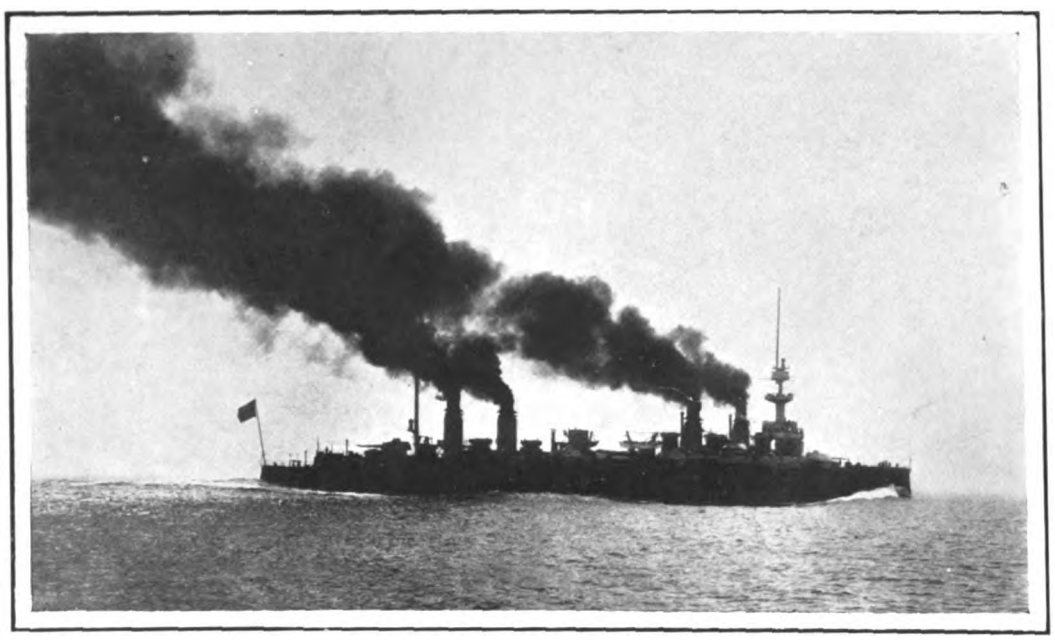
Commander-in-Chief of the F which is visiting Por

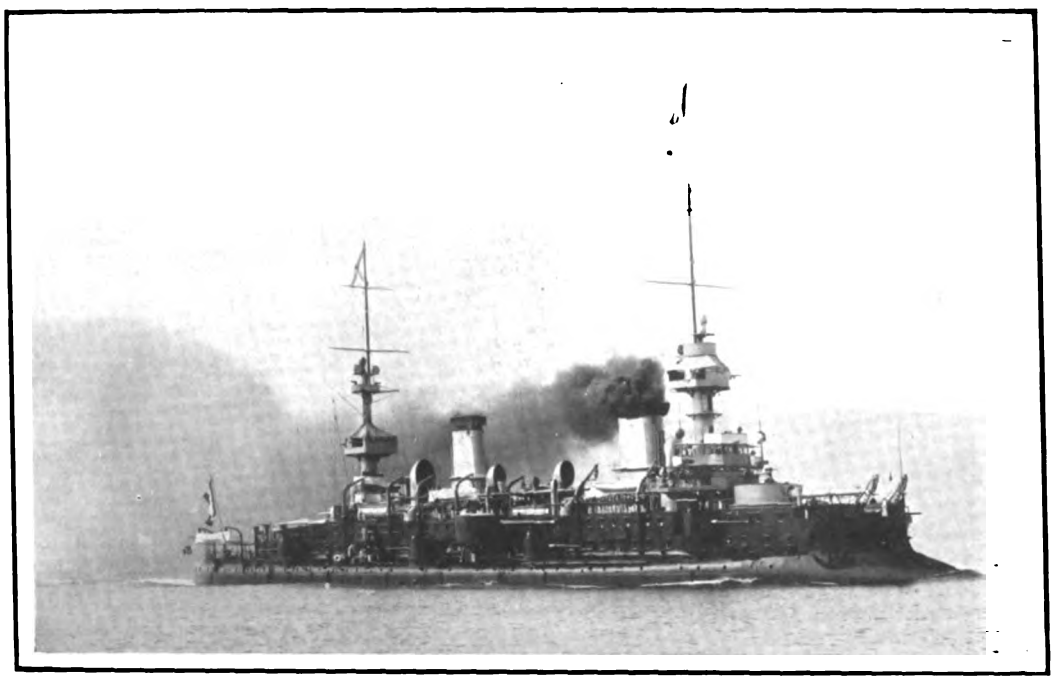


THE ARMOURED CRUISER "GLOIRE"

Flag-ship of Rear-Admiral Puech. Built at Lorient, and launched in 1900. She displaces 10,000 tons, and has a maximum speed of 21 knots. The thickest armour is the upper belt of 5·2-in. steel, and the main armament consists of two 7·6-in. and eight 6·4-in. guns.

THE BATTLE-SHI

The sec nd vessel in Admiral Caillard's sub-division. 11,824 tons, and has a trial speed of 18 knots. Her thic consists of two 12



THE BATTLE-SHIP "MASSENA"

Flag-ship of Vice-Admiral Caillard. Built at St. Nazarre, and launched in 1895. She displaces 11,924 tons, and at forced draught can do 18 knots. Her thickest armour is 17·7-in. Creusot steel, and her main armament is composed of two 12-in. and two 10·8-in. guns.

THE BATTLE-SHIP

Second ship in Rear-Admiral Leygué's sub-division. displacement of 6,534 tons, and a speed of 17·5 knots. 9·8-in. to 18·1-in., and carries

(From copyright pho

Digitized by Google

. CAILLARD
rench Northern Squadron, smouth this week.

the French Fleet.

LEON GAMBETTA
CAPT. CLÉMENT.

FORBIN
COMMANDER DELAJON.

CASSINI
COMMANDER FONTORBE.

BOMBARDE
COMMANDER DE HESPEL.

FLAMBERGE
LIEUT. REVEILLE.

CATAPULTE
LIEUT. CONVERS.

BELIER
LIEUT. OURDAN.

ARQUEBUSE
LIEUT. PIERAZ.

BALISTE
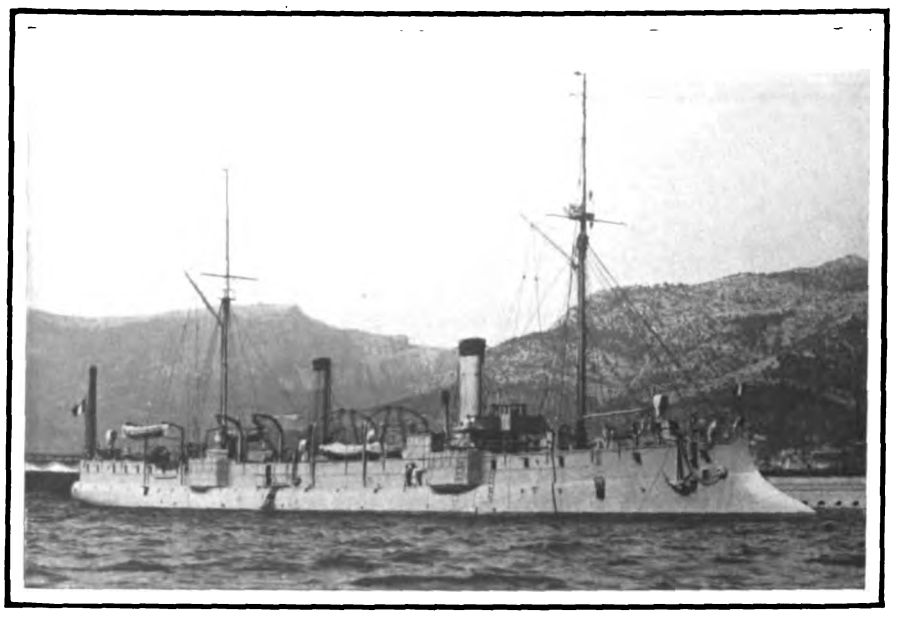
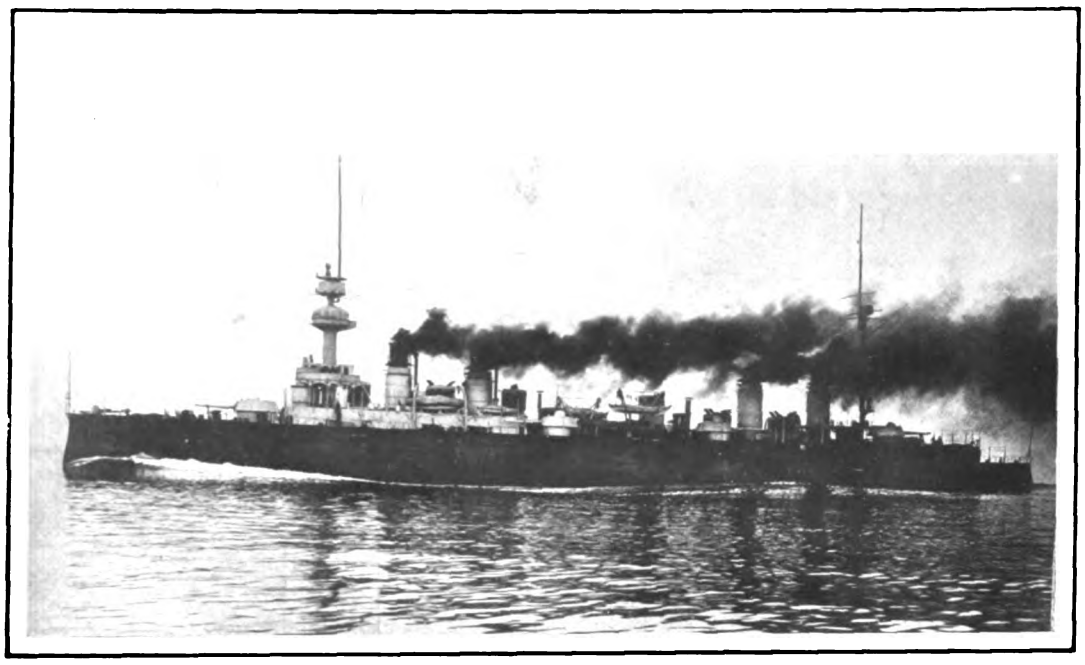
LIEUT. CASTLENAU.



THE CRUISER "FORBIN"
Built at Rochefort, and launched in 1888. She displaces 1,848 tons, and has a maximum speed of 20 knots. Her heaviest guns are 5·5-in.

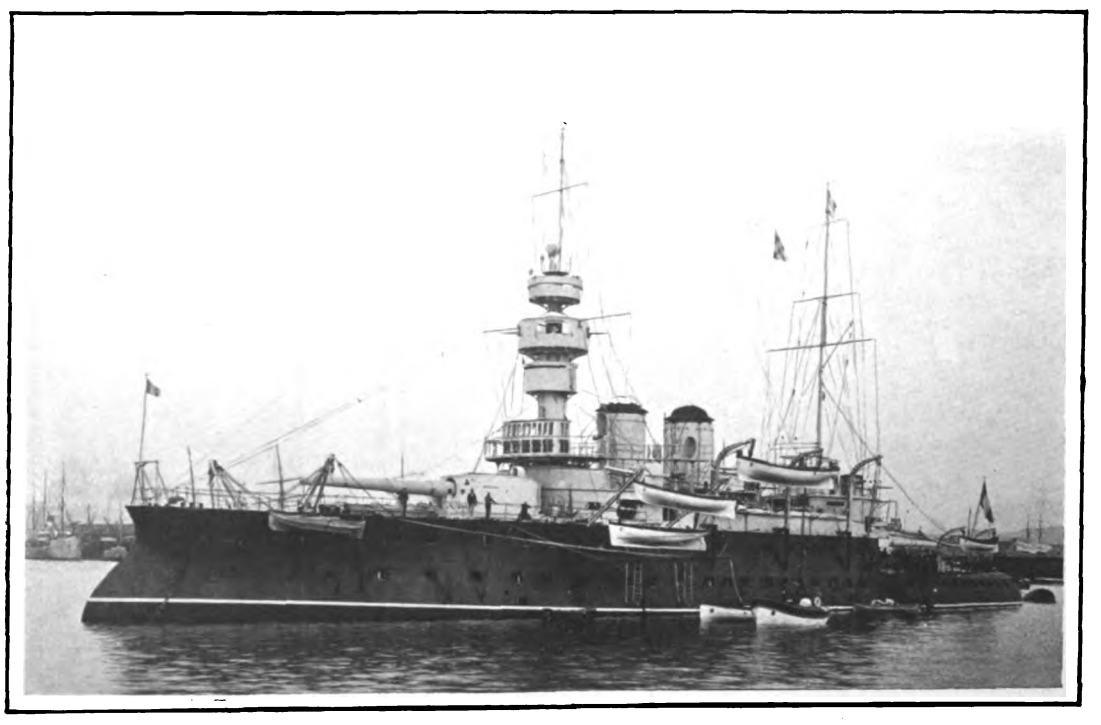
"JAUREGUIBERRY"
lt at La Seyne, and launched in 1893. She displaces armour is 17 7-in. Creusot steel, and her main armament nd two 10·8-in. guns.



THE ARMOURED CRUISER "CONDE"
Sis er ship to the "Gloire" and second ship in the French Cruiser Squadron. Built at Lorient, and launched in 1902. She displaces 10,000 tons, and has a speed of 21 knots. The thickest armour is the upper belt of 5 2-in. steel, and the heaviest guns are the two 7·6-in. and eight 6·4-in. pieces.

AL TREHOUART"
as built at Lorient, and launched in 1893, having a a complete belt of armour varying in thickness from armament two 12-in. guns.

Marius Bar, Toulon.)



THE BATTLE-SHIP "BOUVINES"
Flag-ship of Rear-Admiral Leygué. Built at La Seyne, and launched in 1892. She displaces 6,505 tons, and has a speed of 17 knots. Her armour belt is like that of the "Tréhouart," and her main armament is also composed of two 12-in. guns.

Digitized by Google

THE SEASIDE SEASON.

AT WORK ON THE FORT.

A RECONNAISSANCE IN FORCE.

THE ENEMY ADVANCING.

TO THE INNER DEFENCES.

THE FORT GARRISONED.

THE FORT BESIEGED.

(From photographs taken specially for THE KING by Mr. Lewis Longfield.)

Digitized by Google

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

Bassano.

MISS LILY ELSIE

Who has just returned from a long and successful American tour, is about to reappear in London. Miss Elsie, although it is but a short time since she made her début, has already won a very high place for herself among contemporary musical-comedy artistes.

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

BY HEYSHAM ROUTE TO THE ISLE OF MAN.

Taggart.

ON THE SANDS, DOUGLAS.

This favourite holiday resort is equally attractive to young and old, and the picture we reproduce is in every way typical of the sandy foreshore of the Manx capital. The bathing here and at Port Erin is excellent.

THERE are abundant reasons for recommending holiday-makers to visit the Isle of Man this year, one of the most weighty, perhaps, being the opening of the Midland Company's new service to Douglas viâ Heysham. Among the advantages claimed for this route is a very short crossing—the passage occupying only two and a-half hours—to say nothing of the many additional comforts afforded by vessels of the turbine class. The Heysham route, although only started this season, bids fair to become exceedingly popular. Certainly the Midland Company have spared neither pains nor expense to make it so. At present there is a daily service both ways, maintained by the splendid new turbine steam-ship "Manxman." She is one of four vessels which the Midland Company recently had built for their cross-channel service between Heysham and Belfast, and, with her sister ship the "Londonderry," is capable of steaming at 23½ knots. With a total length of 330-ft., and 43-ft. beam, her interior accommodation is of the most sumptuous kind imaginable.

Taggart.

A STORMY DAY AT DOUGLAS.

A remarkable effect of wind and tide on the famous promenade of the Manx capital.

To reach the Isle of Man by the new route you leave St. Pancras at 8.30 in the morning—a sensible hour, by the way, for so lengthy a journey — and reach Heysham, where the Midland Company have created one of the finest harbours to be found anywhere around the coast, at 2.30 in the afternoon. No time is wasted here, for the trains pull up alongside the vessel, discharging pas-engers and luggage in the space of a few minutes. The trip across to Douglas in the "Manxman" can only be compared to a pleasure trip of the highest order, and the two and a-half hours spent on board will be found to pass only too quickly. The entire journey being accomplished in broad daylight, the new Heysham route has much to commend it from the sightseer's point of view. Douglas, whose lovely bay has so often been compared to that of Naples in miniature, is reached punctually at 5.15 in the afternoon. Seen from the decks of the "Manxman," Douglas presents an appearance quite foreign as compared with other English watering-places. The snowy whiteness of her piers, breakwaters, sea walls, and buildings in general is in striking contrast to the background, composed of masses of dark foliage and towering distant hills. This unique combination of opposites—the bold rugged coast-line, worn into a thousand fantastic shapes by the storms of countless ages; the busy, bustling port with its crowded piers and excursion steamers constantly coming and going—all go to make up a picture, the like of which would be difficult to discover without going to the Mediterranean. No wonder their Majesties the King and Queen, after their memorable visit to Douglas some three years since, were so much impressed with the beauties of the island, promising to pay a return visit at some future time.

Digitized by Google

So far as amusements go, Douglas easily stands first; its equal, perhaps, is only to be found in Blackpool across the water. There is hotel and boarding-house accommodation to suit the pocket of all comers; in fact, the cost of living is, as a rule, considerably lower than obtains in most English watering-places. The amusements are as diverse as they are numerous. Although wet days are rather the exception than otherwise in "lovely Mona," full provision has been made for such eventualities. There are three splendid theatres, of which the new Gaiety, opened in 1900, is admittedly one of the handsomest in the kingdom. The Northerner has always shown a singular fondness for the Terpsichorean art, to meet the needs of which Douglas has provided two handsome dancing halls, named the Palace and Derby Castle. These evening assemblies are as much a characteristic of Douglas as of Blackpool, and they afford a sight which the unaccustomed visitor from the South will not readily forget. Besides first-rate concerts, bathing, boating, and fishing, Douglas also provides attractions for the ubiquitous golfer on its nine-hole course at Port-e-Chee, distant about a mile from the pier, and quickly reached by cable car. There is also a private course at Howstrake, the property of Mr. R. H. Prestwich, which members of the Douglas Club are privileged to play over by the courtesy of the proprietor.

Another point which favours Douglas as a centre for all sorts and conditions of holiday-makers is its great convenience for excursions to different parts of the island. The Isle of Man and Manx Electric Railways, not to mention the almost innumerable drives by car and waggonette, afford every facility to the excursion-lover. Certainly one of the most popular and attractive outings from Douglas is to the summit of Snaefell by Electric Mountain Railway. This trip was included in the special itinerary hastily arranged for their Majesties the King and Queen during their brief sojourn in the island, and, needless to say, was much enjoyed by them.

The Manx electric line runs from Douglas to Ramsey, the metropolis of the Northern District, and a delightful holiday retreat, a distance of eighteen miles, with a branch running from Laxey to the summit of Snaefell. The route is through some truly delightful mountain and woodland scenery, including Groudle Glen, Garwick Glen, Laxey Glen, Dhoon Glen, Glen Mona, and Ballaglass Glen; while the mountain branch running to Snaefell takes the visitor through what might be aptly termed the "Manx Peak District," where the invigorating air, for which the island is famous, may be enjoyed to the full amidst the finest mountain and marine scenery. The trip to the summit of Snaefell is magnificent.

Ramsey, the second town in importance in the island, occupies a most charming situation at the estuary of the river Sulby, with a background of lofty mountains. For children it is simply an earthly Paradise, the foreshore being composed of firm dry sand, such as we find at Margate. The sea bathing and fishing can scarcely be excelled. There are opportunities for mountaineering in the vicinity, among little-trod paths to unknown peaks, or for rambles among the glens which lie hidden among the hills. Altogether Ramsey forms an ideal holiday retreat, more especially for those who require an entire rest and change.

Taggart.

GARWICK BEACH, ISLE OF MAN.

This beautiful bay, a favourite excursion from Douglas, may be reached by the picturesque Manx Electric Railway, which runs from the capital to Ramsey, the metropolis of the Northern District.

Of the many other delightful spots which the tourist should see, there are Peel, with its castle, distant about eleven miles from Douglas, reached by road or rail; Castletown, until a few years ago the seat of Government; Port Erin, a rapidly-growing health resort, and Port St. Mary, both situated in the south of the island.

Probably few people have ever visited the little island at the southern extremity, known as the Calf of Man, owned by Mr. W. L. D. Cary, who is virtually king of the island. It is an ideal little spot, and would be turned to excellent account as a holiday resort. It is to be hoped that the rumoured sale to an American syndicate is not true.

Digitized by Google

THE CRICKET SEASON.

Copyright.

F. H. HUISH, KENT.

This page is a Canterbury page, for it is the Canterbury "Week" this week, and in the second match thereof Huish, who has had charge of the Kent wicket for very many years now, takes his benefit. Lancashire are the opposing team, and Huish chose well. Kent, in awarding their professionals a benefit, add together the "gates" of the past five years for the particular match chosen, and hand over the average takings, less expenses, to the bénéficiaire. For some seasons now Huish has been among the first six or eight of the world's stumpers.

Copyright.

C. H. B. MARSHAM, KENT.

"Ungainly but deuced effective," was the brief way the Kent captain's batting value was once weighed up by a well-known judge of the game. And there is no doubt that this curt appreciation of the Old Oxonian, who succeeded C. J. Burnup in the captaincy of the Kent Eleven, hits the nail on the head. Marsham is a useful field, without possessing the brilliancy of his predecessor, a good and a popular captain, and he can, and often does, hit the ball very, very hard, and very, very far into the bargain.

Copyright.

AN INTERVAL AT THE CANTERBURY GROUND.

The Canterbury "Week" is the most celebrated of all cricket weeks. Who that is a cricketer, or that follows cricket closely, has not been to one match of this famous "Week" at some time or other? The I.Z., Band of Brothers C.C., local regimental depôt, and several private individuals have tents pitched round the picturesque St. Lawrence Ground, at which, during cricket, a band plays at intervals. In the evening the famous Old Stagers perform, with at times the assistance of well-known professional, as well as amateur, talent; while the illuminations in the Dane John are not the least of the cathedral town's attractions in the evening after cricket is over for the day.

Digitized by Google

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

Lallie Charles.

MISS ADRIENNE AUGARDE

Who is still winning golden opinions as one of the "Little Michus" at Daly's Theatre. In this musical comedy Miss Augarde and her aunt, Miss Amy Augarde, are both taking part.

Digitized by Google

THE GOODWOOD MEETING.

W. A. Rouch.

KING EDWARD AT GOODWOOD.

A view down the famous course on the first day of the meeting. The King, who has just left the Royal box, may be seen on the right of the picture.

W. A. Rouch.

IN THE PADDOCK, GOODWOOD

Where the scene during the intervals between the races is always a very animated one. The famous Trundle Hill, a portion of the South Downs, is seen in the background.

Digitized by Google

THE RACING SEASON.

THE gathering in the Duke of Richmond's stately park, which was brought to a conclusion on Friday last, can hardly be said to have been on a par with the many successful meetings of the past which have earned for the Goodwood Week the well-deserved title of "Glorious Goodwood." It may be that the attractions of gate-money meetings, with their large sums of added money, are proving too strong for owners and trainers; it may be that modern race-goers are becoming too effeminate to face the necessary journey, although even if the racing itself is somewhat tame, they are rewarded by the prospect of some of the most beautiful and typically English scenery to be found in Merry England. But whatever the cause, the fact remains that both in the number of those present and in the quality of the racing at Goodwood there has been a marked decline in 1905. Of the horses who have met their engagements it can only be said that, with a few notable exceptions, they have been few in number and poor in quality. The field for the Stewards' Cup was the smallest since 1898, and, for some reason or other, the victory of Mr. Henning's Xeny was received in silence by spectators, backers, and bookmakers alike. The race itself does not call for very much comment. Mr. J. Buchanan's Santry might have bothered the winner a good deal, but had the misfortune to break a blood-vessel in the earlier stages of the race. Thrush, who finished second, ran exceedingly well, for 7-st. 12-lb. is a big weight for a three year old to carry in such a race, and he was giving 3-lb. to the winner (a year older than himself), and 11-lb. to the third horse, Polymelus, also a three-year old. Curtain Lecture, who was reported to have won an astonishing trial, is a mis-shapen sort of animal, and figured ignominiously in the race. The Craven Stakes fell to Pollion, now the property of Mr. Horatio Bottomley, who had evidently not allowed his horse to run unbacked, as he bought him in for 450 guineas, after which Sandboy, the property of Colonel Hall Walker, was offered for sale. The reserve of 1,500 guineas was soon passed, and a duel took place for his possession between Sir Ernest Cochrane and Mr. Imber, the latter of whom stayed the longest, and got him for 3,300 guineas, a price very far in excess of his value, to my way of thinking, but he might win the big French Hurdle Race, and he would certainly be able to tell the stable whether or no they have any chance of repeating their last year's victory in the Cesarewitch. The colours of Sandboy's new owner were to the fore on Brosy Lass in the West Dean Plate. The valuable Richmond Stakes went to Mr. W. B. Purefoy's good colt Lally, who won very easily from the Duke of Devonshire's colt by Marco out of Lady Villikins. Colonel Kincaid Smith's Kirkby won the Charlton Welter Handicap, and the Ham Stakes was credited to Lord Wolverton's beautifully-bred colt by St. Simon out of Perfect Dream.

W. A. Rouch.

THE WINNER OF THE STEWARDS' CUP AT GOODWOOD.
Mr. R. H. Henning's Xeny, by Pastisson—Conchita.

The second day of the meeting witnessed one of the most unexpected contretemps that ever occurred in racing, when Colonel Hall Walker's unbeaten colt, Black Arrow, with 20 to 1 laid on him, absolutely refused to take any part in the race for the Levant Stakes, which thereby became added to Lord Derby's list of recent successes. Those who bet must have been disagreeably surprised at the easy defeat of Saltpetre by His Majesty in the Goodwood Plate, for which Sandboy, Mr. Imber's purchase of the previous day, ran third.

Few people will retain pleasant memories of the Goodwood Cup Day of the present year. One could hardly imagine more depressing conditions of weather. The keenest enthusiast could not describe the sport as being anything but second-rate, and favourite after favourite went down, to the utter confusion of backers. Even the race for the Cup did not escape the note of disaster which dominated the day's proceedings, for Chatsworth, who it had been hoped would carry the Royal colours to victory, was found to be so shaken after his work the preceding morning that it was deemed inadvisable to run him, and the field for the big race was made up of the worst lot of horses that ever competed for the much-coveted trophy, which Red Robe, who has never previously earned a winning bracket, placed to the credit of Mr. A. James, who has now won four Goodwood Cups. Henry the First, who was giving 26lb. to the winner, was, in the opinion of the writer, unluckily beaten by three-quarters of a length. Uninsured ran well, and was only beaten out of a place in the last stride by Rydal Head. The rich Prince of Wales's Stakes of 2,200-sovs. was won very easily by Gorgos, who beat Medelstone and Anniversary II. in a style which fully confirmed the opinion of him expressed in these notes after the decision of the July Stakes. Major E Loder's Admirable Crichton, the half-brother to Pretty Polly, won the Rous Memorial Stakes of 1,065-sovs. by a short head, after an exciting race with Mr. Douglas Clarke's speedy filly, Sweet Mary; and if all goes well with them, the winner of this race, Black Arrow, and Lally may fight out some desperate battles in the great races of next year. CAURIRE.

Copyright.

THE WINNER OF THE GOLD CUP.
Mr. James's Red Robe, by Royal Hampton—Charm.

Digitized by Google

THE VISIT OF THE FRENCH FLEET.

"LEON GAMBETTA," "AMIRAL AUBE," AND "HENRI IV." Bourgault.

(1) "Leon Gambetta," armoured cruiser, built at Brest, 1901. She displaces 12,550 tons, and has a maximum speed of 22 knots. (2) "Amiral Aube," armoured cruiser, built at St. Nazaire, 1900. She has three screws and four funnels in pair . Her biggest guns are 7·6-in., and she has five torpedo-tubes. (3) "Henri IV.," battle-ship, built at Cherbourg, 1899. She displaces 8,949 tons, and has a maximum speed of 17 knots. Her largest weapon is a 10·8 in gun.

Digitized by Google

THE VISIT OF THE FRENCH FLEET.

"BALISTE" Bourgault.

One of the six torpedo-boat destroyers with the Fleet. She is of the same type as the "Catapulte," "Bombarde," and "Flambe ge," who accompany her. Each has two torpedo-tubes, and a maximum speed of 28 knots.

"CARNOT" Bourgault.

Battle-ship. Built at Toulon, and launched in 1894. She has a displacement of 11,986 tons, and a maximum speed of 18 knots. Her armour belt is of Creusot steel, and her heaviest weapons are two 12-in. guns

Digitized by Google

THE COUNTRY OF THE CASTLES.

("South Wales." Issued by the Great Western Railway. 2s. 6d.)

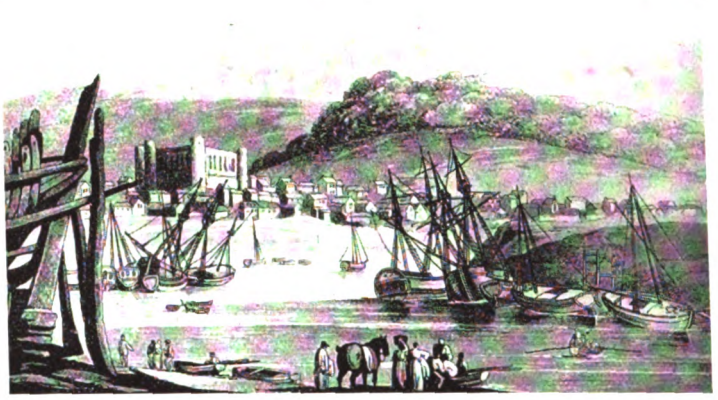
IN the days when Newport and Cardiff, little villages of small commercial importance, but even then abounding in historical associations and quaint old-world traditions and observances, were three days' journey from London, one can quite understand that the Welsh tour was not an outstanding feature of the average Englishman's holiday programme. Picturesque though they may have been (and it is not certain that a later and more prosaic age does not view the old order of things in a somewhat too favourable light), the wonderful coaches and old-fashioned inns of our forefathers were not the most perfect of their kind, and it is doubtful if to-day we would care, if put to the test, to see the Mercury or Duke of Clarence coaches take the place of the comfortable railway trains by which we may be whirled in four hours (and even less) from London to the country of the castles.

Yet even in those days there were litterateurs who devoted their pens and their brains to depicting for less travelled people the beauties of what Mr. Edward Laws has called "Little Britain Beyond Wales." Richard Warner in his "Welsh Walks," and in a later day Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Hall in "The Book of South Wales," have given us graphic descriptions of Gowerland, and the Vale of Neath in the days when Tenby was still beyond railway reach, and coaches were fresh in the memory of all. And now in this twentieth century there is another writer, who, like the compilers of the other Great Western volumes, remains anonymous, who gives us, in "South Wales, the Country of Castles," a brilliant description of the natural and hand-made glories of the southern portion of the Principality. He has a pen which he drives with evident enthusiasm for his subject, and he brings, like those before him in the books we have referred to, keen insight into the requirements of the traveller, and an appreciation of the value of a guide-book as a work of reference to aid him in his compilation. When you have read his chapter on Fishguard and the invasion of 1797, you realise that it is not only a vivid descriptive writer, but an historian and a painstaking and methodical man of research, who has prepared this book. Starting out naturally from Newport and Cardiff, we have first an interesting chapter on the growth of these two towns in the past century. And though to-day they are centres of all that is most modern, they have their ancient landmarks in Caerleon of Arthurian fame, and Caerphilly, the ruined stronghold of the Despencers, as testimony to the glorious past.

DEVIL'S BRIDGE.
The Lower Falls, the gloomy splendour of which makes them compare with some of the waterfalls of Switzerland.



SWANSEA IN 1779.
From a sketch by Rowlandson.

Swansea, the headquarters of the Vale of Neath and Gowerland, boasts the somewhat curious distinction of having spelled its name in some eighty different ways, beginning with the version of Giraldus Cambrensis, the mediæval historian of Wales, who wrote it Sweynsei. In five centuries Swansea obtained twice as many charters, from Lords Marcher, from Kings, and from the Lord Protector, whose two charters are preserved in the archives of the town. From the Castle, which is to-day built round about and rather hidden from sight, there is a wonderful panoramic view over the town, and down towards the old-fashioned house wherein Beau Nash first saw the light.

From Swansea up through Tenby into the heart of the country of the castles—Carew, Pembroke, and Manorbier—is a wonderful country, rich in historical associations and varied and beautiful scenery, and all of it so well worth staying in that the visitor will have much ado to tear himself away. Pembrokeshire, we are told, contains at least eighteen castles and three episcopal palaces, to say nothing of Celtic, Roman, Danish, and other earthworks. The castles of Pembroke, Carew, and Manorbier may all be visited in the course of one day's drive, and by the aid of this wonderful book their history, or rather the main points of it, may be gleaned on the way thither, if the traveller have sufficient strength of mind to tear his eyes from the scenery. But it is doubtful if he will.

It would be impossible to follow the writer more fully into his wanderings through this interesting and beautiful country. On every page there is something to attract the attention both of the student and the tourist. But as he says of South Wales, those who once visit it will always return, so it may be said of his book, those who have once looked through it will often have occasion to refer to it, for information on some obscure point, either in history or topography.

TENBY CASTLE.
"Tenby of the King," once known as Dynbych-y-Pysgod, the Little Town of Fish, is one of the sunniest spots in the United Kingdom.

LITTLE TREFFGARNE
The birthplace of Owen Glyndwr, which is near Treffgarne Pass, the scene of the Welsh heroes' last stand against the enemy.

Digitized by Google

The British Medical Journal says:
"Benger's Food has by its excellence established a reputation of its own."

BENGER'S Food

for Infants, Invalids, and the Aged

Delicious, Nutritive, Digestible.

BENGER'S FOOD with milk forms a dainty, delicious, and most easily digested cream. Infants thrive on it, and delicate or aged persons enjoy it.

Benger's Food is sold by Chemists, &c., everywhere.

SAVORY & MOORE'S BEST FOOD FOR INFANTS AND INVALIDS

If the food given in infancy is the right food, strong bodies, powerful muscle, and energetic brains will be built up. It is for this reason that "Savory & Moore's Best Food" is so popular with mothers, nurses, and doctors, many of whom use it in their own families, and the most striking proof of its excellence is afforded by the fact that its use has been adopted in so many Royal Nurseries. Dr. W—— writes that he "finds 'Savory & Moore's Best Food' agrees better with children than any other, and always recommends it to his patients as being by far the best assimilated by delicate infants."

The value of "Savory & Moore's Best Food for Infants and Invalids" for convalescents, the aged, and those of weak digestion, is very great. It is enjoyed, and is well digested and retained, when every other food fails One special reason why it is so much appreciated is that it may be prepared in so many different ways, without either its digestibility or nutritive value being in the slightest degree lessened or impaired.

"Savory & Moore's Best Food" is supplied by all Chemists and Drug Stores, in tins, at 1s., 2s., 5s. and 10s. A LARGE TRIAL TIN will be sent post free for six penny stamps by Messrs. Savory & Moore, Limited, Chemists to The King, 143, New Bond Street, London, W., to all who mention this paper, together with handbook of great interest to mothers, nurses, and those having the care of invalids.

G. W. R.

THE CHARMING WEST COUNTRY.

THE GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY

EXPRESS SERVICES give every facility for travel to

THE BOLD & ATTRACTIVE COASTS OF DEVON and CORNWALL.

THE CRANDEUR OF THE ENGLISH AND BRISTOL CHANNELS.

THE ROMANTIC EXMOOR and RUGGED DARTMOOR.

THE CHARMING HILLS and VALLEYS of SOMERSET & DORSET.

LONDON and

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Plymouth | 4 hrs. | 25 min. |
| Newquay | 6 ,, | 45 ,, |
| Falmouth | 6 ,, | 45 ,, |
| St. Ives | 7 ,, | 10 ,, |
| Penzance | 7 ,, | ,, |

Full particulars can be obtained free on application to

THE SUPERINTENDENT OF THE LINE, Great Western Railway, Paddington Station, London.

JAMES C. INGLIS, General Manager.

The World is our Oyster
We open it for You

D AND D

EAN AWSON

TOURIST AGENTS

If on business or pleasure bent seek our advice.—
We will save you time and money.
We issue Official Tickets of Railway & Steamship Cos.
We arrange pleasure tours and cruises.
Our British, Scotch & Irish Tours for short or long periods are of the Cheapest and Best.
We issue Rundreise Tickets for Continental Travel at about 30% less than ordinary fares.
Tell us where you wish to go in any part of the World and we will fix up the lowest rates by the best routes.
Our services will cost you nothing.

82, STRAND (Approach Hotel Cecil) W.C. and Branches ~

UNDOUBTEDLY

over-indulgence in paper Cigarettes is injurious. Medical men emphatically state that it is responsible for much ill-health. A hygienic substitute is the

FLOR DE DINDIGUL

CIGARETTE (All Tobacco Leaf—No Paper).

It is far more satisfying, is deliciously mild, mellow to the palate, pure, and dispenses with the evil effects of paper. Doctors recommend and smoke them. They are truly a delightful Whiff. You should try them! Awarded 10 Gold Medals. Sold everywhere, 1d. each, 8/- per 100; and by BEWLAY, 49, Strand. Established 125 years.

7/10ths of ALL

Your little ills will find relief in

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

For HEADACHE,
For BILIOUSNESS,
For INDIGESTION,
For TORPID LIVER,
For CONSTIPATION,
For SALLOW SKIN,
For the COMPLEXION.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

Very small, and easy to take as sugar. Purely Vegetable.

Genuine must have signature

PRICE 1¾d.

Brent Good

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

MR. MURRAY has already found occasion to bring out a second edition of "The Book of the Spiritual Life," by the late Lady Dilke. What is the main interest of the book? Is it Lady Dilke's own writings, which form the latter half of it, instinct as they are with thought and spirituality; or is it Sir Charles Dilke's memoir of his wife, with which the book begins, and which appears to us one of the most skilful and artistic pieces of biography that have been written of late? Perhaps the attractions are equal. At any rate, there is no passing over Sir Charles's contribution to the volume. He had a good subject; a personality of great strength and charm, a lady of rare physical and mental beauty, with a fine mind, and a courage and dash that never left her. Everybody knows some version or other of the strange story of Miss Emilia Francis Strong's marriage, when she was still a young and high-spirited girl, to Mark Pattison, the famous scholar, the elderly and dry Rector of Lincoln College, Oxford. It has been, or has been said to be, the theme of at least two novels, George Eliot's "Middlemarch" and Miss Rhoda Broughton's "Belinda." Sir Charles Dilke makes no reference to the latter, and is not quite convincing in his statement that Dorothea Casaubon was not in any way drawn from Mrs. Pattison. As a critic of art and letters, Mrs. Pattison did good work for many papers; but it was right of Sir Charles Dilke to publish her original work, which won the highest admiration of Walter Pater, Mr. Watts-Dunton, and other good judges. All her life she was a friend of great minds, Ruskin, Watts, and others, and the publication of these writings shows that it was not alone her charm of manner that attracted them.

Lady Dilke.

* * *

"THE CONFESSIONS OF LORD BYRON" (John Murray) will be, of course, indispensable to all Byron critics and collectors, but it is not likely to materially increase the popular love and admiration for the great Ishmael of the British Parnassus. Byron's letters to his half-sister about his mother are in execrable taste, and so are his denunciations of Keats—"Jack Keats, or Ketch, or whatever his names are." The poetic triangle with Scott at the apex and Rogers next is interesting, but the good people at Aldeburgh will assuredly grumble at there being no mention of Crabbe, although Byron certainly described him elsewhere in the oft-quoted line about "Nature's sternest painter—yet her best." If there is one man whom Byron consistently admired it was Edmund Kean.

Byron's Letters.

THOSE who intend to visit the Tyrol could not do better than first consult, besides the necessary "Baedeker" and "Murray," a book recently published by Messrs. Duckworth on "The Tyrol." The author is Mr. W. D. McCrackan, who has written before on Switzerland in a manner to recommend his new book to a large circle. It is a fascinating country that he describes, including not only the noblest of scenery, but such treasures of art as are to be found in Innsbruck, particularly in the Cathedral, and such history as that of the heroic defence of his mountain region by Andreas Hofer against Napoleon's armies. Mr. McCrackan's account of Hofer is particularly interesting. The Tyrol, too, was the home of two great Minnesingers, Walther von der Vogelweide and Oswald von Volkenstein. The excellent photographs with which Mr. McCrackan's book is illustrated whet the appetite to go and see the actuality of such beautiful country; and he is no less happy in dealing with works of art. We reproduce on this page a photograph of part of Maximilian's famous tomb at Innsbruck.

The Tyrol.

* * *

THERE are many problems before the United States; none so threatening or so important as that of the American negro. The dislike, the kind of shudder, which many of us feel in the presence of a negro, is intensified there into a great hatred among by far the larger class of white men. The negro is emerging from his incapacity, his childish backwardness, into intellectual power and self-control; he is increasing enormously in numbers and growing ever more ready and more fit to claim his fair share of the freedom and governance of his country; and, on the other hand, except for a few enlightened souls like President Roosevelt, both North and South are determined that he shall be held back in actual, if not nominal, bondage, disfranchised, and kept silent and subdued. How acutely the American negro feels his position may be gauged by two recent books, "The Souls of Black Folk," by Mr. W. E. Burghardt du Bois (Constable) and "Ethiopia in Exile," by Mr. B. Pullen-Burry (Unwin). Mr. du Bois is himself a negro, and the claims of his race are expressed in his book in an extraordinary outburst of aspiration, vivid and impassioned argument, humour, beauty, and poetical feeling. Mr. B. Pullen-Burry is an Englishman who has long studied the negro and his ways in Jamaica and elsewhere; and he, too, in his more matter-of-fact but still very interesting manner, tells the same story. Both books are worth reading and pondering over, both in England and America. Indeed, the circumstances of its origin and its own high merits make Mr. du Bois's book one of the most remarkable ever written.

The American Negro.

A MARBLE TABLET ON THE TOMB OF MAXIMILIAN IN INNSBRUCK.
(From Mr. W. D. McCrackan's book, "The Tyrol." Duckworth and Co.)

* * *

MR. J. G. COMMIN of Exeter, who has published some of the best Devonian literature (topographical and otherwise) which has appeared during the last decade, has just reproduced with great care and taste two contemporary tracts giving an account of an extraordinary storm which occurred at Widecombe on October 21 (Trafalgar Day by anticipation), 1638. They are well worth the attention of collectors in general and those of Devonshire out-of-the-way trifles in particular.

A Storm on the Moor.

* * *

THERE is little appearing just now in the book-world except novels; and of these the best of the season's output have already appeared. But Mr. John Long is wisely taking care that holiday-makers shall have reading that is not too lofty or too difficult, but still interesting enough to pass the time. We have before us quite a number of those red-bound books of his: "The Maid of the River," by Mrs. Campbell Praed, which is written with all that favourite author's ability, and tells of an Australian girl and her two lovers; "St. Elizabeth of London," by "Lucas Cleeve," which contains a clever study of a modern saint, a beautiful girl married to a rich man who is anything but a saint; "His Mascot," by L. T. Meade, a good story of a theft of a ring, suspicion and rehabilitation, but not quite up to the writer's usual mark; and "The Soul of a Villain," by Mrs. Hughes-Gibb, which contains a powerful study of a mother's love, which will stoop to any baseness for the sake of saving a loved child from misery.

Novels.

* * *

ANOTHER from the same publisher is "Children of Earth," a story in which Mr. Sidney Paternoster starts well, but rather sacrifices his point to his desire to excite as he goes on. It tells of a country labourer and his daughter who come to London with disastrous results for both. Then there is, of course, the already much-talked-of novel of High Church versus Low Church, by Mr. Guy Thorne, called "A Lost Cause." Bishops, priests, and deacons will no doubt praise or ban this book into notoriety; to us it appears a very crude and childish performance, which will harm the very cause it purports to defend—if such a book can affect men's minds at all—by absurd over-statement of its case. Mr. Thorne's Protestant champions are such vulgar impostors that the victory of High Church is a foregone conclusion. The bottom is knocked out of the intrigue, and one is left reflecting on Mr. Thorne's lack of grammar and good taste. Other novels just issued by Mr. Long are "Alton of Somasco," by Mr. Harold Bindloss, "The White Lady," by Miss May Crommelin, and "The Harvest of Love," by Mr. C. Ranger-Gull. These we hope to examine later, but it is clear that there is no lack this summer of the kind of reading that goes well with a deck-chair on the sands.

More Novels.

---

BOOKS TO READ.

The Scenery of London. Painted by Herbert Marshall; described by G. E. Mitton. (Black.)
London to the Nore. Painted and described by W. L. and Mrs. Wyllie. (Black.)
An Eye-witness in Manchuria, by Lord Brooke. (Nash.)
Some Famous Women of Wit and Beauty, by John Fyvie. (Constable.)
James Macpherson: An Episode in Literature, by J. S. Smart. (Nutt.)
A Jay of Italy, by Bernard Capes. (Methuen.)
The Parish Nurse, by May E. Mann. (Methuen.)
Hugh Rendal, by Lionel Portman. (Alston Rivers.)
Children of Earth, by Sidney Paternoster. (Long.)
The Vegetable Garden. (Murray.)
Country Cottages: How to Build, Buy, and Fit them up, by "Home Counties." (Heinemann.)
Arachnia, by James Robertson. (Macmillan.)
Shrewsbury, by Thomas Auden. (Methuen's Ancient Cities.)

Digitized by Google

NEW ZEALAND

THE BRIGHTER BRITAIN.

A NEW COUNTRY of marvellous beauty, with a fertile soil and a splendid climate. No extremes of heat or cold.

No droughts. An abundance of water, yet no rainy season.

An Evergreen Land rich in natural products.

A GREAT SHEEP, CATTLE AND DAIRYING COUNTRY.

Cheap farms with helpful assistance to farmers by the Government. Reduced steamer fares from the United Kingdom to New Zealand for persons with small capital.

No private monopoly of Public Utilities; the Government owns and operates Railways, Telegraphs, Telephones and Insurance.

No Lock-outs! No Strikes!! Employment disputes adjusted by Arbitration!!!

NEW ZEALAND IS THE WONDERLAND OF THE WORLD.

Its Thermal Sights are unique in their extent, beauty and weirdness.

The Mammoth Geyser "Waimangu" (Black Water) hurls an immense mass of boiling water, mud and stones over 1,000 feet high.

Hot Mineral Water and Mud Baths; The Curative Baths of Rotorua, Te Aroha and Hanmer are world famous. Government doctors in attendance.

Baths. Gardens. Games. Music.

and picturesque. Here are lakes of great size and depth—canyons that surpass the greatest of other lands—dense forests with a tropical profusion of ferns and flowers—innumerable waterfalls—monoliths of granite many thousands of feet in height—glaciers, snowfields, and the peerless Sounds, with their 400 miles of inside sailing distance.

TRANSIT is convenient throughout New Zealand. Government railways, Express trains, Pullman and Dining Cars. Excellent coastal steamers. Splendid coaching routes. Hotels, good; charges moderate. Government Hotels, Spas, and Accommodation Houses in many of the principal tourist resorts.

Large Mail Steamers with every modern comfort and convenience leave Great Britain for New Zealand fortnightly. Duration of direct journey, 40 days; via Suez and Australia, 44 days; via Canada, 32 days; via San Francisco, 28 days.

The best time to visit New Zealand is during the summer months, from November to April.

ALL INFORMATION regarding Travel, Tourist Routes, Spas, Baths, Sport, etc., etc., is supplied free of charge by the GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENT OF TOURIST AND HEALTH RESORTS. Head Office, WELLINGTON, NEW ZEALAND. Branch Offices throughout the Colony. Information regarding access to New Zealand, Reduced Steamer Fares, Settlement Commerce, Industries, Travel, etc., etc., also supplied at the Office of the High Commissioner for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, London—Mr. J. G. Gow, Commercial Agent for New Zealand, Durban, South Africa, also supplies general information respecting New Zealand.

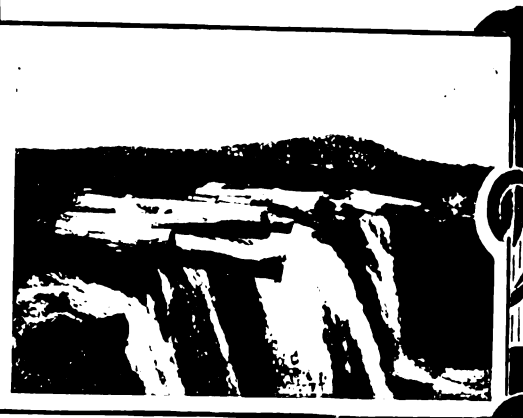
Minister for Tourist and Health Resorts: Hon. Sir Joseph G. Ward, K.C.M.G. Superintendent: T. E. Donne, Wellington, New Zealand. The Superintendent invites correspondence.

See Tourist Department's "Itinerary of Travel" and descriptive Guide Books.

An International Exhibition of Products, Manufactures, Arts, Sciences, Amusements, etc., etc., is to be held by the Government of New Zealand in Hagley Park, Christchurch City, commencing 1st November, 1906, and terminating April, 1907. Full particulars obtainable from the High Commissioner for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, S.W.

HAULING KAURI LOGS THROUGH BUSH, KAURI FOREST, NORTH AUCKLAND.

FELLING KAURI TREE, NORTH AUCKLAND, KAURI FOREST.



WAIRUA FALLS, WAIRUA RIVER, NORTH AUCKLAND.

The ALPINE SCENERY of New Zealand combines the distinguishing features of Switzerland, Norway and America. The Southern Alps extend for 300 miles. Mt. Cook, the highest peak, is belted by the largest glaciers in the temperate regions—the Tasman being 18 miles long and 2 miles wide. Near the foot of Mt. Cook is the Hermitage Hotel. Government guides, Alpine huts, and all necessary Alpine equipment available for use of visitors.

The LAKES of New Zealand are most pleasing in their charm of colour, contour and environment. Rotorua, Rotoiti, Taupo, and Waikaremoana in the North Island; Manapouri, Wakatipu, Te Anau, Wanaka, Kanieri and Mahinapua in the South Island are the most notable. The Lakes of the South Island are surrounded by mountain scenery of singular beauty and magnificence. Steamers and Power Launches. Good Hotels.

The WEST COAST FIORDLAND is indescribably wild

OKOROIRE.

HOT SPRINGS AND SANATORIUM HOTEL.

One of the finest Health Resorts in the Thermal District.

The first place of interest en route to Rotorua, New Zealand.

Delightful NATURAL HOT MINERAL BATHS, free to Guests. Sufferers from Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Affection of the Eyes, Skin Diseases, etc., are often permanently cured by these waters.

CLIMATE.—Beautifully clear and bracing atmosphere, charming surroundings.

SPORT.—The Streams in the hotel grounds are exceedingly well-stocked with Trout. Plenty of Game, viz: Pheasants, Virginian Quail, Wild Duck, Hares, and Deer. Lawn Tennis, Golf, and Croquet.

The drive from Okoroire to Rotorua is one of the most beautiful in New Zealand.

T. MARTIN,
Manager.

NEW ZEALAND.

THE GRAND HOTEL, ROTORUA.

Situated in the Centre of the Hot Lakes District.

Patronised by T.R.H. The Prince and Princess of Wales.

THE HOTEL is in the immediate neighbourhood of the beautifully laid-out Government Gardens, wherein are situated the celebrated "Priest," "Rachel," "Postmaster," "Duchess," and other mineral baths, the curative properties of which are world famous. It has magnificent and lofty apartments, spacious promenade, balconies, snug alcoves, and luxuriously-appointed drawing, music, conversation, reading, smoking, and billiard rooms, perfect sanitation, and is lighted throughout by electricity.

BATH CHAIRS and attendance provided to convey invalids to or from the various bath houses. Tariff 12/6 per day inclusive.

W. J. LEES, Manager.

THE GEYSER HOTEL,

WHAKAREWAREWA, ROTORUA.

Situated in close proximity to the wonderful Geysers and Maori Settlement.

Visitors staying at the Geyser Hotel have continued opportunity of witnessing them as they can be seen plainly from the verandah of the Hotel, also of studying native life and customs.

The Hotel possesses its own private hot and cold curative mineral baths of which the most valued are the "Spout," "Oil," and "Carlsbad" Baths.

It has lately been greatly enlarged and re-furnished in a most comfortable manner. Electric light is established throughout the hotel and baths.

Coaches run regularly between Whakarewarewa, the Rotorua Sanatorium, and Government Gardens.

Tariff 10s. per day or £3 per week, inclusive. For a lengthened stay terms can be arranged

CHAS. E. NELSON, Proprietor.

Digitized by Google

Leaves from a Collector's Note-book.

No. LIII.—THE EVOLUTION OF WORCESTER CHINA.—ITS LITERATURE AND MUSEUM.

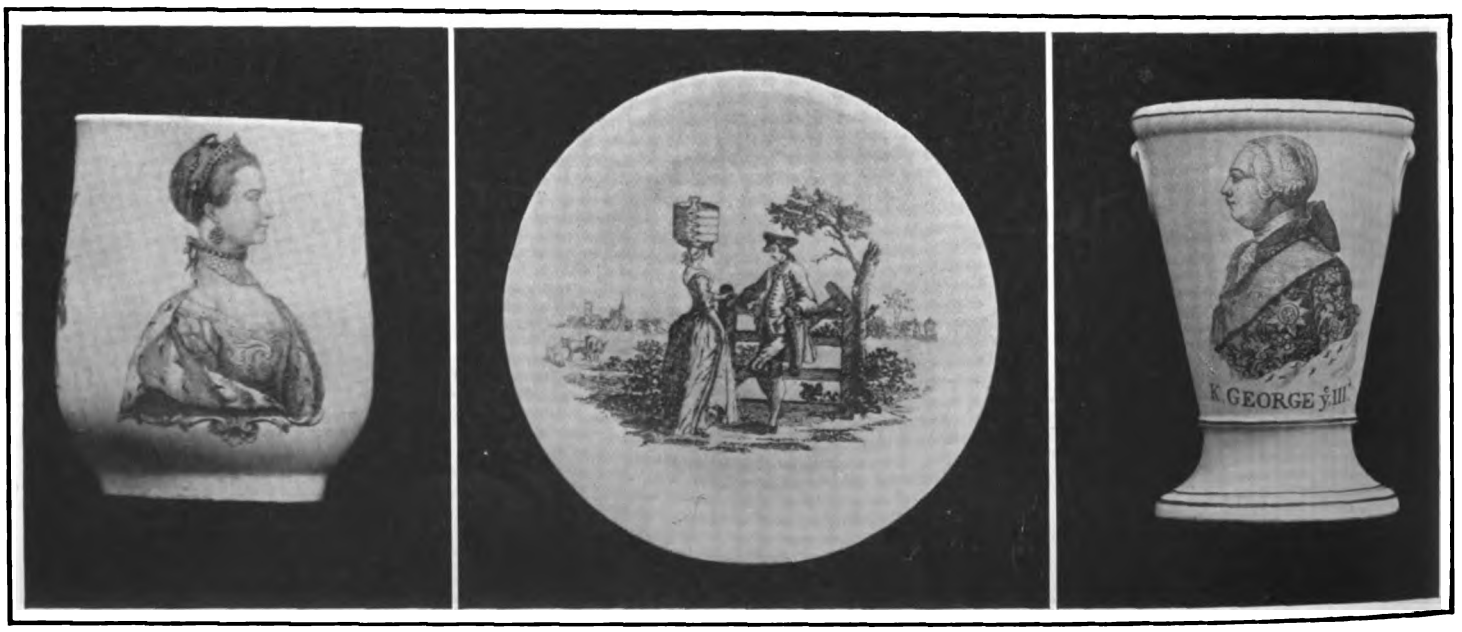
A WORCESTER CHINA DISH.
One of a service ornamented with charming illustrations of "Æsop's Fables." In the collection of Miss Woollan of Brook Street.

THE progress made in the manufacture of Worcester porcelain during the first half century of the existence of the works is well illustrated by the reproduction of the "Æsop" dish, the painting of which was executed by Giles, one of the ablest artists ever employed by the proprietors. From the very first the engagement of skilled draughtsmen became a cherished tradition of the successors of Dr. Wall, who was himself associated with such men as Frank Hayman and Grignon. Although Mr. Mayer claims for Liverpool the credit of the first discovery of the art of transfer printing as exemplified in various examples of the use of Masonic emblems for decorative purposes, Marryat, as well as Brongniart, unhesitatingly give the credit for it to Dr. Wall, whose splendid services as the pioneer of the most important developments ever effected in the potter's art are entirely ignored by his semi-official biographer. "The idea of printing upon porcelain, in order to avoid the trouble and difficulty of reproducing the Oriental and other pattern then in vogue," writes the former, "appears to have originated with Dr. Wall, who was skilled in printing. To him, therefore, is generally assigned the ingenious method of transferring printed patterns to biscuit-ware, which is now universally practised."

The Masonic cups and jugs made at Worcester are exceptionally fine, and it would be interesting to know if Dr. Wall belonged to any of the Military or other Lodges of Freemasons which seem to have flourished in that city prior to his death—roughly speaking, between 1745 and 1775. The plate now illustrated is typical of some of the best work done under Dr. Wall's ægis. Whereas the kilns and "throwing-rooms" of Bow, Chelsea, and Swansea have disappeared, while those of the once far-famed factory of Nantgarw are utilised for the making of drain-pipes, the collection of early productions preserved at Worcester is the finest in the world. It will—looked after and constantly augmented as it now is by Mr. George Haywood—keep green the memory of its first creator, Mr. R. W. Binns, the zealous and erudite historian of the Royal Porcelain Works, for all time. It is now carefully classified according to the various epochs which mark the gradual progress of Worcester "potting" (to borrow Mr. Binns's own phrase) from 1750 down to 1905. First comes 1751–1783, Dr. Wall; and then 1783–1846, Flight and Barr; 1786–1851, the Royal China Works under Grainger; 1852–1862, under Kerr and Binns; and finally, 1862–1905, the Worcester Royal Porcelain Company, Limited. In the vestibule the intelligent face of Dr. Wall looks down on a glass case, which may be described as the "pillory." It is wholly given up to condemned and ascertained specimens of fraudulent imitation, many of which have been delivered to their present possessors by the decision of Courts of Law. If imitation really is the sincerest form of flattery, the potters of Worcester from 1750 to 1900 have indeed been flattered with a vengeance. Some of these counterfeit pieces are almost incapable of identification except by experts like Mr. Haywood. Amongst the offenders against the elementary principles of commercial morality are potters of French, German, Bohemian, Prussian, Austrian, and (sad to relate) Japanese nationality. The early marks have also been carefully copied both at Derby and in Staffordshire. Americans are wont to purchase the commoner blue and white specimens of Worcester (duly marked, of course), and then increase their value and avoid the payment of duty on a higher scale, but super-adding gold and more elaborate ornamentation in colours on the other side of the Atlantic.

B.



EARLY WORCESTER CHINA-WARE.
(1) Early portrait of Queen Charlotte on a Worcester mug, made before her visit to the factory. (2) Early Worcester plate, ornamented with milkmaid subject about 17[illegible]. (3) King George III. portrayed on a Worcester vase made between 1760-70.

Digitized by Google

MALLETT
& SON

hold and offer for sale specimens of the

HIGHEST QUALITY

OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE

as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.

EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.

AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.

(Two hours from Paddington.)

Old Brass Stand and Lamp.

THE MISSES

H. & I. WOOLLAN

(Under Royal Patronage)

are showing a

UNIQUE

Collection of

Antiques.

Chippendale, Sheraton, and Hepplewhite Furniture. Worcester and Lowestoft Services. Lace, Glass, etc.

Showrooms: First Floor.

28, BROOK STREET, GROSVENOR SQUARE, W.

NEW CATALOGUE OF CHOICE AND RARE ILLUSTRATED and other BOOKS, COLOURED PRINTS, etc.,

SENT POST FREE BY—

GEORGE GREGORY, Bath.

(Bookseller to H.M. Queen Alexandra.)

WANTED, Sporting Magazine, Vol. 30 (1807); also Vol. 37 (1810-11).

CATALOGUES OF ILLUSTRATED BOOKS, VIEWS, PORTRAITS, etc., GRATIS.

Books and Engravings Bought.

JAMES RIMELL & SON,

DEALERS IN OLD BOOKS AND ENGRAVINGS,

53, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON, W.

To Portrait & Print Collectors & Extra-Illustrators.

Kindly inspect stock or signify wants to

GEORGE SUCKLING, 13, Garrick Street

(next door to Garrick Club).

Mr. SUCKLING undertakes inlaying, arranging and binding of extra-illustrated books.

AUTOGRAPHS—HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS.

The oldest Dealers in Europe. For Catalogues, issued monthly, and all information write at once to

M. NOEL CHARAVAY,

3, RUE DE FURSTENBERG, PARIS,

where the "AMATEUR DES AUTOGRAPHES," a valuable Monthly Publication, may also be obtained.

JAMES TREGASKIS,

"The Caxton Head," 232, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.

RARE BOOKS,
MEDIÆVAL MANUSCRIPTS,
DOCUMENTS OF LITERARY & HISTORICAL INTEREST,
ORIGINAL DRAWINGS,
ENGRAVINGS,
AMERICANA,
CURIOSITIES,
ANTIQUITIES,
OBJECTS OF ART.

Catalogues Price Sixpence.

PORTRAITS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.

ENGLISH—FOREIGN—AMERICAN.

RARE ENGRAVINGS OF ALL SORTS.

WRITE FOR CATALOGUES OR VISIT THE SHOWROOMS OF

M. GODEFROY MAYER,

41, RUE BLANCHE, PARIS.

Bookbinding.—The Bedford Bindery.

OLD-ESTABLISHED FIRM.

VERY MODERATE PRICES. Special attention paid to extra-illustrated works.

SPECIMENS ON VIEW.

G. F. AYLING, 1A, CAMBRIDGE ST., EDGWARE ROAD, W.

MAGGS BROS.,

109, STRAND, W.C., LONDON, ENGLAND.

Dealers in RARE BOOKS AND FINE LIBRARY EDITIONS OF STANDARD AUTHORS, Voyages and Travels, Early Printed Books, 1st Editions of 17th, 18th, and 19th Century writers, Illustrated Works. Also Rare Portraits, Line, Stipple, Mezzotints, and Colour Engravings, and Autographs.

Recently issued—Illustrated Catalogues of Rare Books, Voyages and Travels, Engravings, Autographs. Price 6d. each.

THE RELICS OF NELSON AND HARDY.

Those interested in all that concerns the TRAFALGAR CENTENARY should not omit to visit the unique EXHIBITION to be held at the COUNTY MUSEUM, DORCHESTER, Capital of the County of Dorset, which gave England's navy Bingham, the Hoods, Digby, Domett and Hardy. Objects connected with Admiral Sir Thomas Hardy will be the chief feature of the Exhibition.

THE KING'S COLLECTORS' REGISTER.

For Spaces in the Register apply to "THE EDITOR."

WANTED.

AUTOGRAPHS AND LETTERS.

Wanted, Autograph Letters of Theatrical People, especially Quin, George Colman the younger, and Miss Farren.—825, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

William Bodham Donne, any good autograph letters.—826, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Complete copies of Fairburn's Journal of Naval Occurrences.—154, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Freemasonry, Constitutions of. 4to, 1784; in boards preferred. £1 10s. offered.—174, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Jest Books relating to Napoleonic Wars with coloured caricatures of Buonaparte. 10s. 6d. each offered.—175, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

The Vocal Magazine. Vol. II, 1778. 10s. offered.—176, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Boxiana. Vols. IV. and V. In perfect condition, with plates. 50s. offered.—177, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Any book or pamphlet relating to the art of colour pictures on glass, 1750-1805. 5s. offered.—178, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Early Doulton Pottery. Also any Pamphlets relating to the firm.—525, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

TAPESTRY, FURNITURE, Etc.

Carved Chippendale Bureau Bookcase.—412, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Naval Prints published by any of the following:—C. Sheppard, 74, Little Britain; C. Taylor, Holborn (date 1791); J. Fairburn, 110 and 146, Minories (1800-1838); Tabart and Co., London; E. Rushton, Paradise Street, Liverpool; W. Belch, Bridge Street, Boro'; I. Houlston, Strand; R. Sly, 41, Union Street, Somers Town; J. Marshall, Aldermary Churchyard, London.—237, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Good Impressions with good margins of engravings of old London, especially Covent Garden, the Temple, the Strand, Lincoln's Inn.—249, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Boxing. Small old Portraits Cribb and Molyneux.—255, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Good specimen of Baxter prints with a short biography of Baxter.—257, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Picturesque views of Dorsetshire (coloured), 4to, published by Love, Weymouth, about 1800. £1 10s. offered.—258, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Rare colour portraits of Nelson.—260, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Bristol Theatre. Old playbills, 1855-57, with name of Marie Wilton (Lady Bancroft) in cast.—748, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Book Plates—Naval, Masonic, Bath, Dorset.—749, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Fan papers relating to Nelson or Buonaparte, 1795-1815. Liberal offer.—751, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

BOOKS.

Scrap Book containing almost complete collection of theatrical notices from 1850 to 1865 In good condition.—132A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Ten Battersea Boxes with portraits. What offers.—522, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Set of Champagne Glasses, beautifully cut.—523, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Small Library, theatrical, naval, topographical principally. Would disperse or sell en bloc.—747A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

TAPESTRY.

Venetian Chair, XVIIIth Century.—409A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

CONSIDERABLE interest was evinced in the series of trials for motor-boats which took place off the Isle of Wight and in Southampton Water last week. In the Eliminating Trials for the British International Cup, to be held in the beautiful Bay of Arcachon on September 11, the following vessels were entered: "Competitor" (Lieutenant Mansfield Cumming), "Napier" (Lord Howard de Walden), "Napier II." (Mr. L. de Rothschild and the Hon. John Scott Montagu), "Brooke I." (Mr. Mawdsley Brooke and Captain Corbet), and "Hutton II." (Mr. J. E. Hutton). At the signal "Competitor," formerly the old "Napier Minor," but now engined with a Siddeley motor, was the first to get away, and was followed some two minutes later by "Napier." The latter was doomed to misfortune almost from the start. Scarcely had she travelled any distance when, through her steering gear going wrong, she came into collision with a yacht, and with damaged bows was forced to retire. "Brooke I." followed close on the heels of "Napier," and was actually leading by a lap before "Napier II." had fairly started. The course measured 35 miles, to complete which seven rounds had to be made. Bembridge and Sea View were crowded with visitors, who were rewarded with some first-rate sport. "Brooke I." completed her first round in just a trifle under 18-min., while "Competitor" covered the same distance in under 15-min. "Napier II." made a splendid start, and quickly made up lost ground, finishing her first lap 300-yds. ahead of "Brooke I.," who was still leading by a lap. But soon after entering her second lap it was seen that "Napier II." was labouring under difficulties, and her speed became slower and slower, finally stopping. After some slight adjustment, "Napier II.," which ultimately proved the victor, started with renewed vigour, and for the remainder of the race ran with great regularity. "Brooke I." and "Competitor" both came to a stop in the fifth round, the former, it was ascertained, having shipped a good deal of water, while the latter had a hot bearing. Thus "Napier II." finished alone, having completed her seven rounds in 2-hr. 5-min. 27-sec. As a matter of fact, her net running time was only 1-hr. 47-min. 24-sec.; but, unfortunately, her delay at the start is taken into account in the official return.

* * *

An event which excited an equal, if not greater, amount of interest on the part of the public was the Motor-Yacht Club's Reliability Trials for motor-boats, which, like last year, were spread over two days The second day's trials were, however, abandoned early in the day, owing to adverse weather conditions. There was a large and representative entry list for this important event, including twenty-six British, one American, one Italian, and one Dutch boat. Five out of the seven classes were represented, including the following:

Class II. (yachts' launches not exceeding 20-ft. over all).—6-h.p. Dean and Burden, 6-h.p. Thornycroft, and 5-h.p. Chard.

Class III. (yachts' launches up to 25-ft.).—30-h.p. Blake, 12-h.p. Thornycroft, 12-h.p. Blake, 7-h.p. Fay and Bowen, 11-h.p. Simpson-Strickland, two 6-h.p. De Dions, 16-h.p. Scott Stirling, and 14-h.p. Vosper.

Class IV. (yachts' launches up to 30-ft.).—10-h.p. Lozier, 16-h.p. Simpson-Strickland, 24-h.p. Thornycroft, 40-h.p. Mawdslay, 14-h.p. Chard, 14-h.p. Parsons, Viscount Royston's 24-h.p. Napier, 24-h.p. Legros and Knowles, 24-h.p. Delahaye, and 40-h.p. Fiat.

Class VI. (unrestricted vessels, exceeding 25-ft.).—20-h.p. Dixon Brothers and Hutchinson, 12 h.p Dean and Burden, Lord Howard de Walden's 80-h.p. Napier, 28-h.p. Daimler, 12-h.p. Collis, and 16-h.p. Wolseley.

Class VII. (sea-going motor-yachts). — 12-h.p. Standard, 24-h.p. Napier, 12-h.p. Goldkoop, 75-h.p. Thornycroft, and a Thornycroft using "producer" gas.

The rules of the competition require the boats to run continuously for two days of ten hours each. Any stoppage involves loss of marks according to the duration of each stop. The principal course was nine knots round in Southampton Water. There was also an open course of fifteen knots in the Solent. The majority of the boats were entered for both courses. The idea in having an open course in addition to a sheltered one was to afford owners an opportunity of testing the seaworthiness of their vessels—a point, by the way, on which the public generally are grossly misinformed. The first day's trials produced capital sport. The 80-h.p. Napier, on the sheltered course, with only one stop of eight minutes spent in cleaning a plug, made the splendid average of 21·4 miles an hour for the ten hours. Of the thirty-four starters thirty-one finished. The 40-h.p. Fiat was, unfortunately, disqualified, owing to her late arrival. The stoppages were trifling, the longest being made by the 75-h.p. Thornycroft, which was delayed three hours with a choked supply pipe.

* * *

Those who looked forward to the second and concluding day of the trials were doomed to disappointment, for the brilliant sunshine of the previous day had given place to pouring rain and high winds. The sea outside the docks was so rough that several of the boats would not venture out, while others were forced to put back before the mark-boat was reached. The 75 h.p. Thornycroft was only got into dock after the greatest difficulty. Twice she was nearly smashed against the jetties. Practically all the boats reached the dock without any serious mishap, and shortly after the luncheon hour the committee declared the trial ended. The awards will probably, therefore, be made on fifteen hours' running instead of twenty.

Bassano.

MISS ALICE CRAWFORD ON A 12-H.P. GLADIATOR.

Digitized by Google

MERCÉDÈS

A CLASSIC MODEL

THE ROYAL CAR

AS USED BY

H.M. Edward VII., King of England.
H.I.M. Wilhelm II., Emperor of Germany.
H.M. Leopold II., King of the Belgians.
H.M. Carlos I., King of Portugal.

Latest type 1905 40-h.p., with side entrance Coach-work for delivery early in September.

4045 Roi des Belges, entrance through pivoted front seat, painted and upholstered dark red; fitted with canopy, glass shields in front and at rear; waterproof covers to all seats. 1905 model. Slightly used. £1,300.

Sole Concessionnaires:
Cannstatt Mercédès, Ltd.,
127, Long Acre, W.C.

Llangammarch Wells,

CENTRAL WALES.
(The British Nauheim.)

An Ideal Spa for the Treatment of Heart Disease, Gout, and Rheumatism.

THE LAKE HOTEL

A first-class Hotel situated in extensive Private Grounds and lighted throughout with Electricity.

Telegraphic Address: "BARIUM," LLANGAMMARCH WELLS. Apply MANAGEMENT.

GOLF CLUB WITHIN FIVE MINUTES' WALK.

42/-

CHARLES LEE & SON,

Specialist Ladies' Outfitters,
98 & 100, WIGMORE STREET
(ONLY ADDRESS).

CAUTION.—Messrs. Lee & Son have no branches, and warn the public against imitations of their goods.

An example in Finest Quality English Crêpe de Chine, with Valenciennes Lace Yoke and Guipure Points, 42/-.

A Blouse suitable for any figure.

POST ORDERS.—The Lady's Pictorial states:—"If you live in the country, have an account with Lee & Son, Wigmore Street; they send the choicest selection of goods by post, while they are cheap for the best Costumiers, Furriers, Lacemen, Specialists in Trousseaus, The Leewig Petticoat, Royal Crescent Veil, Hosiers, Glovers, Milliners, etc.

CHARLES LEE & SON,
WIGMORE STREET.

ALWAYS READY FOR USE. NEVER REQUIRES GRINDING.

KROPP RAZOR

Each Razor in a Case.
BLACK HANDLES, 5/6. IVORY HANDLES, 7/6.

A PLEASURE TO USE.

Wholesale: OSBORNE, GARRETT & CO., London, W.

HIGHEST QUALITY

TURKISH TOWELS

AND SIMILAR GOODS.

SOFT AND ABSORBENT.

THE "OSMAN" TURKISH TOWEL.
THE "OSMAN" TURKISH BATH SHEET.
THE "OSMAN" TURKISH BATH MAT.
THE "OSMAN" TURKISH BATH GOWN.

THE "OSMAN" Turkish Goods enumerated here are an absolute necessity in every household. They are a luxury, but not expensive, and can be obtained at prices within reach of every one. Be sure to buy the "Osman" brand and avoid imitations.

Made by BARLOW & JONES LIMITED, MANCHESTER;

And Sold by all High-class Drapers and Upholsterers.

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

LONDON has undergone a complete transformation. It is fairly full, it is true, but all the well-known faces are missing from their usual haunts. Eager young country cousins, with their keen appreciation of everything that means London, parade the streets and parks, and haunt the principal shops, which are decked out to attract their August public.

I hear of some charming dinner-gowns for house-parties. One that was made for a well-known lady of title, by a Dover Street house, was of lovely silver tissue, over the palest of blue taffetas, made en princesse, perfectly simple, but exquisite in cut and material. The low bodice had a garland of tiny blue china roses outlining the décolletage, and forming the sleeve. This gown could only be worn by a perfectly-proportioned woman, for it showed to perfection every line and curve of the graceful figure for whom it was built. Sequins and pearls are being much used for evening dresses just now. Our illustration shews an elegant gown in pearl embroidery over white, at Mme. Paula's in Regent Street, who has some beautiful French models. There you can also find all the newest day gowns and blouses of all descriptions. Evening cloaks are also to be had in every variety.

A CHARMING PEARL EMBROIDERED GOWN.
(Mme. Paula, Regent Street, W.)

The modes at present point to soft clinging garments, and under these circumstances it is more necessary than ever that all underwear should fit perfectly, so that no cumbersome fulness should spoil the perfect lines. Combinations of cache-corsets and petticoats are absolutely essential to the fit of a princesse robe. Unfortunately, it is not a fashion that will become universal, as there are few people who can afford to wear these gowns, unless their lines are perfectly correct. Art in these days can do a great deal to assist us in many ways, but it requires genius to hide any defect in a princesse gown. The Directoire will replace this mode for those who cannot indulge in the former style.

For the moors, there are some pretty heather tweeds, both in plain colours and in check mixtures. Shamrock green and golden brown are also favourite shades this season. For country house-parties, white cloth and serge trimmed with touches of bright scarlet will be much seen for mornings.

The new shell Japanese sunshades, both plain and hand-painted, are very novel. Some are beautifully designed, and in lovely shades of colour. A white one, with delicate wistaria sprays, and soft green tendrils, was very tempting. Some are also carried out in this new shape in delicate lace fabrics.

Messrs. Charles Lee and Son of Wigmore Street have some very charming blouses, also some inexpensive linen costumes, in several shades. Alpaca mohair coats and skirts will be found most useful for country and seaside wear, and there are some original shapes in these materials there at most moderate prices.

Those who have not yet left town should pay a last visit to Messrs. Robinson and Cleaver of Regent Street, where they will find many articles for household purposes. Their table linen and bed linen are of the very best, and all of Irish manufacture.

At the seaside, those who really bathe in the sea should be very careful of their skin, as the salt water is apt to make it rough, and in some cases causes a rash. There are so many preparations advocated for prevention of this roughness that it is difficult to select any one remedy in preference to another; but from those I have seen, Mrs. Pomeroy's preparations and skin foods are really excellent, and keep the skin beautifully soft, no matter what the weather may be.

Large hats are prevalent just now, and will doubtless be worn much larger still in the early autumn. I also hear that in furs seal-skins are to be the most fashionable of all furs, and those who can secure them now at a reasonable figure would do well not to lose the opportunity of obtaining them at summer prices. Also the flat furs will be much worn, such as beaver and ermine.

Messrs. Debenham and Freebody have an enormous variety in these, and their capital freezing stores for the preservation of them enable them to keep a larger stock than any other house. Thus they can also sell at more moderate prices than others, for they naturally can buy at the cheapest seasons, and with their storage capacities can give their customers all the advantages accruing therefrom. Entire fur coats, three-quarter length, with collar and deep trimmings of contrasting furs, will be much seen.

Those who are fond of cocoa should try Allen and Hanbury's Peptonised Cocoa, especially beneficial to elderly people, as it is so wonderfully easy of digestion. During the warm weather you want plenty of nourishment, and according to some of the dull season arguments in the daily papers, we all take too much solid food. R. D.

(From a photograph specially taken for this paper by Lemeilleur and Co.)

Digitized by Google

Preserve your Teeth!

BY USING FRAGRANT

FLORILINE

It imparts a

FRAGRANCE TO THE BREATH

that is rare and delightful.

IT PREVENTS ALL TARTAR and COMPLETELY ARRESTS DECAY.

IS THE CHOICEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.

PRICE Per bottle 2/6 in case.

SOLD EVERYWHERE. THE ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO., Ltd., Proprietors.
33, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

FLORILINE TOOTH-POWDER.

For use with or without FLORILINE.

1/- per large Jar.

BIRKBECK BANK

ESTABLISHED 1851.

Current Accounts. 2 % Interest allowed on minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
Deposits. 2½ % Interest allowed on Deposit Accounts.
Advances made. Stocks and Shares bought and sold.
Apply C. F. RAVENSCROFT, Secretary,
Southampton Buildings, High Holborn, W.C.

SULPHOLINE SKIN LOTION.

Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, Entirely fade away.

Is your Pencil a

KOH-I-NOOR

or only an Imitation?

The best pencil for all pencil purposes made by L. & C. Hardtmuth. It has a world-wide reputation for excellence and consistent working quality.

Price 4d. each, 3/6 per doz. everywhere. Of Stationers, Artists' Colourmen, etc. Illustrated Booklet from

L. & C. HARDTMUTH, 12, GOLDEN LANE, LONDON, E.C.

A Scientific Method of Growing Hair

The Evans Vacuum Cap provides the scientific means of applying to the scalp the common sense principles of physical culture. Baldness and falling hair are caused bythe lack of proper nourishment of the hair roots. This lack of nourishment is due to the absence of blood in the scalp—an abnormal condition. It is the blood which feeds the hair roots, as well as every other part of the body. If you want the hair to grow on the scalp the blood must be made to circulate there. It is exercise which makes the blood circulate. Lack of exercise makes it stagnant. The Vacuum method provides the exercise which makes the blood circulate in the scalp. It gently draws the rich blood to the scalp and feeds the shrunken hair roots. This causes the hair to grow.

Test It Without Expense

You can tell whether it is possible to cultivate a growth of hair on your head by ten minutes' use of the Evans Vacuum Cap. We will send you the Cap with which to make the experiment without any expense to you.

If the Evans Vacuum Cap gives the scalp a healthy glow this denotes that the normal condition of the scalp can be restored. A three or four minutes' use of the Cap each morning and evening thereafter will produce a natural growth of hair. If, however, the scalp remains white and lifeless after applying the vacuum, there is no use in trying further—the hair will not grow.

The Bank Guarantee

We will send you, by prepaid express, an Evans Vacuum Cap, and will allow you ample time to prove its virtue. All we ask of you is to deposit the price of the Cap in the Jefferson Bank of St. Louis, where it will remain during the trial period, subject to your own order. If you do not cultivate a sufficient growth of hair to convince you that the method is effective, simply notify the bank and they will return your deposit in full.

A sixteen-page illustrated book will be sent you on request, postage prepaid in full.

Evans Vacuum Cap Co., 923, Fullerton Bldg., St. Louis, U.S.A.

THE CLOTH FOR GOLF SUITS.

"Hydea"

is the best English cloth—made of the best English wool—grown on the HYDE Farm, Gloucestershire. It is delightfully soft and elastic—absolutely the best for sportsmen—most durable for out-o'-doors—most handsome for town suits—long thread—refined finish.

THE KING WEARS IT,

and pays no more than you—because there's only one quality at one price. "HYDEA" is stamped on every two yards of the selvedge—that's how you may know it—that, and its excellent surface! Send for FREE Booklet:—

APPERLY, CURTIS & Co., Ltd.,
Dudbridge Mills, Stroud, West of England.

HEREFORD.

THE CENTRE OF THE LOVELY WYE VALLEY

An Ideal Holiday Resort.
Splendid Scenery, Boating, Motoring, and Fishing.
Tourist Tickets from all parts.

All Information on application to the TOWN CLERK.

TOOTH-ACHE

CURED INSTANTLY BY

BUNTER'S NERVINE

Prevents Decay. Saves Extraction. Sleepless Nights Prevented.

Neuralgic Headaches and all Nerve Pains removed by BUNTER'S NERVINE. All Chemists, 1s. 1½d., or on receipt of stamps to 13, St. George Street, Norwich.

THE CHARING CROSS BANK. ESTABLISHED 1870.
119 and 120, BISHOPSGATE ST. WITHIN, E.C.,
and 28, BEDFORD ST., CHARING CROSS, London.

Assets, £694,403. Liabilities, £372,291. Surplus, £322,112.

Loans of £30 to £2,000 granted at a few hours' notice in town or country on mortgage of furniture, trade and farm stock, plant, crops, etc., without removal. Also on deeds, policies, and reversions. Distance no object. Easy terms.

2½ per cent. allowed on Current account balances.

DEPOSITS of £10 and upwards received on terms as under.
Subject to 3 months' Notice of Withdrawal 5 per cent. per annum.
" 6 " " 6 " "
" 12 " " 7 " "

Special terms for longer periods. Interest paid quarterly. The Terminable Deposit Bonds pay nearly 9 per cent., and are a safe investment. Write or call for Prospectus.

A. WILLIAMS, H. J. TALL, } Joint Managers.

Digitized by Google

THE KING'S MENU.

CONSOMME ANDALOUSE.

This is a clear beef stock garnished with julienne strips of cooked cucumber and dice shapes of tomato custard, or the ordinary royal custard tinted pink with a little liquid colouring.

TRUITES A LA MIRABEAU.

Cleanse and scale the required number of small trout, gash them diagonally across the sides, then broil them over a clear fire on oiled straws, like mullet, and serve with Mirabeau Sauce. For this stir together over the fire three tablespoonfuls each of rich brown sauce (made with fish stock) and the Escoffier White Tarragon Vinegar, together with a pinch of castor sugar and an ounce and a-half of fish glaze (made by boiling down to a glue-like consistency good well-flavoured brown fish stock). As soon as these are very hot, but not quite boiling, lift the pan off the fire and stir into the sauce by degrees three ounces of fresh butter broken up into tiny bits. letting each bit dissolve before the next is added, and stirring steadily all the time. Add a little coralline pepper, finely-minced green tarragon and parsley, and serve at once. This sauce must only be made just before it is wanted, as it must on no account be put back on the fire after the butter is added to it or wait after this, else it will be greasy and spoilt. It is best to stand the saucepan containing it in an outer pan of boiling water while adding the butter. This sauce is delicious with any broiled fish.

ESCALOPES DE LIEVRE AUX CERISES.

Remove the fillets on either side the backbone of a nice hare, wrap them in buttered paper, and put aside in a cool place till wanted. Remove the flesh from the rest of the hare and mince and pound this. Meantime put on the bones, broken up, with a couple of onions, a carrot and turnip, a good bunch of herbs, two or three cloves and peppercorns, and a bit of celery seed tied up in muslin, and cover with about a quart of second stock or water, and simmer altogether till you have about a pint and a-half of good stock left. Now with three gills or so of this make some good thick velouté sauce, boiling it down well, after adding two ounces of white roux to the stock, till you have about half a pint of the sauce. Take equal quantities of this and the pounded and sieved flesh of the hare, fill a buttered border mould with the mixture, and steam or poach it. Meanwhile slice down the fillets of the hare, bat them out and trim evenly, then cook them in a well-buttered pan with a little red wine and stock, covering them with a buttered paper in the oven in the usual way. Have ready when they and the moulded border are done some sauce made with two ounces of brown roux, half a pint of the hare stock, two tablespoonfuls of port wine, one of red currant jelly, and a small teaspoonful of Lemco. The stock, Lemco, and roux are first boiled for ten minutes together and then tammied, after which the wine and red currant jelly are added. Some dried cherries, three or four for each fillet, are then added to the sauce and heated through. Now turn out the border mould, arrange the escalopes of hare neatly on this, fill up the centre with any nice garnish to taste, such as carefully-cooked French beans or mushrooms, pour the cherry sauce round, and serve very hot. If time is an object the border could obviously be of mashed potatoes, the meat from the carcase of the hare being used for a pie, matelotte, etc. With to-day's menu the garnish had better be of French beans, as mushrooms should be used for the casserole of sweetbread, so should not appear elsewhere in the menu.

AN AUGUST DINNER.

CONSOMME ANDALOUSE.

TRUITES A LA MIRABEAU.

ESCALOPES DE LIEVRE AUX CERISES.

RIS DE VEAU EN CASSEROLE.

GROUSE ROTIS.

SALADE ROMAINE.

CHARLOTTE DE GROSEILLE ROUGE GLACE.

RISSOLETTES D'ANCHOIS.

RIS DE VEAU EN CASSEROLE.

Thoroughly soak the sweetbreads in cold salted water till free from blood, then blanch them and put to press between two plates till cold. They are then wrapped in thin slices of fat bacon, then in buttered paper, and stewed gently for an hour or so in good white stock, putting them on a bed of sliced carrot and onion, with a good bunch of herbs and a blade of celery, or a bit of the seed when this is not available. A little more stock must be added as that in the pan evaporates. When the sweetbreads are done the paper and bacon are removed, the sweetbreads sliced down and put into the casserole (either one large or one for each person) they are to be served in, together with sufficient rich white sauce, supréme or allemande, to cover them, and also some button mushrooms, previously cooked in a little white stock, white wine, and butter.

GROUSE.

These should be wrapped in sliced bacon, covered with buttered paper, and roasted, if possible before an open fire. Baste frequently with butter, and for the last few minutes remove the wrappings to brown the birds. Serve accompanied by fried bread-crumbs, bread sauce, gravy, and a lettuce salad.

CHARLOTTE DE GROSEILLE ROUGE GLACE.

(Specially prepared and photographed for this paper.)

CHARLOTTE DE GROSEILLE ROUGE GLACE.

The iced charlotte is a very pretty way of serving ices, and the outline recipe can be varied indefinitely by altering not only the ice used for the filling, but the biscuits, wafers, or slices of more or less rich cake used for lining the charlotte mould. The simplest plan is to line the usual plain mould with a strip of oiled paper, then press all round it sponge fingers, trimmed if necessary to make them fit the mould, making these adhere together with royal icing, boiled sugar, or white of egg mixed with icing sugar. Let this lining stand in the mould till the icing, etc., is quite dry, then turn out very carefully and fill this biscuit case with any ice to taste, either moulded to fit this case, as in to-day's illustration, or else piled up rockily in the case. The ice chosen to-day is a red currant cream ice moulded. For it draw down the juice as for jelly-making (or the ready bottled juice can of course be used), and when it is cool add half a pint of this juice to every pint and a-half of custard or whipped cream, sweetening it to taste. The mixture is then frozen till dry if to be served piled up rockily in the biscuit case, or if to be moulded to fit the case, freeze till of the consistency of batter, then mould and finish off in the ice cave. In to-day's illustration the moulded ice was garnished with crystallised rose leaves. Needless to say, black or white currant juice, or that of blackberries, are equally good used for ices like this. Also for the benefit of the housekeeper who possesses a freezer but no cave, I may observe that a still easier form of these sweets is the gateaux glacés, for which the centre of a cake is scooped out, the walls left being decorated with Viennese or other icing, and the case then finally filled with any ice to taste. These gateaux glacés make a very pretty sweet, and at the same time one very easily prepared, considering the excellent effect produced. I omitted to observe, by the way, that when the charlotte was filled with a moulded sweet the casing should be made by fixing the biscuits to the outside of the mould, then when this case is firm it is slipped off and the mould filled with the half-frozen ice cream, this finished off in the cave, then the ice turned out, and the biscuit case carefully slipped over the moulded ice, the top garnished, and the charlotte then served at once. A particularly pretty sweet is made in this way by dipping small macaroons or ratafis in boiling sugar, and building them up round the outside or inside of a papered mould, standing this aside till firm and dry, then slipping the case off or out of the mould, and filling it with any ice to taste. Obviously a Muscovite—for which I have often given recipes in these columns—could be used to fill these charlotte cases, so that those who possess neither freezer nor ice cave can still include this fashionable iced sweet in their menu, and in a novel and attractive form. The peculiarity of the Muscovite is, of course, that though iced from the mould containing it being buried in ice and salt, it owes its solidity partly to a proportion of leaf gelatine being mixed with the flavoured custard or cream it is made of, a Muscovite being really a bavarois mixture, which, failing an ice cave, is buried in a pail of salt and ice. Care must, of course, be taken that the top of the mould is closely covered, on the top of which the freezing mixture is piled, as well as under and round the mould.

RISSOLETTES D'ANCHOIS.

Roll out some anchovy or cheese pastry very thin and stamp it out in little rounds, put a small teaspoonful of the following mixture on each round, wet the edges of these, fold over in a crescent shape, pinching the edges well together, fry the little rissoles a golden brown in deep smoking fat, drain and serve very hot, dusted over with freshly-grated Parmesan and coralline pepper. For the filling mixture wash, dry, bone, and fillet five or six nice gorgona anchovies, pound them with the hard-boiled yolks of two eggs, and an ounce or so of butter; rub this mixture through a fine hair sieve, moisten with a very little well-reduced stock or melted glaze, season to taste with coralline pepper, and use. Some cooks work in a little finely-minced parsley. SYBARITE.

Digitized by Google

ECONOMY — HEALTH — PURITY

NO BEETROOT USED.

"GLEBE"

REFINED GENUINE

CANE SUGAR

AND

CANE GOLDEN SYRUP

GLEBE SUGAR REFINING CO., Greenock, Glasgow, and St. George's House, Eastcheap, London.

---

THE WHITE WINES OF ENGLAND.

BULMER'S Famous Herefordshire

CIDERS and PERRY.

For a beautifully illustrated booklet on Cider, price list, and special booklet for invalids, apply

H. P. BULMER and CO., HEREFORD.

---

BUTLER'S "KEEN" RAZOR

HOLLOW GROUND
SPECIAL STEEL.
HAND FORGED.

"I know that Razor, it comes from Sheffield."

HIGHEST AWARDS.
GUARANTEED PERFECT. AND BRITISH MADE THROUGHOUT.

"Keen as this razor's edge invisible." (Love's Labour Lost.)

Black Handles ... ... each 3/- & 5/- | Ivory Handles ... ... each 5/- & 7/6
*Per pair, in best Case, 15/-; 7-day set, 50/- | *Per pair in Russia Case, 21/-; 7-day set, 70/-

"CAVENDISH" CARVERS (Regd. brand) keep "an edge that won't come off."
Fine Ivory, 20/-; Imitation ditto or Stag, 10/6 per pair. Post Free of all Dealers.

Sole Makers, GEORGE BUTLER & CO., Trinity Works, SHEFFIELD.

---

DEWAR'S WHISKY

A GUID AULD SCOTCH DRINK

---

FOR FURNITURE, TOO!

Surprising how quite a new face is put on either leather or furniture by

WREN'S BOOT POLISHES

Their true worth and high quality alone have made them so appreciated. JUST A SMEAR AND A RUB required.

Send 7½d. in stamps for samples (black and brown), and put them to the test!

WREN & CO., NORTHAMPTON.

---

You avoid Dinginess by using a Bissell.

The Bissell Carpet Sweepers are noiseless, dustless, and more durable than brooms.

The Spring selection is now being shown by all Ironmongers, Stores and House Furnishers at 10 6 11 3, 14-, 15 6 & 18-

SAME PRICE EVERYWHERE.

---

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE

TEOFANI'S

HIGH-CLASS

CIGARETTES.

TEOFANI'S Cigarettes receive the Highest Awards at all International Exhibitions, and are Sold by Leading Purveyors throughout the WORLD.

TEOFANI & CO., LONDON.

---

TO H.M. THE KING.

THE POPULAR

SCOTCH

IS

"BLACK & WHITE"

WHISKY.

TO H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.

Sole Proprietors: JAMES BUCHANAN & CO., LTD., 26, Holborn, London, E.C.

---

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
The charmingly situated Seaside Resort on the Dorsetshire Coast.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Unequalled for its Marine and Land Excursions. Golfing and Fishing.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Beautifully Illustrated Guides sent free of charge by the Town Clerk, on receipt of cost of postage, 3d.

---

THE LEAS HOTEL, Folkestone.

Under New Proprietorship.

300ft. above the sea. Remodelled and furnished by Waring's.

Delightfully situated, commanding extensive views of sea, with ornamental private grounds. Excellent Cuisine, Lawn Tennis, Passenger Lift, Electric Light throughout.

Illustrated Tariff on application to T. H. VINNICOMBE.

---

ROYAL DUBLIN SOCIETY GREAT IRISH HORSE SHOW, 1905,

AUGUST 22nd, 23rd, 24th, and 25th.

The Largest Show of Hunters in the World. Trotting, Driving, and Jumping Competitions. Programme on Application.

(By order) RICHARD J. MOSS, Registrar.

---

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY OF SPORT.

Now Ready.

SHOOTING,

In Two Vols.

EDITED BY

Mr. HORACE G. HUTCHINSON.

Price 25/- Nett. (12/6 Nett per vol.)

Under the General Editorship OF Mr. HORACE G. HUTCHINSON.

FISHING.

IN TWO VOLUMES.

With Coloured Plates of Salmon and Trout Flies. Over 250 Full Page Illustrations with various diagrams.

Price 25/- Nett. (12/6 Nett per Vol.)

NOW READY.

CRICKET.

Edited by Mr. HORACE G. HUTCHINSON.

Price 12/6 Nett.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, LIMITED, 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

The Newbury Race-course is situated about seventeen miles west of Reading, and is in the middle of a very popular training district, Kingsclere, Lambourne, Beckhampton, and Compton all being within a few miles radius. Last week a large party of gentlemen interested and several members of the Press spent a day down there, viewing the stables and the arrangements generally. There is an absolutely straight mile, the course being a few yards short of two miles. The angle at which the stands have been placed has been very carefully considered, and the result is admirable, a magnificent view being obtainable everywhere. The Royal box is excellently arranged, with private apartments attached, and the stabling consists of 109 boxes, with mess-rooms and dormitories for the attendants, and there is also a field hospital. The Great Western Railway have arranged to run a special service of trains in connection with the race-meeting, covering the fifty-three miles from Paddington in rather less than an hour. Mr. John Porter is the managing director of the Newbury Race-course Club.

THE NEW ROUTE TO BELFAST AND THE NORTH OF IRELAND.
From a picture post-card issued by the Midland Railway Company.

---

Plasmon has made a name for itself. It is now established in the forefront of prepared foods, and its highly nutritious properties and economy make it an admirable adjunct to every household. Plasmon preparations—the cocoa, biscuits, chocolate, and blanc-mange powder in particular—are to be recommended to the careful housekeeper, and long acquaintance with them will lead all to advise those who do not know them to give them a trial.

---

The problem of how to admit employés into what may be described as partnership benefits in a manufacturing business is one that has long raised discussion and brought forth arguments for and against various attempts at a solution of the question, until one almost despaired of finding any reliable manner of satisfying alike employer and employé. Many experiments have been made, but few, if any, have yielded the satisfactory results recently obtained by the employés of Messrs. John Knight and Sons, Limited, soap-makers to H.M. the King. On the recommendation of the managing directors, it was arranged that a division of profits beyond a fair percentage as return on capital should be made. The latter was fixed at 6 per cent., and as a result of this year's trading, the whole of the company's employés and staff, clerks and travellers alike, are to receive three weeks' extra wages as their share of the profit.

---

During the first week in August the New Palace steamers "Koh-i-Noor" and "Royal Sovereign" have been carrying as many people as each could safely accommodate, and the popularity of the day trips to Deal and Dover is making it more and more evident that the policy of the company in introducing these trips was far-sighted and profitable.

---

Mr. Wentworth Croke, London's latest theatre manager, like Mr. George Edwardes, thinks the public want a higher class of musical play than the so-called musical comedy. To this end Mr. Wentworth Croke, in conjunction with Mr. Tom B. Davis, will produce, about the end of September, at the Apollo Theatre, a three-act opera bouffe, entitled "The Gay Lord Vergy," adapted by Mr. Arthur Sturgess, and composed by M. Claude Terrasse. The opera was originally played at the Theatre des Variétés, Paris, under the title of "Le Sire de Vergy," and is one of the same class as "Veronique," which has proved such a financial and artistic success at the Apollo. Those who have not already seen this charming piece should do so at once, as Mr. George Edwardes must withdraw it shortly to make room for the new piece.

---

At the Palace Theatre Mr. Alfred Butt has had in contemplation for some time the production of a revue of a fantastic and original nature. This will be produced early in the autumn of this year. It has been specially written by Mr. G. R. Sims, and the music composed by Mr. Herman Finck, the musical director of the Palace Theatre.

Eneret.

THE KITSON LIGHT AT FREDENSBORG PALACE, NEAR COPENHAGEN.
The residence of the King of Denmark. From a photograph taken by the kind permission of the King. The figures include the King and his family, the Queen of England, the King of Greece, and others.

Amusements.

APOLLO THEATRE.
Henry Lowenfeld, Sole Proprietor.
Tom B. Davis, Lessee and Manager.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
Every Evening at 8.15.
The Comic Opera, in Three Acts,
"VERONIQUE."
Matinee every Wednesday at 2.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. Frank Curzon.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
To-night at 8.15,
LADY MADCAP.
Matinee Every Wednesday at 2.15.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: Sir Charles Wyndham.
Sole Lessee and Manager: Mr. Frank Curzon.
At 8.30,
WHAT THE BUTLER SAW.
By Edward F. Parry and Fredk. Mouillot.
Matinee Every Wednesday at 2.30.
Box Office now open. Telephone 4028 Gerrard.

DALY'S THEATRE.
Produced by Mr. George Edwardes.
To-night and Every Evening at 8.15.
Matinee Every Saturday at 2.30.
THE LITTLE MICHUS.
By A. Vanloo and G. Duval. Music by Andre Messager.
Adapted for the English stage by Henry Hamilton.
Lyrics by Percy Greenbank.
Box Office 10 to 10.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.
Managers: A. & S. Gatti & Charles Frohman.
Every Evening at 8.15,
THE CATCH OF THE SEASON,
By Seymour Hicks and Cosmo Hamilton.
The Vaudeville Theatre Company.
Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.

NEW THEATRE.
Proprietor: Sir Charles Wyndham.
To-night and Every Evening at 8.30,
CHARLES FROHMAN presents
LEAH KLESCHNA.
A Play in Five Acts, by C. S. McLellan.
Matinee Every Wednesday at 2.30.
Doors open at 8. Tel. 2473 and 2480 Gerrard.

GAIETY THEATRE.
Manager: Mr. Geo. Edwardes.
To-night and Every Evening at 8; doors open at 7.40.
A New Musical Play, entitled:
THE SPRING CHICKEN.
Box Office open from 10 to 10.

GARRICK THEATRE.
Mr. Arthur Bourchier, Lessee and Manager
Every Evening at 8.30,
THE WALLS OF JERICHO.
By Alfred Sutro.
Matinee Every Wednesday at 2.30.

CRITERION THEATRE, W.
Sole Lessee: Sir Charles Wyndham.
Manager: Mr. Frank Curzon.
Two New Comedies,
At 8.30 TIME IS MONEY.
Mr. Charles Hawtrey as "Charles Grahame."
At 9 o'clock. LUCKY MISS DEAN.
Miss Ethel Irving as "Acacia Dean."
Matinee Wednesdays at 3. Box Office 10 to 6.

NAVAL, SHIPPING, AND FISHERIES EXHIBITION, EARL'S COURT.
11 a.m. to 11 p.m. Admission 1s.
Naval Construction, Armaments, Shipping & Fisheries.
NELSON'S CENTENARY RELICS.
FISHING VILLAGE. Working Exhibits. Model of "Victory."
GRAND NAVAL AND MILITARY CONCERTS
Go on board the full-size Cruiser.
Specially ventilated, coolest Show in London.
Real Batteries of 4.7 Guns, Hotchkiss and Maxims
The Cruiser is manned by a crew of 150 Handy-men
PANORAMA OF THE BATTLE OF TRAFALGAR.
West's "Our Navy." Maxim's Captive Flying Machine. Fairy Grotto. Indian Canoes. Burton's Great Red Indian Village—Chiefs, Squaws, and Papooses. Voyage in a Submarine. Vanderdecken's Haunted Cabin. Famous Sea Fights Miss de Rohan's Musical and Dramatic Sketches. Tillikum Canoe.

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Major the Hon. T. F. Fremantle, V.D. | 629 |
| The March of Events | 630 |
| The Visit of the French Fleet | 632, 635, 638, 649 |
| Scenes at Portsmouth and Cowes | 634 |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 636 |
| On the Links | 638 |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 643 |
| Under the Burgee | 644 |
| The Yachting Season | 646 |
| The Parisians of Paris—Fashionable Life at the Seaside | 647 |
| The Traveller—Holiday Resorts within Easy Reach of Dublin | 650 |
| The Dublin Horse Show | 652 |
| Plays and Players | 655 |
| Salmon fishing in Ireland | 656 |
| Cricket | 657 |
| The Services | 658 |
| The Fêtes at Portsmouth | vii. |
| The City of London Hospital | viii. |
| Literary Notes | x |
| Leaves from a Collector's Note-book—LIV.—The Miniatures and Miniaturists of Five Centuries | xii. |
| Motoring Notes | xiv. |
| Fashions of To-day and To-morrow | xvi. |
| The King's Menu | xviii. |
| Here, There, and Everywhere | xx. |

TO LIBRARIES, CLUBS, HOTELS, Etc

A Reading Case for THE KING can be had post free on application to the Publishers, George Newnes, Limited, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.

HOTELS.

ENGLISH HOTELS.

TORQUAY (Population 33,625).—PREMIER HEALTH RESORT. Unrivalled climate. Warm in winter. Sunshine-land. Charming drives and sheltered walks. 120 acres of public gardens. Piers.

TORQUAY. Irreproachable water supply and perfect sanitation. Theatre, concerts, and other musical attractions. Medicated baths of all kinds. Express trains from all parts.

For Illustrated Descriptive Books of Torquay, apply FREDK. S. HEX, Town Clerk.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

De Vere Hotel, from 10/6 per day. 'Phone 524.
Broadwalk Hotel, from 8/6 per day. ,, 855.
Prince of Wales' Hotel, from 10/6 per day. ,, 641. Kensington.

Electric Light. Lifts. Everything up to date. First-class cuisine.

BOURNEMOUTH HYDRO.

Sunny Site. Overlooking Sea. Every Bath. Ideal Residence.

EASTBOURNE.

THE HYDRO HOTEL.—A select Residential Hotel on South Coast, 120ft. above sea level. Large gardens, close to the sea. Tennis. Croquet. Bowling Green. Spacious Lounges and Public Rooms. 70 Bedrooms, also Suites, luxuriously furnished, electric light throughout. High-class cuisine. Table d'Hôte or à la Carte. Separate tables. Lift. Billiards. Private 'Bus. Nearest to schools and Links. Close to Parades. Week End terms. Motor Garage with repairing Pits. Lit by Electric Light. For inclusive Tariff (Illustrated), also Programme of Amusements, address—O. F. BERGANN, Manager. Telegraphic Address: "Hydrotel, Eastbourne." Telephone, No. 143, Eastbourne. The new Turkish Baths will shortly be opened.

FOREIGN HOTELS.

BIARRITZ.

GRAND HOTEL.—Winter Season.—First-class establishment. Splendid situation, facing the sea. Patronised by the elité; rendezvous of English Society. Every comfort; excellent attendance and cooking.—MONTENAT, Manager.

AXENSTEIN (Lake Lucerne; 2,350ft. above sea level; electric railway Brunnen-Axenstein).—First-class Hotel. World-renowned climatic health resort; patronised by English society. "Axenstein is the loveliest spot I met with on my journey through Switzerland."—QUEEN VICTORIA.

TENERIFFE

HAS THE FINEST WINTER CLIMATE IN THE WORLD.

THE First-class HOTELS there are
the QUISISANA at Santa Cruz,
the AGUERE and CONTINENTAL at La Laguna, and
the MARTIANEZ (late Grand) at Port Orotava.
All under the Management of C. H. TRENKEL. Prospectus, etc., on application.

SHIPPING.

MOROCCO, CANARY ISLANDS, and MADEIRA LINE OF STEAMERS; 24 days for 20 guineas.—For particulars write Messrs. FORWOOD BROS., 46, St. Mary Axe, E.C.

Patronised by H.M. The King.

DOVERCOURT BAY, ESSEX,
HOTEL ALEXANDRA.

The Finest Health and Pleasure Resort on the East Coast. Delightful Climate. Bracing Air. The Hotel, which has recently been visited by H.M. KING, is luxuriously Furnished. Charming Situation. Facing the Sea. Electric Light. Excellent Cuisine. Tennis, Croquet. Motor Garage and Pit. 1 hour 40 minutes express from London.

For Illustrated Tariff, apply A. H. THIEM, Proprietor.

G.N.R. EXPRESS EXCURSIONS.

HOLIDAY TRAVEL A SPECIALITY.

From KING'S CROSS (G.N.) and other London Stations:

WEDNESDAYS, for 8 days to — Skegness, Sutton-on-Sea, Mablethorpe, Gorleston, Lowestoft, Sheringham, Cromer, Mundesley and Yarmouth.

SATURDAYS, for 3, 8, 10, 15 or 17 days to — Seaside and Pleasure Resorts in LINCOLNSHIRE, YORKSHIRE, LANCASHIRE (Skegness, Scarboro', Blackpool, etc.).

SATURDAYS, for 3, 6 or 8 days to — Principal Stations in NORFOLK DISTRICT, LINCOLNSHIRE, NOTTINGHAMSHIRE, DERBYSHIRE, STAFFORDSHIRE, YORKSHIRE, LANCASHIRE, and North Eastern District.

FRIDAY, AUG 18, and each alternate Friday for 7 or 14 days to — Edinburgh, Glasgow, Perth, Dundee, Aberdeen, Inverness, and the Principal Stations in SCOTLAND.

For Full Particulars, apply to the Chief Passenger Agent, Great Northern Railway, King's Cross, London, or to any G.N. Station or Office.

OLIVER BURY, General Manager.

PLEASE CUT OUT FOR FUTURE REFERENCE.

GREAT EASTERN RAILWAY.

The East Coast FOR A Bracing Holiday.

FAST TRAINS. CHEAP TICKETS.

LONDON AND
CROMER 2 hrs. 55 mins.
LOWESTOFT 2 hrs. 36 mins.
YARMOUTH 2 hrs. 30 mins.
FELIXSTOWE 1 hr. 51 mins.
CLACTON 1 hr. 44 mins.

CORRIDOR CARRIAGES, BREAKFAST AND DINING CARS.

Tourist, Fortnightly, and Week End Tickets.

THE BROADS.
Yachting, Fishing, Rail and Boat Excursions.

GOLFING IN EAST ANGLIA.

FARMHOUSE AND COUNTRY LODGINGS LIST.

Full particulars sent gratis upon application to the Superintendent of the Line, Liverpool Street Station, E.C.

The whole Treatment worth 20/- for 3/-, Ointment, Tablets, and Soap.

A WONDERFUL REMEDY FOR YOU.

HERE IT IS. TRY IT.

YOU MUST USE ECZOLINE REMEDIES FOR CURING ECZEMA,

RASHES, SPOTS, BAD LEGS, AND ANY SKIN DISEASE.

Because they are the finest and best remedies it is possible to obtain; THEN GET THEM.

Because they may be used on the tender skin of a baby; therefore they cannot hurt yours.

Because they have cured when the best of Hospitals and Specialists have owned defeat; they will do so for you.

Because they stop all irritation at once; that alone is worth the trial.

Because they have cured cases of long standing up to 20 years; they will cure you.

Because Doctors prescribe them and use them for their patients; if these were not genuine they would NOT do so.

Then send 3/- to-day to any Chemist, or
HUNTER, RECENT ST., SWINDON, WILTS, ENG.

MENTION THIS PAPER.

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY

Roses for English Gardens.

By Miss GERTRUDE JEKYLL, and Mr. E. MAWLEY.

12s. 6d. nett.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, Ltd., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY.

Lilies for English Gardens.

WRITTEN AND COMPILED BY

GERTRUDE JEKYLL.

Price 8s. 6d. Nett.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, Ltd., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

THE COLONEL TAKES THE 19TH (WHOLE IN ONE)

Head Office: 11, SO. EXCHANGE PLACE, GLASGOW.

J. H. ROGER PROPR.

LESSEE OF

H.M. CUSTOMS (No. 15) BOND, JAMES WATT STREET, GLASGOW.

Special Quotations to Golf Clubs.

"COLONEL BOGEY" WHISKY.

GUARANTEED 7 YEARS OLD.

42/- PER DOZEN. CARRIAGE PAID.

THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.

Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS of every description, including TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT. MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.

Handsome Public Rooms, including 2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel. Telephone 56.

Terms from MANAGER.

CLEVEDON (Somerset).

SEASIDE HYDRO HOTEL.

Holiday, Health, and Pleasure Resort. Near Golf Links and Pier. Good centre for excursions by road, rail, or sea. Resident Physician. Fine Baths. Liberal Table.

SECRETARY, Hydro, Clevedon, Somerset.

LELANT, ST. IVES BAY, CORNWALL (close to golf links and station).—Furnished HOUSE, with plate and linen, to LET for Summer months; two large sitting rooms, six bedrooms, one dressing room, bathroom.—"T.B.H.," "Evelyns," Uxbridge.

SOUTHWOLD (best position on the Common; close to Golf Links).—To be LET, well Furnished, for August, the pretty and artistic HOUSE known as "Link's Cottage," containing square hall, two sitting and large recreation rooms, servants' sitting room, seven bedrooms (fourteen beds), bathroom; electric light and telephone.—Apply to Mrs. ROBINSON, on Property.

ON THE BOURNEMOUTH LINKS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations. High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hôte, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.

THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.

THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.

A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.

Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads. Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.

Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.

Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.

New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare, Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,

Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.

To be obtained from Thos. Cook, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON.

Telephone, 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade and commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.

Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors.

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL.

SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.

Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head.

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.

Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill.

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau, 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 30s. Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address: "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY,

Within easy access of London.

THE BUSH HOTEL.

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers, inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 1s. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable, being on sand.

DEVONSHIRE'S DELIGHTFUL DRINK.—The very best beverage for GOLFERS is WHITEWAY'S PURE CYDER. Refreshing, cooling, and a panacea for Gout, Rheumatism, and Obesity. Booklets free from WHITEWAY'S, The Orchards, Whimple, Devon, and 22 and 23, Albert Embankment, S.W. Telephone 173 Hop.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

VULCAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E.

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer).

"'Is it a Private House or an Hotel?' is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels."

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGERESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29, Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

1, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

Club Houses can be efficiently and economically lighted by

ACETYLENE.

Write H. BAKER, 49, Victoria Street, S.W.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. Cox, New Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.
MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL.—Brinkles, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library, Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052.

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class. |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned, from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains.

ON BLUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY.

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.
Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Booklet and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

ZÜRICH.—DOLDER GRAND HOTEL, First-class English frequented house in extensive well-wooded grounds, 2,000ft. above sea level. Golf links in front of the hotel; tennis; motoring centre. Electric Tram and funicular service with Zürich Central Station (25 min.). Electro-magnetic therapeutical treatment (E. K. Muller's method).—Manager, E. DIELMANN.

SHERINGHAM, NORFOLK.

THE SHERINGHAM HOTEL,

ADJOINING GOLF LINKS (18 HOLES).

LARGEST HOTEL IN SHERINGHAM. Open all the year round. Handsome Dining Hall, 67ft. long. Numerous spacious Suites of Rooms commanding beautiful Sea and Land Views. Billiard and Smoking Rooms. Excellent and Improved Sanitary arrangements. Extensive Private Grounds. Lawn tennis, croquet. First-class Stables. Accommodation for Motors and Cycles. Through Trains from King's Cross, Peterborough, Birmingham, Leicester, etc.

Telegrams—"Sheringham Hotel, Sheringham."

National Telephone: No. 3. F. EDENS, Manager.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.
Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.
Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & Co.
Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.
MODERATE TARIFF.
Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months
Perfect Sanitary arrangements.
Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year.

Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel.—Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors, EMMERSON & HARRIS.

THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE
Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit.

Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE."
National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms.

Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

LONDON AND NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

"S.S. HIBERNIA," EXPRESS STEAMER BETWEEN HOLYHEAD AND DUBLIN (North Wall).

SERVICES TO IRELAND.—AUGUST AND SEPTEMBER, 1905.

| DOWN. | Via Holyhead. | | Irish Mails. Via Holyhead. | | Via Fleetwood. | Via Liverpool. | Via Stranraer. | | Via Greenore. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| London (Euston) ... ... ... dep. | 11 0 a.m. | 10 15 p.m. | 8 30 a.m. | 8 45 p.m. | 5 30 p.m. | 5 55 p.m. | 10 0 a.m. | 8B 0 p.m. | 7SX30 p.m. |
| Dublin (N. W.) ... ... arr. | 7 55 p.m. | 7 30 a.m. | ... | ... | ... | ... | Daylight Service. | ... | ... |
| ,, (W. R.) ... ... ... ,, | ... | ... | 5 30 p.m. | 6 0 a.m. | ... | ... | | ... | ... |
| Greenore ... ... ... ... ,, | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 6 0 a.m. |
| Belfast ... ... ... ... ,, | ... | 12A10 p.m. | 9A 0 ,, | 8A40 ,, | 5 45 a.m. | 8 30 a.m. | 10 0 p.m. | 8 35 a.m | 7 40 ,, |
| Londonderry ... ... ... ,, | ... | 2A 5 ,, | 3A20 ,, | 10A20 ,, | 10 20 ,, | ... | ... | 10 55 ,, | 10 20 ,, |
| Wexford ... ... ... ... ,, | ... | 1 10 ,, | 9 55 ,, | 9 20 ,, | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| Waterford ... ... ... ... ,, | ... | 2 8 ,, | ... | 10 10 ,, | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| Cork ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 2 50 a.m. | 2 16 ,, | 11 30 ,, | 10a35 ,, | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| Killarney ... ... ... ... ,, | ... | 3 10 ,, | ... | 11 58 ,, | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |

A—Via Dublin. a—On Thursdays arrive Cork 9 57 a.m. B—Up to August 18th leave Euston at 8.10 p.m. SX—Saturdays excepted.

Euston, 1905. FREDERICK HARRISON, General Manager.

THE SUMMER CIGAR.

The FLOR DE DINDIGUL is eminently adapted for smoking in hot weather by reason of its mildness, extreme coolness, and delicacy, combined with a most pleasing fragrance. No. 2 size, 3d. each (5 for 1/-).

FLOR DE DINDIGUL EXTRA, the new size (as supplied to the House of Lords), is extra choice. Ten Gold Medals awarded. Price 4d. each; 7/- per box of 25. Of all good tobacconists, or of Importers, BEWLAY & Co., Ltd., Tobacconists to the Royal Family, 49, Strand, London. Established 125 Years.

CHARLES LEE & SON,

42/-

Specialist Ladies' Outfitters,

98 & 100, WIGMORE STREET

(ONLY ADDRESS).

CAUTION.—Messrs. Lee & Son have no branches, and warn the public against imitations of their goods.

An example in Finest Quality English Crêpe de Chine, with Valenciennes Lace Yoke and Guipure Points, 42/-.

A Blouse suitable for any figure.

POST ORDERS.—The Lady's Pictorial states:—"If you live in the country, have an account with Lee & Son, Wigmore Street; they send the choicest selection of goods by post, while they are cheap for the best Costumiers, Furriers, Lacemen, Specialists in Trousseaus, The Leewig Petticoat, Royal Crescent Veil, Hosiers, Glovers, Milliners, etc.

CHARLES LEE & SON,
WIGMORE STREET.

ST. JACOBS OIL

THE ESTABLISHED CURE FOR

RHEUMATISM

LUMBAGO, SPRAINS, SCIATICA.

"I should like to tell the public of the good St. Jacobs Oil has done me. When quite a boy I had a severe attack of Rheumatism, and could only walk with the aid of crutches, and in consequence I was obliged to give up my work. My parents used nothing but St. Jacobs Oil, and in a very short time I was again able to follow my occupation, and walk morning and night to work and home again, without using the crutches. I have felt nothing of the Rheumatism since, until last November, when I got very wet; but I am glad to say that with a few appliances of your Oil I was again set free.

"(Signed) W. DEACON,
"Rose Cottage, Bradford Street, Eastbourne."

January 12th, 1905.

Price 1/1½ and 2/6; of all Chemists.

CONQUERS PAIN!

Digitized by Google

THE VISIT OF THE FRENCH FLEET.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

VOL. XX. No. 446. SATURDAY, AUGUST 19th, 1905. PRICE 6D.

Elliott and Fry.

MAJOR THE HON. T. F. FREMANTLE, V.D.

Prospective Conservative Candidate for North Bucks.

(See page 643.)

Digitized by Google

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 446. Saturday, Aug. 19, 1905.

Editorial Offices—20, TAVISTOCK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephones—No. 2,748 GERRARD, AND 7,961 CENTRAL.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

THE KING AND MARIENBAD.—In view of the present international situation it was perhaps only to be expected that the King's journey abroad would be made the subject of much comment. Yet it is fairly safe to say that nothing was further from King Edward's mind at this moment than a desire to take any further steps in the beneficent and pacific work, part of the fruition of which he saw at Portsmouth last week. It has long been his desire to again meet the aged Emperor of Austria, and that meeting is now un fait accompli. Wherefore we may all hope that his stay at Marienbad may not be interrupted by cares of State and international strife.

THE QUEEN AND DENMARK.—As had been foreseen, Queen Alexandra has taken advantage of the August holiday exodus to pay a visit to Denmark. There will be a large number of visitors to Copenhagen this August, and our Queen will meet many old friends and relations. The Dowager-Empress of Russia, the Duke and Duchess of Cumberland, and the King of Greece are expected, though naturally not all at the same time. The Duke of Coburg will probably be there with the Duke and Duchess of Glucksburg and Duchess Adelheid, King Christian's great-niece, who will be married to the Duke of Coburg in October. The marriage will be celebrated at Glucksburg, contrary to the custom by which a reigning Duke is supposed to be married in the capital of his principality. However, the German Emperor and Empress have announced their intention of being present, and all the Sovereigns of Europe will be represented.

MONARCHS AND THE MOTOR.—A most distinctive feature of the motor industry has been the generous support accorded it by the Sovereigns of the world. Apart from King Edward, the King of Italy and the King of Spain, who are well-known enthusiasts, there are the German Emperor, who has four or five cars, the King of the Belgians, who has three, and the Czar, who at present has only one, but contemplates adding to his "stud." The King of Portugal and the Queen of the Netherlands are also of the company, President Loubet has a car which he occasionally drives himself, and the Prince of Monaco, in addition to a very powerful car, has a motor-bicycle, on which he frequently accomplishes very long journeys. And most astonishing of all, the Shah of Persia has now become possessed of two automobiles; but perhaps, like the London motor-omnibuses, they are only built to do twelve miles an hour. Otherwise the Royal chauffeur might have a difficult time of it.

Chusseau-Flaviens.

AT EAST COWES CASTLE.

Admiral Caillard presenting his principal officers to Princess Henry of Battenberg at Lady Gort's garden-party, given in honour of the visit of the French Fleet.

CANADIANS AT COWES.—At the brilliant Naval demonstration at Cowes last week the Dominion alone of the Colonies was represented. It is true the representation was indirect, but it was none the less real for all that. For Admiral Sir Archibald Douglas, Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth, and Admiral Sir Charles Drury, Second Sea Lord, though they are in the Imperial Service, are Canadians. They were guests at the King's dinner to the French officers, and were present at every other function in connection with the Portsmouth festivities. They are both ordnance experts, and have served the Navy in all parts of the world. But Admiral Douglas has a unique distinction, for it was he who laid the foundations of the Japanese Navy. Thirty years ago he was lent to the Island Government as director of its Naval College, an institution which has had considerable influence in forming Admiral Togo's ever-victorious Navy.

DR. JAMESON IN ENGLAND.—Dr. Jameson is in London again. He always pays this country a visit when Parliament is prorogued at the Cape. But this year he is seriously unwell, so that he is not able to play the busy part he usually does at this time. It must be remembered he went out to South Africa originally for his health, and that he is not a strong man now. He keeps up by sheer force of will. The past year has been an anxious one in the Cape Colony, owing to the state of the finances and the war in German territory. As a rule South Africans look on the voyage home as a rest as well as a tonic, but Dr. Jameson has not found it so this year. No doubt Mr. Lyttelton will be glad to see him, though every step of the Cape Colony's policy with regard to the frontier has been approved by the Home Government. But good as the cable is, there is nothing like a talk face to face.

Digitized by Google

FESTIVITIES AT WHALE ISLAND.

Cribb.

A garden-party was given to the French and English warrant officers at Whale Island last Thursday, when considerably over 1,000 people were present. Music and dancing formed one of the most enjoyable features of the afternoon.

Park.

THE WESTMINSTER HALL BANQUET.

The arrival of Vice-Admiral Caillard at the Norman Porch on Saturday last. All the principal officers of the French Fleet which has visited Portsmouth were present.

Illustrations Bureau.

THE VISIT TO WINDSOR

On Friday a number of the officers of the French Fleet went to Windsor at the invitation of King Edward. They visited the Mausoleum at Frogmore, and laid a wreath on the tomb of Queen Victoria.

Illustrations Bureau.

THE BANQUET TO THE FRENCH OFFICERS IN WESTMINSTER HALL.

The unique and interesting function of last Saturday was a fitting climax to all the festivities and celebrations which have marked the visit of the French Northern Squadron to this country. All the leading Members of Parliament, both of the House of Commons and the House of Lords, were present, and there were a number of felicitous speeches. After the banquet the visitors were shown round the two Houses of Parliament, and subsequently took tea on the Terrace.

Digitized by Google

THE VISIT OF THE FRENCH FLEET.

(1) At the dockyard gates. French and British seamen streaming out of the dockyard, arm in arm, to be welcomed by the inhabitants of the town, who have given a rousing reception to the visitors. (2) In the dockyard. A French seaman on guard in a British dockyard; one of the many curious sights to be seen during the visit of Admiral Caillard and his squadron. (3) The French officers and the Fire Brigade. After the Westminster Hall banquet a visit was paid to the headquarters of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade, and a display was given. (4) The seamen at the Guildhall. On Friday 200 French warrant officers and seamen were entertained at the Guildhall by the Lord Mayor and Corporation. (5) Embarking at Portsmouth for London. Throughout the week an extraordinary number of special trains were running between London and Portsmouth, carrying the visitors and the hosts to and from the various functions.

(From photographs by Chusseau-Flaviens and Illustrations Bureau.)

Digitized by Google

Illustrations Bureau

THE FRENCH OFFICERS' VISIT TO ARUNDEL.

On Saturday a number of excursions by motor-car were made to various parts of the country around Portsmouth, and one large party was taken to Arundel, where they were welcomed and entertained by the Duke and Duchess of Norfolk.

Russell, Southsea

THE MAYOR AND MAYORESS OF PORTSMOUTH AT THE SPORTS.

There can be no doubt that a large measure of the success attending the Portsmouth festivities is due to the energetic and patriotic exertions of the Mayor, who has done all in his power to make everything go smoothly.

Copyright.

THE GARDEN-PARTY AT GOVERNMENT HOUSE.

There have been a number of garden-parties given in connection with the visit of the French Fleet, and one of the most successful was that given by General Montgomery, the General Officer Commanding the Southern District, and Mrs. Montgomery.

Digitized by Google

SCENES AT PORTSMOUTH AND COWES.

(1) The International sports—English and French seamen paired in the two-legged race. (2) Lady Gort's garden-party to the officers of the French Fleet at East Cowes Castle. (3) The Foresters of Arden at Meridan in Warwickshire. (4) The French officers up the river. On Sunday last a large party of French Naval officers were taken to Maidenhead by motor from London, and thence proceeded some distance up stream in electric launches. (5) On board the "Seahorse." The British and French journalists in the special service vessel placed at their disposal by the Admiralty. On the left of the picture may be seen Commander John Segrave and Commander Montagu Consett, who were attached to the French and English parties respectively, and in the centre of the picture is Captain Frederick Crooke, the Commander of the "Seahorse."

(From photographs by Chusseau-Flaviens, Illustrations Bureau, and Whitlock.)

Digitized by Google

THE VISIT OF THE FRENCH FLEET.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

THIS week Portsmouth has surpassed herself. Accustomed as she is to Naval pageants, Naval reviews, and visits of foreign Fleets, never before has our premier Naval port laid herself out to entertain visitors as she has on this occasion of the visit of the French Fleet.

One might easily fill a whole issue of this paper with nothing but descriptions of the Cowes and Portsmouth festivities. Every day has been wonderful—Monday, with the arrival of Admiral Caillard and his Fleet, and its passage round to Cowes; Tuesday, with its garden party at East Cowes, and interchange of banquets between the vessels of "opposite numbers" in the lines; Thursday and Friday, with the fraternisation in the streets of Portsmouth and London; Saturday and Sunday, with the consummation of the friendships formed during the week, and the regretful farewells. But of all the days, Wednesday was the most wonderful, the most curious, and the most instructive. In the early part of the week it was the King who welcomed the French Fleet, on Wednesday it was the people. It was not a made-to-order reception. It was a warm and cordial stretching out of the hand of brotherly love, and in that spirit the French officers and men accepted and reciprocated the welcome.

When one comes to look back upon the week one realises what a lot of truth there was in the remark made by Captain Gaschard, Admiral Caillard's Chief of the Staff, when he said, "I mean to accept every invitation which our hosts are good enough to extend to us. I may perish in the attempt, but I will not say die." That is the feeling which has actuated our visitors, and the British Government, the British Admiralty, and the civic authorities of London and Portsmouth have done their best to help them to perish in the attempt. That none of them has done so is no reflection on our hospitality. Rather it is testimony to their wiriness and powers of endurance.

I shall never forget the scene at the mouth of Portsmouth Harbour on Wednesday when the French vessels steamed in to take up their berths in the dockyard after the Naval Review. A dull dismal rain was falling mercilessly, as it knows how to fall sometimes at Portsmouth yet the shore and every coign of vantage were black with people, most of whom scorned the shelter of umbrella. From the "Seahorse," the comfortable little tug in which a large party of British and French journalists were the welcome guests of the Admiralty for the festivities, we had a magnificent sight of the review (forming as we did part of the Royal procession), and subsequently of the entry into the harbour.

Under the leaden skies and the grey mists which lay on the horizon, the lines of war-ships in the Solent looked very forbidding and warlike, and one felt with the French correspondent who exclaimed as we steamed down the "main street" of this city of floating forts that "c'est magnifique, mais Dieu merci ce n'est pas la guerre." And that, too, was no doubt the feeling of all who saw these two fleets lying thus peacefully and amatelotté, the only rivalry between them apparently being who should cheer loudest for King Edward.

There was no doubt later as to who should make the most noise when one by one the French vessels, headed by the "Forbin," steamed into the harbour. The clustering crowds pealed forth a vocal welcome, beside which the music of the massed military bands and the band of the "Victory" were powerless. He would have been indeed blind who could not see in this spontaneous and heartfelt outburst the fruition of the labours of the peacemakers during the past three years.

For the people of England have, deep down in their hearts, a great respect and a great liking for the people of France. And that portion of the British public which has invested Portsmouth during the past week is a public which has a keen love of the sea and all that appertains thereto, and it is a public which has, moreover, something more than superficial knowledge of matters nautical. Wherefore the seamanlike qualities of the men under Admiral Caillard's command, their frank and easy bearing, and, above all, their imperturbable good humour, have endeared them to all and sundry.

It has, indeed, been peace that has been the keynote of all these celebrations. From Monday until Monday, and upon Saturday in particular, we have all been insisting that our friendship is no menace to peace, but a guarantee that there shall not be war. It was curious that the climax of the visit should have arrived in that abode of dark and stormy memories where Richard II. tremblingly signed his abdication, where Charles I. boldly faced the regicide tribunal which sent him to the scaffold in Whitehall, where Cromwell was proclaimed Lord Protector, and where Warren Hastings, before the most brilliant audience ever gathered within those walls, successfully defended life and honour. And yet there was also something appropriate in the venue, as there has been in many of the others this week, for is not the roof of Westminster Hall to-day timbered with oaken beams from the old wooden walls within which were performed those gallant deeds of heroism which, as Mr. Balfour said, have rendered the two nations illustrious, and which have led to that mutual respect which is the foundation of all friendship.

Hodsoll.

THE ILLUMINATIONS AT COWES.

To the extreme right of the picture may be seen the King's yacht, which was one of the most tastefully-illuminated vessels in the roads at Cowes last week.

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

THE decision of the Automobile Club to take no part in next year's Gordon Bennett Cup Race, supposing it to be held, will probably decide the fate of that historic competition, and few sensible people will regret its disappearance from the automobile arena. It has long outlived its usefulness as an incentive to the production of the light, but strong, motor-car, and has become merely an incubus upon the trade, from which the great majority of the big firms will be glad to be relieved. Since it came to be regarded as the chief event of the year, which every leading manufacturer must, in honour bound, make a desperate effort to win, it has monopolised for nine months out of every twelve the energies and time of the best designers and mechanics in the motor world, and entailed expenditure of vast sums of money, for which the private user has had to pay, with little or no corresponding advantage to himself. A year ago the Automobile Club recognised the futility of the race, but decided to challenge once more, in the hope that, as an actual participant and a possible winner, it might bring influence to bear in order to secure a modification of the rules whereby the old usefulness of the contest might be restored. Instead of reforming the Gordon Bennett Cup rules, the French Club abandoned the race altogether, and our own club, having inaugurated the Tourist Trophy contest on purely utilitarian lines, has very wisely followed suit.

Some adverse criticism of this important step might have been expected, but little has hitherto been forthcoming. The leading motor journals, with one exception, have expressed their more or less emphatic approval of the decision. One paper published the resolution of the club committee as a late item of news, with a suggestion that its condemnatory thunder would follow in the next issue. More mature consideration of the matter, however, seems to have modified the views of the journal in question, which merely issued a mild criticism of the club's action, on the ground that it implied an admission that

Topical.

THE MIDLAND COUNTIES AUTOMOBILE CLUB HILL-CLIMB.

Mr. A. Bertwistle, on his 35-h.p. Daimler, taking the stiffest bend of the hill.

England cannot build a racer to vie with those of its Continental competitors, a singularly weak suggestion in view of the fact that France, which has won the race four times out of six, has declined to compete again.

The question really hardly seems to admit of argument. There are only four firms in this country which have attempted to take part in the Gordon Bennett, and but two have succeeded in turning out a reasonably satisfactory racing car. One of these firms would like to compete next year, while the other is apparently glad to be quit of the entire business. There are also two or three amateurs who are enthusiastic supporters of motor-racing as a sport, and who would probably place orders for cars if a challenge were issued. It appears absurd that, in order to suit the wishes of some half-a-dozen persons, the club should once more spend its energies and money in holding an Eliminating Trial and participating in the race itself, at a time when all its resources are required to fight the battle of rational automobilism. Even if the race were held next year, it would have lost much of its chief remaining value as an advertisement for the successful firms. France is the home of the racing car, and the abstention of the French makers would rob the contest of more than half its interest to the public. The last Cup race was a brilliant affair, but it is never likely to be repeated, and if only on sentimental grounds, a useless attempt to continue its glories is to be deprecated.

A few weeks ago one of the pioneers of automobilism in this country, who is well known among his friends as a most careful and considerate driver, was fined for exceeding the ten-mile limit in one of the parks. There was no suggestion of public danger or inconvenience, and the case was chiefly of interest because the defendant stated in court that he never used his horn if he could possibly avoid it. The remark seems to have started a controversy which, for some time past, has raged in the columns of the Press, both lay and technical, and has afforded much food for discussion among motorists themselves. There are extremists on both sides. Some aver that the horn is unnecessary and a nuisance, and that its use should be forbidden, as placing a premium on careless driving. There are others who very justly point out that the use of the horn or some other instrument is enjoined by law, and that motorists have been prosecuted and fined for not giving audible warning of their approach when passing or overtaking other traffic. They therefore counsel the sounding of the horn as often as possible, and apparently practise what they preach.

Personally, I am of opinion that the less the horn is used the better, as it undoubtedly has a most irritating effect on the public generally. From long experience I have found that the chief offenders, who seem to delight in making the day hideous with a constant succession of raucous blasts, are the reckless

Copyright.

A THORNYCROFT MOTOR-CAR.

Recently supplied to H R.H. Princess Christian The makers of this car, Messrs. Thornycroft, have just received the Royal Warrant of Appointment.

Digitized by Google

drivers or the mere beginners who have not yet overcome their first feelings of nervousness. If one chooses to disregard the strict letter of the law and act as common-sense dictates, it is surprising how far one can travel without having recourse to the horn, granted always that corners are approached at a proper speed and the villages taken, as they should be, dead slow. There comes a time, however, to everybody when to give audible warning of his approach is not merely legitimate, but absolutely necessary, and for this reason the suggested abolition of the horn is not to be encouraged. Even if it is preferred to be on the safe side and act always as the law directs, there is no necessity to give, as so many drivers do, six or seven peremptory "toots" where one, or two at the most, would suffice. No consideration need be shown for the drowsy carter on the wrong side of the road, but the peremptory "clear-out-of-my-way" method of signalling so often heard is naturally very galling to those who are using the highway in a proper and careful manner.

Ever since the motor-car came into vogue, horse-owners have shown a surprising modesty in estimating the speed of which their animals are capable. One hears 8 miles an hour spoken of as a good average pace, and the motorist who grumbles at a legal maximum of 20 miles per hour described as a lunatic who deserves to break his neck. Whatever the present generation of horse-owners may think a proper speed for the highway, it is certain that their grandfathers were not content with an average of 8 miles an hour when they had a long journey before them. The scheduled speeds of certain coaches, about the year 1830, were not so much inferior to that of the average touring car. The famous "Shrewsbury Wonder" used to occupy only a little over 9 hours, total time, on a journey of 158 miles, which works out an average of over 17 miles per hour. The "Birmingham Swan Tally-ho" averaged 15½ miles per hour for 109 miles, and there were others nearly as fast. There was one stage between London and Birmingham, 7½ miles in length, over which the speed of the coaches, start to stop inclusive, was 18·75 miles per hour. This was a "galloping stage," but even the London and Brighton coaches swung along at 13 miles an hour or more, over roads by no means suitable for quick running. Personally, I believe that the public is becoming accustomed once more to reasonably high speeds, not the scorching of ex-racers or over-powered touring cars, and that many people who still retain the idea that 10 miles an hour is fast enough for anybody under any circumstances, would alter their opinions if they were driven on a car which could not exceed that pace.

RADIATOR.

Draycott Studios.

MISS MAY YATES ON HER MORS CAR.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

EDITED BY A. J. ROBERTSON.

IF one were asked to single out the chief and latest feature in the development of golf during the past few years it would unquestionably be its growth on the continent of Europe. The growth has been tardy, but each succeeding year shows an increase in the number of foreign clubs; and now there is scarcely a watering place with any pretensions to the name which does not provide a course of some kind for the recreation of its visitors. Take Ostend as an example. Two or three years ago it was impossible for the English visitor to enjoy a game there, though the golfer's eye seemed to be able to mark out plenty of suitable ground to the right and left of the Digue admirably suited for that purpose. The game was unknown, and no one seemed to be anxious to take the initiative in starting a club with a course among the broken sand-dunes.

* * *

To-day the case is different. The Royal Golf Club of Ostend is, at this season of the year, one of the great social attractions of the town. The links at Coq-sur-Mer, a short distance out of Ostend, are largely patronised by English and American golfers during the height of the season, and especially when the important prize tournaments serve to attract by reason of the value or the artistic beauty of the rewards. French, Belgian, and Italian counts and countesses try their luck as competitors, and the height of ambition would doubtless be reached were the Ostend golfers able to induce the Shah, who is at present in residence there, to come to the links and take a share in a foursome made up of Royalties. Yet something in this direction has been gained when among the visitors to the links recently are included Prince Adalbert of Prussia, and the Archduchess Isabella and her daughter.

What Ostend has lost by the suppression of the gaming tables has been more than gained by the institution of the golf club, the racing, and the polo tournaments. The change is all for the better in the healthiness of the public amusements, for it brings the people out into the open air and the bright sun, giving them

Sarony, Scarborough.

HAYDON BRIDGE CLUB.

Alderman Thomas Carrick, J.P., President of the Haydon Bridge Golf Club.

a reasonable amount of exercise, and imparting a healthier tone to mind and body. It is quite certain, however, that the institution of golf at Ostend, Montreux, Interlaken, Baden-Baden, Zurich, Carlsbad, and elsewhere is not quite a movement based wholly on philanthropic motives. There is cash in it. The local authorities see that for the English and Americans, at any rate, it is needful to provide facilities for outdoor sports. Those health resorts that lag behind in this respect suffer by the more attractive competition of other places. The English temperament does not seem to be favourable to the idea that "lounging" and doing nothing constitute the highest pleasure of a summer and autumn holiday. Our people must have ample opportunities for exercising their muscles somehow; and hence we find the great spread of golf within the last two or three years at places on the Continent where the game had never been heard of, or, if faintly known, was mentioned only to be pooh-poohed.

* * *

This tendency, moreover, to create golf courses of some kind or another at Continental watering-places is having the indirect advantage of bringing in recruits from the highest classes among the native populations. The game is found to be a delightful and not too violent exercise both for men and women, and it has the great additional advantage of lending itself with gracious appropriateness to the cultivation of the most charming social intercourse. Thus the tournaments that are being played have the value of bringing the best social elements together on the golf green, in the interchange of warm hospitality and genial intercourse, thereby making the golf club one of the most attractive social centres of the neighbourhood.

* * *

The first portion of the professional foursome match for £400 will be played next week at St. Andrews. There will be an enormous crowd to see the opening of the match, for excursion trains from other districts are sure to pour golfers into St. Andrews that day almost by thousands. The question of the crowd and the methods which should be

A. H. Robinson.

GOLF AT HAYDON BRIDGE.

A mixed foursome on the 3rd putting green at this recently-opened course at Haydon Bridge. The two lady players are Miss H. de Sheldon and Miss E. Mandell.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

devised for its management are evidently exciting the interest of the local authorities. The Green Committee have been considering how to arrange for the provision of stewards to cope with the problem of managing a crowd of 10,000 golfers of both sexes, each of whom is anxious to see every shot played.

* * *

It is quite certain that the management of the crowd will neither be an easy nor a pleasing task for any of the stewards. If the stewards are fussy, interfering, bullying, and querulous, it is po-sible that there will be trouble and inconvenience to the players. It is a great occasion for the exercise of persuasive tact on the part of those who are delegated to keep the course clear. The best method is for some influential member of the St. Andrews Club — popular, suave, and respected — to addr ss a few genial words from a golfer to a crowd of enthusiastic golfers, appealing for their hearty co-operation, and asking that the strictest care should be observed not to incommode the players. If the crowd is made up of loyal golfers, they will take precautions on their own account to keep clear. The real trouble will come from the curiosity-hunters who do not understand much of the game, and care not a whit about the etiquette which should be observed on such an important occasion. The tactful word of appeal to golfing loyalty is worth much more in its effect than the repressive rope and the angry reproof.

A. H. Robinson.

THE ALNMOUTH LINKS.

Teeing off for the last hole, showing a view of the village and the fine undulating character of the course.

A. H. Robinson.

THE LINKS AT ALNMOUTH.

Mr. Abbs driving at the Hill hole, with "a gentle critic" watching the flight of the ball.

* * *

Then after the match is finally finished another professional foursome match will be played later in the autumn for £200. Jack White and Tom Vardon will play Braid and Rowland Jones a match of seventy-two holes over Walton Heath and Sunningdale in October. The arrangement of this match seems to have taken the place of the bigger event which was promised, wherein White and T. Vardon were to challenge the winners of the present foursome for £400.

* * *

Lahinch has been crowded during the past month. Among recent visitors were Lord Inchiquin, Sir Andrew Armstrong, Lady Fairbairn, and Captain and the Misses Walker-Leigh.

THE CLEEK AND BA'.

(From the "Souvenir of Ye Mercat Faire," held at Earlshall, July 14 and 15.)

Let ithers sing the praise o' wine,
Their Bacchus is nae freend o' mine;
And as for sports o' ancient Greece,
We'll let their memory rest in peace.
What sport, I ask you, can compare
Wi' Gowf for pleasure rich an' rare?
Hip! Hip!! Hurrah!!! for Cleek and Ba',
The Royal Game's the best o' a'.

It suits my fancy to a "tee"
To drive the ba' aboot the lea;
To watch it spinnin' thro' the air
Is perfect joy (and wha wants mair?)
But losh, it's quite anither story
When in the midst o' a' its glory
The ba' gangs aff its wey and draps
In bunkers or in sic like traps.

And sometimes, really, I admit,
The game annoys you a bit,
And certain words alone express
The feelings of your deep distress.
In moments such as these you feel
Gowf's an invention o' the Deil.
But Hip! Hurrah!! for Cleek and Ba',
The Royal Game's the best o' a'.

A. H. Robinson.

GOLF AT ALNMOUTH.

The bunker at the 2nd green, with a view of the village beyond. The flying sand shows that the ball has been "neatly" cut out by the player.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

The August meeting of the Lahinch Golf Club was most successful. The weather was perfect, and the rainfall of the past few days, slight as it was, proved most beneficial to the greens. The course throughout was in excellent condition. The new seventh hole ("Port Arthur") received its share of friendly criticism, for though no doubt a fine sporting hole, it proved a dilemma for duffers in many instances. The Stroke Competition was won by Mr. Wingfield—a cousin of Lord Powerscourt — a most popular member of the Lahinch Golf Club, with 80 net. Mr. A. C. Lincoln, plus 3, who had done a 77 on the previous day in a practice round, returned a gross score of 87. The "Bogey" Competition was won by Mr. Albert Browning (handicap 3), 1 down, Mr. A. C. Lincoln (plus 3), Mr. Harry Crowe, and Captain Arthep all being 4 down. The Ladies' Competition did not attract a large entry, and Miss Studdert (who was the only one able to compete with a somewhat stiff "Bogey") was the winner with a handicap of 4, 1 down.

* * *

Those golfers who are meditating a holiday on the Norfolk Coast should note the arrangements made by the Great Eastern Railway Company for their benefit. There are two fine courses at Hunstanton and at Brancaster, and every Sunday during August and September the Great Eastern Company run a first-class restaurant car with the train that leaves Liverpool Street at 9.50 a.m., and arrives at Hunstanton at 1.23 p.m. Then in the train that leaves Hunstanton at 6.20 p.m. a table d'hôte dinner is served on the journey to Liverpool Street, which is reached at 9.37, an hour which might be convenient for a very light supper, but certainly too late for a dinner. This restaurant car will thus supply a want which has often been felt by golfers travelling to Hunstanton and Brancaster for a week's golf.

* * *

Among the Continental golf resorts, where golf forms one of the principal attractions, is Scheveningen in Holland. It is an attractive bathing resort with a fine beach, where the life is as gay and animated as at Ostend or Trouville. This Holland watering-place boasts the possession of three golf courses—two nine-hole courses, and a round of five holes for the ladies and the children. They belong to the Oranje Golf Club, and are of easy access. There is also a golf course at Clingendaal on the race-course between the Hague and Wassenaar. Last month the competition for the championship of the Netherlands took place on the course at Rosendaal. Mr. Ernest Cremers and Mr. A. M. Snouck Hurgronje tied at 190 strokes over thirty-six holes, and in the match which followed Mr. Cremers won by 3 up and 1 to play.

THE IRISH CHAMPIONSHIP.

The match in the semi-final between Mr. Kerr and Mr. Mitchell. Mr. Kerr is putting at the hole side.

MR. W. O. S. PELL

A prominent member of the Great Yarmouth Golf Club. He was for several years a member of the Royal Blackheath Golf Club. He has won the Glennie Medal and the Bombay Medal, and he has won several important events at Blackheath and at Great Yarmouth, including the John Penn Medal, the Great Yarmouth Challenge Badge, and the Young Cup.

* * *

The eleventh tournament for the Amateur Championship of the United States was played last week at Chicago. There were 148 players, including Mr. W. J. Travis and Mr. G. S. Lyon (Amateur Champion of Canada). Mr. Travis was beaten in the third round, and the championship was finally won by the previous holder of the title, Mr. H. Chandler Egan of Harvard University.

THE IRISH CHAMPIONSHIP.

THE result of the Irish Championship was eminently satisfactory to the Irish golfers, who mustered in great strength at Dollymount. The opposition they had to meet was not so numerous as last year, yet it included last year's champion and runner-up—Mr. Worthington and Mr. Mitchell—Mr. C. A. Palmer, and many other fine golfers, the most notable of whom was Mr. Girdlestone of Royal Wimbledon and late of Oxford University, who played for the greater part of the week most brilliant and attractive golf. If plenty of good golf on good links falls to his lot during the next year or two he should come to the very front of amateur golf.

Strong in numbers though we were, but two Irishmen reached the last eight, and but one the semi-finals. That one, however, Mr. H. A. Boyd, by defeating Mr. J. F. Mitchell by 3 up and 2 to play after the hardest of matches, won great honour for himself and prevented for all time the scoffers from again saying that Ireland could not win her own championship.

Though there were many surprises last week, they were chiefly among Irish players, some of whom with big reputations went down badly. The defeat of Mr. Worthington by Mr. W. Brander of Deal was somewhat unexpected, but Mr. Brander had been playing very sound and most plucky golf throughout the week, and his opponent was not quite at his best. Two dead stymies halfway through the match had a good deal to say to the result, but Mr. Worthington

THE IRISH CHAMPIONSHIP.

Mr. J. F. Mitchell driving at the 12th tee against the wind in the final against Mr. Boyd.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

THE IRISH CHAMPIONSHIP.

(1) Mr. D. D. Stewart (Scotland) driving at the first tee. (2) The Hon. Edward Gibson (Royal Dublin) playing an approach shot. (3) Mr. G. K. Girdlestone (Royal Wimbledon) driving at the first tee. (4) Mr. H. A. Boyd, who beat Mr. J. F. Mitchell (Royal Musselburgh) in the final by 3 and 2 to play. (5) Three popular officials, whose work always contributes to the success of the meeting; in the centre, Mr. Cecil Barcroft, the hon. secretary of the Royal Dublin Club, Mr. Hugh C. Kelly (on the right), the hon. treasurer, and Mr. Henry T. Daly, hon. secretary of the Golfing Union of Ireland. (6) Mr. J. F. Mitchell, twice runner-up. (7) A view of the crowd in the final; Mr. J. F. Mitchell putting, Mr. H. A. Boyd looking on.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

should have taken a good opening offered at the seventeenth.

The winner of Messrs. Girdlestone and Mitchell was expected to enter the final, and the former was greatly fancied. He had delighted the gallery on the previous day by holeing five consecutive holes in three each. But the older and more experienced player, though not starting over well, improved bit by bit, and from the turn to the finish played the soundest of golf.

The winner had very little trouble in disposing of all his opponents prior to the final save Mr. Palmer, who gave him a great match, in which Mr. Boyd, getting one up on the homeward journey, had to fight very hard for halves up to the fifteenth. Mr. Palmer had a good chance of squaring the match there, but instead of doing so, lost the hole. The final was a most exciting struggle. First Mr. Boyd got 2 up, then lost his two holes and two more. Then after a hard half, where he looked like being 3 down, he won three holes running, led by one, lost it, and halved the last two. Thus the first round ended with no advantage to any one.

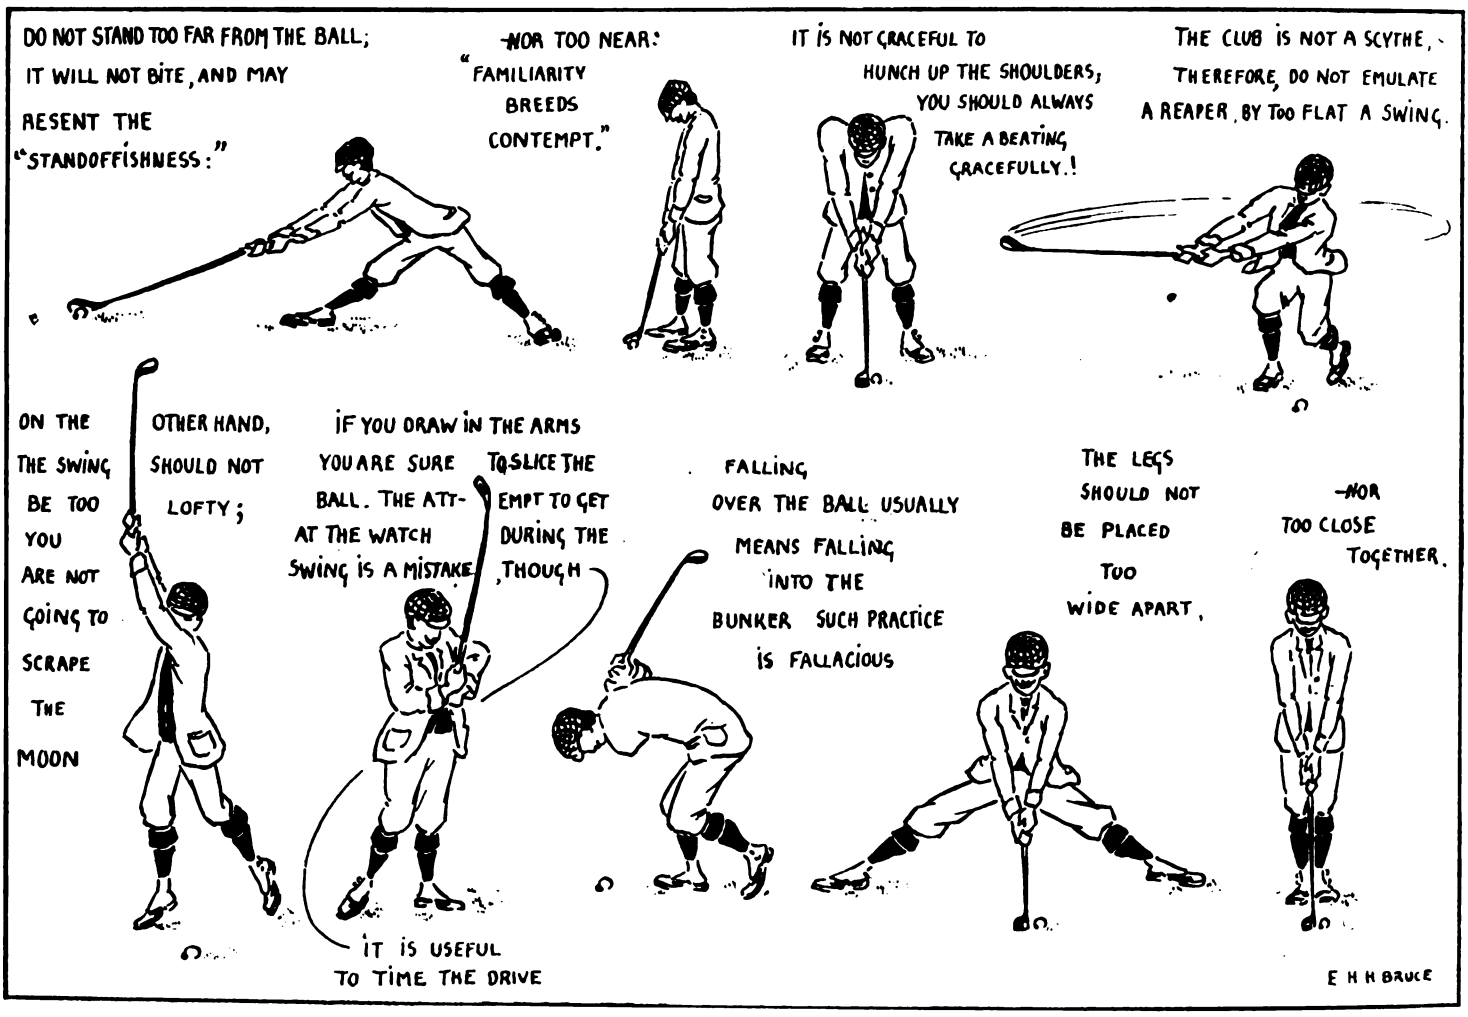
It was Mr. Boyd's turn now to lose two holes again (the first and second), and he took a mighty long time to get them back, winning and losing holes until he won both the ninth and tenth, and squared the match. He forged ahead after the twelfth, where he laid a stymie, won the thirteenth, and was 2 up with 5 to play – a lead at which the superstitious shook their heads. Sure enough he went all to pieces at the fourteenth, and when on the fifteenth green he lay 4-yds. from the hole, and his opponent lay 4-ft., Ireland's chances did not look quite so bright. But Mr. Boyd holed his putt, Mr. Mitchell missed his, and what promised to be a most sensational finish ended somewhat abruptly at the next hole, where the Scotsman was bunkered badly.

Mr. Boyd's victory was extremely popular and most well deserved. His golf during the week was occasionally erratic, as was that of all. On the other occasions it was most brilliant, and was always played with a stout heart. No matter what happened to any shot, he settled down to play the next like a man, and showed the most nerve and grit of all the competitors.

His long game is very good indeed at its best, but it is in his long game that he has most lapses. His approaching long and short includes every variety of shot, and he wanted all of them at Dollymount. The long low iron approaches coming in from the right he plays beautifully, but those who followed him agree that where he especially excels is in the short pitch and run shots from just outside the greens. These he played during the week with most deadly accuracy and fine judgment. His putting was, with very few exceptions, very good indeed.

Dollymount, flat and uninteresting looking as it is, was, before the end of the week, deemed the most difficult course over which the Irish championship has yet been played, and a fine test of first-class golf. Its great merit is that it calls for every kind of approach; pure pitch, running approach, and especially the pitch and run shot, and the ball must pitch on the right spot, for of all the courses the writer knows there is none which assists the player so little as Dollymount. One has always to fight to get the ball near the hole, for the greens will give no assistance as they do at Newcastle, where one's approach may be a bit off the line and be helped by the run of the greens. The high praise given to the course during the meeting was very gratifying to those who have played a part in making it what it is. It is with great regret that we all realise there will not be another Irish championship for a whole year. The old friends and the new faces who come to us year by year we are always glad to see, and their visit to Dollymount was a source of great pleasure to us all.

CECIL BARCROFT.



HINTS TO BEGINNERS (OR OTHERS) ILLUSTRATED.

FIXTURES.

August 22.—Hunstanton, Ladies' Competition.
August 22-25.—Waveney Valley, Open Summer Meeting.
August 23.—Royal Guernsey, Tradesmen's Cup.
August 23-24.—Dieppe, Prix du Casino.
August 24-26.—Dornoch, Annual Tournament.
August 24-31.—Welsh Amateur Championship, at Conway.
August 25-26-28.—Scarborough Town, Open Amateur Meeting.
August 26.—Hanger Hill ("Bogey").
August 26.—Dieppe, Prix de l'Hôtel Royal.
August 27.—Royal Liverpool, Summer Meeting.
August 30-31.—Hunstanton, Summer Meeting
August 31.—Minchinhampton, Summer Meeting.
September 1.—West Lancashire, Autumn Meeting.
September 2.—Rye, Monthly Medal.
September 2.—Leasowe, Rangoon Cup.
September 2.—Royal Portrush, September Meeting.
September 4.—Royal North Devon, Autumn Meeting.
September 4-6.—Sheringham, Autumn Meeting.
September 5.—Royal and Ancient St. Andrews, Jubilee Vase.
September 5.—Royal Eastbourne, Vaughan Cup.
September 7.—Seaford, Autumn Meeting.
September 7, 8, and 9.—Royal Cromer, Autumn Meeting.
September 9.—Glasgow, Autumn Meeting at Killermont.
September 9.—Formby, Autumn Meeting.
September 9.—Tantallon, Autumn Meeting.

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. LVII.—Major the Hon. Thomas Francis Fremantle, M.A., V.D., Prospective Conservative Candidate for North Buckinghamshire.

THE Fremantles, first of Hampshire and then of Buckinghamshire, have played an important part in both war and politics ever since the reign of George II., when John Fremantle held the responsible post of Secretary to the Customs Board. Just a century ago Admiral Sir Thomas Francis Fremantle, G.C.B., shared in the laurels gained by Nelson both at Copenhagen and Trafalgar, while a second John Fremantle won his spurs as a soldier in the Peninsular, and was one of Wellington's aides-de-camp at Waterloo, while a son of the latter, Fitzroy William Fremantle, fought bravely with the Coldstreamers in the Crimea, and was wounded in the attack on the Redan. The son of Admiral Fremantle, born in 1798, entered the political arena with the dogged determination to succeed, which seems to have always been a characteristic of his ancestors, and after filling as a Baronet the high offices of Secretary to the Treasury, Secretary of State at War, and Chief Secretary for Ireland, was raised to the peerage just thirty years ago as Baron Cottesloe of Swanbourne and Hardwicke. Lord Cottesloe lived to be a nonagenarian, and when he died, in 1890, he was succeeded by the third Thomas Francis Fremantle, who had sat in the House of Commons from 1876 until 1885 as one of the members for the then undivided county of Buckinghamshire, which at the beginning of the last century was described as the happy hunting ground of the all-powerful possessor of Stowe.

The ancient town of Buckingham is now only the centre of the Parliamentary Division to which it gives a name. In 1805 thirteen individuals, viz., the mayor and twelve burgesses, with the bailiff as returning officer, sent no less than two representatives to Westminster, chosen as a rule from the "younger branches of the family of Grenville." The Thomas Grenville who sat for Buckingham in the year of Trafalgar was an ardent Colonel of Volunteers, and in the next generation, when the Reform Bill diminished the influence of Stowe, by an equally curious coincidence it was Sir Thomas Francis Fremantle, the future Lord Cottesloe, who shared the confidence of the Buckingham electors with Sir Harry Verney of Claydon House, whose son, Mr. Frederick Verney, at the coming General Election in North Buckinghamshire is destined to be the opponent of the grandson and namesake of his father's colleague, who unites in a remarkable degree the practical knowledge and strong love of warfare possessed by both the Fremantle of Trafalgar and the Fremantle of Waterloo, with the political ability and enthusiasm which won a peerage for the first Lord Cottesloe, and certainly appear to be hereditary as far as his descendants are concerned.

Thomas Francis Fremantle was born in London in 1862, and in due course was sent to "Evans's" house at Eton, of which his father had once been an inmate. Amongst Mr. Fremantle's school contemporaries Lords Salisbury, Linlithgow, and Bath, Mr. Bromley-Davenport, and Mr. Ernest Meysey-Thompson have since become known as keen politicians. It was while at Eton that the author of the leading book on rifle-shooting first gave evidence of his powers as a marksman. Having shot for the Ashburton Shield as one of the Eton Eight, he migrated to Balliol, then under the benign rule of Dr. Jowett, and where Nathaniel Curzon was still an undergraduate. At Oxford Mr. Fremantle took his degree, having done some excellent work as an officer of the 'Varsity Rifles. The next fifteen years of his life were devoted to the conscientious discharge of his duties as a Buckinghamshire J.P., a member of the Buckinghamshire County Council, to local political work, and last, but not least, to promoting the efficiency of the 1st Buckinghamshire Volunteers, in which he is second in command, and his friend, Mr. W. H. Grenfell, M.P., also holds the rank of major. From 1889 to 1891 he was one of Mr. Goschen's private secretaries at the Treasury. In 1895 he was appointed Volunteer Aide-de-Camp to Lord Wolseley, a position which necessitated his resigning his post on the Buckinghamshire County Council, of which he has now just become an alderman. Shortly after joining the War Office Staff he married Miss Tapling, the daughter of Mr. Thomas Tapling of Kingswood, and the sister of the late Mr. T. K. Tapling, M.P. They are now the parents of three sons and two daughters. Their eldest son, born in 1897, is the fifth Thomas Francis Fremantle in direct descent from the veteran of Trafalgar, and is said to already evince a keen interest in the use of the rifle as a weapon of defence.

From 1900 till 1903 Major Fremantle was one of the private secretaries of his cousin Mr. St. John Brodrick. Although during the past quarter of a century he has never missed the annual meeting at Wimbledon or Bisley, he has accomplished a great deal of travelling, going round the world in 1891-92, and visiting Siam in the company of his present political opponent, Mr. Frederick Verney. Out of twenty-one consecutive contests for the Elcho Shield, Major Fremantle has taken part in eighteen, and the sideboard at the Old House, Swanbourne, is, as might be expected, heavily laden with prize cups and mementoes of every description. In 1902 he was selected to choose and captain the British team which crossed the Atlantic and successfully competed with Canadian and American teams for the Palma Trophy, shot for at 800-yds., 900-yds., and 1,000-yds. It was again Major Fremantle's lot to head the British team which defended it at Bisley a year later, when the Americans won it after a very exciting match. He is at the present moment president of the Twenty Club, the largest and most efficiently organised body of skilled Volunteer rifle-shots in the United Kingdom. During the War in South Africa Major Fremantle was connected with the forming of both the C.I.V. and the Shropshire Yeomanry. He has published two books on his favourite subject, the second of these, entitled "The Book of the Rifle," brought out by Messrs. Longmans three years ago, being generally regarded as a standard work. Major Fremantle has received the Volunteer decoration for twenty years' unbroken service as an officer, and it is not surprising to learn that the 1st Bucks have, for a considerable time, enjoyed a well-deserved reputation for good shooting.

Mr. Fremantle is a Balfourite by conviction, but will certainly support no measure calculated to increase the price of the labourer's food or render his life more irksome. At a moment when the condition of our Imperial defences has become a burning question of the hour, the presence of men of wide knowledge of Army conditions like Major Fremantle in the House of Commons becomes more and more essential. He thinks that the fighting power of the country for land operations requires to be treated comprehensively, and that all parties should combine to place it on such an adequate basis as would satisfy Lord Roberts and others who have lately denounced in and out of Parliament any further dallying with a condition of "national unpreparedness."

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Alice Hughes.

THE HON. MRS. T. F. FREMANTLE

Wife of the prospective Conservative candidate for North Bucks.

---

* The next of this series of articles will deal with Sir John Dickson-Poynder, Bart., M.P. for the Chippenham Division of Wiltshire.*

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

THE Cowes Week of 1905 is destined to hold a prominent place even amongst the most famous of that port's regattas. The crowded anchorage, with the combination of the battle-ships and the hundreds of yachts comprising the pleasure fleet, presented a spectacle unique even for Cowes, and one that will be long remembered by the tens of thousands of people who were attracted to the town during the week. The glorious weather of the earlier part of the week of course contributed in no small measure to the success of the pageant. The illumination of the Fleet and the fireworks from the battleships on the Monday formed a sight certainly never surpassed, if ever equalled, for magnificence, and the French visitors must have been deeply impressed with the welcome accorded them.

Topical.

THE COWES WEEK.

Start of the match for the South Coast one-design class, which was won by L'Amoureuse, owned by Captain R. Charteris. This yacht was too soon over the line, and was recalled, but quickly regained the lead, and ultimately won the race.

The Entente Cordiale was the dominant note in the proceedings during the earlier days of the week, and the vast majority of the visitors to Cowes were undoubtedly attracted by the presence of the French Fleet. Nevertheless, viewed from a strictly yachting standpoint, the week must be regarded as a success, and much more full of interest than many of its more recent predece-sors.

In accordance with the custom of previous years, the Royal London Yacht Club opened the week with a series of matches on the Monday. The crowded state of the anchorage necessitated an alteration in the courses from those usually sailed, and the big vessels were sent round the Isle of Wight, while the smaller classes were kept chiefly in the west channel. There was a nice breeze inside the Wight, which just suited the 52-footers; but the "round the island" course is seldom a satisfactory one, and on this occasion was no exception. The breeze was paltry outside, and this led to a considerable amount of fluking in the big race, which was won by Mr. Robert Young's cutter, Merrymaid.

In the 52-footer race, Sonya, the Herreshoff boat, and Maymon, last year's champion, were having a splendid tussle, when the American boat was unfortunate enough to pass a mark on the wrong side, a mistake which, of course, would have meant disqualification, so she retired, and interest in the race was destroyed. Maymon sailed well, and thoroughly deserved her victory. It was at this regatta last year that she commenced her remarkable series of successes.

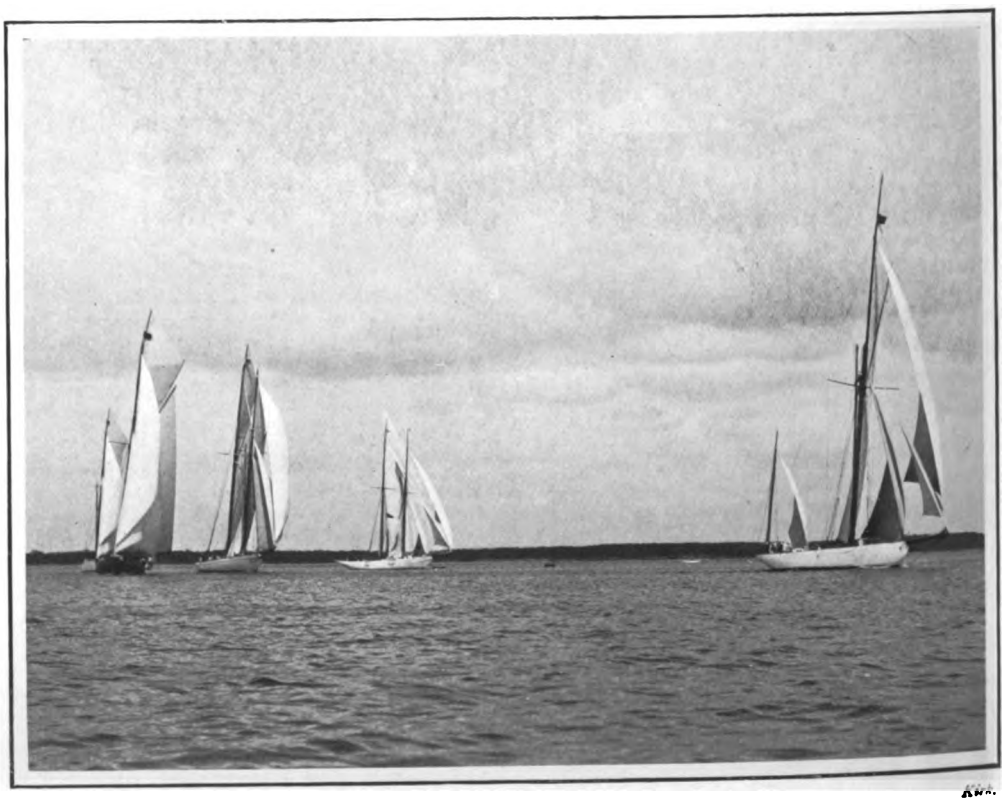
Great interest attached to the opening day of the Royal Yacht Squadron on Tuesday, when the principal race was for the King's Cup. This race differs from other clubs' races for Royal trophies, it being a handicap restricted to yachts owned by Squadron members. The competitors were the German Emperor's Meteor, Lord Dunraven's Cariad, Sir James Pender's Brynhild, Sir Maurice Fitzgerald's Satanita, Lord Iveagh's Cetonia, and Mr. Crosier Bailey's Sula. Meteor was scratch boat, but Satanita led for the greater part of the journey, and looked like repeating her victory of 1901, when she won the last Cup presented to the Squadron by Queen Victoria. She finished first on Tuesday, but Lord Dunraven's ketch, Cariad, managed to save her time by 55-sec. Meteor never appeared to have a chance, and with half of the course to windward, it was practically impossible for her to give a long time allowance to a boat like Satanita. Cariad's performance was a good one.

Sonya in Tuesday's race made amends for her mistake of the previous day. She gave a fine display of sailing in the turn to windward, and beat Moyana, the second boat, by 1¼-min.

The King went for a sail in his old cutter Britannia on the Tuesday, while the Marquess of Ormonde, as Commodore of the Squadron, presided at the lunch at the Castle, at which the French officers were guests.

Wednesday was another big day with the Fleets and Squadron alike. The King reviewed the Fleets, but what should have been a very fine spectacle was, in a great measure, spoiled by the rain, which fell heavily in the morning.

In view of the review, the Squadron deemed it expedient to start the races later than usual, and the gun for the Emperor's Cup Race was fired at one o'clock. A splendid entry had been received for this event, the names of no less than seventeen yachts appearing on the programme, and sixteen actually started. The weather in the morning looked most unpromising for racing, but it improved



THE ROYAL YACHT SQUADRON REGATTA.

The start for the King's Cup. Meteor and Satanita, with a light south-westerly wind, made very good running, but Cariad, towards the end, came rapidly forward, and took the race by the narrow margin of 55 sec.

Digitized by Google

later in the day, and the races finished in a fine breeze.

The start for the Emperor's Cup was somewhat exciting, and it looked as though a foul between three or four of the yachts would have resulted seriously; but fortunately no damage was sustained by any of the boats. The Kaiser's trophy was won by Thérèse, 65-foot cutter, took second prize, and Rosamond third.

The race for 52-footers on this day resulted in a victory for Moyana, and Britomart was second, while the American craft Sonya finished last.

The annual banquet at the Royal Yacht Squadron Castle, usually held on the Tuesday, took place last week on the Wednesday, and the King and the Duke of Connaught were present.

Thursday was, as usual, the town day. The races formed a part of the Squadron programme, but the prizes for the big handicap had been subscribed by the town of Cowes.

A brilliant week closed on Friday, when the Countess of Dudley's Challenge Cup was sailed for by the 52-footers, and the South Coast boats competed for a prize presented by the Prince of Wales.

The yachts in the harbour were most brilliantly illuminated every evening, and on very few occasions has Cowes Week been favoured with such brilliant nights. At nine o'clock the ships blazed out in myriad colours, and the war-ships in the background were also gaily illuminated. The Royal yacht was beautifully done, green being the only colour used, except for the three bright white lights at each masthead

CORINTHIAN.

Debenham.

LORD DUNRAVEN'S CARIAD.
Winner of the King's Cup at the Royal Yacht Squadron Regatta.

which sails under the flag of Herr Felix Simon. She had a time allowance of 50-min. 8-sec. This vessel's original name was La Flèche, and she was built from Mr. Soper's designs. Rosamond was actually second boat on time allowance; but one of the conditions of this race was that the second prize should go to a vessel of different rig to that of the winner, and consequently Zinita, the

REGATTA FIXTURES.

August 21-22.—Royal Albert Yacht Club. Southsea.
August 23.—Royal Southampton Yacht Club.
August 26.—Royal Dorset Yacht Club. Weymouth.

Digitized by Google

THE YACHTING SEASON.

MERRYMAID

The winner of the £100 Cup in the handicap match for yachts exceeding 100 tons, Thames measurement, presented by Mr. Myles B. Kennedy. She is a cutter of 107 tons, and was built at Gosport last year from Mr. C. Nicholson's design. Now owned by Mr. R. Young, Merrymaid has established a reputation as a hard-weather boat, and at Southsea Regatta last year she beat the American schooner Ingomar in half a gale of wind.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

FASHIONABLE LIFE AT THE SEASIDE.

Copyright.

THE SEASON AT TROUVILLE.

A general view of the bathing sands, with the jetty in the background.

THE shutters are closed in the fashionable faubourg. Tapestries are covered with their summer linens, carpets are rolled, and napthaline and camphor are the giants that guard the domain. Moth is the enemy to be routed, and so far nothing has been discovered that chokes these intrepid wool gatherers more quickly than this nauseous compound. The joint smell has been known to check a burglar, and is assuredly capable of repelling a dainty moth. The key once turned in the safety lock, no thought is given to the town house during the summer; it is well protected without and within. Jean and Julie, with the chef and his wife, have followed their masters; the concierge alone remains at the lodge to smoke his pipe and answer all the enquiries with the customary stare. Everybody knows that the family are at Trouville at this time of the year. "What the —— do you want bothering here?" is written as large as life on the surly face as the great portals shut with a snap, and you begin to understand why the Parisian can leave home so quietly. The heavy luggage has gone by rail with the servants; but madame cannot trust her dress trunks to any but the maid who has packed them and must answer for their safe arrival. She, therefore, travels by the omnibus motor, with Jean for emergencies; and the chauffeur knows the importance of his charges too well to linger by the way.

In Trouville, and across the Touques to Deauville, most of the villas belong to well-known people in one or other of the fashionable faubourgs. For we have the Faubourg St. Germain and the Faubourg St. Honoré equally well represented at this favoured spot, and year after year we find the Marquis and Marquise de Ganay at the Villa Ganay, Count and Countess de Galiffet at the "Folie," Prince and Princess Murat at Victoria Lodge, M. and Mme. Edmond Dollfus at the Villa Dollfus, Count and Countess d'Aramon at the Villa Chloé, the Rochefoucaulds, the Vigiers, the Ridgways, the Gontaut-Birons, the Ephrussis, the Vanderbilts, the aristocrats with money, and the aristocrats without, cosmopolitan plutocracy, and the usual band of "fringes," or hangers-on, of Society, living the showy life that fashion demands.

Dress, dinners, baccarat, bridge, polo, tennis, the race-course, and the shops fill the day and night. Parisians—men and women—gamble and talk scandal, flirt and frivol, dress and undress in the grande quinzaine—the fashionable fortnight—more than at any time of the year. They are all together, all leading the same life, all meeting at the same houses, all bored to death by the ever-recurring platitudes of their butterfly existence. And Trouville is the home of butterflies par excellence.

The caricaturists are busy with their pencils in the Rue de Paris. They note the "little ladies" and the old gentlemen, the husbands and wives, the fiancés, and the young mothers-in-law, peering into the jewellers' windows. They could tell you who buys and who receives the pendants and the rings, and how it happened that only five of the seven rows of pearls graced the countess' throat at her birthday party. These caricaturists see everything, note everything, and make their successful publications from everything that they discover during their fortnight's holiday. They follow the fashionable crowd, for they make their living by their observations, by the things they see in the heart of smart Society. And their books are bought at the end of the year and gloated over. Nothing, in fact, stamps a man or woman as fashionable more than a pen sketch from one of these gentlemen. And who wonders that the American comtesse is paying such marked attention to our monosyllabic caricaturist! He will launch her into the Smart Set more quickly than her father's millions or her husband's title.

The Faubourg St. Germain at Trouville keeps much to itself—here, as in town. Cosmopolitan society sees little or nothing of the dances and dinners within the villas, and the stranger who fancies that life in this French watering-place is sociable soon finds out his mistake. A Parisian will entertain a foreigner at the hotel, give him the best dinner he can order and a bottle of his favourite Chambertin, be as merry as possible over a cigar and a Kummel—but he will not invite him home. He must know a great deal about him before he introduces him to his family, and as he generally takes no trouble to find out anything unless there is a marriage proposition, a seaside acquaintance with a Frenchman is disappointing.

There are dances at the casino, like in all seaside towns of any importance, but the "Faubourg" does not dance there. You will catch a glimpse of them on the race-course, at tea, wrapped in pale blue gauze in a motor, at a polo match, or in a morning's walk. You will look for them in the sea, and fancy you will recognise the marquise or her sister the countess among the bathers. But after a while you will discover that the smart Parisienne at Trouville will gamble, dance, drive and ride, flirt and fence, dress five times a day—will do everything in fact that is to be done but bathe.

FRANCES KEYZER.

Copyright.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

CHILDREN VISITORS AT TROUVILLE.

Amateur fishing for mussels and shrimps is one of the delights of the children at the popular French watering place.

Digitized by Google

THE FRENCH FLEET

Debenham.

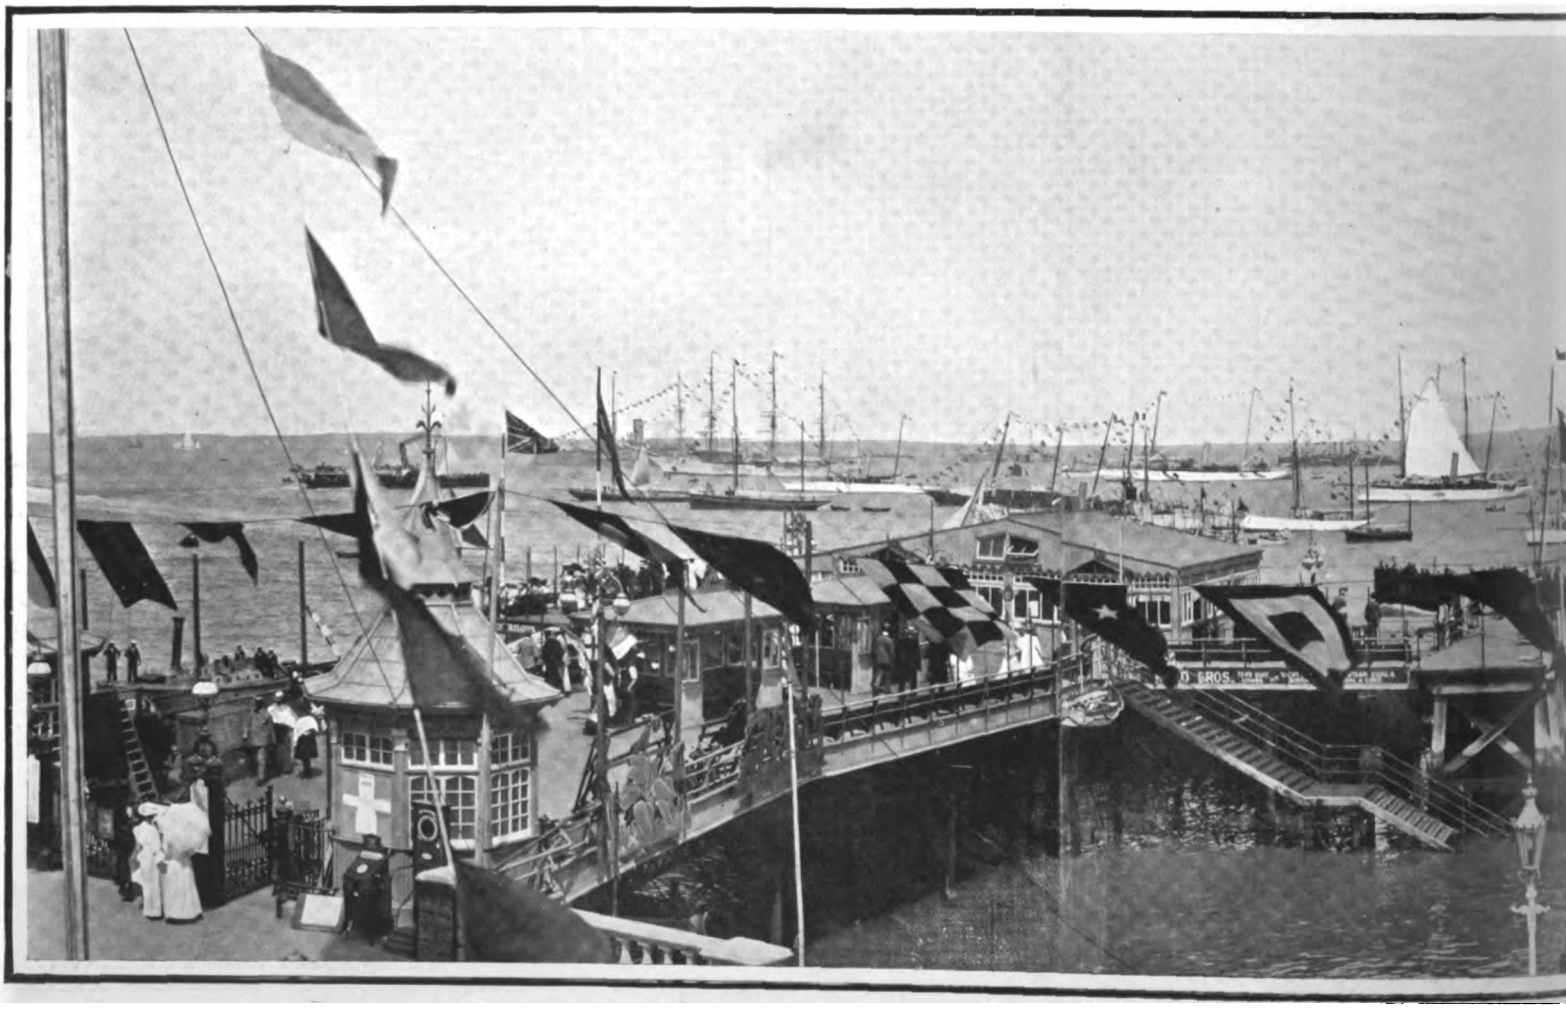
THE KING AND THE FRENCH FLEET.

His Majesty, with the Prince of Wales, returning from his visit to Admiral Caillard in the "Masséna." On Wednesday, after the review, the King lunched on board the French flag-ship, returning to the "Victoria and Albert" before the "Masséna" left Cowes for Portsmouth Harbour.

FRENCH O

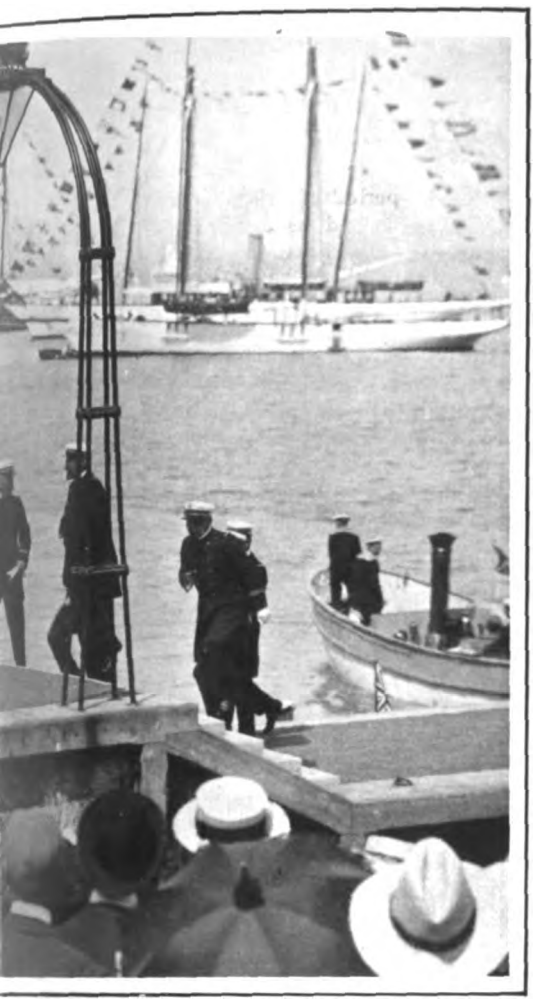
Admiral Caillard and his staff, accompanied by s landing-stage, on their way to the luncheon at the the Marquess of Ormonde, C



THE BRITISH AND FRENCH FLEETS AT ANCHOR

The British Channel Fleet and French Northern Squadron were reviewed by the King on Wednesday, August 9, the third anniversary of his Majesty's coronation Fleet was headed by the Trinity House yacht "Irene," followed by the "Victoria and Albert," th "Osborne," the "Alberta," the "Enchantress," with the Le with the Mayor and Corporation of Portsmouth. In all there were eighteen French and fifty British war-ships in line, and being dre

Digitized by Google



Cribb.

ERS AT COWES.

Sir Fisher, landing at the Royal Yacht Squadron's private re. In the illustration Sir John Fisher may be seen greeting shore of the Royal Yacht Squadron.

AT PORTSMOUTH.

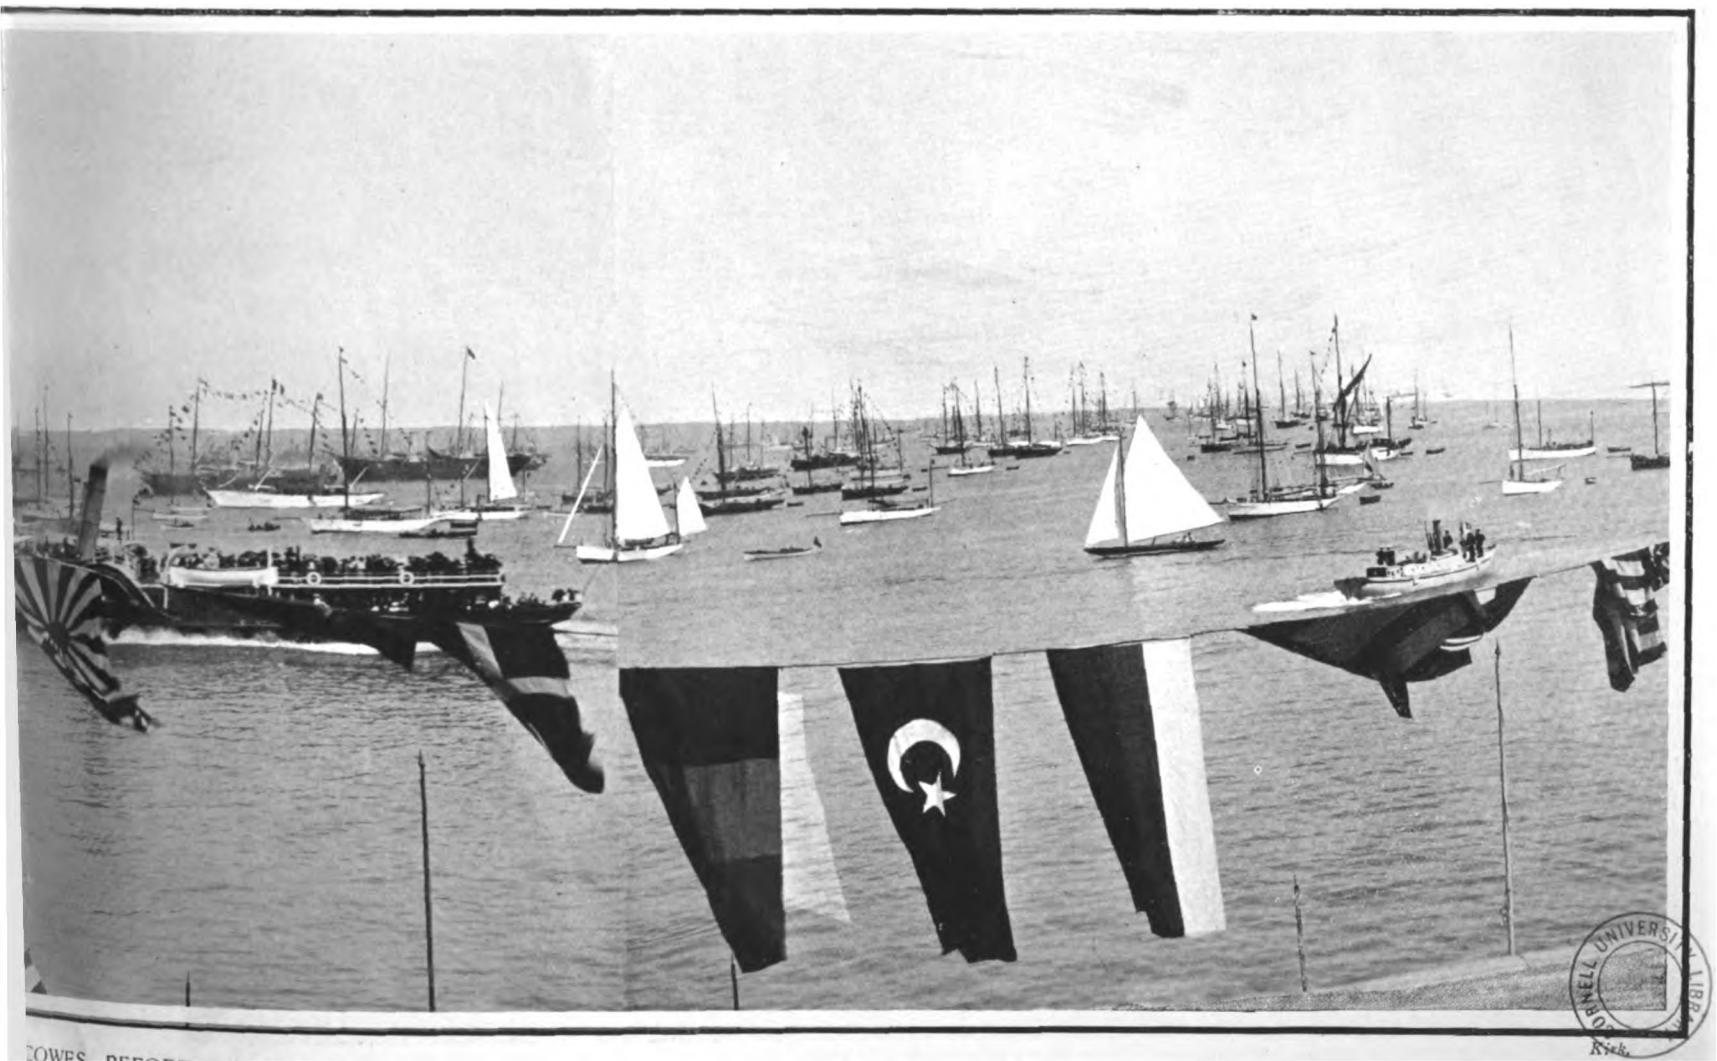
Cribb.

THE FRENCH FLEET ENTERING PORTSMOUTH HARBOUR.

In a steady downpour of rain the vessels of Admiral Caillard's Squadron left their moorings off Cowes on Wednesday, and in charge of a British Navigating Officer steamed to their berths in Portsmouth Harbour. Every point of vantage from which the arrival of the Fleet could be watched was crowded with people, who cheered each ship loudly as she passed.



COWES BEFORE THE REVIEW BY KING EDWARD.

Fleets were disposed in four lines, the battle-ships and large cruisers in the centre and the torpedo-boats and destroyers on the flanks. The Royal procession through the Admiralty, the "Fire Queen," the "Mercury," with the Lord Mayor of London, the "Seahorse," with representatives of the French and English papers, and the "Wye," ver and manned as the Royal cortège passed down the lines, the scene was a brilliant and memorable one, despite the somewhat dull weather.

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

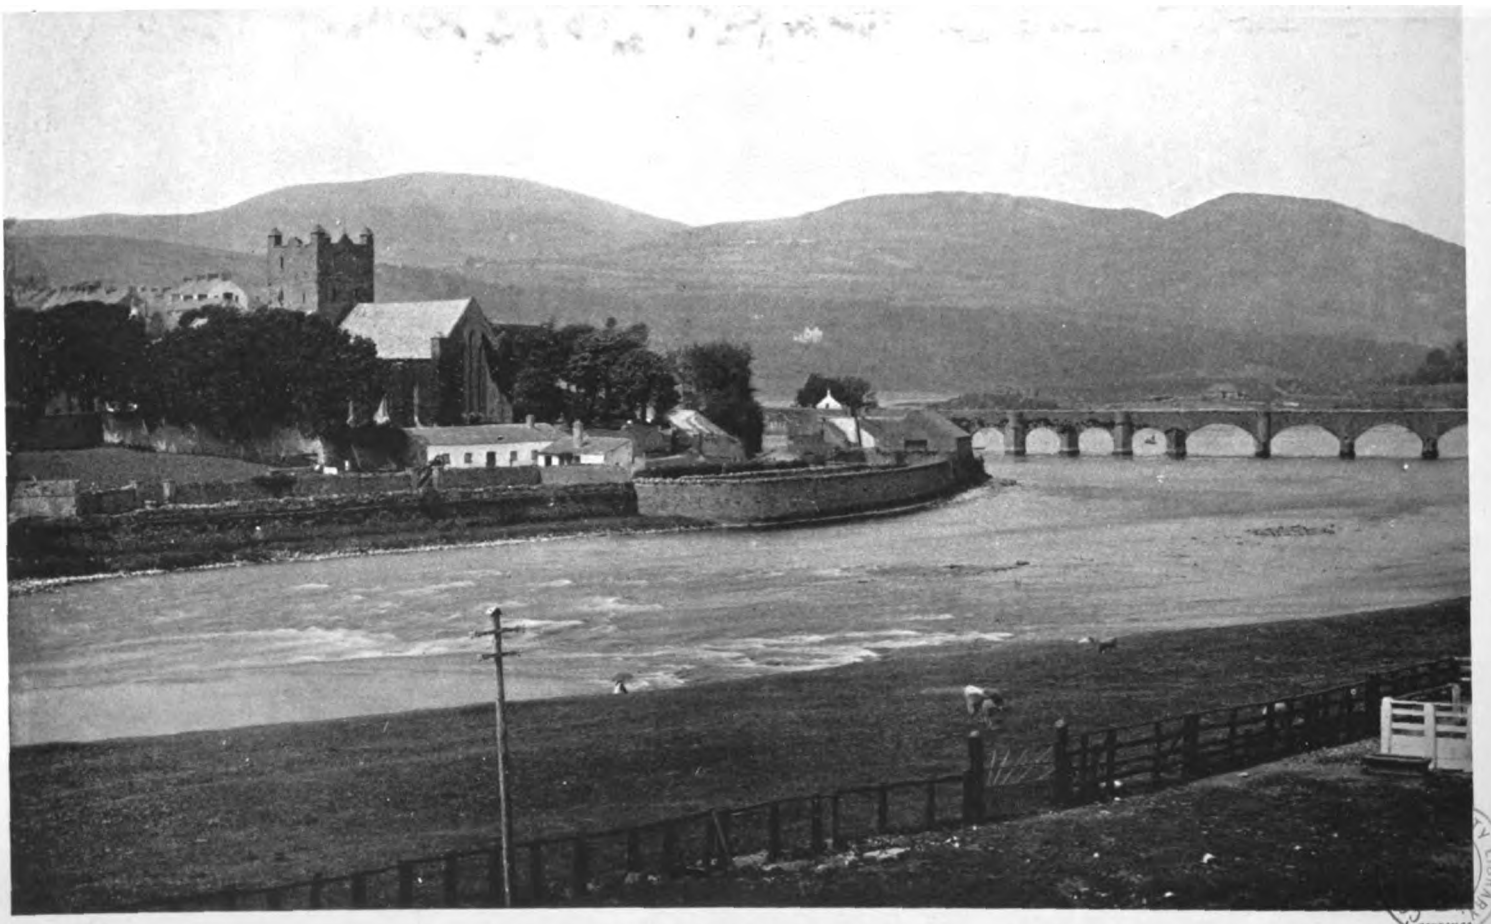
HOLIDAY RESORTS WITHIN EASY REACH OF DUBLIN.

JUDGING by the record number of entries, the Royal Dublin Society's great horse show to be held at Ball's Bridge next week promises to be a great success. Sportsmen and others who avail themselves of the favourite "short sea route" viâ Holyhead, would do well, before returning home, to take advantage of the occasion and pay a visit to a few of the famous beauty spots which lie in the vicinity of the Irish capital. From the holiday-maker's point of view Dublin is by far the most convenient centre. No fewer than four of the great Irish railroads radiate from this point, which gives the tourist an almost unlimited choice of scenery and route. For example, starting from the Amiens Street Terminus, the Great Northern Company's system traverses some of the most picturesque portions of the country. An interesting, and at the same time instructive, day excursion from Dublin may be made to the ancient city of Drogheda, whence the famous Valley of the Boyne may be conveniently explored. Drogheda itself is a spot of the utmost interest for the antiquarian, having from the most remote period of Irish history figured as a place of importance. In bygone days it was walled and strongly fortified, and even to-day portions of these ancient remains are to be seen in St. Lawrence's Gate and West Gate, both of which are in a good state of preservation. Several other monuments of the past exist, notably the ruined church of St. Mary, which dates from the reign of Edward I. Drogheda is only a matter of thirty odd miles from the Irish capital, and those who decide on this interesting excursion should take advantage of the special round tour tickets which the Great Northern Company make a feature of at a popular price. These tickets enable the tourist to visit Drogheda and take a delightful drive through the charming Valley of the Boyne, including the Battlefield, Dowth and New Grange, Mellifont and Monasterboice. New Grange affords perhaps one of the most striking examples

CARLINGFORD LOUGH.

One of the most picturesque sheets of water in the North of Ireland. Among other favourite health resorts on the shores of the Lough are Greenore, Rostrevor, and Warren Point.



KILLALOE, COUNTY LIMERICK.

Few spots in Ireland are richer in historical and archæological interest. One of the chief features of interest is the well-preserved cell of St. Lua, dating from the twelfth century, and forming a portion of the present Protestant Cathedral. The fine old bridge marks the position of the ford used in past ages by pilgrims to Killaloe.

Digitized by Google

of human skill and labour in Ireland, if not in Great Britain, approaching in point of age and grandeur the Egyptian Pyramids. The Sepulchural Tumulus of New Grange, located on the banks of the Boyne, occupies an area of nearly two acres, with an elevation of 70-ft. This ancient monument, the interior of which can be explored by the tourist, is composed of small stones and earth weighing, it is said, 180,000 tons. Monasterboice, as its name indicates, was once the site of a fine old monastery, founded early in the fourteenth century. The present day remains include a church, round tower, and various domestic buildings.

Those who have the time to spare can continue the exploration of this picturesque valley, visiting Navan, and Tara the ancient residence of the Ardrigh, or Chief King of Ireland, since the time of Slaigne the first of the Firbolg kings. The ruins of Bective Abbey possess great interest for the archæologist, and can be easily reached from Navan, as can Dangan, where the Duke of Wellington spent a portion of his boyhood days. This by no means exhausts the innumerable attractions of the Boyne Valley, wherein one could with profit spend a holiday of some duration.

Another pleasant excursion from Dublin is to Greenore, where, by the way, visitors returning from the horse show, can cross to Holyhead. Picturesquely situated at the head of Carlingford Lough, the London and North Western Railway Company have done much towards developing Greenore into a health and pleasure resort. Among other ways of improving the place, they have built a magnificent hotel overlooking the Lough, whose waters are largely affected by yachtsmen; while the excellent golf links have long since earned a wide reputation among golfers. Like Rostrevor and Warrenpoint, also situated on the same Lough, Greenore enjoys a good deal of shelter from the Mourne and Carlingford mountains, which practically enclose the Lough on all sides. For excursions in the North of Ireland, including the wild, romantic scenery of the Mourne mountains close by, even so far north as the Donegal Highlands, Greenore will be found a most convenient point of departure. The steam-ship service between Greenore and Holyhead is, undoubtedly, one of the best linking up the two countries, and the comfort of travel by the fast twin-screw steamers is all that one could wish for.

Between Greenore and Rostrevor there is a daily service of steamboats in operation during the summer season, and from the latter one can take a charming coach drive to Newcastle, where connection is made with the Belfast and County Down Railway. The drive is a most enjoyable one, as the road skirts the beautiful Mourne Mountains on one side and Carlingford Lough and the Irish Sea on the other. One has the choice of a number of different excursions in County Down, thanks to the careful way in which the Great Northern Company has studied the interests of the tourist.

Everyone interested in the history of the Church in Ireland should endeavour to pay a visit to the ancient city of Armagh and see its cathedral, churches, and splendid library stored with ancient MSS. Armagh is the ecclesiastical metropolis of Ireland. The See of Armagh is the Primatial See. Here the Primates of the Church of Ireland and of the Irish Roman Catholic Church reside in their respective palaces. Armagh is also par excellence the cathedral city of Ireland. Built upon two hills are two cathedrals, which differ from each other in point of age and style of architecture, and form a striking and impressive contrast when viewed from the surrounding hills. If possible the tourist should endeavour to arrange his visit to Armagh on a Sunday, as the cathedral music is unrivalled, even in Ireland. Among other famous spots which can be conveniently reached from the capital there are the Lakes of Killarney, access to which is afforded by three distinct routes. The Dublin, Wicklow, and Wexford line has arranged a series of cheap day trips to the lovely Vale of Avoca, including the Meeting of the Waters, Cronebane, More's Tree, and Avondale, also to Glendalough and the Seven Churches, which may be reached by way of the Vale of Clara and the Devil's Glen, or vid Glenmalure and the Vale of Clara. These excursions afford visitors to Dublin ample opportunities of visiting some of the most interesting and beautiful mountain, lake, and valley scenery.

Law ence.

THE GIANT'S CAUSEWAY.

This remarkable basaltic formation, one of the most widely visited spots on the North Irish Coast, is associated with a local legend ascribing it to the work of giants, who attempted to construct a colossal causeway across the Channel to Scotland. The origin of the legend is lost, but it is a curious coincidence that the basaltic rocks immediately opposite on the Scottish Coast are of an exactly similar nature. The fact has given rise among geologists to the supposition that, in distant ages, the two countries were united.

Digitized by Google

The Dublin Horse Show.

Lafayette.

THE EARL OF ROSSE, K.P., D.C.L., H.M.L.
Past President of the Society.

Chancellor.

THE RIGHT HON. LORD ARDILAUN, L.L.
President of the Royal Dublin Society.

Lafayette.

HIS EXCELLENCY LORD DUDLEY
Vice-Patron of the Society.

As with so many institutions in this world, the idea of the Royal Dublin Society, which was founded in 1731, originated in the brain of one man. But unlike so many other ideas that have subsequently proved to be for the benefit of both man and beast, the project which Mr. Thomas Prior of Rathdowney, in Queen's County, unfolded to a small circle of friends met with little or no opposition. From its inception the Royal Dublin Society was received with acclamation, and thanks to the energy and concentration of those who undertook the management of the bantling, it speedily made its influence felt.

Perhaps a partial explanation of the society's immediate success may be found in the fact that though the actual founder was an Irishman, his most energetic supporter was English. Dr. Samuel Madden, according to most authorities, was born in Wiltshire, though others have it that he was a native of Dublin. He was, it is true, the holder of a living in County Fermanagh, and lived there for rather more than half his life, but England claims the other half. And it was he who shared with Prior the labours and anxieties of founding the first society ever formed for the improvement of agriculture.

It was on September 30, 1731, that the society actually began its work of "Improving Husbandry Manufactures and other Useful Arts and Sciences," Mr. Thomas Prior reading a paper on "A New Method of Draining Marshy and Boggy Lands." In the first year of its existence the society started a horticultural nursery at Ballybough Bridge, and this establishment developed in sixty years into the present Royal Botanic Gardens at Glasnevin. This movement was largely fostered by Dr. Walter Wade, an enthusiastic botanist, whose catalogue of the plants indigenous to the county of Dublin was published by the Dublin Society.

Glasnevin was a manor annexed to the deanery of Christchurch, and the correct orthography is Glaseen-even, "the pleasant little field," an appropriate name for the site of a botanical garden. Tickel, the poet and friend of Addison, lived in the manor before it was disposed of to the Dublin Society, and one of the walks, planted under the direction of Addison, who was then in Dublin as secretary to Lord Sunderland, was called Addison's Walk.

The growth of the Dublin Society could be made the subject of a very long and interesting article, but for the present purpose it must suffice to say that before the institution had attained its centenary the botanical garden, the veterinary institution, the Leskean Museum, now known as the Museum Hibernicum, and the drawing-school, were all founded and flourishing, the system of premiums for encouragement of the various branches of husbandry and manufacture had been set upon a satisfactory scale, the society's headquarters, after many peregrinations had been finally fixed at Leinster

Chancellor.

THE RIGHT HON. LORD RATHDONNELL, H.M.L.
Vice-President of the Society.

Lafayette.

MR. CHARLES UNIACKE TOWNSEND, J.P.
Vice-President of the Society.

Lafayette.

SIR HOWARD GRUBB, M.A.I., F.R.S.
Vice-President of the Society.

Digitized by Google

Lafayette.

SIR THOMAS P. BUTLER, BART.
Vice-President of the Society.

Chancellor.

THE MARQUESS OF LONDONDERRY, K.G.
Vice-President of the Society.

Lafayette.

PROFESSOR D. J. CUNNINGHAM, M.D., F.R.S.
Vice-President of the Society.

Chancellor.

MR. GREENWOOD PIM, M.A.
Member of the Council (Section for Science).

Chancellor.

THE RIGHT HON. O'CONOR DON, P.C.
Member of the Council (Section for Agriculture).

Chancellor.

SIR CHARLES A. CAMERON, M.D.
Member of the Council (Section for Science).

Lafayette.

MR. ROBERT BRUCE
Agricultural Superintendent.

Chancellor.

RIGHT HON. LORD MASSY, D.L.
Member of the Agricultural Committee.

Lafayette.

MR. RICHARD MOSS, F.C.S.
Registrar and Chemical Analyst.

Digitized by Google

THE DUBLIN HORSE SHOW.

House, for which the sum of £20,000 was given. Lord Leinster's Irish residence was a magnificent place, and there were numbers who thought that the society had been ill-advised in taking it. However, within five years of its purchase, King George IV. became a patron of the society, granted it a charter, and gave it the prefix Royal, and the eighty-nine year old association sprang at once into great prominence.

The Horse Show, which is to-day such a big feature in the society's work, is of much later date. It was not indeed until 1866 that it was introduced; but, like most of the other undertakings of the society, it met with immediate success. It opens this year on August 22, and promises to be the largest show of hunters in the world.

be examined and judged. Wednesday and Thursday are the State days, when the show is visited by Royalty or by the Lord-Lieutenant. The judging of tandems and fast-trotting horses, and the jumping competitions, together with the parades of prize-winners, go to make up the business side of the two days; but Thursday, moreover, is "Ladies' Day," and given fine weather (which even Dublin enjoys on occasion), the grand stand enclosure in the jumping ground is a brilliant and memorable sight.

On Friday the Champion Jumping Competition takes place, and as on this day all the finest horse-flesh in the show is competing, it is the day which most attracts sportsmen. The total number of entries of horses this year is 1,156, as against 1,150 last year, and 30, 1868, the fixture has always been one of the most notable features of the Dublin season. In that year 368 horses were entered, which is rather different to this year's total. The number of spectators at that show is not, apparently, on record, but the payments for admission totalled £583, which was very satisfactory. In 1881 the show ground was moved to its present quarters at Ball's Bridge, and in that year there were over 600 entries, and the attendance numbered 17,736.

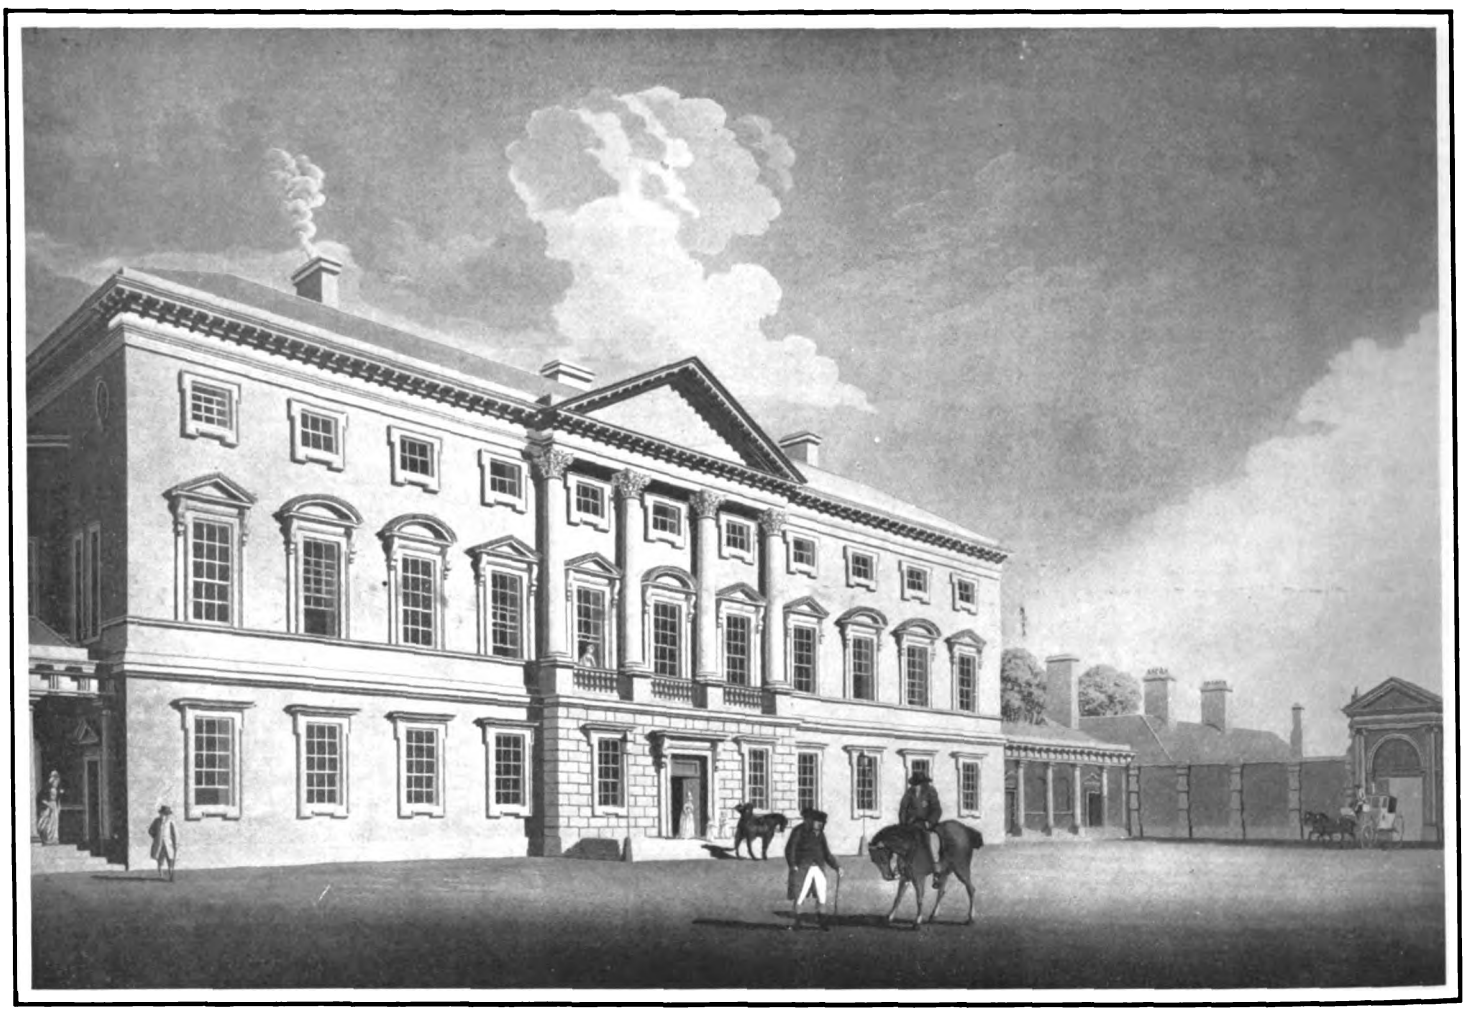
It may be mentioned that coincident with the Horse Show there is an Art Industries Exhibition, which comprises lace, embroidery, tapestry, wood-carving, metal and stained-glass work, which is extremely interesting, the more so that most of the exhibits are for sale. The entrance to the Art Industries Hall is off



LEINSTER HOUSE, DUBLIN, IN 1792.

In 1815 the Royal Dublin Society established their headquarters at these premises, which were then the property of the Dukedom of Leinster.

The Ball's Bridge Ground, which is only ten minutes' drive from the centre of the city, is one of the finest and best-equipped show grounds in Europe. There are over forty acres of ground, and with commendable foresight the society some years ago built a branch railway which connects the ground with the whole of the railway system of Ireland.

To appreciate the extent and variety of the show, visitors should attend on all the four days that it is open. But for those to whom this is impossible we give an outline of each day's proceedings, in order that they may choose their time for visiting it. Tuesday, the opening day, is the purchasers' day. Every horse in the show is brought out for adjudication, and there are as many as 1,500 horses to everything points to a successful and satisfactory gathering. The accumulated experience of the past forty years has served to show the Council exactly what to avoid and what to improve, and the Dublin Horse Show is to-day one of the pleasantest, one of the most interesting, and one of the most instructive functions in the world. And of its social success there can be no possible doubt. The ladies have seen to that, and seen to it very well.

The malicious rumour set in circulation a week or two back to the effect that the Dublin Horse Show was to be abandoned bore its own refutation, but it was with satisfaction that one learned officially that there was no truth in the report. Since the first Horse Show was held at Kildare Street on July 28, 29, and the Central Hall, to the right of the front entrance, and should the misfortune of a wet day descend upon the Horse Show Week, a very profitable hour or more may be spent in this hall.

Scarcely should it be necessary to remind our readers of the excellent service maintained throughout the year between Holyhead and Kingstown, and Holyhead and Dublin, by the London and North Western Railway. Thanks to the accelerated train and boat service now in operation, one can travel through from London to the Irish capital in a little over eight hours. There are two services daily, one leaving Euston at 8.30 a.m., the other at 8.45 p.m. For comfort and convenience, the Royal Mail Route to Dublin has no equal.

Digitized by Google

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

Bassano.

MISS MILLIE LEGARDE

Who, it is announced, will make her re-appearance in "The White Chrysanthemum," when that play is produced at the Criterion. Miss Legarde has been appearing under Mr. Frank Curzon's management for some years past, and has had a long run of successful parts. The photograph reproduced here was taken at Maidenhead, where Miss Legarde has been spending the summer.

Digitized by Google

SALMON-FISHING IN IRELAND.

HUGHEY'S POOL.

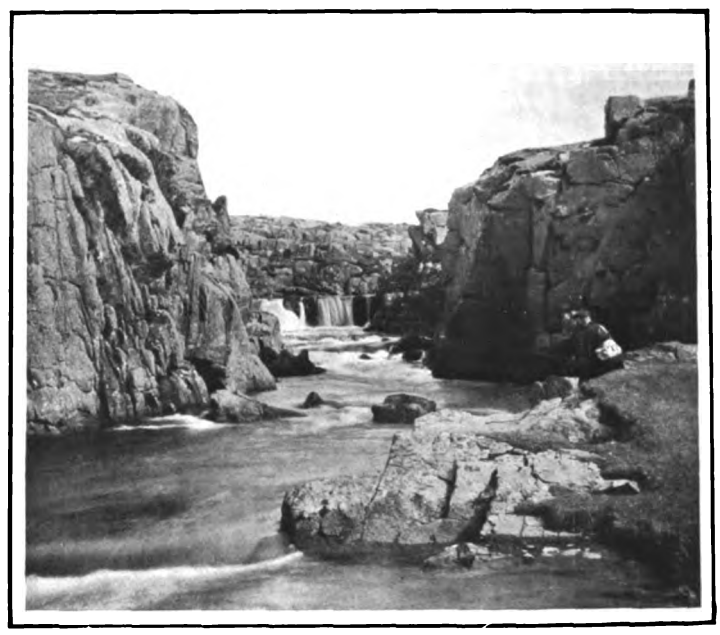
In places the Clady River widens out into broad pools, in the deeper parts of which the salmon love to lie.

THE BARRACK POOL.

For some distance below the hotel at Gweedore the river is quiet flowing, and the banks are covered with overhanging trees.

THE RIVER BELOW GWEEDORE STATION.

Gweedore, on the Lough Swilly Railway, is the nearest railway station, and hereabouts the river is very picturesque, and there are some grand pools.

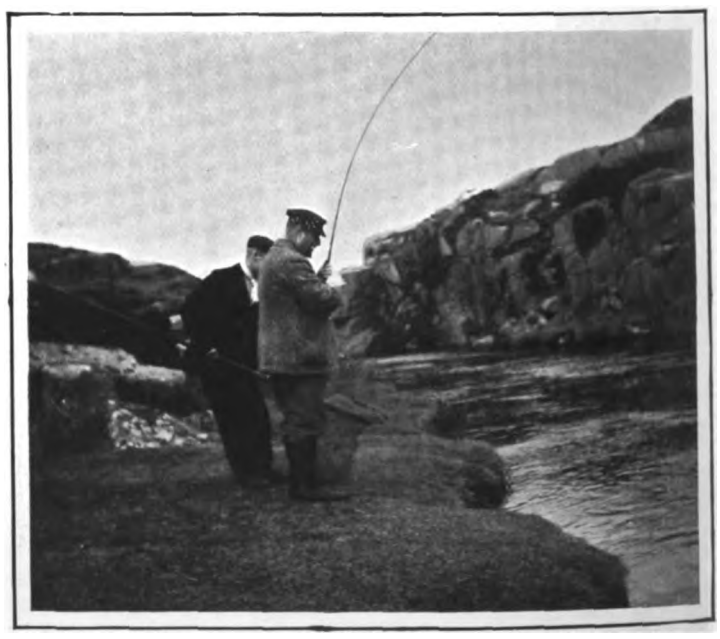


THE SPHINX POOL.

In the lower part of the river the pools are rockbound, and alternate with boulder-strewn flats; these are the best catches for salmon and sea-trout.

INTO A FISH ON THE SCHOOL-HOUSE POOL.

The most popular pool is the School-house, and it is, indeed, a grand bit of salmon water, and seldom fails to provide excellent sport.



SALMON-FISHING ON CARRY POOL.

The Carry Pool is another favourite, and ranks second only to the School-house Pool. The fish lie here preparatory to mounting the salmon leap which is just above.

Digitized by Google

THE CRICKET SEASON.

Copyright.

F. LAVER.

Few things this cricket season have been more remarkable than that which might almost be styled "The rise and fall of Frank Laver." Selected to come with the twelfth Australian team as its manager, Laver, within a few weeks of the commencement of its tour, was its only dangerous bowler. To-day he scarcely knows how to get a wicket. He was a splendid length bowler with a very deceptive slow ball that broke on pitching, and he was written of perfectly justly as the successor of Hugh Trumble. Up to the first Test Match he took over sixty wickets. Since then but twenty odd. Who can explain s ch form?

Copyright.

J. J. DARLING.

For the rest of his days Darling will remember how he could never get the better of F. S. Jackson when it came to tossing for choice of innings. Six times have these two great players been opposed this season, and on each occasion Jackson won he toss. Such a sequence is probably unique in the history of cricket. It certainly was a great handicap to the Australians so far as their chance of winning the rubber was concerned. Darling himself is as great a captain as ever, and still one of the greatest cricketers, when his side is in difficulties, the world has ever known.

Copyright.

L. O. S. POIDEVIN.

Lancashire have two Anglo-Australians in the county eleven. One, Kermode, came over from Australia for cricket purposes only, and plays professionally, the other, L. O S. Poidevin, came over to study for the medical profession, and plays cricket for amusement as an amateur. Recently he has been amusing himself greatly, chiefly at the expense of Somerset and Worcestershire. Against the latter he scored 72 and 157 not out, and took eight wickets for 64.

Copyright.

F. S. JACKSON.

This famous old Harrovian must have had a thoroughly enjoyable season. He has captained the English eleven to win the rubber. He has won the toss five times running in Test Matches. He has scored centuries twice, and also a score of over 80 not out once in Test cricket. He won the first Test at Nottingham by getting Hill, Noble, and Darling out in one over. What could a captain of the English eleven require more? He is still England's first all round Test Match player.

Digitized by Google

THE SERVICES.

THE temptation to indulge in platitudes regarding the exchange of visits between the British and French Fleets is great, and not to be altogether withstood by the impressionable writer of these notes. But he will at least endeavour to be brief, confining his remarks to one aspect only of this historical foregathering. The point he wishes to emphasise is the appearance, not of the British Admiral, not of the British Naval Officer generally, but of the British Bluejacket, in the character of an up-to-date diplomatist, and of Jack's singular success in that difficult rôle. Without any disparagement of the British private soldier, it must be conceded that his triumphs in this direction have not been very numerous or striking. During, and at the close of, a campaign he has done much to promote friendly feeling, and to pave the way for future cordial relations. Probably if there is one class of British-born folk for which the "irreconcileable" Boer entertains real respect it is the rank and file of the British Army. But it would, of course, have been a very doubtful experiment to let a battalion of British infantry loose in a French town in order to foster L'Entente Cordiale.

THAT the British Bluejacket rose splendidly to a great occasion is a mere platitude, pleasantly confirmed by various cheery instances, such as Jack's readiness to nurse the Breton babies, and the admirable audacity of one accomplished seaman who even made a speech in French! Of the conduct of British sailors, whether as guests or hosts, in such circumstances of international rapprochement it is almost needless to speak. But it is an interesting question whether all this can be satisfactorily accounted for by mere reference to the individual qualities of the British sailor, his "capacity for innocent enjoyment," his buoyancy of disposition, and his tendency to "chumminess." May it not be that the true explanation lies in the old, old fact, one which is too often lost sight of, that the sailor at work is on active service, and that there is something in active service which tends with us British folk to clarify the mind and widen the sympathies. The soldier, as we have seen, is no bad diplomat when on the war-path. The sailor ought to be a natural cementer of friendly negotiations, since his daily life enables him to regard the gravest complications from a standpoint always broad and often humorous.

COLONEL THE HON. J. SCOTT NAPIER, C.M.G., will be badly missed when he gives up his appointment as Inspector of Gymnasia at the end of the two months for which his term has been extended. Some idea of the difficulty the Army Council has had in getting the right man to follow Colonel Napier may be gathered from the fact that this is his third extension, and it will be remembered that almost equal difficulty was experienced in replacing Colonel Fox, who in some ways never has been satisfactorily replaced, notwithstanding the special distinction which his successor has attained. Colonel the Hon. John Scott Napier, of course, is well known outside the work of his appointment, for he has an excellent war record, both as a Gordon Highlander in Afghanistan and a Special Service Officer in South Africa. He has also been a candidate for Parliamentary honours, having unsuccessfully contested Central Edinburgh and Cockermouth. Colonel Napier is the brother of the present Lord Napier and Ettrick, and he married the widow of Major James Leith, V.C.

THE MUTINY AT THE NORE.

Richard Parker, President of the Committee of Delegates, tendering the list of grievances to Vice-Admiral Buckner, on board the "Sandwich," at the Nore.

(From a contemporary Mezzotint in the possession of Mr. T. H. Parker, 7, Spur Street, W.)

REAR-ADMIRAL GEORGE NEVILLE, M.V.O., who has succeeded Rear-Admiral Poë as Rear-Admiral Commanding the First Cruiser Squadron, belongs to a branch of the Braybrooke family, his father being the late Ralph Neville-Grenville, M.P., of Butleigh Court, Glastonbury. Admiral Neville is in his fifty-sixth year, and rose to flag rank last October, after a career which has brought him into intimate contact with members of the Royal family. He was twice round the world with the late Duke of Edinburgh in the "Galatea," and once as First Lieutenant of the "Comus." He also served under the Duke in the "Sultan," "Black Prince," "Minotaur," and "Vivid." He has been Captain of the "Dido," "Dolphin," "Australia," and of that fine battle-ship "Mars," when the latter belonged to the Channel Fleet. He has a double connection with the Antipodes for he commanded for a time the local Naval forces at Melbourne, and his wife is a daughter of the late D. Lloyd Jones of Victoria.

THE new Brigade-Major of the Guards' Brigade at Aldershot, Captain Maxwell Earle, D.S.O., is the son of the late Captain C. W. Earle, formerly of the Rifle Brigade. His mother is the well-known authoress of "Pot-Pourri from a Surrey Garden," which, with its two successors, has delighted many thousands of lovers of Nature and refinement. Through her Captain Earle is connected with the Clarendon family. He himself married in 1900 the sister of a brother officer in the Grenadier Guards, who is now Lord Loch. Captain Earle served in both the Matabele Campaign of 1893 and in the South African War. He is an old Marlburian, and will be very much at home in his new appointment, as he has served for a spell as regimental adjutant, and since January of last year has been Brigade-Major of the Brigade of Guards in the London District.

FROM the command of a sloop of about 1,000 tons to that of a first-class battleship in little over a year is fairly quick progress. This is the record of Captain E.G. Barton, who in the spring of 1904 was commanding the "Espiègle" on the China Station, became Captain in the following June, has been since at the College, and is now in command of the "Royal Oak." Captain Barton was on the war-path in the Soudan in 1884-85, having landed with the Naval Brigade for service in the Gordon Relief Expedition.

COLONEL J. W. GODFRAY, C.B., who has been definitely appointed Brigadier in charge of Administration, Scottish Command, won his C.B. in South Africa, where, at the latter end of the war, he was Chief Staff Officer of the 7th Division in the Orange River Colony. He is a Staff College graduate, and has seen much service in India as well as South Africa. He commanded the 1st Battalion of the King's Own Scottish Borderers, and was afterwards in charge of the 25th Regimental District. He has for some time past been officiating in his present appointment.

Digitized by Google

THE FÊTES AT PORTSMOUTH.

Cribb, Southsea.

THE "MASSÉNA" ALONGSIDE THE SOUTH RAILWAY JETTY.

The whole of the French Fleet was accommodated in Portsmouth Harbour for the latter part of the visit to this country, and the flag-ship, the last to enter port, was berthed at the South Railway Jetty, the point at which the Royal yachts are always moored for the reception of Royalty.

Digitized by Google

The City of London Hospital.

THE DUKE AND DUCHESS OF CONNAUGHT OPENING THE NEW NURSES' HOME.

THE DEPARTURE OF THE ROYAL PARTY AFTER THE CEREMONY.

The City of London Hospital, originally founded in 1848, now contains 164 beds. The new nurses' home, opened recently by the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, provides for the accommodation of forty sisters and nurses; and, to clear the liabilities in connection ther with, the sum of about £3,000 is required.

Digitized by Google

DOMESTIC PROBLEM SOLVED.

Grape-Nuts

HOW and WHY?

Because:

They can be served direct from packet to plate. This eliminates the hot stove and work of cooking.

Their nutritive value is high ("LANCET" analysis on application).

The starch is changed to grape sugar, which agrees equally with the strongest man and weakest child.

The crisp, delicate particles possess a unique, delicious flavour.

The economy of GRAPE-NUTS is marked. 7d. per packet at all grocers.

Try this Ideal Summer Food.

ALWAYS READY FOR USE. NEVER REQUIRES GRINDING.

KROPP RAZOR

Each Razor in a Case.

BLACK HANDLES, 5/6. IVORY HANDLES, 7/6.

A PLEASURE TO USE.

Wholesale: OSBORNE, GARRETT & CO., London, W.

Llangammarch Wells,

CENTRAL WALES.

(The British Nauheim.)

An Ideal Spa for the Treatment of Heart Disease, Gout, and Rheumatism.

THE LAKE HOTEL

A first-class Hotel situated in extensive Private Grounds and lighted throughout with Electricity.

Telegraphic Address: "BARIUM," LLANGAMMARCH WELLS.

Apply MANAGEMENT.

GOLF CLUB WITHIN FIVE MINUTES' WALK.

THE CURRENT NUMBER OF THE

PLAY PICTORIAL

forms a very complete Souvenir of

"LEAH KLESCHNA,"

one of the most successful plays of the year, and contains fine

PORTRAITS OF MISS LENA ASHWELL,
MR. LEONARD BOYNE,
MR. CHARLES WARNER,
MR. HERBERT WARING,
AND ALL THE MEMBERS OF THE COMPANY.

The Story of the Play. About the People in the Play.

No. 36, The Play Pictorial, "LEAH KLESCHNA."

NOW READY. 6D. NET.

OF ALL NEWSAGENTS, BOOKSTALLS, AND BOOKSELLERS.

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

A VALUABLE aid to the understanding of the difficulties of modern Russia is Mr. R. Nisbet Bain's historical work, "The First Romanovs" (Constable), in which he tells the story of the ruling house of Russia. "Russia," says Mr. Bain, "owes everything to the Tsars"—more than any other nation to its rulers, and the story of the Romanovs is the story of Russia. They are all interesting men—in their strength or in their weakness; but the mind turns inevitably to Peter the Great, the man who began to make Russia "the most easterly of the western nations, not the most westerly of the eastern," as Mr. Rudyard Kipling has declared her still to be. The story of that tremendous life—tremendous in its heroism and its brutality, its brilliant genius and its detestable crimes—is told by Mr. Nesbit Bain with nothing less than brilliance. Through it all, crime and debauchery, unspeakable cruelty and gigantic lusts, ran the determination to make, at any cost, a nation of his peoples. He rode rough-shod over their dearest prejudices; he governed like a whirlwind; he followed no one's will but his own, and he tortured and murdered his son for not holding with his own views of progress; but he did a mighty work. A great brute and a great king, whose life has nowhere been better told than in this most interesting and scholarly volume.

The Tsars of Russia.

* * *

MRS. MARY E. MANN has added another success to a long list. In "The Parish Nurse" (Methuen) she tells of a strong woman, Emily Geldart by name, who takes to parish nursing as an outlet for her energies, and endures many things, from the indifference and dislikes of the poor, and the vulgarity of the parson's snobbish wife. But that is not the main interest of the story. The question is, being a strong and capable woman, which will she marry?—a weak, shuffling kind of man who needs bracing up and supporting through life, or a big bully of a South African millionaire with a shocking record, who treats her at first too insultingly for words, and goes on to domineer and "boss" her throughout. The betting would seem to be all one way; but what actually happens we will leave our readers to discover for themselves, promising that they will find it hard to put the book down till they know. Mrs. Mann has written a capital novel, which expresses very plain views about the condition, mental and physical, of the rural poor, and throws a strong light as well on a woman's view of woman.

The Parish Nurse.

* * *

VERY delightful reading is "The Diary of a Girl in France in 1821" (John Murray), written and illustrated by Mary Browne of Tallentire Hall, Cumberland, who has been dead just eighty years. Mary was only fourteen when she visited France, but she made good use of her eyes, pen and pencil, and the delicious naïveté of her comments and her pictures make her book one of the most amusing we have met for a long time. She had a poor opinion of France and the French, and does not hesitate to express it. It was in the summer of Napoleon's death that her father's party of thirteen travelled slowly in two carriages, which took in the six children, a governess, nurse, cook, man-servant, and courier. "Squire" Browne did "the grand tour" in good style and with a lavishness of expense hardly credible in these days of cheap travelling. Mary Browne heard Napoleon's "last confessions" cried in the streets of Paris, and the pilgrims reached home just in time for George IV.'s postponed coronation. She saw its "counterfeit presentment" at Drury Lane, and tells us, "There was a great deal of music and a large harmonica. The King went up to the altar, and they put on him a purple crown. In the third scene there came in a sailor who sang a curious song. The fourth scene was the banquet. There were gold plates, and such a number of lights that they made my eyes sore. It was altogether beautiful. It was very hot."

A Little Francophobe.

* * *

TUESDAY in the present week was the 136th anniversary of the birth of Napoleon, whose portraits exceed in number those of any man who every lived. New portraits great and small are constantly turning up. The most important discovery of this sort made for many years is that of a beautiful water-colour on rice paper, executed in 1815 by a Chinese artist, who resided at Fontainebleau, both before and after that year. The picture was given by the author to his friend Henry Schopin, the well-known painter, who died as recently as 1880. This portrait, which is now reproduced by permission of its present possessor, has been recently purchased by M. Godefroy Mayer of 41, Rue Blanche, Paris.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Copyright.

A PORTRAIT OF NAPOLEON BY A CHINESE ARTIST.

Presented by the artist to Henry Schopin, the famous French battle painter.

Napoleon.

* * *

A GOOD story of life at a public school is one of the most difficult things to write that can be imagined. Parents and guardians are fond of saying that a school is "a little world"; but the fact is that a school is a very different place from a world. It is much less various, and at the same time much more. The range of its incidents is very narrow; the problems, contests, and what not which make the stuff of a novel, are much fewer and more circumscribed; friendship is a poor substitute for love, and the issues, though great in themselves, are not nearly so great in their relative importance to the world. On the other hand, the difficulty is increased by the fact that the character of boys is not formed. It is in a constant state of flux, developing, slipping back, contradicting itself at every turn. And so, as we look down the long list of school stories, we find none that is anything like entirely satisfactory. The best, far and away the best, is, of course, "Tom Brown's School-days"; but it is many years since that was written. "Eric" was never "anything like it," and may be left out of count. "Stalkey and Co." and "Tim" both had their good points, but neither could be accepted as at all a fair or comprehensive picture of school-life, and Mr. H. A. Vachell's "The Hill," published in the spring, was too carefully arranged, too mannered, too much the work of an experienced novelist, to be entirely acceptable. Mr. Lionel Portman's "Hugh Rendal" (Alston Rivers), though written with far less literary ability than some of the others we have mentioned, comes nearer than any of them to giving a just picture of public school-life. His school is called "Larne"; which of the public schools is meant we know not, and, of course, the ways of one school are different from those of another. But Mr. Portman's book, besides being interesting and entertaining throughout, is remarkably faithful to the truth of its subject.

A Good School Story.

* * *

AN interesting, if not very deep or scholarly, book is Mr. John Fyvie's "Some Famous Women of Wit and Beauty" (Constable). The sub-title is "A Georgian Galaxy," and of the eight ladies dealt with in its pages, all were, at any rate, born before Queen Victoria came to the throne. The eight are these: Mrs. Fitzherbert, the unacknowledged wife of George IV., of whom gossipy Mr. Creeney, as readers of his letters will remember, had a good deal to say; Lady Hamilton; Mrs. Montagu, whom Dr. Johnson called "the Queen of the Blue-stockings," and who brought the salon to London (her letters are to be published in the autumn); Lady Blessington; Mrs. Lennox, the author of "The Female Quixote," a skit on old romances, very popular in its day; Mrs. Grote, the historian's wife; Mrs. Norton, the "real Diana of the Crossways," the poetess on whose unhappy life Mr. Meredith founded part of the story of his famous heroine; and Lady Eastlake. Each of the papers is well written and interesting, rather chatty than heavy, and the portraits of the ladies are an attractive feature of a very handsome book.

Some Famous Women.

---

BOOKS TO READ.

Hugh Rendal, by Lionel Portman. (Alston Rivers.)
Alton of Somasco, by Harold Bindloss (Long.)
A Jay of Italy, by Bernard Capes. (Methuen.)
Vivien, by W. B. Maxwell. (Methuen.)
Preludes and Symphonies, by Oliver Grey. (Routledge.)
Rhymes and Rondeaux, by J. E. B. (Glynn Grylls.)
The Cities of Umbria, by Edward Hutton. (Methuen.)
John Henry Smith, by F. U. Adams. (Hutchinson.)
Brittany, by Mortimer and Dorothy Menpes. (Black.)
The Parish Nurse, by Mary E. Mann. (Methuen.)
Some Famous Women of Wit and Beauty, by John Fyvie (Constable.)
The Man Who Won, by Mrs. Baillie Reynolds. (Hutchinson.)
The Diary of a Girl in France, by Mary Browne. (Murray.)

Digitized by Google

NEW ZEALAND

THE BRIGHTER BRITAIN.

A NEW COUNTRY of marvellous beauty, with a fertile soil and a splendid climate. No extremes of heat or cold.

No droughts. An abundance of water, yet no rainy season.

An Evergreen Land rich in natural products.

A GREAT SHEEP, CATTLE AND DAIRYING COUNTRY.

Cheap farms with helpful assistance to farmers by the Government. Reduced steamer fares from the United Kingdom to New Zealand for persons with small capital.

No private monopoly of Public Utilities; the Government owns and operates Railways, Telegraphs, Telephones and Insurance.

No Lock-outs! No Strikes!! Employment disputes adjusted by Arbitration!!!

NEW ZEALAND IS THE WONDERLAND OF THE WORLD

Its Thermal Sights are unique in their extent, beauty and weirdness.

The Mammoth Geyser "Waimangu" (Black Water) hurls an immense mass of boiling water, mud and stones over 1,000 feet high.

Hot Mineral Water and Mud Baths; The Curative Baths of Rotorua, Te Aroha and Hanmer are world famous. Government doctors in attendance.

Baths. Gardens. Games. Music.

and picturesque. Here are lakes of great size and depth—canyons that surpass the greatest of other lands—dense forests with a tropical profusion of ferns and flowers—innumerable waterfalls—monoliths of granite many thousands of feet in height—glaciers, snowfields, and the peerless Sounds, with their 400 miles of inside sailing distance.

TRANSIT is convenient throughout New Zealand. Government railways, Express trains, Pullman and Dining Cars. Excellent coastal steamers. Splendid coaching routes. Hotels, good; charges moderate. Government Hotels, Spas, and Accommodation Houses in many of the principal tourist resorts.

Large Mail Steamers with every modern comfort and convenience leave Great Britain for New Zealand fortnightly. Duration of direct journey, 40 days; via Suez and Australia, 44 days; via Canada, 32 days; via San Francisco, 28 days.

The best time to visit New Zealand is during the summer months, from November to April.

ALL INFORMATION regarding Travel, Tourist Routes, Spas, Baths, Sport, etc., etc., is supplied free of charge by the GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENT OF TOURIST AND HEALTH RESORTS. Head Office, WELLINGTON, NEW ZEALAND. Branch Offices throughout the Colony. Information regarding access to New Zealand, Reduced Steamer

HAULING KAURI LOGS THROUGH BUSH, KAURI FOREST, NORTH AUCKLAND.

FELLING KAURI TREE, NORTH AUCKLAND, KAURI FOREST.

WAIRUA FALLS, WAIRUA RIVER, NORTH AUCKLAND.

The ALPINE SCENERY of New Zealand combines the distinguishing features of Switzerland, Norway and America. The Southern Alps extend for 300 miles. Mt. Cook, the highest peak, is belted by the largest glaciers in the temperate regions—the Tasman being 18 miles long and 2 miles wide. Near the foot of Mt. Cook is the Hermitage Hotel. Government guides, Alpine huts, and all necessary Alpine equipment available for use of visitors.

The LAKES of New Zealand are most pleasing in their charm of colour, contour and environment. Rotorua, Rotoiti, Taupo, and Waikaremoana in the North Island; Manapouri, Wakatipu, Te Anau, Wanaka, Kanieri and Mahinapua in the South Island are the most notable. The Lakes of the South Island are surrounded by mountain scenery of singular beauty and magnificence. Steamers and Power Launches. Good Hotels.

The WEST COAST FIORDLAND is indescribably wild

Fares, Settlement Commerce, Industries, Travel, etc., etc., also supplied at the Office of the High Commissioner for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, London—Mr. J. G. Gow, Commercial Agent for New Zealand, Durban, South Africa, also supplies general information respecting New Zealand.

Minister for Tourist and Health Resorts: Hon. Sir Joseph G. Ward, K.C.M.G. Superintendent: T. E. Donne, Wellington, New Zealand. The Superintendent invites correspondence.

See Tourist Department's "Itinerary of Travel" and descriptive Guide Books.

An International Exhibition of Products, Manufactures, Arts, Sciences, Amusements, etc., etc., is to be held by the Government of New Zealand in Hagley Park, Christchurch City, commencing 1st November, 1906, and terminating April, 1907. Full particulars obtainable from the High Commissioner for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, S.W.

OKOROIRE.

HOT SPRINGS AND SANATORIUM HOTEL.

One of the finest Health Resorts in the Thermal District.

The first place of interest en route to Rotorua, New Zealand.

Delightful NATURAL HOT MINERAL BATHS, free to Guests. Sufferers from Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Affection of the Eyes, Skin Diseases, etc., are often permanently cured by these waters.

CLIMATE.—Beautifully clear and bracing atmosphere, charming surroundings.

SPORT.—The Streams in the hotel grounds are exceedingly well-stocked with Trout. Plenty of Game, viz: Pheasants, Virginian Quail, Wild Duck, Hares, and Deer. Lawn Tennis, Golf, and Croquet.

The drive from Okoroire to Rotorua is one of the most beautiful in New Zealand.

T. MARTIN,
Manager.

NEW ZEALAND.

THE GRAND HOTEL, ROTORUA.

Situated in the Centre of the Hot Lakes District.

Patronised by T.R.H. The Prince and Princess of Wales.

THE HOTEL is in the immediate neighbourhood of the beautifully laid-out Government Gardens, wherein are situated the celebrated "Priest," "Rachel," "Postmaster," "Duchess," and other mineral baths, the curative properties of which are world famous. It has magnificent and lofty apartments, spacious promenade, balconies, snug alcoves, and luxuriously-appointed drawing, music, conversation, reading, smoking, and billiard rooms, perfect sanitation, and is lighted throughout by electricity.

BATH CHAIRS and attendance provided to convey invalids to or from the various bath houses. Tariff 12/6 per day inclusive.

W. J. LEES, Manager.

THE GEYSER HOTEL,

WHAKAREWAREWA, ROTORUA.

Situated in close proximity to the wonderful Geysers and Maori Settlement.

Visitors staying at the Geyser Hotel have continued opportunity of witnessing them as they can be seen plainly from the verandah of the Hotel, also of studying native life and customs.

The Hotel possesses its own private hot and cold curative mineral baths of which the most valued are the "Spout," "Oil," and "Carlsbad" Baths.

It has lately been greatly enlarged and re-furnished in a most comfortable manner. Electric light is established throughout the hotel and baths.

Coaches run regularly between Whakarewarewa, the Rotorua Sanatorium, and Government Gardens.

Tariff 10s. per day or £3 per week, inclusive. For a lengthened stay terms can be arranged

CHAS. E. NELSON, Proprietor.

Digitized by Google

Leaves from a Collector's Note-book.

No. LIV.—THE MINIATURES AND MINIATURISTS OF FIVE CENTURIES.

SAMUEL COOPER
Miniature painter, 1609-1672.

ISAAC OLIVER
Miniaturist to the King, 1556-1617.

CATHERINE OF BRAGANZA.
By Samuel Cooper, 1609-1672.

IN 1905 there have been no great miniature dispersals as in 1904, when record prices were obtained for exquisite specimens of the captivating art of Hans Holbein, the Hilliards, the Olivers, the Petitots, and the Coopers, who all lived and flourished in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. There is no artistic hobby more engrossing, or more costly, than the collecting of this particular kind of portraits, and the miniature fanciers of Europe are under a deep debt of gratitude to Mr. J. J. Foster, who, at the close of the nineteenth and the commencement of the twentieth century, has produced two great standard works dealing exhaustively with his favourite subject, both of which have achieved the success they richly merit. "British Miniature Painters and their Works," which appeared in 1898 has, at any rate as far as the édition de luxe is concerned, since doubled in value, and it was followed five years later by a still more important production entitled "Miniature Painters, British and Foreign, with some account of those who practised in America in the eighteenth century." More than this, it is an open secret, that as the guiding spirit of "Dickinson's," the historic fine art firm in Bond Street, Mr. Foster has done much to keep alive the "sacred lamp" of miniature painting, and it is mainly owing to his exertions that miniatures are still obtainable in this age of photogravure and process-plates, by no means unworthy of the traditions of the great maestri of whose handiwork a series of examples is now given with Mr. Foster's permission.

The miniature of Isaac Oliver, by himself, is the property of his Majesty the King, who possesses one of the finest collections in Europe. The Coopers painted Cromwell and "the Merry Monarch," fair Royalist ladies, and stern parliamentary leaders impartially. The typical example of his art, now reproduced, belongs to the Duke of Portland. Welbeck, like Windsor, is rich in treasures of this kind. The portrait of Catherine of Braganza is by the same artist, who limned the rugged features of the Lord Protector.

Miniature painters always seem to have enjoyed an unusually large share of Court patronage. James I., Mr. Foster tells us, granted Hilliard a patent couched in the following terms: "Whereas our well-beloved servant, Nicholas Hilliard, gentleman, our principal drawer of small portraits, and embosser of our medals in gold, in respect of his extraordinary skill in drawing, graving, imprinting, etc., we have granted unto him our special licence for twelve years to invent, make, grave, and imprint any picture of our image of our Royal Family, with power to take a constable and search for any pictures, plates, or works, printed, sold, or set up." The eighteenth century may be described as the golden age of miniature painting, and was certainly the period when the "small paintings" of the miniaturist were specially in vogue, not only as heirlooms and souvenirs, but for the decoration of snuff-boxes and bonbonnières. It includes such great names as those of Bernard Lens, C. F. Zincke, Osias Humphrey, R.A., John Smart, Miss Sutherland, G. Engleheart, Angelica Kauffman, J. Meyer, Samuel Shelley, Mr. and Mrs. Cosway, A. Plimer, James Nixon, W. Wood, and many others. Nelson collectors should not omit to look at the exceptionally beautiful miniature of Lady Hamilton by Samuel Shelley, with the date 1799 and his name and address in Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, on the back, now the property of Mr. F. T. Sabin. Some of the artists who flourished in the early part of the last century did something more than achieve a respectable mediocrity. Three names stand out pre-eminently, viz., those of Andrew Robertson, his pupil Sir W. C. Ross, R.A., and R. Thorburn, A.R.A. Robertson painted Sir David Wilkie, and Ross executed some time in the "thirties" a delightful portrait of the Baroness Burdett-Coutts (still happily with us). The list of his sitters fills no less than five folio pages of print. Between 1844 and 1854 he painted miniatures of Queen Victoria, King Edward VII., and nearly every member of the Royal Family. Although not empowered, like Hilliard, "to take a constable" and "search out" the portraits of his rivals, he basked for many years in the sunshine of Royal favour.

Robert Thorburn, A.R.A., who died only twenty years ago, was almost equally successful. Exhibitions of miniatures have almost invariably proved attractive. The most important of them owe their inception to the enterprise of Mr. Foster and the House of Dickenson.

B.

AN AMERICAN MINIATURE
Of the eighteenth century.

A REMARKABLY FINE MINIATURE
Of the eighteenth century.

THE COUNTESS OF LEITRIM.
Early nineteenth century.

Digitized by Google

MALLETT
& SON

hold and offer for sale specimens of the

HIGHEST QUALITY

OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE

as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.

EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.

AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.

(Two hours from Paddington.)

Old Brass Stand and Lamp.

THE MISSES

H. & I. WOOLLAN

(Under Royal Patronage)

are showing a

UNIQUE

Collection of

Antiques.

Chippendale, Sheraton, and Hepplewhite Furniture. Worcester and Lowestoft Services. Lace, Glass, etc.

Showrooms: First Floor.

28, BROOK STREET, GROSVENOR SQUARE, W.

CATALOGUES OF

ILLUSTRATED BOOKS, VIEWS, PORTRAITS, etc.,

GRATIS.

Books and Engravings Bought.

JAMES RIMELL & SON,

DEALERS IN OLD BOOKS AND ENGRAVINGS,

53, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON, W.

FOR SALE.

96 VOLUMES OF

THE ANNUAL REGISTER,

Numbered 2 to 97 inclusive, dates 1759 to 1855.

BOUND WHOLE CALF. IN GOOD CONDITION.

Offers to No. A 1000, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

To Portrait & Print Collectors & Extra-Illustrators.

Kindly inspect stock or signify wants to

GEORGE SUCKLING, 13, Garrick Street

(next door to Garrick Club).

Mr. SUCKLING undertakes inlaying, arranging and binding of extra illustrated books.

AUTOGRAPHS—HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS.

The oldest Dealers in Europe. For Catalogues, issued monthly, and all information write at once to

M. NOEL CHARAVAY,

3, RUE DE FURSTENBERG, PARIS,

where the "AMATEUR DES AUTOGRAPHES," a valuable Monthly Publication, may also be obtained.

JAMES TREGASKIS,

"The Caxton Head," 232, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.

RARE BOOKS,
MEDIÆVAL MANUSCRIPTS,
DOCUMENTS OF LITERARY & HISTORICAL INTEREST,
ORIGINAL DRAWINGS,
ENGRAVINGS,
AMERICANA,
CURIOSITIES,
ANTIQUITIES,
OBJECTS OF ART.

Catalogues Price Sixpence.

PORTRAITS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.

ENGLISH—FOREIGN—AMERICAN.

RARE ENGRAVINGS OF ALL SORTS.

WRITE FOR CATALOGUES OR VISIT THE SHOWROOMS OF

M. GODEFROY MAYER,

41, RUE BLANCHE, PARIS.

NEW CATALOGUE OF CHOICE AND RARE ILLUSTRATED and other BOOKS, COLOURED PRINTS, etc.,

SENT POST FREE BY—

GEORGE GREGORY, Bath.

(Bookseller to H.M. Queen Alexandra.)

WANTED, Sporting Magazine, Vol. 30 (1807); also Vol. 37 (1810-11).

Bookbinding.—The Bedford Bindery.

OLD-ESTABLISHED FIRM.

VERY MODERATE PRICES. Special attention paid to extra-illustrated works.

SPECIMENS ON VIEW.

G. F. AYLING, 1A CAMBRIDGE ST., EDGWARE ROAD, W.

MAGGS BROS.,

109, STRAND, W.C., LONDON, ENGLAND.

Dealers in RARE BOOKS AND FINE LIBRARY EDITIONS OF STANDARD AUTHORS, Voyages and Travels, Early Printed Books, 1st Editions of 17th, 18th, and 19th Century writers, Illustrated Works. Also Rare Portraits, Line, Stipple, Mezzotints, and Colour Engravings, and Autographs.

Recently issued—Illustrated Catalogues of Rare Books, Voyages and Travels, Engravings, Autographs. Price 6d. each.

THE KING'S COLLECTORS' REGISTER.

For Spaces in the Register apply to "THE EDITOR."

WANTED.

AUTOGRAPHS AND LETTERS.

Wanted, Autograph Letters of Theatrical People, especially Quin, George Colman the younger, and Miss Farren.—825, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

William Bodham Donne, any good autograph letters.—826, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Complete copies of Fairburn's Journal of Naval Occurrences.—154, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Freemasonry, Constitutions of. 4to, 1784; in boards preferred. £1 10s. offered.—174, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Jest Books relating to Napoleonic Wars with coloured caricatures of Buonaparte. 10s. 6d. each offered.—175, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

The Vocal Magazine. Vol. II., 1778. 10s. offered.—176, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Boxiana. Vols. IV. and V. In perfect condition, with plates. 50s. offered.—177, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Any book or pamphlet relating to the art of colour pictures on glass, 1750-1805. 5s. offered.—178, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Early Doulton Pottery. Also any Pamphlets relating to the firm.—525, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

TAPESTRY, FURNITURE, Etc.

Carved Chippendale Bureau Bookcase—412, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Naval Prints published by any of the following:—C. Sheppard, 74, Little Britain; C. Taylor, Holborn (date 1791); J. Fairburn, 110 and 146, Minories (1800-1838); Tabart and Co., London; E. Rushton, Paradise Street, Liverpool; W. Belch, Bridge Street, Boro'; I. Houlston, Strand; R. Sly, 41, Union Street, Somers Town; J. Marshall, Aldermary Churchyard, London.—237, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Good Impressions with good margins of engravings of old London, especially Covent Garden, the Temple, the Strand, Lincoln's Inn.—249, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Boxing. Small old Portraits Cribb and Molyneux.—255, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Good specimen of Baxter prints with a short biography of Baxter—257, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Picturesque views of Dorsetshire (coloured), 4to, published by Love, Weymouth, about 1800. £1 10s. offered.—258, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Rare colour portraits of Nelson.—260, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Bristol Theatre. Old playbills, 1855-57, with name of Marie Wilton (Lady Bancroft) in cast.—748, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Book Plates—Naval, Masonic, Bath, Dorset.—749, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Fan papers relating to Nelson or Buonaparte, 1795-1815. Liberal offer.—751, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

BOOKS.

Scrap Book containing almost complete collection of theatrical notices from 1850 to 1865. In good condition.—132A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Ten Battersea Boxes with portraits. What offers.—522, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Set of Champagne Glasses, beautifully cut.—523, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Small Library, theatrical, naval, topographical principally. Would disperse or sell en bloc.—747A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

TAPESTRY.

Venetian Chair, XVIIIth Century.—409A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

SOME interesting, and at the same time instructive, facts concerning the motor-bus were disclosed to shareholders at the half-yearly meeting of the London Road Car Company last week. According to the chairman's statement there had been an increase of nearly 500,000 passengers during the six months under review, which brought the total up to 37,377,896, thus constituting a record for the company. The receipts per car, too, had shown a corresponding increase, the average weekly revenue amounting to £17 3s. 7d. per car, against £16 8s. 2d. for the corresponding period last year. It is, to say the least, most satisfactory to learn that this excellent showing was largely the result of the recent adoption of the motor-bus. Although the number of motors now running was relatively small—twenty-eight motor buses are now in operation—they had, nevertheless, carried over 1,000,000 passengers in their new type of conveyance. That the motor-bus has come to stay no sane person can possibly doubt, and it is only a question of time before its general adoption on the various bus routes in the metropolis, and in the provincial cities as well, becomes an accomplished fact. Indeed, the outlook for Road Car shareholders is distinctly encouraging, for with the prospect of a largely-augmented service during the next six months, they may reasonably look forward to a still further improvement in the company's earnings.

* * *

Apropos the motor-omnibus, we understand that the London and North Western Railway Company's new motor service, covering the district between Connah's Quay and Mold in North Wales, has, since its recent inauguration, met with a good deal of support. The cars were built by the Milnes-Daimler Company, and are exactly similar in type to the popular "Vanguard" buses running between Cricklewood and the Elephant and Castle. They are engined with four-cylinder 24 h.p. Mercédès, and are painted in chocolate and white, the well-known colours of the London and North Western Railway. Our photograph was taken outside the Red Lion Hotel at Northop, the nearest station to which is distant three miles. The North Western Company has also recently started a steam goods lorry service between Holywell Station and Holywell Town, which is nearly two miles from the station. It is proposed to run a service of motor-buses in the near future.

* * *

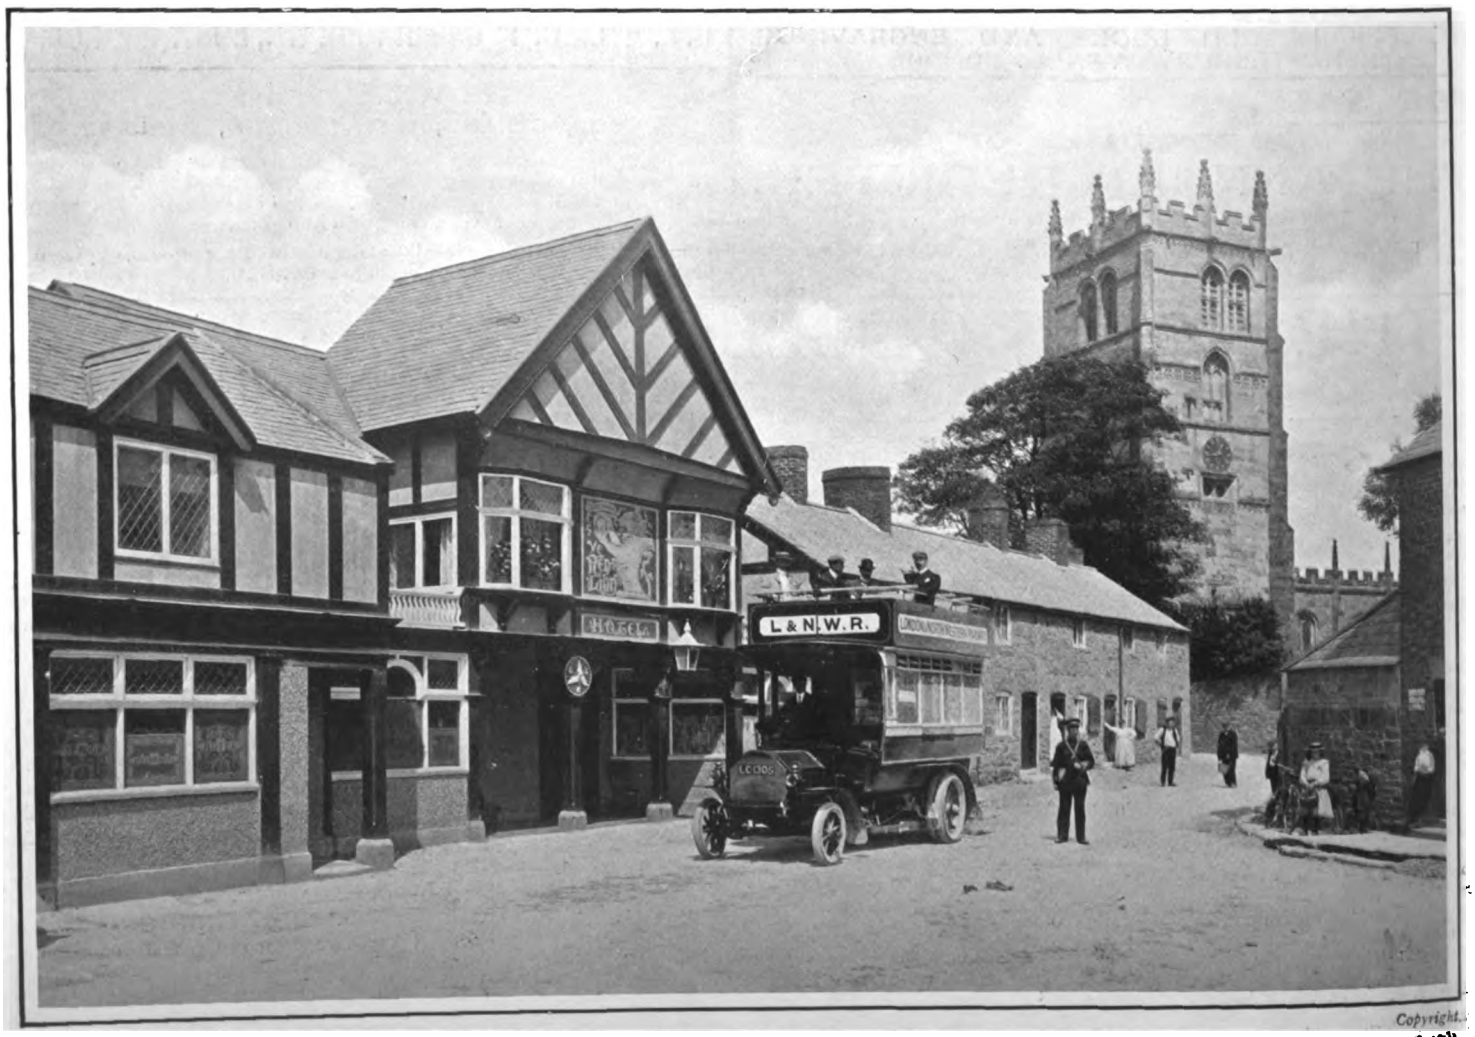
French manufacturers are highly gratified now that President Loubet has at last become a convert to motoring. The 25-h.p. C.G.V. car belonging to the President is the first motor-car which has been stabled in the Elysée. Messrs. Charron, Girardot, and Voigt, the manufacturers of these beautifully-constructed vehicles, have also met with considerable patronage from the English public, and their exhibit of the 1906 models at Olympia in November is likely to attract an unusual amount of interest. The agents in this country are the London Motor Garage Company of Wardour Street, who will be in a position to begin delivery of their 1906 model chassis in September—October of this year.

* * *

The Legislative Defence Fund, for which the sum of £2,500 is being raised, has been started by the Motor Union of Great Britain and Ireland. It has for its objects, among other things, the collecting of information and preparing the automobilists' case to lay before the recently-appointed Royal Commission. The union has addressed a letter to the provincial clubs included in its membership, some sixty in number, asking for their observations on the principal amendments which have been suggested to the Motor-car Act of 1903. These include the abolition of the fixed speed limit, the endorsement of licences only for serious offences, the right to appeal against any conviction for an offence connected with the driving and use of a car, notice of an intended prosecution in connection with any such offence, within seven days of the date of the alleged offence or of the identity of the alleged offender being ascertained, the payment of all fines and fees under the Motor-car Act to the Imperial Exchequer, which shall devote them to the widening and improvement of the highways, the use of the horn or hooter to be no longer obligatory, but in the discretion of the driver, and an alteration of the rules in connection with general identification marks in favour of the makers and agents.

* * *

The utility of the motor-car in time of war has received further recognition in Germany, where for the first time the recently-formed German Volunteer Automobile Corps will take part in the forthcoming Army Manœuvres. The cars will be driven by their owners, who will wear the field uniform granted to the corps by the German Emperor, and they will be distributed equally by the general staff among the troops taking part in the manœuvres. Altogether thirty cars will take part in the manœuvres.



THE MOTOR SERVICE OF THE LONDON AND NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

One of the new omnibuses of the "Vanguard" type, running between Connah's Quay and Mold, North Wales. The photograph was taken outside the Red Lion Hotel at Northop.

Digitized by Google

BY APPOINTMENT.

ROYAL APPRECIATION

AS A

SPECIAL MARK of APPRECIATION

of the excellent running qualities of the

THORNYCROFT CAR

supplied to their order,

T.R.H. PRINCE and PRINCESS CHRISTIAN

of SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN have been graciously pleased to favour us with a

ROYAL WARRANT

of appointment as

MOTOR MANUFACTURERS.

JOHN I. THORNYCROFT & CO., Ltd., Chiswick, London, W.

1905 MERCÉDÈS,

A KING'S CAR.

40-H.P. MERCÉDÈS CARRIAGE (HOOPER BODY)
RECENTLY SUPPLIED TO HIS MAJESTY
KING EDWARD VII.

Booklet:
"MERCÉDÈS POINTS,"
sent on request.

Sole Concessionnaires—
CANNSTATT MERCÉDÈS, LTD.,
127, Long Acre, LONDON, W.C.

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

ALL the world of fashion was last week to be seen at Portsmouth, all eager to be present at the unusually brilliant festivities which celebrated the meeting of the French and British Fleets. London seemed deserted, and those who were forced, from business or other reasons, to remain in town did not care to show themselves.

White was the reigning note for dress throughout the week. The charmingly simple serge, flannel, and cloth sailor-made costumes were quite a pleasing change from the airy muslin and lace dresses so much worn lately; although, of course, there were plenty of these at afternoon meetings and garden parties. A great many of these white costumes had a touch of colour, scarlet and blue being the favourite combinations. Some were made in the Norfolk jacket form, the collar, cuffs, and broad waistband being of soft leather in colours, and very chic. A few coloured linen gowns, very smartly cut, made a pretty contrast, especially one, in a novel shade of green, that I noticed; this had a three-quarter tight-fitting cutaway coat, which opened over a pale lemon-tinted double-breasted waistcoat, outlining the figure most perfectly. Linen collars and turn-back cuffs finished the neck and sleeves. Linen stitched hats and caps in many becoming shapes were the favourite accompaniments to these gowns. A pretty black hat worn at Cowes by a well-known Society belle is here shown, and comes from the Maison Lewis of Regent Street, whose hats are so universally admired. This is of very fine black chip, with two full ostrich plumes, which droop so becomingly on to the hair. A novel drapery of fine black Alençon net and lace hangs loosely from the back. A paste buckle and loops of ribbon attach the feathers. This had a very distingué appearance, worn with a lovely white lace gown, with knots of black ribbon velvet on the skirt, and at the neck and waist broad bands of the same.

A SMART MOTOR HAT IN WHITE STRAW AND MOUSSELINE DE SOIE.
(Maison Lewis, Regent Street, W.)

The glorious motoring roads all the way to Portsmouth were more crowded than agreeable; the dust caused by the unusually heavy traffic was almost unbearable. The other illustration shows one of the smartest motor hats of the year. It is of coarse plaited white straw ornamented at each side with stiff Mercury wings. The crown is almost entirely swathed in white mousseline de soie, which is cunningly draped to protect the hair from dust, and the very long veil end can be most comfortably and artistically arranged in various ways, and is an ornamental as well as a useful adjunct. The original motor coat worn with this is made of fine faced cloth. The full double capes, graduated off to a point, give length to the waist. The loose ample sleeve has a double frill. The shaped collar lined with black can be closed to the throat or worn open. This coat in the palest of pastel blue would look delightful, and be a most useful addition to the toilette for cool evenings at the seaside; it can be made quite long to cover the dress completely. These three-quarter and long coats are very necessary for August and September, as often we get very cool evenings. Especially are they useful for Continental resorts.

The alpaca coats and skirts, as I predicted some time ago, have proved invaluable. They show the dirt so little, and no matter how many muslin and linen gowns you possess, you never have enough, and are always glad to fall back on the alpaca costume. Some of my friends, whom I had advised to purchase one of these at Messrs. Charles Lee and Son's of Wigmore Street, have written me how thankful they were they had acted on it; the dust cloaks in this favourite material are also so smart that they always look well. Some blouses from this firm are also a boon for hotel dinners when you are taking your holiday in your new motor. They save luggage, and are quite dressy enough for country hotels too. The cross-over blouse is still a favourite, and is so useful, for the lace inner vest can be varied in so many ways, and for girls who have a limited dress allowance, this style is a very advantageous one. Dark blue serge with tight vests of contrasting colours will be worn in early autumn, so that those coloured remnants that we have picked up lately at sales can be used very cunningly.

A CHARMING HAT IN BLACK CHIP, WITH OSTRICH PLUMES.
(Maison Lewis, Regent Street, W.)

Cowes is not the only place where garden parties have been the order of the day. The people who have been unable to leave town for the moment, and are taking their holidays in Suburbia, are also issuing invitations for fêtes, which, in everyday language, simply means "tea and cakes in the garden."

R. D.

(From photographs specially taken for this paper by Lemitteur and Co.)

Digitized by Google

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Prevents the Hair from falling off.

Restores Gray or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.

Being delicately perfumed, it leaves no unpleasant odour

IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin, or even white linen.

Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.

Ask your Chemist or Hair-Dresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.

Prepared only by the . . .

ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO., Ltd.,
33, Farringdon Road, London, E.C.

WHELPTON'S PURIFYING PILLS

For Indigestion, Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Sea Sickness.

INVALUABLE FOR LADIES.

8, 14, and 33 stamps.

G. WHELPTON, 4, Crane Court, Fleet St., London.

SULPHOLINE SKIN LOTION.

Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, Entirely fade away.

A Scientific Method of Growing Hair

The Evans Vacuum Cap provides the scientific means of applying to the scalp the common sense principles of physical culture. Baldness and falling hair are caused by the lack of proper nourishment of the hair roots. This lack of nourishment is due to the absence of blood in the scalp—an abnormal condition. It is the blood which feeds the hair roots, as well as every other part of the body. If you want the hair to grow on the scalp the blood must be made to circulate there. It is exercise which makes the blood circulate. Lack of exercise makes it stagnant. The Vacuum method provides the exercise which makes the blood circulate in the scalp. It gently draws the rich blood to the scalp and feeds the shrunken hair roots. This causes the hair to grow.

Test It Without Expense

You can tell whether it is possible to cultivate a growth of hair on your head by ten minutes' use of the Evans Vacuum Cap. We will send you the Cap with which to make the experiment without any expense to you.

If the Evans Vacuum Cap gives the scalp a healthy glow this denotes that the normal condition of the scalp can be restored. A three or four minutes' use of the Cap each morning and evening thereafter will produce a natural growth of hair. If, however, the scalp remains white and lifeless after applying the vacuum, there is no use in trying further—the hair will not grow.

The Bank Guarantee

We will send you, by prepaid express an Evans Vacuum Cap, and will allow you ample time to prove its virtue. All we ask of you is to deposit the price of the Cap in the Jefferson Bank of St. Louis, where it will remain during the trial period, subject to your own order. If you do not cultivate a sufficient growth of hair to convince you that the method is effective, simply notify the bank and they will return your deposit in full.

A sixteen-page illustrated book will be sent you on request, postage prepaid in full.

Evans Vacuum Cap Co., 923, Fullerton Bldg., St. Louis, U.S.A.

MEDICAL GALVANISM

HAS CONQUERED some of the most obstinate complaints after all other remedies have failed.

HALE'S IMPROVED ELECTRIC BELTS and BATTERIES for wearing next the body without blistering or injuring the skin. These appliances are

PERFECT GENERATORS OF ELECTRICITY, and are most comfortable in wear. Price One Guinea.

RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, and GOUT are speedily REMOVED by this powerful Agent.

ELECTRIC BELT and SUSPENSOR, price 42s., for MEN, for VARICOCELE, Nervous Debility, and Exhaustion, Bladder Weakness, etc.

Pamphlets Gratis. Consultations Free.

HALE & SON, Medical Galvanists,
117, CHANCERY LANE, LONDON.

THE CHARING CROSS BANK. ESTABLISHED 1870.
119 and 120, BISHOPSGATE ST. WITHIN, E.C.,
and 28, BEDFORD ST., CHARING CROSS, London.

Assets, £694,403. Liabilities, £372,291. Surplus, £322,112.

Loans of £50 to £2,000 granted at a few hours' notice in town or country on mortgage of furniture, trade and farm stock, plant, crops, etc., without removal. Also on deeds, policies, and reversions. Distance no object. Easy terms.

2½ per cent. allowed on Current account balances.

DEPOSITS of £10 and upwards received on terms as under.
Subject to 3 months' Notice of Withdrawal 5 per cent. per annum.
" 6 " " 6 " "
" 12 " " 7 " "

Special terms for longer periods. Interest paid quarterly. The Terminable Deposit Bonds pay nearly 9 per cent., and are a safe investment. Write or call for Prospectus.

A. WILLIAMS, } Joint Managers.
H. J. TALL, }

BIRKBECK BANK

ESTABLISHED 1851.

Current Accounts. 2 % Interest allowed on minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
Deposits. 2½ % Interest allowed on Deposit Accounts.
Advances made. Stocks and Shares bought and sold.
Apply C. F. RAVENSCROFT, Secretary,
Southampton Buildings, High Holborn, W.C.

MAGNA CIDER.

"The Sparkling Wine of Somerset."

A delicious appetising beverage. Guaranteed genuine apple juice. Declared by Lancet absolutely pure. Strongly recommended by doctors in cases of Gout, Rheumatism, and Obesity. Brut Cider a speciality. Send 22s. for specimen case, containing 1 doz. quarts of Speciality and 1 doz. quarts of a sweeter blend; or 25s. for 2 doz. pints of each quality. Carriage, bottles, and cases included.—MAGNA CIDER CO., Marston Magna, Somerset.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
The charmingly situated Seaside Resort on the Dorsetshire Coast.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Unequalled for its Marine and Land Excursions. Golfing and Fishing.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Beautifully illustrated Guides sent free of charge by the Town Clerk, on receipt of cost of postage, 3d.

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE

TEOFANI'S

HIGH-CLASS CIGARETTES.

TEOFANI'S Cigarettes receive the Highest Awards at all International Exhibitions, and are Sold by Leading Purveyors throughout the WORLD.

TEOFANI & CO., LONDON.

THE LEAS HOTEL, Folkestone.

Under New Proprietorship.

300ft. above the sea. Remodelled and furnished by Waring's.

Delightfully situated, commanding extensive views of sea, with ornamental private grounds. Excellent Cuisine, Lawn Tennis, Passenger Lift, Electric Light throughout.

Illustrated Tariff on application to T. H. VINNICOMBE.

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY OF SPORT.

Now Ready.

SHOOTING,

In Two Vols.

EDITED BY

Mr. HORACE G. HUTCHINSON.

Price 25/- Nett. (12/6 Nett per vol.)

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, LIMITED, 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE KING'S MENU.

THE ingredients for the little dinner suggested in to-day's menu, being all well in season, are both good and cheap, unless it be the blackcock or grouse. With regard to these, however, elderly birds can generally be picked up cheap by the experienced housewife who does her own shopping, and when carefully stewed or braised they are excellent. In to-day's menu, as this has been compiled with a view to saving labour as much as possible when only a single-handed cook is available, it is suggested that the birds are braised and served in a casserole. Should this not be convenient, however, they can be braised (which process means top as well as bottom heat, this being one of the distinguishing points between braising and stewing) in any pan whose handle permits it to go in the oven; failing this they must be stewed. Either way serve them with a rich mushroom sauce, or later on with one of celery or onions. Mushrooms, however, are such an immense addition with game, and bring out the flavour of grouse or black game so wonderfully, that while the season for the meadow ones lasts, making them comparatively cheap and plentiful, the most should be made of them in this connection by the housewife who studies ways and means of making the most of the resources at her disposal.

Apropos of this a thick soup is given, as these of fresh vegetables make such a pleasant and wholesome change during the summer months, and, even if herrings are not desired, it is easy enough to keep to grilled fish or one simply cooked au gratin, for connoisseurs say no richly-dressed fish entrée should ever succeed a thick soup. There are, however, many people who, under any circumstances, prefer a clear soup as the prelude to dinner, and in this case a really well-made vegetable consommé is not only every whit as good as a meat one, but far better at this time of year, when we are all prone to overdo the nitrogenous foods.

A SIMPLE LITTLE DINNER.

CREME CONCOMBRE.

FILETS DE HARENGS.

QUENELLES DE LAPEREAU AUX TOMATES.

COQ DE BRUYERE EN CASSEROLE.

SALADE.

EPONGE DE FRAMBOISES.

CHOUX AU PARMESAN.

CREME CONCOMBRE.

Peel and seed one or more cucumbers, and if not perfectly young soak for a while in cold water to abstract any bitterness. Now for every pound of cucumber, weighed after peeling and seeding, put in the pan with it two ounces of butter, a saltspoonful of castor sugar, a small onion sliced, a pinch of white pepper and salt, and a gill of either water or white stock, which can be made from either chicken, veal, or vegetables only. Stew all gently together till the cucumber is quite soft and pulpy, then rub it all through a fine hair sieve. Have ready (for each pound of cucumber, etc.) a pint of new milk, thickened with a teaspoonful of Patent Cornflour, and with this dilute the cucumber purée. Add a little more seasoning to taste if necessary, and cook together in a lined pan for a few minutes, stirring all the time, as this soup catches very easily. When of the consistency of good cream it is ready, and is served with fried croûtons and coralline pepper handed round. For a richer soup a spoonful or two of cream, beaten up with the yolk of an egg, can be added just at the last, or a gill less milk can be used, and the quantity made up with cream. Also some cooks add a garnish of little pea shapes of cucumber cooked separately in salted water.

QUENELLES DE LAPEREAU AUX TOMATES.

For the quenelle mixture pound ten ounces of raw meat of the rabbit, freed from skin and sinew, till quite smooth, then pound in with it six ounces of panada (this must also have been pounded separately first) together with an ounce of butter, two tablespoonfuls of thick béchamel sauce, the yolks of two and a-half eggs, with seasoning to taste of salt and white pepper, also, if at hand, a few drops of truffle essence. When these are all thoroughly amalgamated and perfectly smooth, rub the mixture through a fine wire sieve, then work thoroughly into it two tablespoonfuls of double cream. Have ready some well-buttered quenelle moulds, fill these with the mixture, cover them with buttered paper, and poach or steam them for about fifteen minutes or till they feel firm when touched in the centre with the finger. They are then dished on a circle, or, as in to-day's illustration, half-moon shape, of mashed potato, croûton of fried bread, or border mould of the same quenelle mixture poached in a border mould; pour a rich tomato sauce round. This sauce can be varied to taste, one of the rich white ones, such as suprême or a white mushroom, soubise or maître d'hôtel, being very good, while in the centre of the dish any nice simple garnish, such as stewed button mushrooms, button onions, or French beans, can be arranged. In to-day's illustration half the quenelle moulds were decorated, after buttering, with strips of cooked tongue, and the other half sprinkled with finely-chopped parsley and tiny star shapes of the tongue, a crescent shape of mashed potatoes used for the mount, and a rich tomato sauce poured round. When this last is changed the name must be altered, too, in the menu, becoming quenelles de lapereau aux soubise (for a white onion sauce), aux champignons (for a white mushroom one, or with a garnish of stewed button mushrooms and rich white sauce), and so on. Rabbits just now are at their best, while those which have been lying out in the wheat and cornfields are being shot by the harvesters and sent into market. Country people know that rabbits under these conditions have a much more delicate flavour, in addition to being very plump, than those killed at other seasons when they are lying in their burrows. As variations of this quenelle recipe enable one to provide such a number of dainty little entrées I have dealt with it at length to-day. When cold entrées are wished for—and of course with a single-handed cook these greatly facilitate smoothness of service at dinner, as they can be prepared and put ready early in the day—these quenelles, prepared and poached, or steamed as advised, can be set aside till cold (turning them out while hot), when they are masked with aspic cream or any nice white chaudfroid sauce, such as a simple béchamel, stiffened with fine leaf gelatine in the proportion of an ounce of this to each pint of well-reduced sauce. When the masking is quite set (and take care it is perfectly smooth and even) dish the quenelles round a pile of any salad to taste, and garnish with finely-chopped aspic jelly. Of course a large border mould can be cooked, cooled, masked, and used for the border to a salad in the same way. Chicken flesh can be used just the same, or a mixture of chicken and rabbit is very nice.

QUENELLES DE LAPEREAU AUX TOMATES.
(Specially prepared and photographed for this paper.)

COQ DE BRUYERE EN CASSEROLE.

Joint the birds neatly, fry them till nicely browned in a little butter, together with sliced onion, carrot, and a bunch of herbs, then drain free from fat, make a bed of the vegetables at the bottom of the casserole, lay the joints of the birds on this, and add sufficient good game stock, mixed with a little light wine, to reach up to, but not to cover, the birds, lay a buttered sheet of paper over, put the lid on closely, and stew in the oven very slowly till the birds are tender, the time for this varying of course with their age and length of hanging the weather and larder permit of. Some mushrooms are a great improvement when available, and some diced or sliced lean and fat ham or bacon can also be added. When the bird is not served in the casserole cook it whole, first frying it a nice brown before stewing it. A little more stock and wine must be added from time to time, as that in the casserole evaporates, and the birds must be kept well basted. From an hour and a-half to two hours should be allowed for simmering them. The stock can be thickened with roux in the usual way, and a little glaze or Lemco added to it when the birds are cooked, keeping them hot while the stock is being thickened and boiled down a little.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

MUSHROOMS (The Mayflower).—How will these suggestions do? Take mushrooms as much of a size as possible, wipe them free from grit, peel and stalk them, then fry the heads in butter till partly cooked and nicely coloured. Now drain them free from fat and put them in a pan, with just enough good brown stock, gravy, or thin sauce to keep them from burning, and stew them gently till done, add a little Lemco or glaze to the gravy, and serve. Mushrooms braised like this are best cooked and served in a casserole, one large or several small ones. If you do not let the mushrooms colour when in the butter, sautéeing instead of frying them, in fact, you can finish them off in white sauce. For this last way you will find an excellent recipe in Messrs. Brown and Polson's recipe book. They will send it you free on receipt of a 1d. stamp for postage, if you write to them at Paisley, and mention THE KING when you do so. If you want the mushrooms for a garnish only, however, take them out of the braising liquid before they are quite done, brush them over with melted glaze, and stand them in the oven for a minute, then brush them over a second time, dry again, and use. When any mushrooms are left over after being simply stewed or braised, cut them up into dice while still hot, add some fine bread-crumbs, a seasoning of salt, pepper, and finely-minced parsley (very little of this mind, or its flavour will overpower that of the mushrooms), add sufficient beaten egg to bind the mixture, make it into balls the size of a chestnut, brush them over with beaten egg, roll in bread-crumbs, and fry a golden brown. These croquettes can be served for a breakfast dish with fried bacon, or used as a garnish. SYBARITE.

Digitized by Google

An Ideal Peptonised Food specially adapted to the needs of both Invalids and the Robust.

'Allenburys' The DIET

This Diet is recommended for general use in place of ordinary milk foods, gruel, etc., and is particularly adapted to the needs of Dyspeptics, Invalids and the Aged. Being largely predigested it is easy of assimilation. A cup of the "Allenburys" DIET is useful between meals in convalescence. It can be made in a moment the addition of boiling water only being required.

The "Allenburys" DIET may be taken on going to bed in the place of stimulants. Being easily digested it promotes tranquil and refreshing sleep, free from the depressing reaction in the morning, which often follows the taking of spirits.

For those who cannot readily digest milk the 'Allenburys' DIET is a welcome substitute, as it does not cause indigestion and flatulence.

Although the "Allenburys" DIET is a food for ADULTS and is quite distinct from the well-known "Allenburys" Foods for Infants, yet it is also of great value as a restorative food for young children, especially during convalescence.

In tins at 1/6 and 3/- each of Chemists, &c.
A large sample posted on receipt of 3 penny stamps.

Allen & Hanburys Ltd., Lombard Street, London.

COOLS & REFRESHES THE SKIN.

BEETHAM'S LAROLA Regd

PRESERVES THE SKIN from the effects of the SUN, WINDS, and HARD WATER.
Entirely removes and prevents all ROUGHNESS, REDNESS, HEAT, IRRITATION, SUNBURN, TAN, etc., and

KEEPS THE SKIN SOFT, SMOOTH, & WHITE

at all Seasons. DELIGHTFULLY COOLING and REFRESHING after Walking, Golfing, Cycling, Motoring, Yachting, etc.

Bottles, 1s., 1s. 9d., and 2s. 6d. each. Of all Chemists and Stores.
M. BEETHAM & SON, CHELTENHAM.

IF YOU ARE BUYING

Any kind of Requisite for Travelling, it will pay you to send for

W. H. SMITH'S

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF

PORTMANTEAUX
TRUNKS
BAGS

And every description of Leather Goods and Travelling Requisites for Home and the Colonies.

Opposite the Abbey,* BATH.

Maker of the ROSEBERY HAT BOX.

LORD ROSEBERY says: "It is an ingenious and useful Hat Box."

"I always use it for baby" "I always use it myself"

The Secret of a Beautiful Complexion

How delicious, refreshing, and invigorating is the scent of the fir trees! And how it recalls memories of walks over heather-clad hills with murmuring brooks, the drowsy tinkling of the sheepfold, and the sweet peace and restfulness of repose in Nature's arms! The scent of the pines gives new strength, energy, and vigour, and everyone knows how full of healing the fragrance is for the weak, wearied, and convalescent. Now can you imagine a soap embodying this delicious fragrance, healing influence, and marvellous antiseptic power, and bringing them right into your home? That is exactly what you have in "Antexema Soap," the soap that beautifies.

The most beautiful skin will deteriorate if it fails to receive proper attention. Don't let your skin look greasy. "Antexema Soap" will prevent this appearance.

There are men and women whose looks charm everyone, and it is worth trying to discover the secret of the admiration they inspire. It will be found that in many instances the fascination is neither due to beauty nor even regularity of the features. Sometimes the secret is in pleasant expression, fine teeth, speaking eyes, curling hair, but most often it is due to a perfect skin. The most regular and beautiful features may be completely spoilt by a bad complexion, whilst a dainty velvety skin, with a peach-like bloom upon it, will often create an impression that the possessor is really beautiful, though the features may be far from regular. You owe it to yourself to look beautiful, as Nature intended you should. That is why you should always use "Antexema Soap."

"Antexema Soap" makes the skin clear, pure, and healthy, and prevents pimples, blackheads, and red, rough, oily skin. For shampooing purposes it is unequalled, as it cleanses the scalp, removes dandruff, stimulates the growth of hair, and counteracts any tendency to baldness. Just the thing for washing baby, and its antiseptic properties are of the greatest value in preventing infection. "Antexema Soap" is supplied by all chemists, in tablets, at 6d., or three in a box for 1/6.

We want everyone to try "Antexema Soap," and therefore offer a beautiful gift to every reader of this announcement who is willing to accept it. In return for a postal order for sixpence, we will send a sixpenny tablet of "Antexema Soap," and present you with a beautiful tortoise-shell soap case, so that you can carry your tablet of "Antexema Soap" in your travelling-bag wherever you go. For this free gift, write to the Antexema Company, 83, Castle Road, London, N.W., and mention THE KING.

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

EVER on the alert to study the convenience of their passengers, the Belle Steamers announce that they have made arrangements with Messrs. Pickfords, Limited, to collect in advance, from any part of London or suburbs, and deliver passengers' luggage at a specially low fixed rate per package. Passengers will thus be spared the trouble and expense of cabs and porters at both ends of the journey, and, relieved of their heavy baggage, will be able to substitute comfort for anxiety. All that passengers have to do is to fill up a form to be obtained from the Belle Steamers' Office, 33, Walbrook, and Pickfords do the rest.

THE Princess of Wales has honoured Messrs. Speaight, the Child Photographers of 157, New Bond Street, by accepting from them, for the use of little Prince John, the first copy of their new edition of "Baby's Album."

THE entire front of the premises of Messrs. E. and E. Emanuel, the well-known jewellers and silversmiths on the Hard, Portsea, was profusely decorated in honour of the visit of the French Fleet with the tri-colour, artistically displayed on life-buoys, and a group of flags over the Royal Arms, surmounted by a carved Naval Crown, flanked by a white ensign and a French flag. Two charming paintings of the "Gallic Cock" and "Liberty," from the new French gold coinage, by H. Coish, commanded well-deserved notice.

QUITE a record number of excursionists patronised the Great Central route from Marylebone to Stratford-on-Avon, Leicester, Nottingham, Sheffield, Huddersfield, Bradford, Manchester, Liverpool, Southport, York, Cleethorpes, Scarborough, Bridlington, and other well-known holiday resorts on the North-east and North-west Coasts accessible by this company's picturesque and comfortable route. To accommodate the heavy holiday traffic numerous special trains were run, in addition to many of the ordinary trains being duplicated.

MR. HENRY BEAUMONT, who is playing with the Royal Carl Rosa Opera Company, is also an oratorio tenor of eminence, and in this direction few English tenors are so widely popular as he, or so much in demand. His voice is wonderfully reminiscent of Sims Reeves and Joseph Maas. There is the same

MR. HENRY BEAUMONT

The well-known tenor of the Royal Carl Rosa Opera Company.

timbre, the same expression. Few who saw his rendering of "Tannhaüser," when produced some years ago in Manchester by Arthur Rousby, will ever forget it. It was a distinct achievement, artistically and vocally. He and his wife are well known in Dublin society.

MISS FLORENCE WELLS, the clever and versatile young reciter, has already booked several important engagements for the coming season. Miss Wells has, in addition to considerable dramatic power, a clear and resonant voice, and a vein of comedy which it is especially gratifying to find in a latter-day reciter. Most of them are too terribly tragic.

Fellows Willson.

MISS FLORENCE WELLS

A popular young reciter.

THE question of upkeep is a bogey which enters largely into the minds of prospective purchasers of motor-cars, and in this category tyres play an important part. That this prevailing idea is not borne out by facts has been repeatedly illustrated by the performances of cars of well-known makes (to which have been fitted Dunlop tyres) in the various reliability trials. The latest instance of this was apparent at the recent Brighton Race Meeting, when no fewer than twelve first prizes were secured by the aid of these tyres.

OWING to the success of "What the Butler Saw" at Wyndham's Theatre, Mr. Mouillot has arranged with Mr. Frank Curzon for an extension of his season there, and it will be transferred to another theatre at the conclusion of his term.

ONE of the most attractive features of the Indian and Colonial Exhibition at the Crystal Palace is the New Zealand Court. A portion of the main court is occupied by a splendid lot of cereals, and close at hand is an effective display of canned and bottled goods. New Zealand is a Colony in which the inhabitants of the Mother Country are much interested, and the exhibit at the Crystal Palace will undoubtedly do much to increase and extend that interest.

ON the occasion of the visit of the French seamen to the Alhambra Theatre last week, each man was presented with a dainty box of cigarettes, manufactured by Teofani and Co.

THE exceedingly large sale which Kropp razors have now attained is a striking proof of their merits. Those who use them are numbered by thousands in all classes of society, and all bear witness to the ease and comfort with which the daily shave is accomplished by the aid of a Kropp. These razors, like other good things, have been imitated, but have never been equalled in their particular line. The excellence of the finish of the Kropp gives it an advantage over all other German hollow-ground razors, which only those who have tried the others can appreciate.

Amusements

APOLLO THEATRE.
HENRY LOWENFELD, Sole Proprietor.
TOM B. DAVIS, Lessee and Manager.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
Every Evening at 8.15.
"VERONIQUE."
Matinee every Wednesday at 2.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. FRANK CURZON.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
To-night at 8.15,
LADY MADCAP.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.15.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Sole Lessee and Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON
At 8.30.
WHAT THE BUTLER SAW.
By Edward A. Parry and Fredk. Mouillot.
Matinee Every Wednesday at 3
Box Office now open. Telephone 4028 Gerrard.

DALY'S THEATRE.
Produced by Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES.
To-night and Every Evening at 8.15.
Matinee Every Saturday at 2 30.
THE LITTLE MICHUS.
By A. Vanloo and G. Duval. Music by Andre Messager.
Adapted for the English stage by Henry Hamilton.
Lyrics by Percy Greenbank.
Box Office 10 to 10.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.
Managers: A. & S. GATTI & CHARLES FROHMAN.
Every Evening at 8.15,
THE CATCH OF THE SEASON,
By Seymour Hicks and Cosmo Hamilton.
The Vaudeville Theatre Company.
Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.

ADELPHI.
Lessee and Manager: OTHO STUART.
To-night at 8.30.
THE TAMING OF THE SHREW.
OSCAR ASCHE, LILY BRAYTON.
Matinee Every Wednesday at 2.30
Box Office open 10 to 10.
Tel. 2645 Gerrard.

GAIETY THEATRE.
Manager: Mr. GEO. EDWARDES.
To-night and Every Evening at 8; doors open at 7.40.
A New Musical Play, entitled:
THE SPRING CHICKEN.
Box Office open from 10 to 10.

GARRICK THEATRE.
MR. ARTHUR BOURCHIER, Lessee and Manager
Every Evening at 8.30,
THE WALLS OF JERICHO.
By Alfred Sutro.
Matinee Every Wednesday at 2.30.

CRITERION THEATRE, W.
Sole Lessee: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Manager: Mr. FRANK CURZON.
Two New Comedies,
At 8.30 TIME IS MONEY.
Mr. Charles Hawtrey as "Charles Grahame."
At 9.15 o'clock. LUCKY MISS DEAN.
Miss Ethel Irving as "Acacia Dean."
Matinee Wednesdays at 3. Box Office 10 to 10.

NAVAL, SHIPPING, AND FISHERIES EXHIBITION, EARL'S COURT.
11 a.m. to 11 p.m. Admission 1s.
Naval Construction, Armaments, Shipping & Fisheries
NELSON'S CENTENARY RELICS.
FISHING VILLAGE. Working Exhibits. Model of "Victory."
GRAND NAVAL AND MILITARY CONCERTS
Go on board the full-size Cruiser.
Specially ventilated, coolest Show in London.
Real Batteries of 4.7 Guns, Hotchkiss and Maxims
The Cruiser is manned by a crew of 150 Handy-men
BATTLE OF TRAFALGAR.
"Our Navy." Captive Flying Machine. Great Red Indian Village. Voyage in a Submarine Haunted Cabin. Famous Sea Fights Musical and Dramatic Sketches. Tillikum Canoe.

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. | | PAGE. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Sir John Dickson-Poynder, Bart., M.P. | 659 | The Traveller— | |
| The March of Events | 660 | In New Zealand: "The Land for the People" | 682 |
| The River Season | 662 | A Day in the Life of a Mormon | 684 |
| Sport and Pastime | 663 | The Bathing Season | 685 |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 666 | Cricket | 686 |
| On the Links | 668 | The Racing Season | 688 |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 673 | Art in the Sale-room | vii. |
| The Parisians of Paris— | | The Traveller | viii. |
| The Middle Classes at the Seaside | 674 | Literary Notes | x. |
| Parisian Players | 675 | Leaves from a Collector's Note-book— | |
| Under the Burgee | 676 | LV.—Glass transfer Pictures | xii. |
| Yachts of the Year | 677 | Motoring Notes | xiv. |
| With the King's Colonials | 678 | Fashions of To-day and To-morrow | xvi. |
| The Camp at Ovingdean | 680 | The King's Menu | xviii. |
| Plays and Players | 681 | Here, There, and Everywhere | xx. |

TO LIBRARIES, CLUBS, HOTELS, Etc.

A Reading Case for THE KING can be had post free on application to the Publishers, George Newnes, Limited, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.

HOTELS.

ENGLISH HOTELS.

TORQUAY (Population 33,625).—PREMIER HEALTH RESORT. Unrivalled climate. Warm in winter. Sunshine-land. Charming drives and sheltered walks. 120 acres of public gardens. Piers.

TORQUAY. Irreproachable water supply and perfect sanitation. Theatre, concerts, and other musical attractions. Medicated baths of all kinds. Express trains from all parts.

For Illustrated Descriptive Books of Torquay, apply FREDK. S. HEX, Town Clerk.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

De Vere Hotel, from 10/6 per day. 'Phone 524.
Broadwalk Hotel, from 8/6 per day. ,, 858.
Prince of Wales' Hotel, from 10/6 per day. ,, 641. Kensington.

Electric Light. Lifts. Everything up to date. First-class cuisine.

BOURNEMOUTH HYDRO.

Sunny Site. Overlooking Sea. Every Bath. Ideal Residence.

EASTBOURNE.

THE HYDRO HOTEL.—A select Residential Hotel on South Coast, 120ft. above sea level. Large gardens, close to the sea. Tennis. Croquet. Bowling Green. Spacious Lounges and Public Rooms. 70 Bedrooms, also Suites, luxuriously furnished, electric light throughout. High-class cuisine. Table d'Hôte or à la Carte. Separate tables. Lift. Billiards. Private 'Bus. Nearest to schools and Links. Close to Parades. Week End terms. Motor Garage with repairing Pits. Lit by Electric Light. For inclusive Tariff (Illustrated), also Programme of Amusements, address—O. F. BERGANN, Manager. Telegraphic Address: "Hydrotel, Eastbourne." Telephone, No. 143, Eastbourne. The new Turkish Baths will shortly be opened.

FOREIGN HOTELS.

BIARRITZ.

GRAND HOTEL.—Winter Season.—First-class establishment. Splendid situation, facing the sea. Patronised by the elité; rendezvous of English Society. Every comfort; excellent attendance and cooking.—MONTENAT, Manager.

AXENSTEIN (Lake Lucerne; 2,350ft. above sea level; electric railway Brunnen-Axenstein).—First-class Hotel. World-renowned climatic health resort; patronised by English society. "Axenstein is the loveliest spot I met with on my journey through Switzerland."—QUEEN VICTORIA.

TENERIFFE

HAS THE FINEST WINTER CLIMATE IN THE WORLD.

THE First-class HOTELS there are
the QUISISANA at Santa Cruz,
the AGUERE and CONTINENTAL at La Laguna, and
the MARTIANEZ (late Grand) at Port Orotava.
All under the Management of C. H. TRENKEL. Prospectus, etc., on application.

SHIPPING.

MOROCCO, CANARY ISLANDS, and MADEIRA LINE OF STEAMERS; 24 days for 20 guineas.—For particulars write Messrs. FORWOOD BROS., 46, St. Mary Axe, E.C.

Patronized by H.M. The King.

DOVERCOURT BAY, ESSEX,

HOTEL ALEXANDRA.

The Finest Health and Pleasure Resort on the East Coast. Delightful Climate. Bracing Air. The Hotel, which has recently been visited by H.M. KING, is luxuriously Furnished. Charming Situation. Facing the Sea. Electric Light. Excellent Cuisine. Tennis, Croquet. Motor Garage and Pit. 1 hour 40 minutes express from London.

For Illustrated Tariff, apply A. H. THIEM, Proprietor.

THE CLOTH FOR GOLF SUITS.

"Hydea"

is the best English cloth—made of the best English wool—grown on the HYDE Farm, Gloucestershire. It is delightfully soft and elastic—absolutely the best for sportsmen—most durable for out-o'-doors—most handsome for town suits—long thread—refined finish.

THE KING WEARS IT,

and pays no more than you—because there's only one quality at one price. "HYDEA" is stamped on every two yards of the selvedge—that's how you may know it—that, and its excellent surface! Send for FREE Booklet:—

APPERLY, CURTIS & Co., Ltd.,
Dudbridge Mills, Stroud, West of England.

THE CHARING CROSS BANK. ESTABLISHED 1870.
119 and 120, BISHOPSGATE ST. WITHIN, E.C.,
and 28, BEDFORD ST., CHARING CROSS, London.

Assets, £694,403. Liabilities, £372,291. Surplus, £322,112.

Loans of £5 to £2,000 granted at a few hours' notice in town or country on mortgage of furniture, trade and farm stock, plant, crops, etc., without removal. Also on deeds, policies, and reversions. Distance no object. Easy terms.

2½ per cent. allowed on Current account balances.

DEPOSITS of £10 and upwards received on terms as under.
Subject to 3 months' Notice of Withdrawal 5 per cent. per annum.
,, 6 ,, ,, 6 ,, ,,
,, 12 ,, ,, 7 ,, ,,

Special terms for longer periods. Interest paid quarterly. The Terminable Deposit Bonds pay nearly 9 per cent., and are a safe investment. Write or call for Prospectus.

A. WILLIAMS,
H. J. TALL, } Joint Managers.

GOOD TO WATCH!

It's good to watch the silky, bright gloss quickly appear on your boots—and other leather articles—when are used. But you must use Wren's JUST A SMEAR AND A RUB—and the thing's done!

WREN'S BOOT POLISHES

Send 7½d. in stamps for samples (black and brown), and put them to the test!

WREN & CO., NORTHAMPTON.

HEREFORD.

THE CENTRE OF THE LOVELY WYE VALLEY

SENT FREE.

An artistic Booklet containing a series of views and descriptive matter of this delightful country and district.

Apply TOWN CLERK'S Office.

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY OF SPORT.

Under the General Editorship
OF
Mr. HORACE G. HUTCHINSON.

FISHING.

IN TWO VOLUMES.

With Coloured Plates of Salmon and Trout Flies. Over 250 Full Page Illustrations with various diagrams.

Price 25/- Nett. (12/6 Nett per Vol.)

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, Ltd., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
The charmingly situated Seaside Resort on the Dorsetshire Coast.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Unequalled for its Marine and Land Excursions. Golfing and Fishing.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Temperature higher than that of any other Seaside Resort. See daily reports.

SPA, BELGIUM.

(10 Hours from London.)

The Oldest Chalybeate Springs in the World.

Finest Bathing Establishment in Europe. Best cure for Anæmia, Chlorosis, and Heart Affections. Countless attractions, Steeplechases, Horse Show, Concerts, Theatre, Automobile Races, Golf, Balls. For programme write

BUREAU DE PUBLICITE, SPA.

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE

TEOFANI'S

HIGH-CLASS

CIGARETTES.

TEOFANI'S Cigarettes receive the Highest Awards at all International Exhibitions, and are Sold by Leading Purveyors throughout the WORLD.

TEOFANI & CO., LONDON.

The "Country Life" Library of Sport.

New Volume Now Ready.

POLO

PAST AND PRESENT.

By T. F. DALE. Price 12/6 Nett.

CONTENTS:

ANCIENT POLO.
THE HURLINGHAM CLUB AND ITS INFLUENCE.
THE RANELAGH CLUB AND THE EXPANSION OF POLO
THE GROWTH OF POLO IN LONDON AND THE PROVINCES
REGIMENTAL POLO.
THE TRAINING OF THE PONY.
ELEMENTARY POLO.
TOURNAMENT POLO AND TEAM PLAY.
UMPIRES AND REFEREES.
THE PONY AND STABLE MANAGEMENT.
POLO PONY BREEDING.
THE POLO CLUB—ITS APPLIANCES AND EXPENSES.
RECOLLECTIONS OF TWENTY YEARS.
THOUGHTS AND SUGGESTIONS ON HANDICAPPING.
POLO IN AUSTRALIA.
POLO IN AMERICA.
THE RULES OF POLO IN ENGLAND
THE RULES OF THE INDIAN POLO ASSOCIATION.
APPENDIX: Hurlingham Rules and Regulations; Bye-laws of the Ranelagh Club; County Polo Association Rules; Rules of the Irish County Club Union; Rules and Conditions of the County Polo Challenge Cup; Rules for the Regulation of the inter-Regimental Tournament, 1905; Rules of the Indian Polo Association; Rules of the American Polo Association; Rules of the New South Wales Polo Association; Results of Chief Tournaments; List of Polo Clubs in the United Kingdom.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE" LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C., and by GEORGE NEWNES, LTD., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

THE COLONEL TAKES THE 19TH (W/HOLE IN ONE!

Head Office: 11, SO. EXCHANGE PLACE, GLASGOW.

J. H. ROGER PROPR.

LESSEE OF

H.M. CUSTOMS (No. 15) BOND, JAMES WATT STREET, GLASGOW.

Special Quotations to Golf Clubs.

"COLONEL BOGEY" WHISKY.

GUARANTEED 7 YEARS OLD.

42/- PER DOZEN. CARRIAGE PAID.

THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.

Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS of every description, including TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT. MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.

Handsome Public Rooms, including 2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel. Telephone 56.

Terms from MANAGER.

CLEVEDON (Somerset).

SEASIDE HYDRO HOTEL.

Holiday, Health, and Pleasure Resort. Near Golf Links and Pier. Good centre for excursions by road, rail, or sea. Resident Physician. Fine Baths. Liberal Table.

SECRETARY, Hydro, Clevedon, Somerset.

LELANT, ST. IVES BAY, CORNWALL (close to golf links and station).—Furnished HOUSE, with plate and linen, to LET for Summer months; two large sitting rooms, six bedrooms, one dressing room, bathroom.—"T.B.H.," "Evelyns," Uxbridge.

SOUTHWOLD (best position on the Common; close to Golf Links).—To be LET, well Furnished, for August, the pretty and artistic HOUSE known as "Link's Cottage," containing square hall, two sitting and large recreation rooms, servants' sitting room, seven bedrooms (fourteen beds), bathroom; electric light and telephone.—Apply to Mrs. ROBINSON, on Property.

ON THE BOURNEMOUTH LINKS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations. High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hôte, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.

THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.

THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.

A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.

Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads. Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.

Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.

Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.

New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare, Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,

Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.

To be obtained from Thos. Cook, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON.

Telephone; 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade and commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.

Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors.

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL.

SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.

Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head.

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.

Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill.

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau, 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 30s. Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address: "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY,

Within easy access of London.

THE BUSH HOTEL.

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers, inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 1s. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable, being on sand.

DEVONSHIRE'S DELIGHTFUL DRINK.—The very best beverage for GOLFERS is WHITEWAY'S PURE CYDER. Refreshing, cooling, and a panacea for Gout, Rheumatism, and Obesity.

Booklets free from WHITEWAY'S, The Orchards, Whimple, Devon, and 22 and 23, Albert Embankment, S.W. Telephone 173 Hop.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

VULCAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E.

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer).

"'Is it a Private House or an Hotel?' is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels."

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGERESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29, Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

1, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

Club Houses can be efficiently and economically lighted by

ACETYLENE.

Write H. BAKER, 49, Victoria Street, S.W.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. Cox, New Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL.—Brinklea, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library, Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052.

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class. |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned, from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains.

ON BLUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY.

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.
Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Booklet and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

ZÜRICH.—DOLDER GRAND HOTEL, First-class English frequented house in extensive well-wooded grounds, 2,000ft. above sea level. Golf links in front of the hotel; tennis; motoring centre. Electric Tram and funicular service with Zürich Central Station (25 min.). Electro-magnetic therapeutical treatment (E. K. Muller's method).—Manager, E. DIELMANN.

SHERINGHAM, NORFOLK.

THE SHERINGHAM HOTEL,

ADJOINING GOLF LINKS (18 HOLES).

LARGEST HOTEL IN SHERINGHAM. Open all the year round. Handsome Dining Hall, 57ft. long. Numerous spacious Suites of Rooms commanding beautiful Sea and Land Views. Billiard and Smoking Rooms. Excellent and Improved Sanitary arrangements. Extensive Private Grounds. Lawn tennis, croquet. First-class Stables. Accommodation for Motors and Cycles. Through Trains from King's Cross, Peterborough, Birmingham, Leicester, etc.

Telegrams - "Sheringham Hotel, Sheringham."

National Telephone: No. 3. F. EDENS, Manager.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.
Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.
Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & Co.
Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.
MODERATE TARIFF.
Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months

Perfect Sanitary arrangements.
Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year.

Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel.—Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors, EMMERSON & HARRIS.

THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE

Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit

Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE." National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL.

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms.

Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

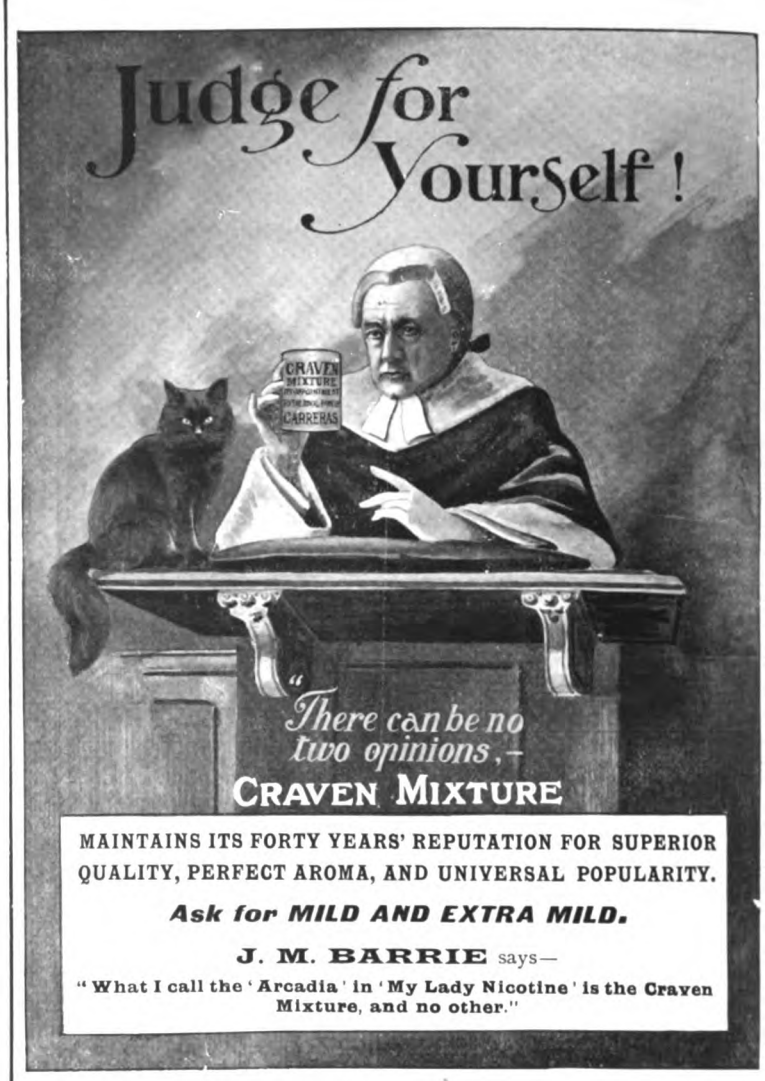
Digitized by Google

SAVORY & MOORE'S BEST FOOD FOR INFANTS AND INVALIDS

If the food given in infancy is the right food, strong bodies, powerful muscle, and energetic brains will be built up. It is for this reason that "Savory & Moore's Best Food" is so popular with mothers, nurses, and doctors, many of whom use it in their own families, and the most striking proof of its excellence is afforded by the fact that its use has been adopted in so many Royal Nurseries. Dr. W—— writes that he "finds 'Savory & Moore's Best Food' agrees better with children than any other, and always recommends it to his patients as being by far the best assimilated by delicate infants."

The value of "Savory & Moore's Best Food for Infants and Invalids" for convalescents, the aged, and those of weak digestion, is very great. It is enjoyed, and is well digested and retained, when every other food fails One special reason why it is so much appreciated is that it may be prepared in so many different ways, without either its digestibility or nutritive value being in the slightest degree lessened or impaired.

"Savory & Moore's Best Food" is supplied by all Chemists and Drug Stores, in tins, at 1s., 2s., 5s. and 10s. A LARGE TRIAL TIN will be sent post free for six penny stamps by Messrs. Savory & Moore, Limited, Chemists to The King, 143, New Bond Street, London, W., to all who mention this paper, together with handbook of great interest to mothers, nurses, and those having the care of invalids.



MAINTAINS ITS FORTY YEARS' REPUTATION FOR SUPERIOR QUALITY, PERFECT AROMA, AND UNIVERSAL POPULARITY.

Ask for MILD AND EXTRA MILD.

J. M. BARRIE says—

"What I call the 'Arcadia' in 'My Lady Nicotine' is the Craven Mixture, and no other."

TIME

cannot impair the youthful beauty of a skin washed exclusively with Cook's Pure Toilet Soaps. They are thoroughly prepared from skin-nourishing constituents by scientific methods (under scientific control).

Try "Riviera" or "Throne," The Royal Toilet Soap.

OF ALL CHEMISTS AND STORES.

Six Dainty Samples of Cook's Pure Toilet Soaps sent, post free, for six penny stamps.

EDWARD COOK & Co., Ltd., The Soap Specialists, LONDON, E.

CHARLES LEE & SON,

42/-

Specialist Ladies' Outfitters,

98 & 100, WIGMORE STREET

(ONLY ADDRESS).

CAUTION.—Messrs. Lee & Son have no branches, and warn the public against imitations of their goods.

An example in Finest Quality English Crêpe de Chine, with Valenciennes Lace Yoke and Guipure Points, 42/-.

A Blouse suitable for any figure.

POST ORDERS.—The Lady's Pictorial states:—"If you live in the country, have an account with Lee & Son, Wigmore Street; they send the choicest selection of goods by post, while they are cheap for the best Costumiers, Furriers, Lacemen, Specialists in Trousseaus, The Leewig Petticoat, Royal Crescent Veil, Hosiers, Glovers, Milliners, etc.

CHARLES LEE & SON.
WIGMORE STREET.

VOGELER'S CURATIVE COMPOUND

PURIFIES THE BLOOD
AND
CURES INDIGESTION,
CONSTIPATION, LIVER ILLS, SKIN DISEASES.

"I must honestly say your Vogeler's Curative Compound has done me a lot of good. My face and neck are quite clear of the Eczema, and I feel so much better in every respect since taking the medicine. I used to have indigestion and wind very bad after eating, but I am now quite free from both these ailments."

(Signed) Miss S. MORRIS,

June 2nd, 1904. Ash Cottage, Court Road, Malvern.

Price 1/1½ and 2/6; of all Chemists.

LARGE FREE SAMPLE

sent on receipt of penny stamp for postage (mentioning this paper) by the Sole Proprietors,

ST. JACOBS OIL, Ltd., 45, Farringdon Road, London.

Digitized by Google

GOLF AT HOME AND ABROAD.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

VOL. XX. No. 447. SATURDAY, AUGUST 26th, 1905. PRICE 6D.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Bassano.

SIR JOHN DICKSON-POYNDER, BART., M.P.

Prospective Independent Free Trade Candidate for the Chippenham Division of Wiltshire.

(See page 673.)

Digitized by Google

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 447. Saturday, Aug. 26, 1905.

Editorial Offices—20, TAVISTOCK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephones—No. 2,748 GERRARD, AND 7,961 CENTRAL.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully backed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

THE KING IN MARIENBAD.—One of the first things that was said of King Edward when he arrived in Marienbad was that he was looking extremely well. Considering that he had just spent a week at Cowes in the "Victoria and Albert," it was perhaps only to be supposed that he would be looking a little sunburnt. But it is indicative of the keen attention with which people in this country follow his movements that the information was received with a keen sense of pleasure. And now, comfortably installed in his quarters at the Hotel Weimar, or, at least, as comfortably as the rather pressing attentions of the visitors to the Spa will allow him to be, he is taking the waters of the Abbot of Tepl, to whose Priory the springs belong, in strict accordance with the programme mapped out by his medical adviser. It is not generally known that the waters of Marienbad are under the control of a religious body, and that it was less than a century ago that Abbé Reitenberger, the then head of the monastery, took advantage of the prevailing fashion for taking Glauber's salts cold instead of hot, and evolved Marienbad out of a few wood-cutters' cottages. The various "brunnen" or springs at Marienbad are named after famous people who drank from them in the early days, with the exception of the Kreuzbrunnen, which is the most favoured of all.

M. WITTE AND BARON ROSEN
The Russian envoys to the Peace Conference.

THE QUEEN AT THE ZOO.—It is becoming more and more evident that Queen Alexandra, like a modern Haroun-al-Raschid, is continually moving about among us unrecognised. Just before she left London on her flying visit to Deeside, which has lasted much longer than was expected, she went one day, accompanied by the Princess of Wales and a few friends, to spend a day at the Zoo, and that day happening to be one on which the charge for admission was sixpence only, there were a large number of people about. Yet the Royal party seem to have visited all the principal sights in the gardens, including the lion house and the reptile house. It happened to be about feeding-time when the Queen was in the lion house, and the two fine lions from Harrar and Central Africa, presented by Queen Victoria, especially attracted her Majesty's attention. Another very frequent visitor to the Zoo of late has been the Prince of Wales, who took his two eldest boys through the gardens. And one of the elephant-keepers claims that he helped the two young Princes to mount the massive charger that so willingly carries parties of gay young people, and some gay old ones too, round the main walks. It is quite probable. Prince Edward and Prince Albert are both too good sportsmen to miss such a chance. By way of celebrating the visit of the French Fleet they have both added to their accomplishments the art of swimming, and though neither took very kindly to the sport at first, now that they are getting more at home in the water they are both very keen on becoming expert swimmers. It would seem possible that Mr. C. B. Fry is to have a Royal rival, or possibly two, in the realms of all-round sport.

THE PRINCE OF WALES'S VISITS.—The Prince of Wales has been paying quite a little round of visits since he left Cowes, and opened the grouse season at Studley Royal as the guest of Lord and Lady Ripon. Here the shooting was excellent and the weather enjoyable. The remainder of the week was spent at Bolton Abbey, where his host and hostess were the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire. From Yorkshire he proceeded to Elginshire, arriving there at the beginning of this week on a visit to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur

BARON KOMURA AND MR. SATO
The Japanese envoys to the Peace Conference.

Sassoon, who had also been of the house-party at Bolton. At the end of this week, should his present arrangements be carried out, he will be in Inverness-shire on a visit to The Mackintosh and Mrs. Mackintosh at Moy Hall. The Mackintosh is the chief of the Clan Chattan and the owner of about 124,000 acres in Inverness-shire. At the beginning of next week the Prince is expected at Abergeldie, where he will join the Princess and the children, who have already been there some days.

Digitized by Google

Copyright.

THE KING IN MARIENBAD.

Travelling as usual incognito as the Duke of Lancaster, King Edward arrived last week in Marienbad for his annual "cure." In the above illustration he may be seen chatting with his physician, Dr. Ott, on the Kurpromenade.

Mendnam.

ROYALTY AT OSTEND.

The Archduchess Frederick of Austria visiting the club-house of the Royal Golf Club of Belgium. Beside the Archduchess is her daughter, the Archduchess Marie and M. Edmond Drugman, who was in attendance on the Archducal party.

Cribb, Southsea

THE CRUISE OF THE CHANNEL FLEET TO THE BALTIC.

Last week the Channel Fleet and the First Cruiser Squadron left Portsmouth on a month's cruise, the greater part of which will be spent in the Baltic. The first port of call was Ymuiden in Holland, and thence the Fleet proceeded to Graa Diep in Denmark.

Boiak.

THE SMITH-HANBURY-TRACY WEDDING.

Lord Sudeley escorting the bride to the church of St. Andrien, Ham. On Thursday last the Hon Rhoda Hanbury-Tracy was married to Mr. Bertram Abel Smith, and after the ceremony Lord and Lady Sudeley, father and mother of the bride, held a reception at Ormeley Lodge, Ham Common.

Digitized by Google

THE RIVER SEASON.

Copyright

THE DONGOLA RACE AT WARGRAVE REGATTA.

Last Saturday the pretty stretch of water between Shiplake Railway Bridge and the George and Dragon was filled with craft of all kinds, on the occasion of the annual regatta. The Dongola Race, of which our illustration shows the start, was won by the Marlow crew.

Copyright.

THE SPECTATORS AT THE BEND.

Watching the third heat in the Ladies' and Gentlemen's Double Sculling Race. In the evening the prizes were distributed by Mrs. Rhodes, and the rather strong wind which had prevailed all day dropping with the sun, the firework display was a great success.

Digitized by Google

SPORT AND PASTIME.

(1) At the Tring Agricultural Show. Miss E. K. Cunliffe driving the w nner of the second prize for pairs, Sam Weller and Buckingham Gentleman. (2) East Berks Horse Show. Mrs. Hartley Batt's Heathfield Squire, first prize winner in the open harness class. (3) Otter Hunting in County Wicklow. Crossing the river under difficulties. (4) Weybridge Regatta. The obstacle race. (5) Royal Automobilists. The Duke of Aosta and his family motoring down to the seashore to bathe at Parisilippe. (6) The Southport Chess Congress. Mr. Herbert Pack's garden party.

(From photographs by Cartwright, W. A. Rouch, Eva West, and Illustrations Bureau.)

Digitized by Google

THE PRINCE AND THE "RENOWN."—For some reason or other it has been deemed more fitting, on the occasion of the visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales to India, to provide them with a war-ship for the voyage instead of chartering a liner. And the old "Renown" has undergone such a metamorphosis in the dockyard at Portsmouth, that those who served in her when she was Sir John Fisher's flag-ship in the Mediterranean would have some little difficulty in finding their way about in her now. All her 6-in. guns have gone, and the casemates have been turned into quarters for the officers, the ward-room and officers' cabins having all been taken for the Royal tourists and their suites. The Admiral's apartments on the main deck are fitted up as dining and drawing rooms, and the stern walk will no doubt be much used during the evenings. The decorative scheme is white and gold, and the quarter-deck is being cleared for use as a ball and reception room. As it is unlikely that, except in the last extremity, the "Renown" would ever be called upon to do service as a battle-ship again, she may, when the present trip is over, become a Royal yacht. She is at least comfortable and commodious, and has many qualities that would make her an admirable floating palace for the Royal family.

THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT IN IRELAND.—The Duke of Connaught takes his duties as Inspector-General of the Forces very seriously, and during the recent manœuvres in Ireland was up night and day in order to have his eye on every move. General Baden-Powell, too, was as indefatigable as if it had been the Real Thing instead of manœuvres, and altogether the two armies representing Connaught and Leinster have been kept well up to the mark. This week the Duke is in Dublin as the guest of the Lord-Lieutenant, with whom he has visited the Horse Show. Last week Lord and Lady Dudley, who were staying in Connemara, gave a children's party for the school children of the neighbourhood, and finished up with a magic-lantern show. Both Lord and Lady Dudley are extremely popular in Ireland, especially with the poorer classes, for whom they have done a great deal in a quiet and unobtrusive way. The Chief Secretary for Ireland and Lady Doreen Long are also in Dublin this week, and after the Horse Show will proceed to County Wicklow, where they propose to spend the month of September.

THE DUKE OF TECK IN BOHEMIA.—After a month's holiday at a castle in Bohemia, the Duke of Teck is about to return to Vienna to finish his term as Military Attaché there. The castle, or, as it is more generally known locally, the hunting lodge, is the property of Count Kinsky, who is well known in Vienna sporting circles, and is a great friend of the Duke of Teck. The present Duchess has made herself as popular with the poorer inhabitants of the neighbourhood as the late Duchess was with the good people of Richmond. And this gave rise to a pretty incident one day. A tennis party was being held in the grounds of the castle, and the Duke and Duchess were busy entertaining their guests, when there appeared an old peasant woman. She had been told to come up to the castle to get some little present the Duchess had promised her, and, bewildered at the lodge gates, had wandered on to the lawn by mistake. The Duchess knew at once what had happened, and, running up to the old lady, she took her affectionately by the arm, and chatting gaily led her to the housekeeper's room, where, having seen her safely, she left her and returned to her other guests.

Uhlenhuth, Coburg.

THE CROWN PRINCESS OF ROUMANIA

With her three younger children, Princess Elisabeth, Princess Marie, and Prince Nicholas. The Crown Princess has been staying in England for some time this summer, and with Princess Elisabeth has paid a number of visits to friends in this country.

THE DUTCH AND BRITISH NAVIES.—There is something very fitting in the circumstance that after entertaining the French Fleet at Portsmouth, the British Channel Fleet should proceed to Dutch waters, and there meet with a cordial and hearty reception. For it was with Holland that we had some of those stiff struggles in the days that are passed that render nations illustrious, and give to the combatants that respect for each other that is the foundation of real friendship. It is a remarkable thing that it should be a Dutch Admiral whose name is nearly always remembered immediately after Nelson's, and yet if the average schoolboy is asked to name the two greatest seamen of the past, nine times out of ten he will reply, "Nelson and Van Tromp." It is a striking testimony to the effect that the prowess of the great Dutch Admiral had upon public opinion in this country that his name should be remembered so well. That same schoolboy would have much ado to remember the name of Nelson's opponent at Trafalgar.

QUEEN WILHELMINA.—The visit of the British Naval officers to the Hague has drawn the attention of the British public once more to the sad and pathetic figure of the girl-Queen of Holland. To-day, as in the earliest days of her reign, the Dutch Royalists, and many of the other parties also, speak of her affectionately as Wilhelmintje, for her brave bearing under the cares of State and private misfortunes has endeared her to them more than ever. But the Queen herself has felt those cares and those troubles very, very keenly, and her face is to-day that of a woman many years her senior. At Loo she leads a simple and pastoral existence; but the old château there does not to-day see the lively house-parties, the romps, and the private theatricals that made its old walls gaily resound with laughter. The duties of Government in Holland are as exacting as elsewhere, and the heavy burden that the young Queen has to bear is little lightened by the devoted and whole-hearted assistance given her by all her Ministers, her private equerries, and her friends. For no detail is too small to escape her notice, and every document brought for her signature must be read and understood before she will attach the boldly-written "Wilhelmina" to it.

Digitized by Google

COLONIALS AS GOVERNORS.—The late Sir Ambrose Shea has been described as one of the few oversea Britons who have become Governors of Colonies. This is not correct. Many West Indians have risen to this rank in the Imperial service, and there is one at the present moment—Sir Henry Jackson, Governor of Trinidad. Sir Francis Hincks, a Canadian statesman of distinction a generation ago, was Governor of Barbados, the Windward Islands, and British Guiana in succession. Sir Frederick Weld, a New Zealander, was Governor of Western Australia, and afterwards of Tasmania and the Straits Settlements. But no Colonial has filled the post of Governor in his own Colony, though General Macarthur, a Peninsular veteran, and son of the founder of the pastoral industry in New South Wales, was Governor of Victoria for a year. He and Sir Fenwick Williams, the hero of Kars, are the only Colonials who have been appointed commandants of the forces in their own Colony. Sir Ambrose Shea was a native of Newfoundland, and it was his great ambition to become Governor of the island. But it was never gratified. He was the founder of the sisal industry in the Bahamas.

CAPE NEUTRALITY.—It is possible to sympathise with the Germans in their "little war," and, at the same time, regret that they are inclined to lay the blame at the door of the British authorities rather than their own. That is not the way to build up an Empire. In South-West Africa, or anywhere else, men must learn by the light of experience, and adapt their civil and military policy to the circumstances. Instead of doing this the Germans are hurling wild charges at the Cape Ministry, which is observing strict neutrality. We are a long-suffering people; but we are hardly prepared to take a share in a neighbour's war, produced by a policy of which we disapprove. But this is apparently what the Germans expect of the Cape Colony. Not content with the service rendered them by the Bechuanaland authorities, who have kept the natives on the outside of the border from rushing to the assistance of their kinsfolk, they want us to allow them to make Cape Town a base of supplies, and to act as policemen in their interest on the frontier. As we mean to maintain peace in South Africa, we naturally enough decline. Hence the outcry in Berlin.

LADY NORTHCOTE IN AUSTRALIA.—Though we hear little of Lady Northcote, she is one of the most popular ladies who have ever presided over Government House in Australia, and that is saying a good deal. A little while ago she gave the tone to the manners of young girls by striking off her list one whose "fastness" displeased her at a Viceregal function. Now she is setting an example to the rich by ordering all her dresses from Sydney and Melbourne firms instead of sending to London or Paris for them. Lady Northcote, who is a Canadian, is totally unlike the popular idea of a millionaire's daughter. She has the modern woman's energy and wide outlook on life, but she has, also, that nameless charm which is fragrant of an older time. She and Lord Northcote were so much beloved in Bombay that when they left their passage to the quay was like a Royal progress.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Lallie Charles.

VERA AND MOLLY, DAUGHTERS OF MRS. MENDEL

Both of whom took part in the Children's Fête at the Botanic Gardens. The eldest, Vera, took the part of the Chief Attendant on Queen Dido, and the younger was a Court baby.

A POPULAR OFFICER.—Major the Hon. Henry Granville Heneage, D.S.O., who has retired from the 12th (Prince of Wales's Royal) Lancers, is the second son of Lord Heneage. He saw much service in the South African War, taking part in the relief of Kimberley and Paardeberg. He was also in those hotly-contested fights, Diamond Hill and Driefontein. His wife, whom he married last year, is very beautiful. She was born in Natal, where her father, Mr. Sidney Cuthbert, settled as a young man. His elder brother, however, died unexpectedly, and he inherited Beaufront Castle, a fine old property near Hexham. The family then came to England, where Mr. Cuthbert died. His widow, daughter of a Natal Colonist, is still living, and their son, who is an officer in the Scots Guards, married Lady Anne Byng, daughter of the Earl of Strafford, a year or two ago. Both the Heneages and the Cuthberts are English families of great antiquity.

AN ANGLO-AMERICAN ENGAGEMENT.—Americans are keenly interested in the engagement of Mr. Robert of New York and Miss Maud Sullivan, only child of the late Sir Edward Sullivan. The popular idea is that Englishwomen of birth do not marry Americans. But this is entirely erroneous. Lady Sybil Cuffe, daughter of the Earl of Desart, and Lady Mildred Bowes-Lyon, daughter of the Earl of Strathmore, both married Americans, and so did a daughter of Lord Avebury. Mrs. Marshall Roberts is a daughter of Sir George Murray, and Mrs. Fitzhugh Whitehouse of Sir George Duntze. Miss Sullivan is a cousin of Admiral Sir E. Sullivan, who succeeded her father in the baronetcy in 1894. She and her mother are well-known figures in the society of Brighton. Sir Edward was a great yachtsman, and in his day had a considerable reputation as a writer on public affairs. His style was trenchant, and he had always something to say worth hearing. Mr. Robert has a place in England, so that he is not likely to carry off his bride to the United States, as Mr. Cutting did Lady Sybil Cuffe.

THE NEW GOVERNOR OF QUEENSLAND.—The Government have discovered that the Disraelian tradition in the choice of Colonial Governors is a good one. It has, at any rate, the merit of working well. Both the Colonies and the Mother Country benefit, and both are satisfied. But Mr. Chamberlain created a new precedent. For some reason he appointed distinguished soldiers and sailors to the post of Lieutenant-Governor. But in a self-governing Colony their talents were wasted, and this the Government soon perceived. Hence the appointment of Lord Chelmsford, whose laurels are yet to win. He is a young man with a charming wife and a young family. To Londoners he is best known as a County Councillor. That he will be successful and come back with valuable experience will be the wish of all who know his capabilities and his great charm of manner. Lady Chelmsford is a daughter of Lady Wimborne, and has the Churchill ability and wit. As it is on his wife that much of the success of a Governor depends, Lord Chelmsford is, indeed, fortunate.

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

ONE is apt to talk of the future of the motor-boat as if it were an experimental type of vessel which had not yet arrived at the stage of practical utility. This may to a certain extent be true of the larger craft, or of the purely racing boat, in the construction and design of which the builders have yet much to learn. I have lately had an opportunity, however, of observing the great advances which have recently been made in one particular class of motor-boat, and the widespread recognition which has been accorded to its obvious advantages. A couple of years ago the yacht's motor-launch was comparatively rare, and the occasional specimens seen were regarded with the suspicion and dislike with which any novelty is usually received in this country. There may have been some excuse for this feeling, as the early boats were usually noisy, smelly, and hopelessly unreliable, although perhaps undue stress was laid on their failings, and their merits were often forgotten.

Since those days, however, a remarkable change has come over the scene. It is almost the exception rather than the rule to see a well-found sailing yacht without a motor-launch or dinghy. To use a hackneyed expression, this type of motor-boat has filled a long-felt want. Hitherto a launch has been a luxury denied to all but the owners of steam yachts and the largest class of sailing vessels, and even in the latter the inconvenience of carrying a supply of coal, and the expense of an additional hand to run it, constituted a serious drawback to its use. Moreover, in any sailing yacht under about 100 tons the weight of a steam launch is almost prohibitive. As a matter of fact, it is in the smaller vessels, where the crews are limited in number and the boat work is correspondingly more arduous, that a launch of some sort is most required and most greatly appreciated. Where motive power replaces manual labour, it is immaterial whether the yacht is anchored a hundred yards or a mile from the shore, or whether one or a dozen trips have to be made in the day. The pleasure of yachting is enormously increased if one can explore at will the charming creeks and estuaries that are met with on our coasts. Then, again, the sailing vessel that carries a launch is often enabled thereby to reach her port, while her less well-equipped sister remains becalmed outside, or vainly attempts to enter against wind and tide. The towing powers of a small launch may be limited, but even 3 miles or 4 miles an hour is generally ample speed to enable one to enter a harbour under the most adverse conditions. All these advantages are now placed within the reach of the owner of any yacht above 30 tons, and it is hardly surprising that many of the boat-builders round our coasts have been overwhelmed with orders for little motor-launches of from 13-ft. or 14-ft. upwards in length. I have even seen a 20-ton yacht carrying a 12-ft. 2½-h.p. motor-dinghy in davits, and the owner told me that it was an enormous success in every way, and very little more trouble to hoist in than the somewhat heavy "punt" which it replaced.

M. Rol et Cie.

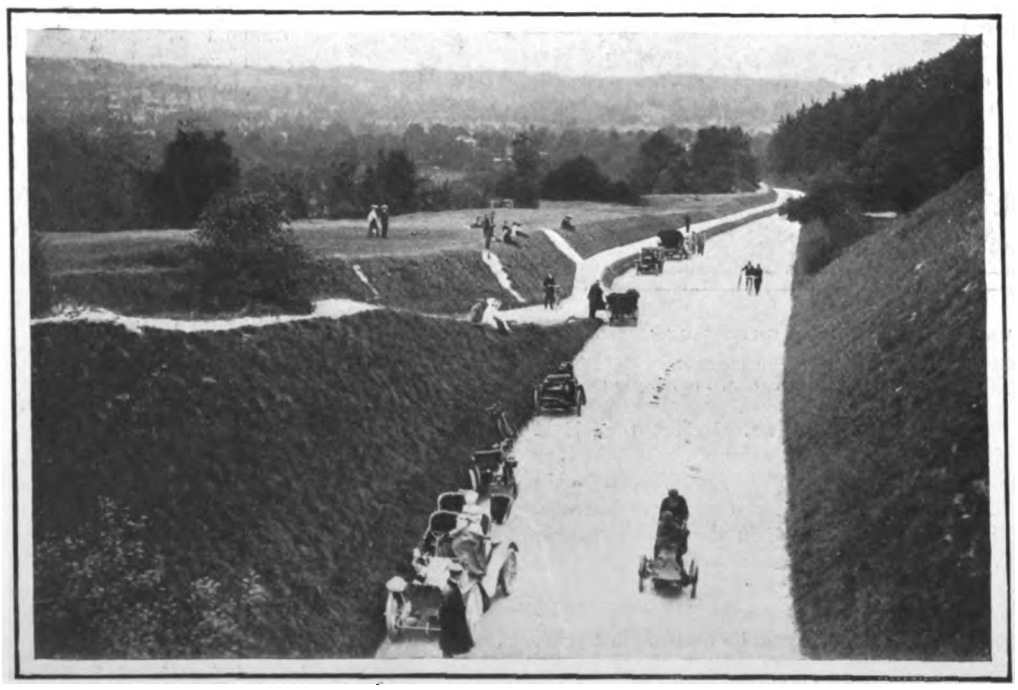
MOTOR-BOATS ON LAKE LUCERNE.

The scene at the landing-stages during the motor-boat race-meeting last week. A large number of well-known boats competed.



THE MOTOR-CYCLE RELIABILITY TRIALS.

Throughout last week the Auto-Cycle Club held a series of reliability trials, for which there were thirty-one entries. The run on Saturday was from Eastbourne to London, by way of Bexhill, Folkestone, and Reigate.

Most of the minor troubles that still occasionally harass the motorist and cause him for a time to lose faith in the reliability of his machine arise from defects in the ignition apparatus. I recently had an experience which serves to illustrate how some minute derangement may upset the entire running of an engine. A car which I was driving suddenly developed unmistakable signs of premature ignition. That terrible clanging which tells of a sorely-tried crank shaft made me speedily stop in order to investigate matters. I had only just started on a run, so as the cause of the mischief was not immediately apparent, I started up the engine again in order to return, but as I reached the motor-house the noise commenced again. I spent some hours in laboriously overhauling and testing the ignition, without discovering the cause of the mischief, and was about to give up the search in disgust when by the merest chance it was revealed. All the plugs were out, and for the third or fourth time I was testing them. I had left one sparking for a minute or more while I cudgelled my brains, when I saw a faint smoke rising from the porcelain. Carefully shading it from the light, I saw that the sooty deposit near the central wire where it issued from the porcelain was incandescent. A careful examination showed that there was a minute crack in the porcelain through which a portion of the current was short-circuiting. No doubt when the plug was in the cylinder the increased resistance of the compressed gases caused the spark to take place through the crack instead of across the points of the wires, with the result that any oil in its path quickly became white-hot and fired the next charge prematurely. At any rate, I changed the plug, and the trouble was immediately cured.

Another experience may prove of value to inexperienced owners of cars in which the petrol tank is placed beneath the driver's seat.

Digitized by Google

A friend who drove a De Dion arrived one afternoon in great trouble, owing to the repeated stoppages of his car on the way down from London. Every mile or so the engine would slow down, and finally stop altogether. After having a look at his sparking plug—the first resource of the beginner—and agitating the float spindle, he found that the car would start up again and run perfectly for a few minutes. The engine was quite cool, the ignition apparently in good order, so I suspected dirt in the carburettor, which, after a somewhat laborious overhaul, proved to be free from water or sediment. I took the car out myself, and at the end of about half a mile she faltered and then stopped, in a manner which spoke clearly of lack of petrol. When I dismounted and lifted the bonnet, however, the float chamber seemed to be full, and the owner declared that the top of the spindle was at its normal height above the cover. We, nevertheless, disconnected the petrol pipe, when a great rush of spirit was followed by an intermittent drip. The simple cause of the trouble, which I ought to, perhaps, have suspected from the first, was then apparent. The screw-cap in the petrol tank is pierced with a small hole, in order to admit air as the level of the spirit is lowered. This was blocked up by dirt, and as the engine drew on the supply a partial vacuum was formed in the tank, which checked the proper flow of the petrol to the carburettor. Apparently the flow was not entirely stopped, as unless one immediately examined the carburettor, there always seemed to be plenty of petrol in the float chamber, a fact which might mislead one as to the real source of the trouble. I once heard of a similar case, which, however, was far more difficult to diagnose. The air hole was not blocked by dirt, but whenever the driver took his seat the under-surface of the cushion pressed on the screw-cap and effectually prevented any air entering the tank. In a few miles the motor was consequently starved of fuel, but directly the driver dismounted to investigate matters the partial vacuum was destroyed, and the petrol flowed into the carburettor, thus effectually misleading him as to the real source of the trouble.

RADIATOR.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Copyright.

A 24-H.P. DOUBLE PHAETON CAR.
One of the latest examples of Messrs. Thornycroft's work.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

EDITED BY A. J. ROBERTSON.

As a preliminary to the opening round of the professional foursome for £400, which began at St. Andrews on Wednesday of this week, Braid and Vardon spent an enjoyable holiday playing round the fine courses in East Lothian. Naturally enough both players took it easy, and though there were one or two four-ball foursomes, the play, as a rule, was confined to the ordinary foursome, in which each professional had an amateur as his partner. Being in the heart of the finest golf district in Scotland, it was easy for Braid and Vardon, who were the guests of Mr. Purssell at the Golf Hotel, Aberlady, to vary the green in each day's play, and the result was that the visitors from far and near resident about the East Lothian links had a grand opportunity of seeing, without restraint or inconvenience, two of the best players the game has as yet produced.

* * *

Accompanied by Mr. George Riddell of the News of the World, the backer of Braid and Herd in this match, matches were played over the two courses at Gullane, at New Luffness, Archerfield, and Kilspindie. In one of the early matches Braid and Mr. Riddell played Vardon and Mr. J. B. Stevenson of Gullane. Braid was in brilliant form, taking the first six holes of the old course in an average of two under 4's. Vardon and his partner were not more than a stroke or two behind the better part of the way round, but Braid and Mr. Riddell won a good match by 3 and 2 to play. In the afternoon the result was reversed, Vardon and Mr. Stevenson winning by 3 and 1. The next day New Luffness was visited, and here Vardon had as his partner the Hon. Evan Charteris, against Mr. A. Mackenzie Ross, one of the leading amateurs in Scotland for a generation, and Mr. J. T. Gillespie. Though the two last named lost the first two holes, they had the match square at the fifth green. Fine players as Mr. Ross and Mr. Gillespie are, they could not contend against the particularly brilliant game of Vardon off the tee and on the putting green, and getting some rather bad luck on the way home, Messrs. Ross and Gillespie lost the match by 5 and 4. In the other match Mr. Riddell and Braid played against Mr. J. B. Stevenson and Mr. Oliver Thomson, the last named giving a handicap of 2 holes. The match was all square at the seventeenth green, and Braid and Mr. Riddell won by a putt at the last hole.

GOLF AT WIMEREUX.
The professional, G. Wall, bunkered at the 5th hole.

* * *

One of the curious facts about these matches is that no attempt has been made to visit North Berwick. The congested state of the links at this season of the year there is having the effect of driving golfers westwards to the more open greens of Gullane and Luffness. A service of motor-omnibuses between Gullane and North Berwick now makes it very easy for golfers to live in the gayer social surroundings there, and to enjoy a splendid variety of golf at North Berwick, Muirfield, Archerfield, two courses at Gullane, New Luffness, and Kilspindie, all within less than an hour's drive. In this way the cure for the congestion at North Berwick may be eventually found. The golfers who can afford to pay for their holiday amusement without stint do not love a crowd; and North Berwick's disadvantage in the way of a golf crowd is contributing to the gain of Gullane, where handsome villas are springing up every year round the picturesque golf course.

* * *

The annual competition of the Varese Golf Club will be held at Varese, Italy, on October 4 next.

* * *

What is "a peckle"? It is impossible to read Mr. Croome's pathetic words, "A truly struck ball does not skid, and if a ball is struck so foul as to want to skid, neither ribs, nor peckles, nor chalk will stop it from going to perdition," without a responsive tear. But what is a peckle, and who introduced it into our golfing Eden? If any brazen-fronted iconoclast had dared to put a peckle on the face of one of Old Philp's clubs, it is as certain

GOLF AT WIMEREUX.
A view of the beach and village of Wimereux, near Boulogne, looking east.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

as one of Mr. Low's putts, say, that the wise, great, and good man would have promptly used words in which there was considerably less mystery—if any at all. However, the subject seems worthy of poetical treatment:

"Some lo'e their lo'es flat-footed, and some, 'twould seem, wi' freckles;
And mony a maid has lost her heart to Hielant lads wi' heckles;
Fair fa' the burn's wee troutie, wi' a' its hunner' speckles,
An' leeze me on the canty club wi' its pickle pawky peckles!"

W. DALRYMPLE.

THE BOULOGNE GOLF CLUB.

THE Boulogne Golf Club Links, on the Race-course at Aubergnes, near Wimereux, were laid out about four years ago by G. Walls, the local professional, in conjunction with G. Cribbin of Hythe. The course, which at present consists of nine holes, about 2,600-yds. long, with plenty of sporting hazards, will shortly be lengthened to eighteen holes. The green fees are: One day, 2·50-fr.; three days, 5-fr.; one week, 10-fr.; and 25-fr. for one month.

GOLF AT WIMEREUX.
The 5th hole, showing the bunker, the starting-gate on the race-course, and the Cosmopolite Hotel in the distance.

THE WIMEREUX LINKS.
A view of the links at the 4th hole; Ambleteuse lies beyond the sand-hills. The players are Mr. Scott Mr. Mather, and Mr. O'Leary.

Numerous competitions were arranged throughout August and September, including Boulogne Challenge Cup, August 14 to 16 Gentlemen's Foursomes, August 20; Prix de la Compagnie du Chemin fer du Nord August 27; Approach and Putting, September 3; Casino Prizes (ladies), September 4; Mixed Foursomes, September 10; Casino Prizes (gentlemen), September 17.

Monsieur H. Thiery, 11, Rue des Vieillards, Boulogne, is the hon. secretary. A very fine service of electric cars run between Boulogne and Wimereux, distance three miles, fare 2½d. Visitors with their families cannot do better than stay at Wimereux. The sands and sea-bathing are splendid. There are a number of tennis courts, and the Casino, with its petits chevaux, is magnificently got up, adjoining the Hôtel Splendide, after the type of the Gordon Hotels. One can, however, stay on the links at the Cosmopolite for about 7-fr. a day, or the Briché for about 6-fr. a day, both very clean and comfortable. I spent a few days in Boulogne itself, at the Hôtel Meurice, for 11-fr. a day. The sole advantage that I could see in staying in Boulogne was that it was handier if one wished to play some days at Etaples and other days at Wimereux.

A. V. D. RINTOUL.

THE LOSSIEMOUTH GOLF COURSE.

NORTH of Aberdeen there are four golf courses that may be reckoned of the first order—Cruden Bay, Lossiemouth, Nairn, and Dornoch. Each of these has its individual features and special charms, and golfers who have played on all four would probably hesitate to give any one of them special pre-eminence. The Lossiemouth course, which belongs to the Moray Golf Club, is unquestionably one of the finest greens in the country. In length it extends to nearly 3½ miles, and eight of the holes range between 366-yds. and 593-yds., so there is great scope for brassie play. Most of the greens are exceedingly good, and a true and straight putt is generally rewarded with success.

The chief hazards are sand bunkers, some natural and some artificial, whins and ditches. The whins are the most troublesome, especially to the uncertain and erratic player. It is not

THE WIMEREUX LINKS.
Mr. Scott, one of the leading players, playing from a bad lie at the 4th hole.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

THE LOSSIEMOUTH LINKS.

A view of Stotfield, showing the ground on the links over which the approach is played to the home hole.

that there are whin hazards to carry from the tees. A straight ball is never punished by lying in the whins, but a pulled or sliced shot may get the player into serious difficulties. There is on this course no lifting out of the whins with a penalty. The ball must be played or the hole surrendered. When the course was first opened the masses of whin bushes along the course were excessive, but they have been during the last two or three years greatly thinned, and a ball which lies among them is generally found.

The Lossiemouth course possesses one feature which, so far as the writer knows, is peculiar to itself. Standing on the terrace in front of the club-house, with the last green just below, the course lies spread out before the spectator like a great panorama. With a good field-glass it is possible to follow the players from hole to hole, and the putting can be seen on all but two of the greens. This makes the course a very interesting one to the spectator as well as the golfer, and on fine afternoons the terrace is generally occupied by a brightly-dressed crowd watching the progress of the different matches. The growth of Lossiemouth, or, to speak more correctly, of Stotfield, is a striking illustration of the change which has been effected at so many places by the spread of golf. The course lies below the village of Stotfield, which is somewhat under a mile from Lossiemouth Station. Some years ago Stotfield was a small fishing hamlet built on the cliff which overlooks the golf course. It consisted, perhaps, of thirty or forty thatched houses of the poorest kind. Then some of the wealthier residents in Elgin began to build cottages and villas by the sea; but it remained a comparatively obscure place until its golfing capabilities were discovered and developed. Now it is one of the most pretty and picturesque towns which can be seen on the coast. Two large and well-managed hotels provide for the accommodation of golfers. Lines of imposing houses and villas crown the slope which overlooks the course, and there are besides numbers of comfortable cottages of less pretentious appearance. Practically all this is due to golf, which has changed a small and secluded village into a popular and fashionable resort.

The course is generally level. There is very little climbing to be done, and this in the case of elderly golfers, or of players who are doing two or three rounds a day, is a consideration of some importance. To those who, in addition to the pleasures of the game, love to have beautiful and picturesque surroundings, the course at Lossiemouth presents almost unrivalled charms. It would be difficult to find a course which combines more completely the attractions of sea and hill. Going out the golfer has on his right the broad waters of the Moray Firth, and in the distance the hills of Sutherlandshire. On his left lies a wide stretch of the plain of Moray, with the most northerly summits of the Grampians in the background. The peak of Benrinnes is seen on a clear day with perfect distinctness, while the nearer and lower spurs of the hills are generally visible. The course runs out in a sort of curve in the direction of the lighthouse, which warns the sailor of the dangers of the Covesea Rocks, and gives its name to one of the holes. The first hole, Mount Lebanon, lies behind a lofty sandy bunker, studded with patches of bent, and if

THE LINKS AT LOSSIEMOUTH.

A view of the home green and a perspective of the links, showing the billowy and attractive character of the ground.

GOLF AT LOSSIEMOUTH.

Driving to the 15th or short hole. The players are Principal Fairbairn of Oxford, Mr. J. Macleod, H.M.I.S., Mr. Grant Gibson, and Mr. Duncan.

GOLF AT LOSSIEMOUTH.

The presentation of prizes at the annual tournament of the Northern Counties Meeting, with view of club-house and the Marine and Stotfield Hotels.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

ROYAL LIVERPOOL GOLF CLUB.

(1) The Hoylake club-house: Mr. Janion, the hon. secretary, standing under one of the arches. (2) Mr. Robert Johnstone driving at the 2nd tee. (3) Mr. C. MacDiarmid putting at the 7th hole; Mr. Tarbert, his opponent, in the distance behind the caddie. (4) Mr. J. Cullen driving from the 11th tee. (5) Mr. J. Graham (father of the crack player) at the 6th hole. (6) Mr. J. Johnstone taking plenty of sand at the 13th hole.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

the player does not clear it well he is likely to be in difficulties. The next hole is nearly 400-yds., but if a low bunker is cleared at the drive the way to the hole is comparatively safe. The third hole, Pitgaveney, is short and easy. The fourth, known as Skerry-cliff, the longest on the course, is 493-yds., and a good player, if the wind be not too strong, may get on the green in 3, though 6 is the "Bogey." The fifth, a hole known as the Cup, is one of the prettiest on the course. A good drive and a mashie shot are sufficient to carry the ball to the green, but the mashie must be delicately played in order to give a chance of this, and make a certain 4. The sixth, known as the table hole, is somewhat ragged through the course, but the green is beautifully placed on the top of a bank, and in approaching too strong a shot is punished by getting into a rough country. The seventh and eighth holes have no special character, and should both be done in 4. In the case of the ninth hole, a ditch runs diagonally across the course, and unless the drive is straight it may land the ball in the ditch or on heavy ground. The tenth, eleventh, and twelfth holes are good sporting holes, though the turf is heathy rather than grassy. The lies, however, are generally good. The thirteenth or V. hole is a long but not a difficult hole. A long drive with a following wind may be trapped at the ditch, but otherwise it is an easy 5. The fourteenth or Beacon hole requires to be played with great accuracy. On the left there is a bunker, and on the right whins, but it should easily be done in 4. The fifteenth or short hole—160 yds.—ought to be a safe 3, unless the drive is foozled or pulled into the bent. The last three holes are all long, and afford magnificent scope for brassie play. It may be mentioned that the tenth hole is called St. Gerardine, after a saint who is locally regarded as the patron saint of fishermen. The tradition is that before the day of lighthouses and beacons he used to stand on dark and stormy nights with a light on the shore in order to guide the fishermen safely into their haven.

The club have a lease of the land up to the lighthouse for fifty years, and the making of a full second course would only be a matter of time and money. The existing course during the height of the season is very crowded, and the ballot has to be used to determine the order of play. With the view of relieving the pressure the club some time ago decided to make another course of nine holes within the ambit of the present one. This work was begun some time ago. Some of the greens for the new course are ready, and it will shortly be opened. Lady players will mostly take the nine-hole course, and it will be useful to gentlemen who want a half round. The rent paid for the course is so moderate that it must excite the envious regret of golf clubs in the South. The course lies partly on the estates of Captain Dunbar Brander and of Sir W. Gordon Cumming. The latter gives his share of the land for a shilling a year; but he reserves for himself and any friends who may accompany him the right to tee off before all other players and to pass them through the green. The privilege is not very frequently or ungraciously exercised. The "Bogey" score, 84, is easy.

In the person of Charles Neaves the club have a fine professional. The caddies are mostly the sons of Lossiemouth fishermen. Few of them play golf, or are of much use to the inexperienced player. They are generally a silent and unresponsive lot, whose conversational powers do not extend beyond a yes or no. They can at times, however, speak with brutal frankness, as one golfer found. He was playing in a mixed foursome and making a terrible mess of his game. He appealed to his caddie, and asked what he could do to play better. "If you want to play gowff," said the caddie, "dinna play wi' women." There was sound sense if little gallantry in the advice. On another occasion a player who was foozling stroke after stroke despairingly asked his caddie, "Shall I ever play golf?" and received the consoling reply, "Never."

Golf is, of course, the main feature of Lossiemouth. There is a very fine bowling green behind the Stotfield Hotel, on which strangers can play on easy terms. A visit to the rocks and coves of Covesea (pronounced Cousea) is one of the inevitable incidents of a sojourn at Lossiemouth. Several very interesting excursions may be made by the visitor. There is Elgin, with the ruins of its once magnificent cathedral. The banks of the Findhorn form perhaps the most beautiful scenery of their kind in the country. There are many places on Speyside worthy of a visit, and Forres, Inverness, and Nairn can each be compassed within the day. W. JEANS.

Russell, Wimbledon.

THE ANNUAL GOLF CUP COMPETITION OF THE FREE CHURCH MINISTERS AT BANSTEAD.

Back row, left to right—Rev. Dr. Hall (Islington), Revs. D. Caird (Luton), E. Griffith Jones (Balham), Emlyn Jenkins, Percy Alden, G. McLuckie, D. Fallon, — Stone (Luton), H. Grattan-Guinness, Alford Davies (Barnet), and F. Humphrey (Luton). Front row, sitting—Revs. H. Varley, Principal Ritchie (Nottingham), C. Silvester Horne (Whitefield's), J. H. Shakespeare, Joseph Jones (Sutton), winner, J. Holmes (Whitefield's), H. Harries, P. Husband Davies, and Messrs. Platts and W. M. Gubbin.

FIXTURES.

August 24-26.—Dornoch, Annual Tournament.
August 24-31.—Welsh Amateur Championship, at Conway.
August 25-26-28.—Scarborough Town, Open Amateur Meeting.
August 26.—Hanger Hill ("Bogey").
August 26.—Dieppe, Prix de l'Hôtel Royal.
August 27.—Royal Liverpool, Summer Meeting.
August 30-31.—Hunstanton, Summer Meeting.
August 31.—Minchinhampton, Summer Meeting.
September 1.—West Lancashire, Autumn Meeting.
September 2.—Rye, Monthly Medal.
September 2.—Leasowe, Rangoon Cup.
September 2.—Royal Portrush, September Meeting.
September 4.—Royal North Devon, Autumn Meeting.
September 4-6.—Sheringham, Autumn Meeting.
September 5.—Royal and Ancient St. Andrews, Jubilee Vase.
September 5.—Royal Eastbourne, Vaughan Cup.
September 7.—Seaford, Autumn Meeting.
September 7-8-9.—Royal Cromer, Autumn Meeting.
September 9.—Glasgow, Autumn Meeting at Killermont.
September 9.—Formby, Autumn Meeting.
September 9.—Tantallon, Autumn Meeting.
September 13.—Littlehampton, Autumn Meeting.
September 13.—Newquay, Lang Cup.

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. LVIII.—Sir John Dickson-Poynder, Bart., D.S.O., J.P., M.P., Prospective Independent Free Trade Candidate for the Chippenham Division of Wiltshire.

FROM the time when William Dickson, Admiral of the Blue, married Jane Collingwood of Unthank, in Northumberland, towards the middle of the eighteenth century, down to the year 1855, when his descendant, Rear-Admiral John Bourmaster, C.B., became the husband of Sarah Poynder, heiress of Hartham and Hilmarton in Wiltshire, the Dicksons of Pontefract and Ednam have figured conspicuously in the wars of the Empire, both on land and sea. Whenever any fighting was to be done a Dickson was sure to be in the thick of it. Sir Archibald Dickson first distinguished himself as Flag-Lieutenant of the "Royal George" in Lord Howe's great victory of the "Glorious First of June"; Sir Alexander Dickson played an important part a few years later at the siege of St. Sebastian; and in our own times Sir Collingwood Dickson gained the Victoria Cross on the heights of the Alma. It is not surprising, therefore, to learn that the device of the Dicksons, now borne by the sitting member for the Chippenham Division of Wiltshire, consists of "an armed arm, brandishing a falchion proper, a trident and spear saltier," with the appropriate motto, "Fortes fortuna juvat" ("Fortune favours the brave"). Five years ago, as might have reasonably been expected from the militant record of his ancestors, Sir John Dickson-Poynder turned his back for the nonce on politics, both local and Imperial, to go out to South Africa with the Wiltshire Yeomanry, where he did good work as an officer on Lord Methuen's staff, winning the D.S.O., as well as a medal and three clasps. During his absence the sturdy electors of North-West Wilts, who evidently admire pluck both in war and politics, sent him back to Westminster with a largely-increased majority. Born in 1866, the son of the last of the four Dicksons who attained one after another to the rank of Admiral, he was sent while still in his teens to Harrow. After remaining some time under the care of Dr. Butler, he migrated to the "House" at Oxford, at the time when Sir Charles Welby, Mr. Arthur Bourchier, and Mr. "Jerry" Mills were founding the O.U.D.S., and took part in the first Shakespearian performance. Meanwhile, at the age of eighteen, he had succeeded to the baronetcy of his uncle, Sir Alexander Collingwood Dickson, who, like most of his predecessors, was a Naval officer. Home duties in Wiltshire prevented Sir John Dickson-Poynder remaining very long at the 'Varsity, and he lost no time in qualifying himself for public life by joining the Wiltshire Yeomanry, evincing an active interest in county affairs, discharging the duties of High Sheriff in 1890, and becoming Moderate member for Holborn in the London County Council. When six-and-twenty, he first entered Parliament as Conservative member for North-West Wilts, a division comprising within its limits the three ancient towns of Chippenham, Calne, and Malmesbury, from each of which for centuries before the halcyon days of the Napoleonic Wars, so fateful to the Dicksons, two members were sent by a small and select body of electors to the House of Commons. Calne was treated as the private property of the powerful and prosperous Pettys. Lord Macaulay, as a promising youth, once paid a visit to Bowood and returned to London with the nomination in his pocket. In 1896 the member for the Chippenham Division married Miss Anne Beauclerk Dundas, the daughter of Henry Dundas of Glenesk. Their only daughter is named Joan Alice Catherine. Lady Dickson-Poynder is as popular in London society as she is with the tenants at Hartham Park and the electors of North-West Wilts.

LADY DICKSON-POYNDER AND HER DAUGHTER JOAN.
From the picture by J. J. Shannon, R.A., exhibited in this year's Academy.

When in London, Sir John Dickson-Poynder spends a good deal of his time over Blue Books and statistics in a charming study, from the windows of which he can catch a glimpse through the lime trees of the historic mansion in which the great Lord Chesterfield is reported to have given the great Dr. Johnson an unpleasant experience of the tedium of ante-chambering. On the pale green walls hang Sir Joshua Reynolds's famous portraits of Mrs. Collyer and Mrs. Fox, and Italian landscapes by G. P. Panini, while over the mantel-piece Philip Champagne's charming picture of the Abbé Verger of St. Ciran seems to gaze on a tiny group of children by Watteau, while taking a friendly interest in the latest developments of the great fiscal controversy, which have induced the member for North-West Wilts, after mature consideration, to break with his former political associates, and frankly offer himself to his old constituents as a champion of Free Trade, whose Liberalism will have certain well-defined limitations, but who is absolutely with his Majesty's Opposition on the burning question of the hour. The Dicksons have never been men who would submit blindly and without question to the operation of political leading strings. Sir John Dickson-Poynder will withhold his assent from Home Rule as understood by the Acts of 1885 and 1893, from the payment of Members of Parliament, or from the disestablishment of the Church of England. He is favourable only to such useful measures of reform as are neither excessive nor extravagant. On the other hand, he considers that the Education Act should be amended so as to remove its present unfairness to the ratepaying Nonconformist; he denounced the Brodrick Army Corps Scheme as unworkable ab initio, and, as far as Free Trade is concerned, he is a "whole-hogger," voting consistently with the Liberals for its maintenance. Sir John Dickson-Poynder not only insists on thinking for himself, but is distinguished by a spirit of fairness which disarms his bitterest opponent. Knowing full well what the condition of the Wiltshire labourer was in Protectionist times, he firmly declines to be a party to any of Mr. Chamberlain's economic experiments. He called his supporters together two years ago to consider the situation, and subsequently offered to resign and submit himself for re-election. They declined acquiescence in his proposal, but selected a candidate to oppose him. Sir Audley Neild has since given up the contest, leaving Mr. Randolph to cross swords with Sir John Dickson-Poynder whenever it pleases Mr. Balfour to dissolve Parliament. During the past two years Sir John Dickson-Poynder has held meetings all over North-West Wilts, and if appearances may be trusted, the electors of all classes will testify by their vote to a general approval of the course adopted by their present representative, whose conscientiousness is acknowledged and respected alike by friend and foe, and whose chivalrous conduct has been perfectly consistent.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

THE MIDDLE CLASSES AT THE SEASIDE.

HOW to take a family to the seaside and spend as little as possible on the lodging of the said family is the problem that the bourgeois tries to solve as soon as summer sets in. August and September are the two months when schools are closed and children in board schools or colleges take their holiday. For some there are the luxuries of Trouville, Etretat, and other well-known places on the coast; but others seek a less fashionable district, where house rent and provisions are at reasonable prices. The heads of the families scan the newspapers for indications of new plages, of the sands or beach undiscovered by the million, where a villa or cottage can be had for a few hundred francs for the season, where the children and servant can be housed decently, and the sole expense of the holiday be in the rent and railway travelling. "Une petit' trou pas cher" (any little hole that's cheap) is the cry from north to south. And Madame journeys forth with a last recommendation from Monsieur to fix up something somewhere, anywhere where they can breathe for a couple of months. Madame travels to the new place advertised as a "gem," finds a fisherman's home, with the bare necessaries for sleeping, secures it for a couple of hundred francs (£8), and the family go out of town. The flat is locked, and Marie, the bonne, helps the cabman to hoist the last box, and the holiday begins. In the undiscovered plage living is at its simplest expression. The children play, seek mussels and shrimps, bathe and eat; Madame does the marketing, the bonne cooks, and Monsieur reads his paper and sleeps the rest of the day beside Madame, who sews on the yellow sand with the little ones in view. It is not a life wildly gay; but Monsieur is a hard-worked professor who takes his holiday conscientiously.

Chusseau-Flaviens.

THE MORNING DIP.

A typical French family group at Sables-D'Olonne.

At places like Tréport, St. Valérie, or Dieppe, the bourgeois has a little more amusement. The villas are less primitive, and there is always some kind of excitement at the daily meals. The Parisian likes to know what there is for dinner, and if the market women who line the High Street or Grande Rue have brought their fattest poultry and choicest fruit. Remarkable old women these French peasants, with their wrinkled faces and their white caps. They squat on the kerb side by side, as close as peas in a pod, their wares before them, waiting for the ménagère to price their butter and eggs and lift the live chickens from the basket to test their weight. Some drive, some walk miles on a market day, but they come. A French peasant does not trust son, daughter, or grandchild to make as good a bargain as she can herself. And she wipes her old face, puts her pence in her under-pocket beneath the long black apron, shakes the dust from her skirt, and walks away, her wooden shoes sounding on the stones like the tapping of a hammer. Dinner is an important event in a seaside household, but the pleasure of the day begins when the gambling-tables are opened. Madame objects to the sight of the "horrid little horses," and she never enters the suffocating rooms. But Monsieur, who does not share her dislike to the "harmless game"—as he calls it—strolls in "just to see who's there." He occasionally risks a 2-fr. piece, and wins or loses a trifling sum as a rule, but he rarely tells his wife of his good or ill luck. I once knew a family who spent their summer at Tréport. Husband and wife agreed on every point in the day's enjoyment but the gambling question. And Madame was not to be trifled with. She had very decided views on the matter, objecting very strongly to the loss of money at a game of chance. But Monsieur was incorrigible. He would play, and, as a natural consequence, constantly lost. Madame confided in me. "He is losing! I know he is, but I can't find out where he gets the money. We have the same cheque-book. I see all the cheques that are drawn. But I know he is doing me—I feel it." The dear woman worried herself until she was quite ill. Monsieur would come home with his pockets full of 5-fr. pieces, and throw them about right and left. "Here's for you and for you," and the children would pick up the silver in great glee. "And here, my love," he would say to his wife, "is the balance," and he would shake a heap of 5-fr. pieces into her lap. She would smile and seem content, but she was not quite satisfied that he had won the 100-fr. he so freely gave away. She never knew that he would change a note at the tables, as the last horse spun round and the rooms closed for the night, and bring the small money home to please his wife. For some time I puzzled over the doings of this jovial, laughter-loving Frenchman, and wondered what the solution of the problem could be. How did he get the money unknown to his wife? One day he could not keep it to himself any longer, it was such a huge joke. And he rocked himself to and fro, laughing until the tears streamed down his cheeks, and he would take out a handkerchief, and wipe his eyes. He had lost money—pourquoi pas? Didn't everybody lose at Petits Chevaux? How did he get it? Simply enough, quite simply. He wrote his cheques from the end of the book. Ha, ha! it was a joke! And the dear man rocked again.

Of late the medical profession have been lamenting over the suffocating atmosphere of the gambling rooms, and there is a movement to suppress them in certain health centres. But who knows if the patient would be so willing to drink waters and submit to many of the small annoyances of seaside or watering-place if he were not consoled with the vista of "little horses" and tutti quanti.

FRANCES KEYZER.

Digitized by Google

PARISIAN PLAYERS.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

MLLE. MARIANNE FLAHAUT.

Born at Huy, in Belgium, Mlle. Flahaut studied first at the Liége Conservatoire, and subsequently at Paris under Mme. de Padilla. She made her début at the Opera in 1898, as Amnéris in "Aida," and has since played a number of parts in all the principal operas.

(From a copyright photograph by Manuel.)

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

RYDE WEEK is always looked forward to as one of the most interesting regatta weeks of the English season. Following immediately upon Cowes Week, it may be expected to suffer somewhat in comparison, more particularly as a Society function, lacking as it does the presence of Royalty. As a purely yachting institution, it possesses, however, some advantages over Royal Cowes. It can never boast as many yachts in the anchorages as Cowes, and, as a rule, it is not favoured with as big entries for its races. But then it has to be borne in mind that many yachts that one sees at Cowes are never seen at other regattas, while those that take part in the Royal Victoria races at Ryde are practically the pick of the racing fleets.

One great advantage that Ryde possesses is that the whole of the racing can be seen from Ryde Pier, and one always sees large numbers of persons, many of whom are visitors to Ryde and are attracted mainly by the yachting, watching the progress of the races interestedly from the pier-head. Although the entries have been very good this year, there has been just a shade of disappointment at the non-appearance of one or two vessels that were expected. Thérèse was the only one of the five German yachts that raced at Cowes to enter for Ryde. It was not expected that Meteor would enter—the Kaiser's yacht usually only races at Cowes; but it was confidently hoped that the others, having once come to the Solent, would take in the whole round of the regattas in the district. The entries have consisted of what we might term the regular handicap racing fleet and the 52-footers.

Debenham.

CREOLE

Third in the race for the Town Cup at the Royal Victoria Yacht Club's Regatta at Ryde last week. Owned by Colonel Villiers Bagot, she is of 54 tons, Thames measurement, and has taken nearly 400 prizes.

Navahoe was one of the German vessels which it was hoped would have entered, but she will shortly lay up. She was flying a string of seventeen prize flags on the last day of Cowes Week. Two of these were won in England, a first and a second, and, strange to say, these are the only two prizes she has won in English waters during the few years that her present owner has had her. She is forced to sail in the handicaps in this country, and is usually placed at scratch, having to pay the penalty of smart handling by giving away long time allowance to her opponents. On the last day of Cowes Week the vessels that usually sail in the handicap races were started on strict Yacht Racing Association time allowance for rating, and the difference of these allowances and those which had been allotted earlier in the week by the handicapper was interesting to note. For instance, where Navahoe had been placed at scratch in the handicaps, and had allowed Meteor 2-min. 18-sec., positions were reversed under Y.R.A. time scale, and over the same course the Emperor's schooner was giving Navahoe 11-min. 22-sec.

The handicapping question seems to have received more than the usual amount of attention recently, judging from the comment, chiefly of an adverse character, one has heard. There appears to be a growing dissatisfaction with handicap racing. During recent years, however, it has supplied many clubs with the chief part of their programmes, and some of the regular fixtures around the coast have been entirely dependent upon this branch of the sport. Handicapping in yacht-racing can never be satisfactory, not even in cases where the finishes are very close. The nature of the sport is against it. Excitement is the very essence of any branch of sport, and there is little genuine excitement in a race where yachts coming past the winning-post miles apart represent a close finish. Moreover, in handicap racing there is not the necessary incentive to always keep the boat up to its best form, as any deterioration is compensated for by an increased handicap allowance.

In this particular respect the German rules are superior to ours. There is very little handicap racing in Germany. The yachts are classed, arbitrarily no doubt, as racers or cruisers, and all race in their own class under the standard time allowance. In the absence of any class other than the 52-footers, some such rule should surely benefit our sport. During the past few years there has been a fair amount of building. Cruisers have been built, and their owners have raced them with as much regularity as they would have sailed a rater, proving the racing to be the main attraction. With some recognised classification and time allowance scale, cruisers would probably be built to fit a class, and there would then be less disparity in the sizes of vessels taking part in these races. The wide margin of difference in the tonnage of vessels competing together destroys interest in a race, whether the time allowance be arranged as a handicap or in accordance with a fixed standard. That good sport can be obtained in a handicap class when the competing vessels are nearly of the same dimensions is proved by the good racing of the class in which the old 52-footers compete. Gauntlet, Induna, Senga, Viera, and Nan have been racing almost every day, and have sailed some very interesting matches.

In the 52-ft. class, Moyana has still to be reckoned with. Maymon finished up Cowes Week with two victories, each of the others scoring one each, but the prize for one of those that Maymon won is withheld pending the Squadron Committee's decision respecting a protest for a foul.

One has heard but little of a definite nature in reference to orders for new craft for next season. The end of the period for which the existing rating rule was adopted is drawing within sight, and until the proposed international conference has taken place, from which everyone hopes that the sport will derive benefit, there is little likelihood of orders for new craft being placed.

CORINTHIAN.

FIXTURES.

August 28.—Torbay Royal Regatta.
August 29.—Royal Torbay Yacht Club.
August 30. Dartmouth Regatta.
September 1-2.—Royal Dart Yacht Club.

Digitized by Google

YACHTS OF THE YEAR.

Debenham.

ROSAMOND

Mr. Stothert's 63-ton yawl, which was racing at the Royal Victoria Yacht Club's Regatta at Ryde last week. She finished fourth in the handicap match for yachts exceeding 50 tons, which was raced in a fairly strong north-easterly wind. There was no fluking, and the windward work being over a foul tide, the capabilities of all the yachts were well tested.

Digitized by Google

WITH THE KI

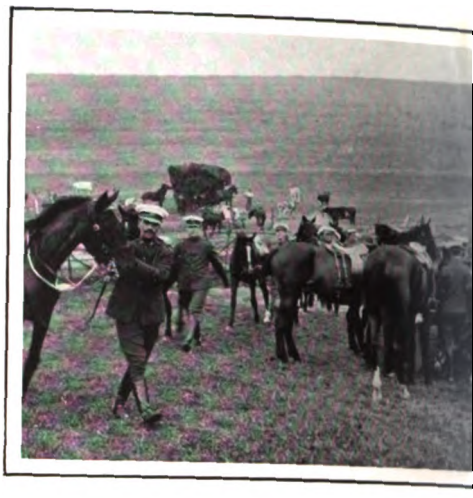
A CAMP INSPECTION.



WATERIN

CLEANING GEAR.

AFTER A HA

ARMS EXAMINATION BY THE CAPTAIN.

A NEW COLONIAL

Among the many important results of the war in South Africa was the formation of the extremely popular corps which has been undergoing its annua among the crack Imperial Yeomanry regiments. The camp will break up at the end of this week, the cor

(From copyright photograph

Digitized by Google

NG'S COLONIALS.

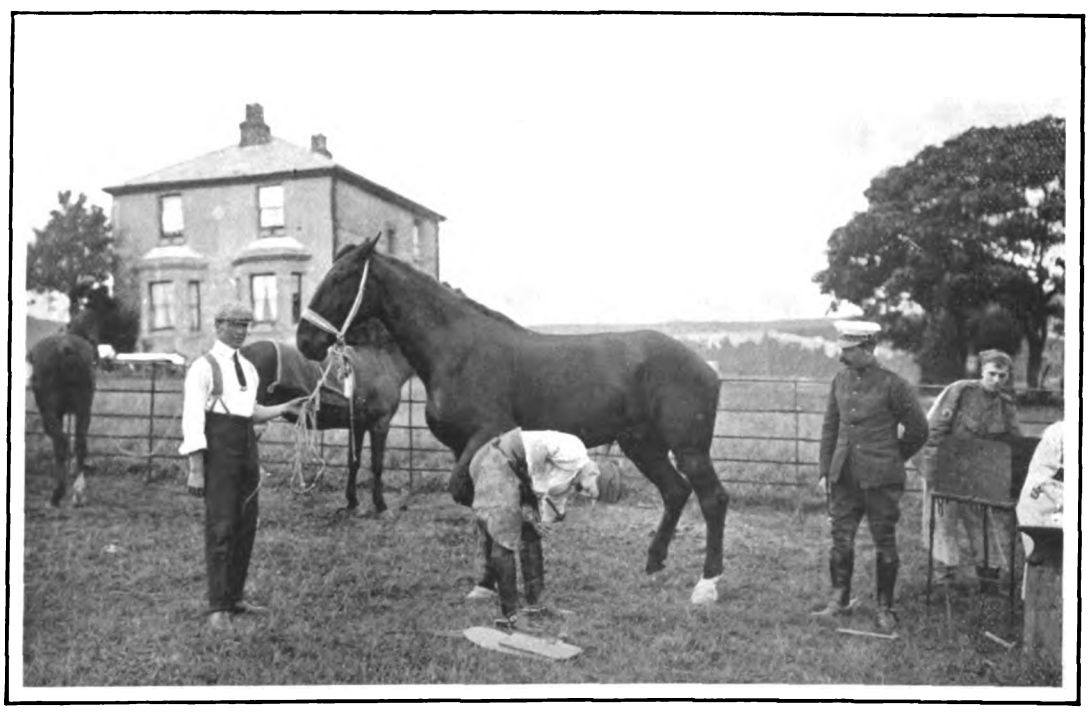
HORSES.

TESTING HAY.

DAY'S WORK.

FILLING THE NOSEBAGS.

ME: "THROWBALL."



SHOEING THE OLD CHARGER.

ining at Brighton. The King's Colonials have on several occasions received important recognition at the hands of Royalty, and their name stands high having gained many new friends, and created an excellent impression by its smartness and evident efficiency.

W. S. Campbell.)

Digitized by Google

The King's Colonials.

IN CAMP AT OVINGDEAN.

THE "King's Colonials" is the fine name of the fine corps of Imperial Yeomanry now under canvas on the Downs between Brighton and Rottingdean.

This unique regiment was formed early in 1901, under the personal supervision of his Majesty the King. He named the new corps the "King's Colonials," and every officer and man thanks God and King Edward for one of the happiest and most stirring names in regimental nomenclature.

The Prince of Wales has been the Honorary Colonel from the first, and takes the keenest interest in every detail of his corps' work. The first commanding officer was Colonel Wallace, a Canadian, and late of the 60th Rifles. He retired with a full colonelcy two years ago, and was succeeded by the present commanding officer, Colonel Hon. H. A. Lawrence, son of the great Lord Lawrence, and late of the 17th Lancers. A King's Colonial of the right stuff. Under this distinguished soldier the regiment has flourished, and last week rode into camp 400 strong. The second in command is Colonel Henry Fortescue, also late commanding the 17th Lancers, and an officer who served with distinction in the Matabeleland Campaign. The headquarters and riding school of the regiment are 215, Gloucester Terrace, London, where administration and recruiting are under the successful control of Captain G. H. Earle, the Adjutant, and late of the Inniskilling Dragoons. There is no doubt but that this corps, and every auxiliary force, is vastly improved and better trained because of the guiding leaven of thoroughly-experienced officers of the Regular Army.

The regiment is divided into four squadrons, each indicative of the origin of the majority of its members. There is the British Asian Squadron, under the command of Captain Lionel James, the gifted war correspondent of The Times, and the survivor of eight campaigns, although still below the fat and forty line. Major John Howard, the Bisley crack shot, and Agent-General for Nova Scotia, and a Canadian, commands the British American Squadron. The third squadron is composed of New Zealanders and South Africans, and is commanded by Major Vereker, late of the 4th Hussars, and an Irishman colonialised in South Africa and Egypt. Major Sir Robert Baillie, Bart., leads the Australians, the fourth and largest squadron. Sir Robert spent a good fraction of his career under the Southern Cross. The distinctive character of the squadrons is further emphasised by the badges worn by officers and men. The British Americans wear the beaver, the Asians the elephant, the Australians the kangaroo, the South Africans the ostrich, and the New Zealanders the leaf of the beautiful fern of their progressive Colony.

Here is a regiment focussing in itself the idea of a united Empire. Nearly every Colony finds one or many of its sons serving in the "K.C.'s" under the old Flag in the old Homeland. Men who have lived abroad find in the regiment that breezy and bracing environment characteristic of Colonials all the world over. There is a splendid ideal indicated in the very name of the corps, and an ideal felt by all ranks. More than that, the healthy spirit of emulation and comradeship is so strong that discipline in the ordinary sense is forgotten in keenness and good-fellowship.

Naturally enough, the King's Colonials are a body of picked men in more than one sense. Many of them have had careers that read like romances; and from the frontiers of the Empire they gather round the bivouac of this notable regiment, ready to do each man his duty when the trumpet sounds the "fall in."

The objection sometimes raised to Volunteer camp life concerning lack of discipline among the men in camp, whatever its truth in respect to some regiments, cannot be used against the King's Colonials. After a very few hours, to enable the men to get accustomed to their new mounts and arrange their tents, the work of the camp is undertaken with a refreshing thoroughness and spirit good to see. After a hot and tiring day in the saddle, beginning at 8 o'clock in the morning and not terminating until nearly 3.30 in the afternoon, it is something of an inspiration to note how men, who in the normal course of events would be by this time preparing to leave their offices in City or West End, are here at Ovingdean, in their shirt sleeves, grooming their horses, cleaning all gear, and polishing all bright parts of their accoutrements, until they shine like silver. The men show all the enthusiasm of the Volunteer in the evident enjoyment their work affords, and the officers can not only say how the work is to be done, but show the way to do it. As we glance down the lines we see here a horse-cloth being readjusted, there a hay-band being made, and yonder a buck-jumper being reduced to order and discipline by the practical demonstrations of the officers. The horses, too, seem to be having a glorious time, and not often do they enjoy the luxurious cleaning and feeding that the camp affords.

Campbell

A GENERAL VIEW OF THE CAMP OF THE KING'S COLONIALS AT OVINGDEAN, NEAR BRIGHTON.

The Downs towards the east and north-east of the camp afford a most excellent country for work, and though, of course, with a comparatively small number of men movements have to be more or less of a fragmentary or patchwork order, and the invading force or defending army like the supreme disaster illustrated on the wonderful theatrical poster of the day (which always happens "off"), so of course the manœuvres on a small scale must leave a good deal to the imagination; but that fact is not necessarily an objection to such isolated action as the men can undertake.

After the horses are groomed, fed, and watered the men assemble for dinner in an enormous marquee. The catering is good, and viands are well cooked. There is all the schoolboy nature seen soon afterwards in the zest and energy thrown into the recreation interval, and if good players make good fighters, the King's Colonials may, with confidence, look the whole world in the face and fear nobody.

Digitized by Google

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

MISS IRENE VANBRUGH

Ellis and Walery.

As Amy Grey in "Alice Sit-by-the-Fire," Mr. J. M. Barrie's latest play, which is going on tour through the principal provincial towns this autumn. Miss Ellen Terry and most of the Duke of York's company will appear in their original parts.

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

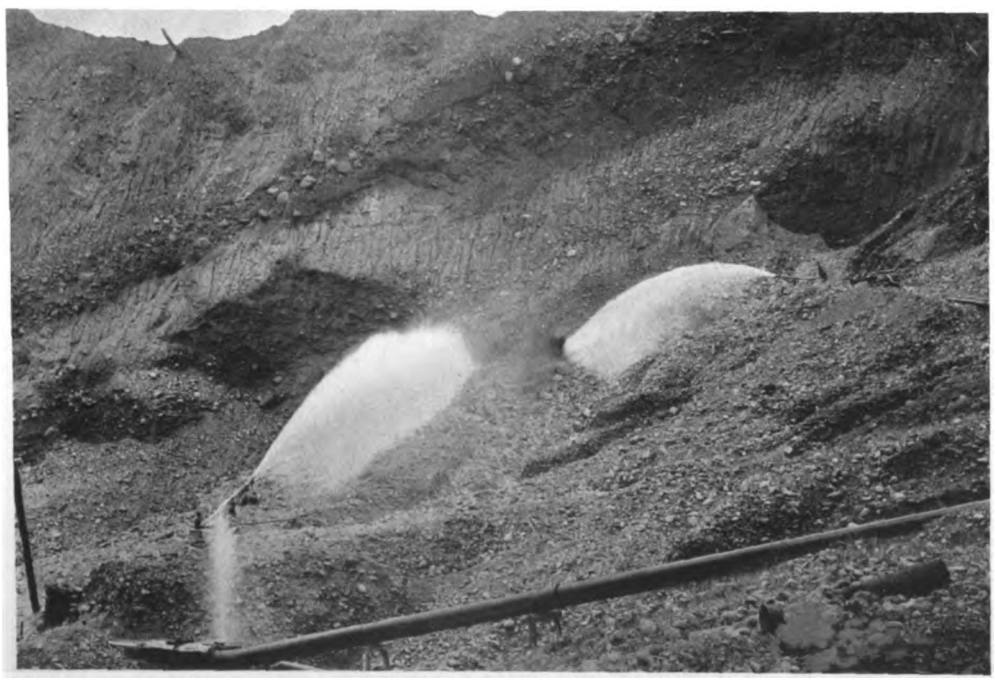
IN NEW ZEALAND: "THE LAND FOR THE PEOPLE."

W. Reid.

ON LAKE WAKATIPU, NEW ZEALAND

One of the most beautiful of the Southern lakes; its scenery is said to be only surpassed by Lake Lucerne in Europe. Wakatipu is 54 miles long and 1,069-ft. above the level of the sea.

THE gospel of "the land for the people," which is being preached and practised with such success in New Zealand, is in no respect more remarkable than in the striking measure of prosperity which the adoption of an enlightened scheme of land nationalisation has so speedily brought to the individual and to the State. Successive phases of progressive legislation, having for its essence the protection of humanity rather than the protection of property, have resulted in a set of land laws as liberal in conception and more effective in administration than those outlined by the Mosaic prophet or the tribunes of the early classic commonwealth. Not only first, but easily and worthily first, in the practical solution of the land settlement problem is the distinction accorded New Zealand by such lovers of the people as Theodore Roosevelt, President of America.



HYDRAULIC MINING NEAR ROSS, NEW ZEALAND.

Besides being a great pastoral and agricultural country, the Colony is also rich in minerals. Gold, both in the alluvial and quartz state, is found in payable quantities, the yield up to now having exceeded £03,000,000 in value.

The high calibre of New Zealand's early and subsequent settlers, an exceptional climate, unique natural advantages, together with legislative enactments designed for the common benefit of the whole people, have given to the Island Colony conditions which do not obtain in any other of the world's great centres of civilisation. As a field for successful settlement, under circumstances freed from the meaner struggles that prostitute the best efforts of humanity, there is no country which offers such attractions as New Zealand, where human energy is so directed and encouraged as to afford ample opportunity for the highest moral and physical development.

From the very earliest days New Zealand has been signally favoured in the character of her settlers, the selection of immigrants under the Wakefield plan of colonisation having resulted in a very high average. No low-grade influx from any country has ever been admitted to the Colony, and the outcome of this eclectic method is happily apparent in New Zealand to-day, where the fine all-round standard of the people is exemplified in their ability to combine for the common weal, especially in political life. And, after all, it is a big consideration for the man who must leave the Old World for the newer lands to know that he is to make his home in such a community, far from the corruption and violence so common to young countries, and secure from the melancholy isolation peculiar to pioneer days in lands of immense area. In New Zealand one is always in sight of a neighbour's home. There are no great distances to separate the newly-arrived settler from the pleasure of association with his fellows, and there is no locality in which he can be placed where he is not within easy reach of one or other of the scenic wonders for which the Colony is famed. Civilisation tables provide another very welcome greeting in the proof that the health and wealth rate of the New Zealand inhabitants is the highest of all nations.

Digitized by Google

The farmer and settler find an early earnest of better things in the mild and equable climate, which is well demonstrated by the range of the thermometer in the central city, Wellington, where the variation ranges between the temperate limits of 33-deg. and 80-deg. Contrast this climatic moderation with the extremes of Canada, from 20-deg. below zero to nearly 100-deg. above, and there is at hand a strong argument in favour of New Zealand, a land mostly of evergreens, where cattle thrive in the open all the year round, requiring neither the housing nor the hand-feeding which so heavily handicap even the most favoured of Canadian settlers. The heat of the summer and the cold of the winter in New Zealand, while affording the most desired conditions of climatic change, never reach the limits of severity which in less fortunate countries press so severely on the people, especially those of little means. Amply watered, there is no question of drought, and fully sheltered, there is no fear of the rushing tornado which even in a few hours has been known to ruin whole territories of grain in Manitoba and British Columbia.

The fertility of the soil is another matter of great encouragement, especially to the newly-arrived farmer. With ordinary care two crops can be raised in the year, and it is no unusual thing to get eight or ten tons of potatoes from an acre of land which will subsequently bear a crop of grain before the ensuing autumn is far advanced. On first-class land the yield is ordinarily forty to sixty bushels of wheat per acre, fifty to eighty bushels of corn, and still more in isolated cases. This very season, while Canada is boasting of thirty-two bushels of wheat to the acre as an unprecedented yield, New Zealand, although by no means at its best, is able to return the splendid average yield per acre of wheat thirty-seven bushels, oats forty-three bushels, and barley thirty-nine bushels. This year peach trees have produced twelve and fifteen cases each, which, at an average of 5s. per case, gives for each acre a financial return of more than £300. For the same area strawberries have in several instances returned £200.

It is, however, in the liberality of her land laws that New Zealand offers paramount attractions to every class of settler. Even a faint outline of these admirable measures is impossible in the limit of a few paragraphs. Experience has proved the lease in perpetuity the most popular form of tenure, and it is through this vehicle that the nationalisation of the land will eventually be consummated. Restriction of area, the checking of monopoly, and the provision of facilities for co-operative development are among the supplementary advantages of this tenure. The Government gives preference to the applicant who is landless, and during the first year, which is usually the most trying, the lease cannot be assigned in law or equity or taken in execution. The granting of a lease in lieu of purchase leaves the tenant his entire capital for immediate improvements.

Legislation has made special provision for the establishment of working men's homes, and by this excellent policy has checked the one-time deplorable rush to the cities and spread the people on the land with very gratifying results. Working men may secure lots not exceeding five acres within any borough, city, or town of 15,000 or more inhabitants, or within fifteen miles of its boundary. To every such applicant the Government will advance up to £50 to assist him in establishing a home. In the roading and improving of large estates resumed for redivision, the Government finds half-time employment in co-operative groups for small settlers, who are thus enabled to make a living while preparing and improving their holdings. To all classes of farmers, settlers, and working men the Government advances money at low rates of interest, and in the event of serious accident or any exceptional misfortune the Land Boards are empowered to remit dues or renew leases at reduced rentals, concessions which have been found wholly compatible with sound commercial principles. New Zealand finds a welcome market for her produce and manufactures in Australia, Polynesia, South Africa, America, and the United Kingdom, and with the establishment of more mills and factories within her borders, for which the Colony's steady advance makes eloquent demand, there is certain prosperity for every industrious man or woman who seeks an asylum within the circle of her ocean-girt shores. A. M.

W. Reid.

SHEEP-FARMING IN NEW ZEALAND.

The above scene is in every way typical of farm life in the Antipodes. The flock of sheep are returning to pasturage after having refreshed at the clear stream seen in the foreground.

Digitized by Google

A Day in the Life of a Mormon.

IN a spacious room of a tall block of buildings in Salt Lake City stood a sharp-faced individual with iron grey hair and beard. As his hawk-like eyes roamed over the broad streets that lost themselves in avenues of stately trees, he smiled in a crafty way. Beyond the trees shimmered the waters of the Great Salt Lake, far away to the misty outlines of the distant mountains. But Joseph Stubbs, elder of the church of Latter-day Saints, was not thinking of the beauty of the scene. His eyes were fixed on the fretted spires of the Mormon Temple, beside which one of the biggest halls in America seemed like some captive toy balloon.

"If only the Prophet Smith could see it all," he murmured, "how proud he would be of his children."

Suddenly stealing a furtive glance round the room, he walked to the door and locked it. Sidling along so that he might see as many corners of the room as possible, he reached a roll-topped desk, on the top of which was stamped in gold leaf the figure of an angel blowing a trumpet, with the words "Be fruithful and multiply" underneath. Elder Stubbs rolled back the lid and furtively drew a small bottle, a glass, a syphon, and a box from a drawer. He stopped and listened. The only sound was the muffled click of a typewriter from the room underneath. Pulling out the cork, he poured some of the liquid into the glass.

In another minute, seated in an easy arm-chair, he was sipping his whisky and soda, and blowing rings of smoke with infinite satisfaction to the ceiling. Now, according to the law of Mormonism, no one who smokes or drinks may enter the sacred temple. Elder Stubbs had a reputation to keep up as a pious Latter-day Saint, and the result was that he smoked and drank in private.

Half-an-hour later he sallied forth into the street. The clerks and shop hands of the great co-operative society founded by the church were streaming out to lunch, and many of them touched their hats to him as he passed. Elder Stubbs regarded them with lynx eyes. As a director in the most prosperous concern in Utah, his business was to see that the souls, as well as the bodies, of those whom the church employed "for the greater glory of the Lord," as he was fond of saying, were well cared for. Was it not a command of the Prophet Smith, that most glorious founder of the Latter-day Saints, that all the members of the church should contribute a tenth of their income to the support of their religion? But at a recent meeting of the apostles and elders of the church, the High Priest had dwelt with fiery indignation on the decay of this practice, and he had exhorted the elders to use all the power that they possessed to make recalcitrant members of the church pay up. And so every day Elder Stubbs and other pious directors of the co-operative society stood watching the stream of workpeople pass out to lunch, ready to exhort or to denounce any among them whose contribution of one-tenth of their wages had not been voluntarily surrendered to the church. Elder Stubbs had recommended that the one-tenth should be struck off their wages, but this step was considered injudicious, for the contribution was supposed to be voluntary.

After a lunch which would have seemed a feast to many a poor Mormon, the Elder turned his footsteps to the Temple. He was to be present at the marriage of one of his friends, and it is generally considered necessary that great secrecy should be maintained on these occasions, for anyone who boasts of having more than one wife in Utah may find himself in the clutches of the police.

Elder Stubbs, Brother Joseph as he was affectionately called by his friends, had six wives according to the Mormon rite. But neither he nor his friend Brother Josiah had much to fear from the police, who, as good-natured Irish fellows, understood the value of silence. In fact, they grew prosperous by keeping their mouths shut. And so the ceremony, although news of it spread through the city, passed unnoticed by the officials of the Government.

It was now three o'clock, and a prayer meeting was to be held in the Assembly Hall. This building contains what is said to be the finest organ in the world, and is large enough to seat several thousands of people. After a music recital, Brother Stubbs preached a short sermon to the assembled Saints, which was in effect an exhortation to polygamy, although the words sounded innocent to Gentile ears.

Brother Stubbs went on to point out the impossibility of any Latter-day Saint reaching heaven if he did not pay a tithe of his income to the church, that she might devote it to the poor, meaning himself and his fellow-directors of Mormonism and Co., although he did not say so. He was due at 4.30 to take tea with No. 1 wife and family. Following Brigham Young's example, he had built a handsome villa for his first wife. It stood within the gate surmounted by an eagle which was once the boundary of that great man's property. The lady who had perhaps the greatest claim to be called Mrs. Stubbs was a sad-eyed, rather sour-looking woman. She had once been a pretty, sprightly brunette, when her home was far away on the other side of the Atlantic. Lured by extravagant promises of a Mormon missionary, she had run away to Utah, and was only too glad after several months of destitution in Salt Lake City to marry an elder of the church. But her life had been embittered by seeing her husband's affection captured by the younger women who successively became his wives, and now she only kept her villa and her position by the fear in which Elder Stubbs stood of her temper. Once a week he had tea with her, surrounded by her five children, whom Brother Stubbs, as he only saw them on these occasions, and had twenty others, found difficult to recognise as his own.

Copyright.

BATHING AT SALT LAKE CITY.
The pavilion and bathing-place at Saltair Beach.

The ordeal of the visit over, Stubbs went to his club till dinner-time. He was to dine with No. 2 wife. She also had a villa to herself, and as she was young and vivacious, Brother Stubbs now preferred her company to that of No. 1.

After dinner several elders of the church looked in and engaged in an edifying conversation on the book of Mormon. They insisted that as marriage was a woman's true vocation, polygamy was necessary so long as there were more women than men in the world. A venerable apostle of the church, who had lately been on the foreign missions, said that he had come back more convinced than ever of the need of polygamy, for he had seen hordes of unhappy bachelor women who were a real menace to the society in which they lived.

"They are called 'new women,'" he explained, "and they not only have clubs of their own, where they smoke cigarettes and drink whiskies and sodas" (audible groans from Brother Stubbs), "but, worse still, they write books and compete with men in their own work. You see," he said, "what the Gentiles suffer for their abominable selfishness in refusing to support more than one wife." The apostle's remarks were received with loud applause.

But after the party had broken up, Brother Stubbs retired to a bungalow across the road, where, with the help of a cigar and a glass of whisky, he could once again for a brief space imagine that he was a careless bachelor, without the worry of even one wife. H. F. S.

Digitized by Google

THE BATHING SEASON.

AT SOME ENGLISH AND FRENCH RESORTS.

The difference between seaside bathing at English and French holiday haunts has often been written about, and anyone who studies the numerous photographs of Trouville, Dinard, Dieppe, and other popular French places must be struck with the general air of bonhomie and camaraderie which characterises both sexes in the water there. In England, however, the old prejudice against mixed bathing is fast disappearing.

(From photographs by Chusseau-Flaviens & Bunnett.)

Digitized by Google

THE CRICKET SEASON.

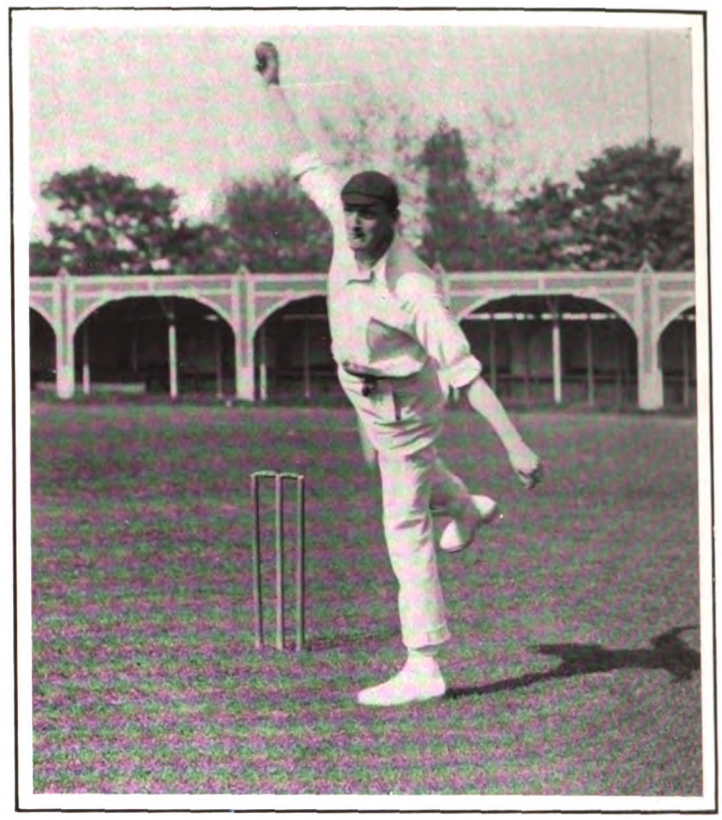
W. REEVES, ESSEX.

The most improved batsman in the South of England is one of the four fine cricketers first-class cricket owes to Cambridge, Hayward, Carpenter, and Hobbs being the other three. Reeves will one day be a good all-rounder when he has "sown his wild oats" in the cricket-field. During the past five seasons or so he has, by taking the game much too lightly, prevented the latent talent within him from coming to the surface. He will probably score 1,000 runs for Essex this year, and his bowling, despite the fact that he took 100 wickets for Essex in 1904, will never be so good as his batting until he realises that his proper pace is slow and not medium fast.

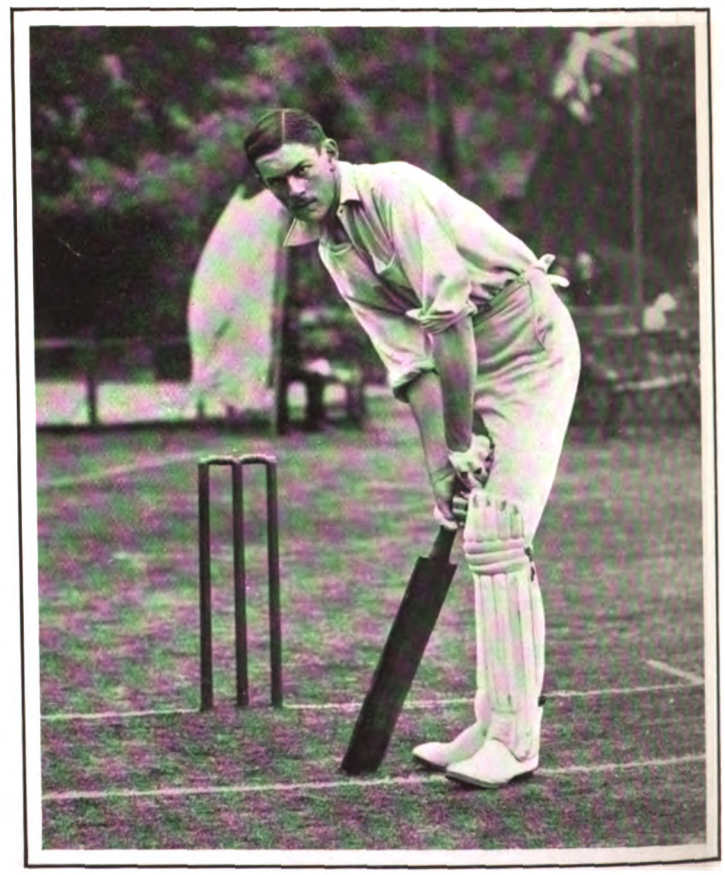


W. BREARLEY, LANCS.

As likely as not the Lancashire fast bowler will take 200 wickets this season. That his selection for England was a wise one his performance in the last Test match testifies, but before he can be compared with fast bowlers of the past—Richardson and Lockwood, for example—Brearley will have to put in some seasons with really good performances on good batting wickets, such as those at Brighton, Nottingham, Leyton, and Taunton. On neither of these has he yet got many wickets. He is in his element on the bumping, sporting wickets in the North and at Lord's, where the wickets nearly always help a fast bowler.

S. KINNEIR, WARWICKSHIRE.

Very nearly first choice for the next team to visit Australia is this imperturbable left-hand batsman, now that C. L. Townsend is not to be counted upon. Others may favour the chances of J. H. King (Leicestershire), or of Killick (Sussex); but for the requirements of a tour in Australia Septimus Kinneir's is the best temperament, and his batting the best style of these three left-handers. Kinneir could bat for a day and a-half without turning a hair, and would assist the English team a good deal by always having a left-hander in with a right-hander at the same time.



A. P. DAY, KENT.

This latest credit to the cricket-field of Malvern College is certainly one of the batsmen of the year. His methods are delightfully free, so everybody welcomes the more his great success in scoring 1,000 runs in his first regular first-class season. That his methods are not entirely sound, judging him from the highest standard, is obvious; but he is a first-class player, for all that. Experience alone can teach him soundness. Meanwhile, without experience, he is regarded as an unmitigated nuisance by every bowler he has met this season.

Digitized by Google

The Cricket Season.

THE TWELFTH AUSTRALIAN TEAM.

INTEREST in the tour of the Australian cricketers in so far as their chance of beating England's best is concerned is over. The five Test matches have been played, and, excluding for a moment the question of England's luck in having won the toss five times, the supremacy of English cricket over Australian is undeniable.

To run briefly through the Test matches of this season, the first at Nottingham, England was very lucky indeed to win. Winning the toss, England scored 196 on a wicket which had apparently been over-watered. Australia began very well, and were just beginning to gain the upper hand, when F. S Jackson took the wickets of Hill, Noble, and Darling in one over, a disaster from which the Australians never recovered. They only exceeded England's score by 25 runs, and then, thanks to brilliant innings by Maclaren, Jackson, and Tyldesley, England scored 426 for five wickets, and left the Australians 402 to get to win. Soon after the start Trumper ricked his back, and could take no further part in the match—a second disaster for the visitors. Despite this, they were just beginning to establish themselves when Bosanquet, who batting badly, scored 195. England added 295 for five wickets to their lead of 106, and thus set Australia exactly 402 to get in their second innings, just as they had done at Nottingham.

The coincidences in these Test matches do not end here, for Jackson declared at 1.15 on the third day in both cases, and both he and his rival captain were born on the same day of the same year. The Australians at no time looked like getting the runs, and the probability is that bad light saved them from defeat, as it caused a cessation of hostilities at six o'clock on the third day, when the Australians had scored 224 for seven wickets.

At Manchester, July 24, 25, and 26, the Australians went on to the field like a beaten team the first morning of the match, Darling for the fourth time having lost the toss. England made 446 runs, of which Hayward, let off at 14 by Armstrong, made 82, and Jackson another century—113 to wit. Australia, rain having fallen overnight, made only 107, and following on, rain again having fallen on the second night, were dismissed for 169. Thus England made the rubber safe by an innings and 80 runs victory.

The fifth and final Test match at the Oval last week saw Darling again lose the option of first

AUSTRALIA.

| | Matches | Inn. | Not Out | Aggregate | Highest Score | Average |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| R. A. Duff .. | 5 | 8 | 0 | 335 | 146 | 41·87 |
| W. W. Armstrong | 5 | 9 | 1 | 252 | 66 | 31·50 |
| J. J. Darling .. | 5 | 9 | 1 | 230 | 73 | 28·75 |
| J. J. Kelly .. | 5 | 7 | 4 | 73 | 42 | 24·33 |
| S. E. Gregory .. | 3 | 5 | 1 | 94 | 51 | 23·50 |
| C. Hill .. .. | 5 | 9 | 0 | 188 | 54 | 20·88 |

The English advantage in bowling is very marked to judge by figures alone.

ENGLAND.

| | Innings | Overs | Maidens | Runs | Wkts. | Avrge. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| F. S. Jackson .. | 8 | 67·5 | 8 | 201 | 13 | 15·46 |
| W. Brearley .. | 4 | 73·1 | 16 | 277 | 14 | 19·78 |
| B. J. T. Bosanquet | 4 | 58·4 | 3 | 201 | 9 | 22·33 |
| Haigh .. .. .. | 3 | 37 | 12 | 95 | 4 | 23·75 |
| Arnold .. .. | 7 | 69 | 16 | 214 | 7 | 30·57 |
| Rhodes .. .. | 7 | 110·3 | 21 | 314 | 10 | 31·40 |
| Hirst .. .. .. | 6 | 62 | 13 | 212 | 6 | 35·33 |
| Warren .. .. | 1 | 39·2 | 9 | 113 | 6 | 18·83 |

AUSTRALIA.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| R. A. Duff .. .. | 2 | 30 | 8 | 85 | 4 | 21·25 |
| A. J. Hopkins .. | 6 | 38 | 10 | 115 | 4 | 28·75 |
| F. Laver .. .. | 9 | 189·3 | 55 | 510 | 16 | 31·87 |
| A. Cotter .. .. | 6 | 127 | 13 | 427 | 13 | 32·84 |
| W. W. Armstrong | 9 | 280·3 | 94 | 538 | 16 | 33·62 |
| C. E. McLeod .. | 9 | 202 | 54 | 525 | 10 | 52·50 |
| M. A. Noble .. | 9 | 148·2 | 37 | 409 | 6 | 68·16 |

Bolland, Hanwell

THE FIFTH TEST MATCH AT KENNINGTON OVAL—BREARLEY BOWLING TO TRUMPER.

From a photograph taken at the commencement of the Australians' second innings. A. O. Jones is fielding as a substitute for Lilley, injured.

was bowling, began to be freely hit. He was about to be taken off, but by Maclaren's advice was given another over. In it he secured Duff's wicket, and then proceeded to take eight wickets for 107, the last wicket (C. E. McLeod, l.b.w.) being secured in a light the like of which has only once been played in in first-class cricket before, and that when the gas lamps were alight round the Oval towards the finish of a Surrey-Yorkshire match. Within a few minutes of the fall of McLeod's wicket rain fell. Thus, taking all things into consideration, England was very lucky to win this match.

At Lord's, in the second match, the Australians lost the toss; but their first innings' performance—181 on a shocking wicket, at its worst possible pitch—was a far finer cricket performance than England's 282. Howbeit, England added 151 for five wickets to their lead of 101 runs, and had much the better of matters when rain absolutely prevented cricket on the third day.

At Leeds, in the third Test match, England again won the toss, and here the Australians lost whatever chance they ever possessed by leaving out Cotter on a wicket which was bound, by the known character of the Leeds pitch to assist a fast bowler, to have suited him. England scored 301, thanks to a masterly 144 not out by F. S. Jackson, who gave no chance until he had scored 130. Australia, use of a splendid wicket. This time it was C. B. Fry's turn to come off. Of the other probable century-makers Maclaren, Jackson, and Tyldesley had already done their duty, and Hayward had only fallen short by 18 runs. Fry rose to the occasion, and played an innings of 144, quite the equal of any other of the seven centuries scored in the Test matches this season, and in some respects their superior. England made 430, the Australians 363, England, after some very bad quart d'heures, 261 for six wickets, and it was only left for the Australians to play out time. This they did with 124 for four wickets.

The above is a brief history of the five Test matches of this season, the last of which was the seventy-sixth between England and Australia.

Coming to figures and averages, which so often signify nothing, but which many people have implicit belief in, the following are the figures of the six leading batsmen on either side. It is remarkable that Jackson and Duff head both batting and bowling averages.

ENGLAND.

| | Matches | Inn. | Not Out | Aggregate | Highest Score | Average |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| F. S. Jackson .. | 5 | 9 | 2 | 492 | 144* | 70·28 |
| C. B. Fry .. .. | 4 | 7 | 1 | 348 | 144 | 58·00 |
| Tyldesley .. .. | 5 | 9 | 1 | 424 | 112* | 53·00 |
| Rhodes .. .. | 4 | 5 | 2 | 146 | 39* | 48·66 |
| R. H. Spooner | 2 | 3 | 0 | 131 | 79 | 43·66 |
| A. C. Maclaren | 4 | 7 | 0 | 303 | 140 | 43·28 |

* Signifies not out.

The marked inability of Noble and McLeod to get wickets seriously hampered the Australians, who also suffered severely from the utter incompetency of Armstrong at short slip. The greatest blemish upon Darling's captaincy was the persistency with which he placed Armstrong in that position, from which he was not permanently removed until he had missed two catches in the fourth Test match. It was just as well Armstrong made runs in the county matches, for he certainly owed the side a good many. It is doubtful even now whether he wiped out with the bat the adverse balance recorded against him owing to clumsiness in the field.

To sum up, luck in the toss was entirely against the Australians. They made a mistake grave enough to cost them the third Test match by leaving out Cotter at Leeds. They lacked first-class slip fieldsmen, and finally their best batsmen, except Noble and Darling, lacked solidarity and soundness. Years ago Australians used to play a slow, plodding game, Englishmen to hit. To-day the position is entirely reversed. Trumper, Duff, and Hill each lacked steadiness and soundness at the start, and only one of them was once allowed to get set—Duff at the Oval. The bowling, though lacking in sting to all outward appearance, would have been a very different thing with a good set of slips, and with batsmen giving the side good starts.

Digitized by Google

THE RACING SEASON.

THE appearance of the entries for the two great Autumn Handicaps—the Cesarewitch and Cambridgeshire—comes as a forcible reminder that the racing season of 1905 has passed its meridian, and is fast drawing to a close. No attempt can be made at present to discuss the merits of any of the animals entered for these two races, as to do so would be both unprofitable and unfair. With regard to the longer of the two races the number of the entries falls ten short of the ninety-eight of last year. Mr. Imber has engaged Sandboy, for whom it will be remembered that he gave 3,300 guineas on the first day of the Goodwood Meeting. As was only to be expected, Saltpetre figures amongst the probable competitors. Tor Point, Pradella, and the ever-ready Mark Time will also come under the notice of the handicapper. The ninety-one entries for the Cambridgeshire show a falling off of fifteen as compared with last year, and the appearance of Vedas in the list of nominations suggests that his clever trainer has managed to get him sound again, and should his hopes be fulfilled this very speedy horse will be extremely difficult to beat. Captain Forrester has Queen's Holiday and Hackler's Pride to choose from; but it does not seem within the bounds of probability that the latter mare, good as she is, can win this race for the third year in succession. A feature of unusual interest with regard to these handicaps is to be found in the fact that M. E. Blanc has entered his famous three year olds Val d'Or, Jardy, Adam, and Genial in both races, and it will be very interesting to see what estimate the handicappers will take of the individual merits of these French-bred animals.

No review of current racing events, however cursory it may be, can be written without paying a tribute of sincere regret to the memory of Mr. T. Beasley, the famous Irish horseman, to whose marvellous ability in the saddle many of the brilliant victories of the horses trained by Linde at Eyrefield Lodge were due. Of no other rider amateur or professional, can it be said, as far as memory serves me, that they have ridden the winners of three Grand Nationals and three Irish Derbies. Empress, Woodbrook, and Frigate were the horses he rode to victory over the trying Aintree course, and his winning rides in the Irish Derby were on Pet Fox, Tragedy, and Narraghmore. It is not too much to say that all Irishmen are mourning for the loss of "Tommy" Beasley, and that in their grief we have a share. His brother, Mr. Harry Beasley, is now the only survivor of the five brothers, and if he is not as young as he was, there is no falling off in his prowess in the saddle, nor have the thirteen Grand Nationals in which he has taken part in any way diminished his "nerve" across a country, and the enthusiastic cheering which greeted his victory in the Conyngham Cup at Punchestown only a few weeks ago on his own horse Lively Lad, was an eloquent testimony to the place which the veteran rider holds in the affections of his countrymen.

W. A. Rouch.

THE EDUCATION OF A STEEPLE-CHASER.
The late Mr. T. Beasley riding a "school."

W. A. Rouch.

MR. HARRY BEASLEY
On Lively Lad, winner of the Conyngham Cup.

At this time of the year a large number of the habitués of the suburban meetings are absent from their usual haunts, and there was, moreover, the strong counter attraction of the Test match at the Oval, but in spite of these drawbacks there was a fairly representative gathering at Kempton Park, especially on the second day of the meeting. Speculators may have had cause of complaint, but there was plenty of interesting sport for those who are content to look on and enjoy themselves. The Greenwood Handicap, which was founded to perpetuate the memory of an exceptionally popular and able sporting writer, seems to have "caught on" with owners and trainers, and several good handicap horses figured among the fifteen runners, of whom Nutwith, 4 yrs., 7-st. 9-lb.; Hackler's Pride, 5 yrs., 9-st 7-lb.; Roseate Dawn, 4 yrs., 7-st. 7-lb., finished in the order named, with three-quarters of a length dividing first and second, and a distance of five lengths between the second and third. The Kempton Park International Breeders' Two Year Old Plate of 685-sovs. went, as was anticipated, to Mr. Douglas Clarke's galloping filly Sweet Mary, who cantered home six lengths in front of Marlow and the Recall colt. An interesting event on the second day of the meeting was the appearance in winning colours of Adula, own sister to Pretty Polly, in the City of London Breeders' Foal Plate of 1,180-sovs. With all the worst of the luck in running, she strode out with great resolution as soon as her course was clear, and, making up her ground at every stride, wore down the opposition, and won cleverly by half a length from the colt by Simontault out of Eugenia, who finished a neck in front of Kuroki. Adula has much improved in looks since her last appearance in Dublin, and is now a fine striding mare, but she has not the marvellous power behind the saddle of her famous sister.

The Wind or Meeting on Friday attracted a large number of spectators, and the big fields offered ample scope for speculation. Lady Floreta's victory in the Club Plate was a very popular one.

CAURIRE.

Digitized by Google

Art in the Sale-room.

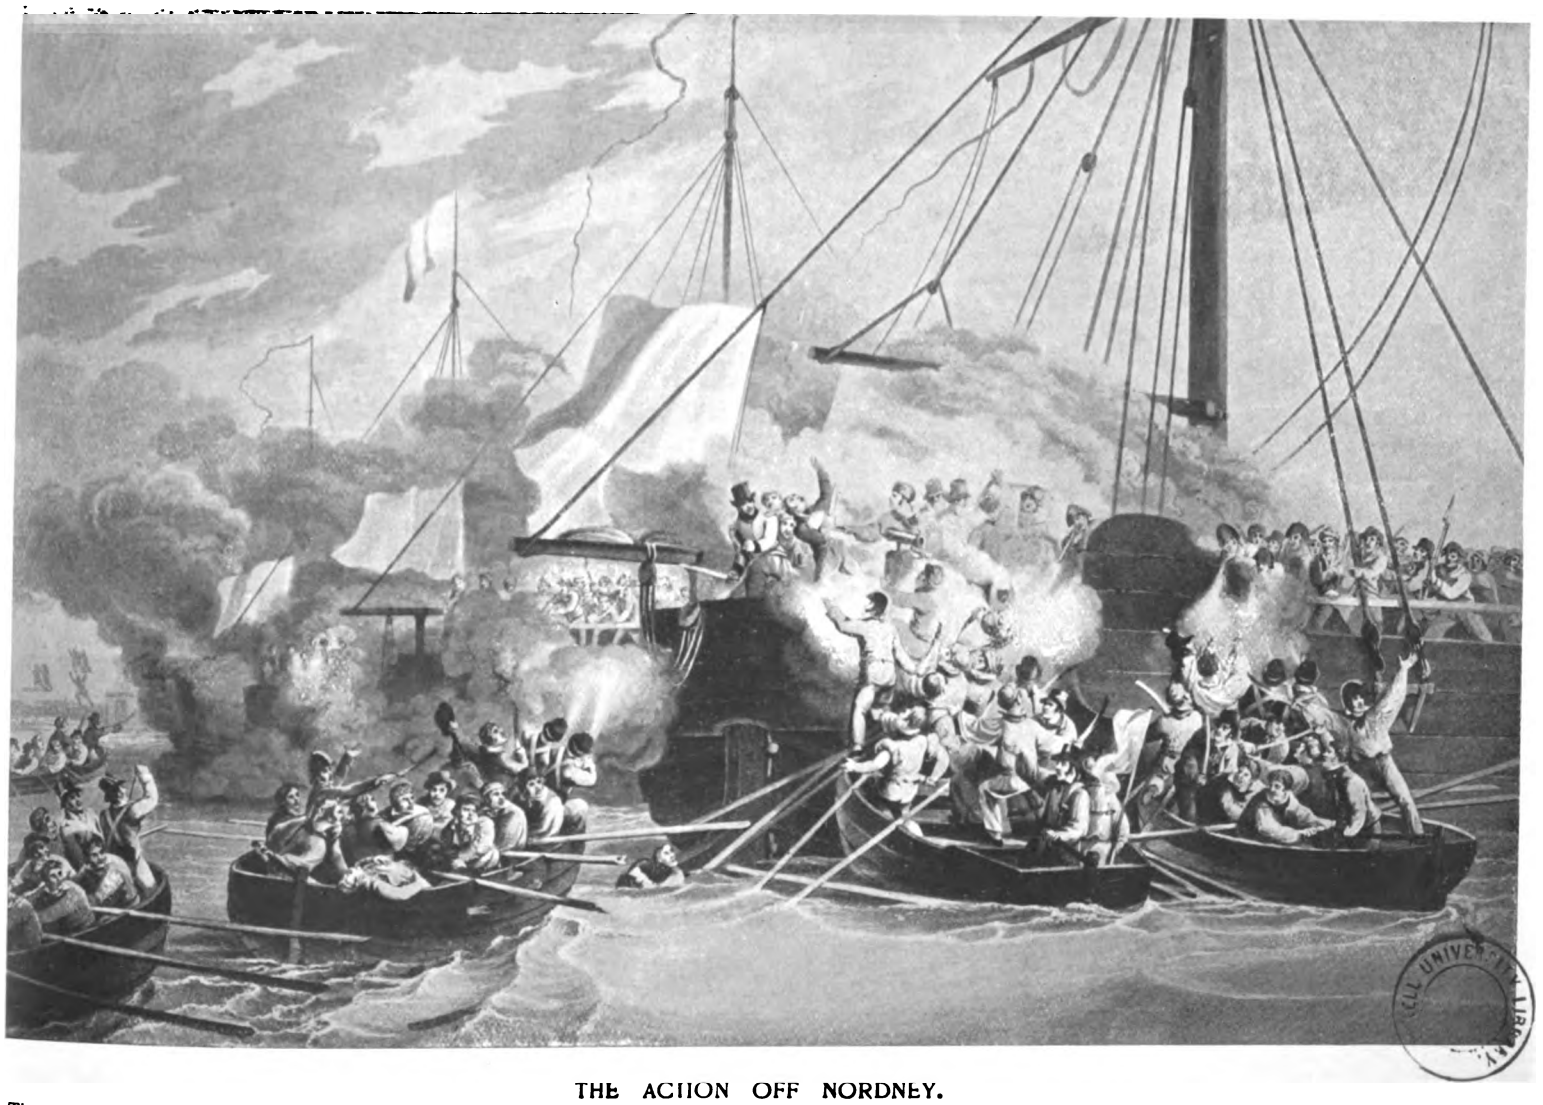
KING GEORGE AND ADMIRAL HOWE.

His Majesty presenting an elegant sword to Admiral Earl Howe as a token of respect for the services rendered his country in the action with the French Fleet on June 1, 1794. Published by Laurie and Whittle at 53, Fleet Street.

THE DEFENCE OF THE "WOLVERENE."

Captain Lewis Mortlock gallantly defending H.M. sloop-of-war, the "Wolverene," against the united attack of two French luggers, near Boulogne, January 3, 1799. Engraved by C. Turner from the painting by J. J. Masquerier.



THE ACTION OFF NORDNEY.

The row-boats of the "Quebec" (frigate), "Raven," "Exertion," and "Redbreast" (brigs), and "Alert" and "Princess Augusta" (cutters), under the command of Lieutenant, now Captain, Samuel Blyth, at mid-day on August 3, 1811, off the Isle of Nordney, gallantly boarding four French gun-vessels, each carrying a long 12-pounder in the bow, two long 6-pounders and swivels on the quarter, and twenty-five men. Painted and engraved by John Heavyside Clark.

(From prints now in the possession of Mr. T. Parker, 7, Spur Street, W.C.)

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

AT PICTURESQUE KNARESBOROUGH.

Visitors to Harrogate, the popular and fashionable Yorkshire spa, so conveniently reached by the comfortable expresses of the Great Northern Railway, should on no account omit to visit Knaresborough, picturesquely situated on the banks of the Nidd. When Sir William Slingsby first discovered the springs, which have since made Harrogate so famous, the spa was called "Knaresborough Spa." The great forest of Knaresborough, a portion of which was granted about the year 1200 to the Plumpton family, who held it for some hundreds of years, was in the reign of Elizabeth stripped of much of its fine timber, though as late as 1596, the year in which the discovery of the springs occurred, wild hunting was still carried on. Among the places of interest at Knaresborough are the Castle, the Dropping Well, St. Robert's Chapel and Cave, Scriven Hall, the old seat of the Slingsbys, and Plumpton Park.

Digitized by Google

BENGER'S FOOD

A delicious and most easily digested Food, specially prepared for Infants and for Adults whose digestive powers have been weakened by illness or advancing years. Benger's Food can be enjoyed and assimilated when other foods disagree. It forms a delicate and highly nutritive cream, rich in all the elements necessary to maintain vigorous health, but entirely free from rough and indigestible particles, which often produce irritation in delicate stomachs.

The Lancet describes it as "Mr. Benger's admirable preparation."
The British Medical Journal says: "Benger's Food has by its excellence established a reputation of its own."
The London Medical Record says: "It is retained when all other foods are rejected. It is invaluable."

Benger's Food is sold in tins by Chemists, etc., everywhere.

ALWAYS READY FOR USE. NEVER REQUIRES GRIN DING.

KROPP RAZOR

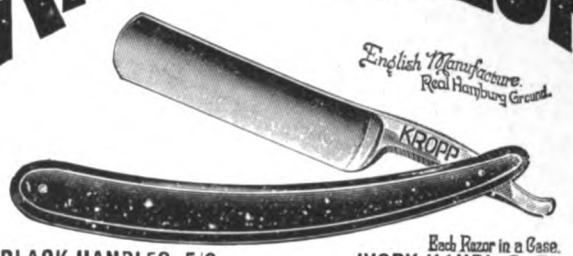
English Manufacture. Real Hamburg Ground.



Each Razor in a Case.
BLACK HANDLES, 5/6. IVORY HANDLES, 7/6.

A PLEASURE TO USE.

Wholesale: OSBORNE, GARRETT & Co., London, W.

G. W. R.

THE CHARMING WEST COUNTRY.

THE GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY

EXPRESS SERVICES give every facility for travel to

THE BOLD & ATTRACTIVE COASTS OF DEVON and CORNWALL.

THE GRANDEUR OF THE ENGLISH AND BRISTOL CHANNELS.

THE ROMANTIC EXMOOR and RUGGED DARTMOOR.

THE CHARMING HILLS and VALLEYS of SOMERSET & DORSET.

LONDON and

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Plymouth | in 4 | hrs. 25 | min. |
| Newquay | „ 6 | „ 45 | „ |
| Falmouth | „ 6 | „ 45 | „ |
| St. Ives | „ 7 | „ 10 | „ |
| Penzance | „ 7 | „ — | „ |

Full particulars can be obtained free on application to
THE SUPERINTENDENT OF THE LINE, Great Western Railway, Paddington Station, London.
JAMES C. INGLIS, General Manager.

Llangammarch Wells,

CENTRAL WALES.

(The British Nauheim.)

An Ideal Spa for the Treatment of Heart Disease, Gout, and Rheumatism.

THE LAKE HOTEL

A first-class Hotel situated in extensive Private Grounds and lighted throughout with Electricity.

Telegraphic Address: "BARIUM," LLANGAMMARCH WELLS. Apply MANAGEMENT.

GOLF CLUB WITHIN FIVE MINUTES' WALK.

UNDOUBTEDLY

over-indulgence in paper Cigarettes is injurious. Medical men emphatically state that it is responsible for much ill-health. A hygienic substitute is the

FLOR DE DINDIGUL

CIGARETTE (All Tobacco Leaf—No Paper).

It is far more satisfying, is deliciously mild, mellow to the palate, pure, and dispenses with the evil effects of paper. Doctors recommend and smoke them. They are truly a delightful Whiff. You should try them! Awarded 10 Gold Medals. Sold everywhere, 1d. each, 8/- per 100; and by BEWLAY, 49, Strand. Established 125 years.

HEALTH is BEAUTY and a SIMPLE LIFE. Mrs. ADAIR.

WE have heard much about "a simple life," and I for one recommend it. A simple life is beautiful, because in it there is no room for striving after pleasures beyond one's reach or means. The constant vexations, vanities, jealousies in every society in the upper, middle, or lower classes, all act on the character, and as we grow older, more and more injuriously. The face reflects it all until even the very features change. The woman who allows herself to speak badly of others, who through envy or any other reason tries to injure another, loses each time she does so some softness and youthful contour. Change is one of the laws of Nature: nothing can stand still—but can we not change for better, not worse?

There are in our midst intelligent men and women, and through them let us find the way to be healthy and good, and we will also be beautiful.

Plain, wholesome food. Exercises compiled for women, not for men, exercises that will not produce great hard muscles, but will keep our bodies lithe and active, soft and rounded. A sensible treatment for our faces and bodies. No make-up has ever been known to hide lines drawn by ill-health, and certainly no make-up can hide the hard lines on the brow and corners of the mouth: these tell-tale lines indicate ill-temper, jealousy, and, above all, that worst foe to good looks, slander and uncharitableness. If the lines are there, let us get rid of them by muscle treatment, and then cultivate a cheerful, kindly nature, and with ordinary care we can keep them at bay for ever. A kind act done every day is a great beautifier, believe me, and if lines come they will be upward laughing ones, not the hard downward ditches dug by contact with a world all too hard and worldly. God helps those who help themselves, and I believe in healthy food, exercise enough and not too much, reasonable enjoyment, and work for all.

GANESH FOREHEAD STRAP (Patent), price £1 5s. 6d., cures the deep lines between brows, at the corners of the eyes, and on the forehead.

GANESH CHIN STRAP (Patent) cures double chins, restores lost contours, and takes away the line running from the mouth to chin, and keeps the mouth closed during sleep. Price £1 1s. 6d. Stronger Straps, 25s.

The muscles and nerves must be braced, and make-up given up for ever. Make-up can never hide lines, and only causes one to look years older. False hair adds years to one's age, and if possible should never be used. "Hair eats hair" is an old and very true saying.

The treatments and exercises at 90, New Bond Street, London, Birmingham, Paris, and New York, are all healthy and necessary, and joined with a healthy life must and will renew and preserve our youthful appearance. Anyhow, let everyone who reads this try it for one year, and at the end of that time instead of being a year older and sadder, she will be years younger and happier.

Wild excitement, too much hard work in the open air, either riding, golfing, or any exercise not taken in moderation, are all ageing to a woman's appearance. Every morning from ten to fifteen minutes should be spent at physical exercises. Every afternoon walking, riding, golf, or tennis in moderation. For those who have to work, fifteen minutes every day in exercises, and if possible a walk every evening. Dancing, also in moderation, is good. Regular meals, neither all meat nor all vegetables: a little of both. Brown wholemeal bread, and if pure water cannot be got, have it boiled, and allow it to get cold. No spirits, wines, or liqueurs for any woman.

This is my advice, and it is worth trying.

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

A STRANGE and rather dreadful book of which everyone is talking just now is "Laurence Hope's" book of poems, "Indian Love" (Heinemann). "Laurence Hope" is now known to be the nom de guerre of the wife of an officer, who spent many years in India, and not long ago took with her own hand a life which her peculiar temperament seems to have made a burden to her. Her poems are not for the jeune fille; they are sultry, with the sultry passions of the East fretted by the restraints of a civilisation which the writer's nature was unfitted to accept. We can imagine that the yearning to be once more a tiger in the jungle which she expresses in one of these poems was no mere poetical pose. The workmanship of the poems is not of a high order, and the book is only remarkable as a very vivid and very painful "human document."

Laurence Hope.

* * *

THE numerous readers of Mr. "Freddy" Leveson Gower's amusing "Bygone Years" (John Murray) will find it difficult to realise the fact that the writer was born in the same year as Queen Victoria, was the playmate of the Comte de Chambord, the Duke of Cambridge, and the King of Hanover, and was solemnly presented to Sir Walter Scott while dining at the British Embassy in Paris four years before the death of George IV. Mr. Leveson-Gower knew Talleyrand and a dozen other Napoleonic notabilities while still in their prime; he has lived in the reigns of no less than five British sovereigns; and he has given the world in his eighty-sixth year just such a book of reminiscences as one would expect from the genial host at Holmbury and in London, who has known everybody worth knowing for three-quarters of a century, and whose opinion on matters of cave and cuisine is second only to that of the late Lord Granville. The book is full of plums, most of them new, like the story of Bishop Wilberforce's pious wish for the demise of Pius IX., lest "he should make his brother-in-law Manning a cardinal." To many it will be tidings of comfort and joy to learn that M. Béguinot, the famous chef of the Leveson-Gowers, has now turned philanthropist, and dispenses dinners and lunches to all and sundry who prefer Soho to Piccadilly, at a uniform charge of eightpence, with the personal guarantee of Mme. Beguinot that you will never by any chance rub shoulders with any but those who belong to "une societé choisie-rien d'équivoque."

In Bygone Years.

* * *

TO his series of Cathedrals, Mr. Werner Laurie has just added the first volume of two on the Cathedrals of England and Wales. It is a handy volume, well printed and bound, illustrated with good photographs, and it appears to us that the author, Mr. T. Francis Bumpus, has said exactly what the general reader, with some slight knowledge of the terms of architecture, will be glad to read, and will find himself benefited by reading. The cathedrals described in this volume are Durham, Ely, Lincoln, Salisbury, Worcester, Hereford, Chichester, Chester, and Bristol, and in an excellent introductory sketch Mr. Bumpus traces the development of our English Gothic architecture, with ample side references to that of the various kinds of Continental Gothic. In dealing with the cathedrals, he gives the architectural history and analysis of the fabric in an interesting and lucid manner, and his book, though not a scientific treatise, is accurate and trustworthy.

Our Cathedrals.

* * *

"Conceited gowk! puff'd up wi' windy pride!
This monie a year I've stood the flood and tide;
And though wi' crazy eild I'm sair forfairn,
I'll be a brig when ye're a shapeless cairn!"

THAT is what the Auld Brig of Ayr (which you will see in the centre of this page) says to the New Brig in Burns's poem of the "Twa Brigs"; and the boastful prophecy came true. The New Brig was built in 1788, chiefly owing to the exertions of the Provost Ballantyne to whom Burns dedicated his poem; and not a hundred years later the sturdy old fellow, who had been standing—of course with occasional repairs—since he was first built near the ford in the thirteenth century by two maiden sisters of the name of Low, had the satisfaction of seeing his younger rival collapse into a "shapeless cairn" of stones. It was rebuilt, however, at once; and now it seems possible that the whipper-snapper will, after all, see the old time-honoured Brig suffer a like fate.

The Auld Brig.

* * *

OF course, if it were merely a question of old age and the ordinary historical interest, there would have been no likelihood of Lord Rosebery rousing himself, like Achilles in his tent, and stepping forth to strike a blow for the preservation of an ancient hero whom modern science declares to be past saving. But there is more in the matter than that. This Auld Brig is hallowed for all time by its association with Burns. Two miles from Ayr (you may get there nowadays in an electric tram) is the cottage where Burns was born in 1759, and where he lived till his father removed to Lochlea. It is now the property of the Ayr Burns Monument Trustees, and has been restored to the condition it was in in the poet's boyhood.

Burns and Ayr.

* * *

ALL the country round is redolent of "Tam o' Shanter" and Burns's poems. Here flows the "Bonny Doon"; here is Alloway, with its kirk and Mungo's Well; here is Slaphouse Brig and

"the ford
Whare in the snaw the chapman snoor'd."

Burns has long ceased to be the peculiar possession of the Scotch (is not his statue to be seen in London as well as in Ayr?); he is read and loved all over England and her Empire; and if money can save the Auld Brig of Ayr, and Lord Rosebery's timely insistence will lead to the finding of an architect who can manage the task, there is not likely to be any lack of pecuniary support.

A National Possession.

* * *

THERE is really scarcely any "summer vacation" now so far as the publication of novels is concerned. One of the busiest of publishers in this respect is Mr. John Long, from whom we have lately received "Alton of Somasco," by Mr. Harold Bindloss, a story of life and adventure in British Columbia — the long struggle between a settler who has views for the good of the community, and another who has no views for anyone's good but his own; "The Harvest of Love," by Mr. C. Ranger-Gull, in which the author tells of a small seaside town in Cornwall, which reminds us, in its manner of observing social distinctions, of Mr. Couch's "Troy Town," and of how these distinctions were disturbed by the advent of a viscount; and "The White Lady," by Miss May Crommelin, a quite impossible story, written in an impossible style, of a woman who married a man, half man of science, half fiend, who turns into a homicidal maniac. Other good novels are Mr. Orme Agnus's "The New Minister" (Ward, Lock)—very good this—which tells charmingly of an earnest and sincere Wesleyan Methodist minister, and his effect on the simple minds and lives of poor folk in one of those Dorset villages that Mr. Agnus has studied to such purpose; and "The Man Who Won," by Mrs. Baillie Reynolds (Hutchinson), in which, excepting perhaps the very strange and sudden refinement of a rough diamond after going through the South African War, we have an interesting picture of the strong man who compels the love of a woman in spite of the revulsion she feels for him at first.

Novels.

* * *

BUT we see from the publishers' lists that there are better things to come. Messrs. Methuen promise us "Ferryland," by Helen Mathers, a volume of stories "The Black Spaniel," by Mr. Robert Hichens, and new novels from Mr. Richard Bagot, Mr. Marriott Watson, Mr. Anthony Hope, Mr. Eden Phillpotts, Mrs. Croker, and Mr. Arthur Morrison. Messrs. Macmillan promise Mr. H. G. Wells's "Kipps" in book form, "Lone Marie," by Mr. W. E. Norris, a "Romance of Operatic Life in New York," by Mrs. Marion Crawford, and two more novels by Americans, Mr. Winston Churchill and Mr. Owen Wister, the author of that fine book "The Virginian." Mr. Murray has a new book, "All Hallows," by Mr. Laurence Housman; while Mr. Clemence Housman is publishing with Messrs. Methuen a volume on one of the least known of King Arthur's knights, "The Life of Sir Aglovale de Gallis." Messrs. Chatto and Windus will issue novels by Mr. Robert Barr, Mr. Algernon Gissing, Mr. Arnold Bennett (he of "The Five Towns"), Mr. E. W. Hornung, and Mrs. Campbell Praed; while Mr. Fisher Unwin has a new novel by Mrs. Craigie (John Oliver Hobbes), called "The Dream and the Business," and another Yorkshire story by Mr. J. S. Fletcher. So there is plenty of good fiction to look forward to.

Forthcoming Novels.

Copyright. G. W. Wilson.

THE "AULD BRIG" AT AYR
Which is threatened with destruction by the local authorities.

BOOKS TO READ.

Vivien, by H. B. Maxwell. (Methuen.)
A Jay of Italy, by Bernard Capes. (Methuen.)
A Tragedy in Commonplace, by M. Urquhart. (Methuen.)
Literary Celebrities of the English Lake District, by Frederick Sessions. (Elliot Stock.)
Edinburgh, by Oliphant Smeaton. (Dent.)
Hugh Rendal, by Lionel Portman. (Alston Rivers.)
The Cathedrals of England and Wales, by Francis Bumpus. (Werner Laurie.)
Captain Sheen, by C. Owen. (Unwin.)
Alton of Somasco, by Harold Bindloss. (Long.)
Summer Holidays among the Glories of France, by Francis Bumpus. (Dennis.)

Digitized by Google

NEW ZEALAND

THE BRIGHTER BRITAIN.

A NEW COUNTRY of marvellous beauty, with a fertile soil and a splendid climate. No extremes of heat or cold.

No droughts. An abundance of water, yet no rainy season.

An Evergreen Land rich in natural products.

A GREAT SHEEP, CATTLE AND DAIRYING COUNTRY.

Cheap farms with helpful assistance to farmers by the Government. Reduced steamer fares from the United Kingdom to New Zealand for persons with small capital.

No private monopoly of Public Utilities; the Government owns and operates Railways, Telegraphs, Telephones and Insurance.

No Lock-outs! No Strikes!! Employment disputes adjusted by Arbitration!!!

NEW ZEALAND IS THE WONDERLAND OF THE WORLD.

Its Thermal Sights are unique in their extent, beauty and weirdness.

The Mammoth Geyser "Waimangu" (Black Water) hurls an immense mass of boiling water, mud and stones over 1,000 feet high.

Hot Mineral Water and Mud Baths; The Curative Baths of Rotorua, Te Aroha and Hanmer are world famous. Government doctors in attendance.

Baths. Gardens. Games. Music.

and picturesque. Here are lakes of great size and depth—canyons that surpass the greatest of other lands—dense forests with a tropical profusion of ferns and flowers—innumerable waterfalls—monoliths of granite many thousands of feet in height—glaciers, snowfields, and the peerless Sounds, with their 400 miles of inside sailing distance.

TRANSIT is convenient throughout New Zealand. Government railways, Express trains, Pullman and Dining Cars. Excellent coastal steamers. Splendid coaching routes. Hotels, good; charges moderate. Government Hotels, Spas, and Accommodation Houses in many of the principal tourist resorts.

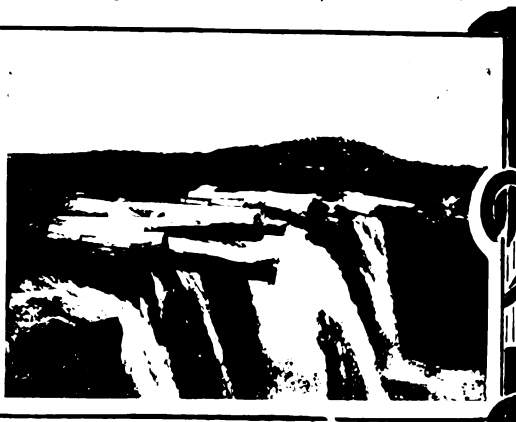
Large Mail Steamers with every modern comfort and convenience leave Great Britain for New Zealand fortnightly. Duration of direct journey, 40 days; via Suez and Australia, 44 days; via Canada, 32 days; via San Francisco, 28 days.

The best time to visit New Zealand is during the summer months, from November to April.

ALL INFORMATION regarding Travel, Tourist Routes, Spas, Baths, Sport, etc., etc., is supplied free of charge by the GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENT OF TOURIST AND HEALTH RESORTS. Head Office, WELLINGTON, NEW ZEALAND. Branch Offices throughout the Colony. Information regarding access to New Zealand, Reduced Steamer

HAULING KAURI LOGS THROUGH BUSH, KAURI FOREST, NORTH AUCKLAND.

FELLING KAURI TREE, NORTH AUCKLAND, KAURI FOREST.



WAIRUA FALLS, WAIRUA RIVER, NORTH AUCKLAND.

The ALPINE SCENERY of New Zealand combines the distinguishing features of Switzerland, Norway and America. The Southern Alps extend for 300 miles. Mt. Cook, the highest peak, is belted by the largest glaciers in the temperate regions—the Tasman being 18 miles long and 2 miles wide. Near the foot of Mt. Cook is the Hermitage Hotel. Government guides, Alpine huts, and all necessary Alpine equipment available for use of visitors.

The LAKES of New Zealand are most pleasing in their charm of colour, contour and environment. Rotorua, Rotoiti, Taupo, and Waikaremoana in the North Island; Manapouri, Wakatipu, Te Anau, Wanaka, Kanieri and Mahinapua in the South Island are the most notable. The Lakes of the South Island are surrounded by mountain scenery of singular beauty and magnificence. Steamers and Power Launches. Good Hotels.

The WEST COAST FIORDLAND is indescribably wild

Fares, Settlement Commerce, Industries, Travel, etc., etc., also supplied at the Office of the High Commissioner for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, London—Mr. J. G. Gow, Commercial Agent for New Zealand, Durban, South Africa, also supplies general information respecting New Zealand.

Minister for Tourist and Health Resorts: Hon. Sir Joseph G. Ward, K.C.M.G. Superintendent: T. E. Donne, Wellington, New Zealand. The Superintendent invites correspondence.

See Tourist Department's "Itinerary of Travel" and descriptive Guide Books.

An International Exhibition of Products, Manufactures, Arts, Sciences, Amusements, etc., etc., is to be held by the Government of New Zealand in Hagley Park, Christchurch City, commencing 1st November, 1906, and terminating April, 1907. Full particulars obtainable from the High Commissioner for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, S.W.

OKOROIRE.

HOT SPRINGS AND SANATORIUM HOTEL.

One of the finest Health Resorts in the Thermal District.

The first place of interest en route to Rotorua, New Zealand.

Delightful NATURAL HOT MINERAL BATHS, free to Guests. Sufferers from Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Affection of the Eyes, Skin Diseases, etc., are often permanently cured by these waters.

CLIMATE.—Beautifully clear and bracing atmosphere, charming surroundings.

SPORT.—The Streams in the hotel grounds are exceedingly well-stocked with Trout. Plenty of Game, viz: Pheasants, Virginian Quail, Wild Duck, Hares, and Deer. Lawn Tennis, Golf, and Croquet.

The drive from Okoroire to Rotorua is one of the most beautiful in New Zealand.

T. MARTIN,
Manager.

NEW ZEALAND.

THE GRAND HOTEL, ROTORUA.

Situated in the Centre of the Hot Lakes District.

Patronised by T.R.H. The Prince and Princess of Wales.

THE HOTEL is in the immediate neighbourhood of the beautifully laid-out Government Gardens, wherein are situated the celebrated "Priest," "Rachel," "Postmaster," "Duchess," and other mineral baths, the curative properties of which are world famous. It has magnificent and lofty apartments, spacious promenade, balconies, snug alcoves, and luxuriously-appointed drawing, music, conversation, reading, smoking, and billiard rooms, perfect sanitation, and is lighted throughout by electricity.

BATH CHAIRS and attendance provided to convey invalids to or from the various bath houses. Tariff 12/6 per day inclusive.

W. J. LEES, Manager.

THE GEYSER HOTEL,

WHAKAREWAREWA, ROTORUA.

Situated in close proximity to the wonderful Geysers and Maori Settlement.

Visitors staying at the Geyser Hotel have continued opportunity of witnessing them as they can be seen plainly from the verandah of the Hotel, also of studying native life and customs.

The Hotel possesses its own private hot and cold curative mineral baths of which the most valued are the "Spout," "Oil," and "Carlsbad" Baths.

It has lately been greatly enlarged and re-furnished in a most comfortable manner. Electric light is established throughout the hotel and baths.

Coaches run regularly between Whakarewarewa, the Rotorua Sanatorium, and Government Gardens.

Tariff 10s. per day or £3 per week, inclusive. For a lengthened stay terms can be arranged

CHAS. E. NELSON, Proprietor.

Digitized by Google

Leaves from a Collector's Note-book.

No. LV —GLASS-TRANSFER PICTURES.

THE cult of the glass-transfer print or picture (as distinguished from paintings on glass known on the Continent as verre églomisé) has increased by leaps and bounds since they played a prominent part three seasons ago in the exhibition of the Royal Amateur Art Society, held at Lowther Lodge, to which the Duchess of Wellington contributed nearly fifty specimens. Fine and genuine examples of glass-transfer, like those now reproduced from the collection of Miss Helen A. Woollan, command at the present time far higher prices than they did five years ago, and in consequence the "fabricator" and the "faker" are now hard at work, and the market is flooded with "duffers," chiefly recognisable on account of the difficulty of successfully imitating the old process and the production of the brittle, thin, uneven glass in use from 1700 to 1815, when the art seems to have lost its vogue. There are three distinct kinds or grades of the glass-transfer picture. The first is confined to high-class mezzotint or line engravings (chiefly the former) like those now illustrated, and which form part of a series executed in 1753 by R. Houston after F. Hayman (one of Garrick's favourite painters), and published "for Thomas Bowles in St. Paul's Churchyard, and John Bowles and Son at the Black Horse in Cornhill." The second may be described as "profile-transfers," and consist of silhouettes heightened by the addition of gold, silver, and colour. These are very little known, but the writer owns a glass-transfer profile portrait of the Duke of Wellington on horseback, executed in 1808 by Mr. Rosenberg of 14, The Grove, Bath, "Profile Painter to their Majesties, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and the Duke and Duchess of York." This example is most curious, and can claim considerable artistic merit. The third or coarser kind of glass-transfer became common between 1795 and 1815. In the recent Nelson Exhibition at Dorchester were to be seen no less than seven different glass-transfer pictures of the death of Nelson. These fetch from 15s. to 25s. each, whereas the finer kinds are worth from £3 to £6 each, or even more. Amongst the chief collectors of the first category of glass-transfer pictures are the Duchess of

"SEEING."

One of a series, painted by F. Hayman and transferred to glass by R. Houston. Lately in the possession of Miss Woollan of 20, Brook Street.

Wellington, Dr. Playfair, and Mrs. Skipwith. Mr. J. G. Commin of Exeter possesses a very fine glass-transfer "Virgin and Child," by Berestord after Rubens, but as a rule the prices commanded by sacred subjects are comparatively low. The literature of glass-transfer pictures is meagre in the extreme, but it is idle to contend that they were the work of mere amateurs. Really good painters and portraitists were certainly responsible for the production of many of the finer examples, now increasingly difficult to procure. Mr. F. Barrett of Bridport and Mr. Hubert Barrett of Dorchester have recently succeeded in "creating" very good glass-transfers of old mezzotints, and the art was certainly not a lost one thirty-five years ago, as Mr. Gilbert Russell gave directions for its practice in his "Art of Miniature Painting." The earliest authority on the subject is John Smith, whose "Art of Painting in Oyl" went through several editions between 1676 and 1788. The first-named is silent on the subject of glass-transfer, but in that of 1700 there is a chapter entitled "The Art of Back Painting Mezotincto Prints, with Oyl-Colours," with the following directions:

"This Mystery consists chiefly in pasting the Print upon a piece of glass of such a size as fits the Print Now to do this take your Print and lay it in clean Water for two Days and two Nights, or longer if your Print be on very strong paper. Then take it out and lay it upon two Sheets of Paper and cover it with two more, and let it lie there a little to suck out the Moisture. In the meantime take the Glass your Print is to be pasted on, and set it near the Fire to warm, then take Strasburg Turpentine and put it into a Gally-Pot and warm it upon the Fire, then take a Hog's hair Brush, the Hairs being well fastened by wedging as before was shewed, and therewith spread over the Turpentine very smoothly on the Glass. Then take the Print from between the Paper and lay it upon the Glass, beginning first at one part, and so rub it down gently as you go on till it lie close and there be no Wind Bladders between; then with your Finger roll or rub off the Paper from the back side of the Print till you see nothing but the Print left upon the Glass, and when this is done set it by to dry, and when 'tis dry Varnish it over with some White Transparent Varnish that the Print may be seen through it, and then it is fit for Painting. You may, instead of soaking your Prints two Days and two Nights, roll them up and boil them for about two Hours in Water, and that will make them as fit for peeling as the other way when rubbed with your Fingers; then having prepared your Oyl Colours, as in the preceding work is directed, grinding them very fine, and tempering them up very stiff; let the back-side of the transparent Print be Coloured over with such Colours as each particular part does require, letting the Master lines of the Print still guide your Pencil, so will each particular Colour lye fair to the Eye on the other side, and look almost as well as a Painted Piece, if it be done neatly. Note, That the shadows of the Print are generally sufficient for the shadow of every Colour, but if you desire to give a shadow from your Pencil, then let the shadows be laid on first, and the other Colours after. Note also, That in laying on of Colours in this kind of backside Painting, you need not be curious in laying them on smooth, 'tis not at all requisite here, where the chief aim is only to have the Colours appear well on the foreside of the Print, and, therefore, the only care to be used in this work is to lay Colour thick enough that its body may strike the Colour of it plainly through the Glass."

B.

"TASTING." "HEARING."

The second and third picture in the series, published in 1753 "for Thomas Bowles in St. Paul's Churchyard, and John Bowles and Son at the Black Horse in Cornhill."

Digitized by Google

MALLETT
& SON

hold and offer for sale specimens of the
HIGHEST QUALITY
OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE
as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.

EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.
AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.
(Two hours from Paddington.)

Rare Prints and Portraits
CARICATURES.

Speciality: Rarities of all sorts relating to NAPOLEON and AMERICA.

GODEFROY MAYER,
41, Rue Blanche, Paris.

Catalogues issued. Rare Prints and Engraved Portraits sought for.
Correspondence Invited.

Mr. Mayer's stock is probably the largest and finest in Europe. He specially caters for the wants and requirements of English and American extra-illustrators.

Old Brass Stand and Lamp.

THE MISSES
H. & I. WOOLLAN
(Under Royal Patronage)
are showing a
UNIQUE
Collection of
Antiques.

Chippendale, Sheraton, and Hepplewhite Furniture. Worcester and Lowestoft Services. Lace, Glass, etc.

Showrooms: First Floor.

28, BROOK STREET, GROSVENOR SQUARE, W.

IF YOU ARE BUYING
Any kind of Requisite for Travelling, it will pay you to send for
W. H. SMITH'S
ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF
PORTMANTEAUX
TRUNKS
BAGS
And every description of Leather Goods and Travelling Requisites for Home and the Colonies.

Opposite the Abbey,* BATH.

Maker of the ROSEBERY HAT BOX.

LORD ROSEBERY says: "It is an ingenious and useful Hat Box."

THE KING'S COLLECTORS' REGISTER.

For Spaces in the Register apply to "THE EDITOR."

WANTED.

AUTOGRAPHS AND LETTERS.

MSS. of Admiral T. M. Hardy. Good letters wanted.—827, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Autograph of Madame d'Arblay, and the Royal Princesses Charlotte, Auguste and Amelia.—828, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Autograph Letter of the Rev. Edmund Nelson, of Burnham Thorpe. £2 offered.—829, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Complete copies of Fairburn's Journal of Naval Occurrences.—154, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

A Copy of an Admiralty Circular, published Jan. 1st, 1825, describing the naval uniform "which in pursuance of his Majesty's pleasure is to be worn by officers of the Royal Navy" Signed by J. W. Crocker, Secretary of the Admiralty, and containing coloured patterns.—179, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Good copy of the Napoleon Museum, collected and arranged by John Sainsbury. Thick 4to, London, 1845. 25s offered.—180, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Masonic Song Books, between 1750 and 1782. Good price offered.—181, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Naval Prints published by any of the following:—C. Sheppard, 74, Little Britain; C. Taylor, Holborn (date 1791); J. Fairburn, 110 and 146, Minories (1800-1838); Tabart and Co, London; E. Rushton, Paradise Street, Liverpool; W. Belch, Bridge Street, Boro'; I. Houlston, Strand; R. Sly, 41, Union Street, Somers Town; J. Marshall, Aldermary Churchyard, London.—237, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Good Impressions with good margins of engravings of old London, especially Covent Garden, the Temple, the Strand, Linco'n's Inn.—249, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Prints of Uniform of the Navy, by Rowlandson, Hull, Ulsdall, and Sharp, or any others.—261, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Information or Copies of any Prints showing Doggett, or any of the other pre-Macklin Shylocks.—262, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.—continued.

Masonic Portraits, Pictures, or Certificates, between 1717 and 1790. Good price given.—263, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

View of Carlisle House, Soho, about 1780-1790.—264, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Aquatints of the Battle of Navarino, and the engagement between the "Shannon" and "Chesapeake," after Sir John Theophilus Lee.—265, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Portrait of Henry, Duke of Cumberland, wearing Masonic insignia, by Jones after Thomas Beach, cir. 1780-1782. £5 offered.—266, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Topographical Prints relating to Freemasons' Hall and Great Queen Street, between 1750 and 1800.—267, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Bristol Theatre. Old playbills, 1855-57, with name of Marie Wilton (Lady Bancroft) in cast.—748, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Items relating to Milton Abbot School, Dorset, and its History.—752, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Valentines in use before 1800. 5s. for a good specimen.—753, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Any Medals relating to the Digby Family.—754, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MS. or printed copy of the West Country Mummers' Play of the Death of Nelson.—755, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Old Programmes of the Festivals of the Three Choirs (Gloucester, Worcester and Hereford), prior to 1800. 10s. offered for that of Worcester in 1788.—766, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Cuttings or Pamphlets about Dr. Graham and his Temple of Health.—767, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Portraits and Autographs of Admirals Sir Charles Bullen, Sir Robert Digby, and Sir Henry Digby. Autograph letters of Sir Charles Bullen. Also any Naval Biography containing accounts of these officers.—768, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Old Spanish Leather, grotesque figures in. Information on the subject requested.—769, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Glass Transfer Pictures Wanted, high-class examples of portraits: D. and Mrs. Garrick, Queen Charlotte, Mrs. Piozzi, and others. Good price offered.—526, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Wedgwood or Worcester Masonic Jugs, with the names and numbers of private lodges.—527, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

GOLD, SILVER, Etc.

Pair of very early Sheffield Ware Candelabra.—615, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

FURNITURE.

Oak Corner China Cabinet, geometrically glazed. 30s. Photo.—410A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Complete set of the World Newspaper, from its foundation down to 1896.—133A, The KING'S EXCHANGE.

The Tichborne Trial, in 8 volumes (folio), in original boards, with presentation copy of Lord Chief Justice Cockburn's charge to the jury, 2 volumes.—134A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

GOLD, SILVER, Etc.

Really genuine and fine specimens of Sheffield Plate, in good condition.—608A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

An exceptionally beautiful Worcester Dessert Service; best period and very lovely decorative paintings.—524A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Five Glass Pictures of the Death of Nelson (all different),—525A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Superb Bust of Shakespeare, in Staffordshire ware. Probably the finest in existence.—526A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

THE Herkomer Trophy Competition, which was brought to a satisfactory conclusion last week, was won by a German, Herr Edgar Ladenburg, on a 40-h.p. Mercédes; while a second prize has been awarded to Herr Willy Poege, a professional, who also drove a Mercédès car of 60-h.p. The seventh, eighth, twelfth, and fourteenth places were likewise secured by cars of the same make. Altogether the result was a triumph for this eminent German firm. It will be remembered that seventy-nine cars started, and of these no fewer than thirty-four went through without trouble of any sort, which speaks well for the efficiency and reliability of motors of to-day. Although only one firm of English manufacturers was represented in this unique event—the Daimler Company, which sent a team of five cars—the honour of this country was nobly upheld. The Daimlers, which were owned and driven by Mrs. Manville and Messrs. Herdman, Ash, Philip Dawson, and Frank Rendle, rendered an excellent account of themselves, and excited a considerable amount of admiration. It is noteworthy that the British-built Daimlers never once experienced mechanical difficulties of any kind throughout the trials, and but for tyre troubles would undoubtedly have done very much better. At the banquet given by the Bavarian Club at the conclusion of the trials, the president stated that next year tyre troubles would not be taken into account, as it was recognised that this factor had, in many cases, prevented many of the best cars securing places. A high tribute was paid to British sportsmanship by Dr. Levin Stoelping of the German Branch of the Automobile Club, who complimented the Daimler Company on the excellence of their cars. On her entry into Munich, Mrs. Maud Manville (the only lady driver and winner in the speed trials) was made the recipient of a large laurel wreath decorated with Bavarian blue and white silk streamers. Herr Edgar Ladenburg, the fortunate winner of the trophy, is to receive, as an additional honour, a portrait of himself painted by the genial professor.

* * *

The numerous motor meetings which have taken place this year have naturally produced many changes in the list of world's records. Below we reproduce a tabulated list of records to date, recently published in the Standard:

RECORDS TO DATE.

CARS (under 1,000 kilos. in weight).

| Distance. | Driver. | Car. | Sec. | M.p.h. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Kilomètre (flying) | Baras .... / Earp..... | Darracq.... / Napier .... | 21 2-5 | 104·52 |
| Kilomètre (standing) | Guinness.. | Darracq.... | 35 4-5 | 62·45 |
| Mile (standing) | Baras .... | Darracq.... | 48 3-5 | 74·07 |
| Mile (flying) | Macdonald | Napier .... | 34 2-5 | 104·65 |

MOTOR-CYCLES (under 50 kilos. in weight).

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Kilomètre (flying) | Cissac .... | Peugeot.... | 25 3-5 | 87·32 |
| Kilomètre (standing) | Cissac .... | Peugeot.... | 35 | 63·87 |
| Mile (standing) | Cissac .... | Peugeot.... | 50 1-5 | 71·71 |
| Mile (flying) | Rignold .. | Peugeot.... | 46 1-5 | 77·92 |

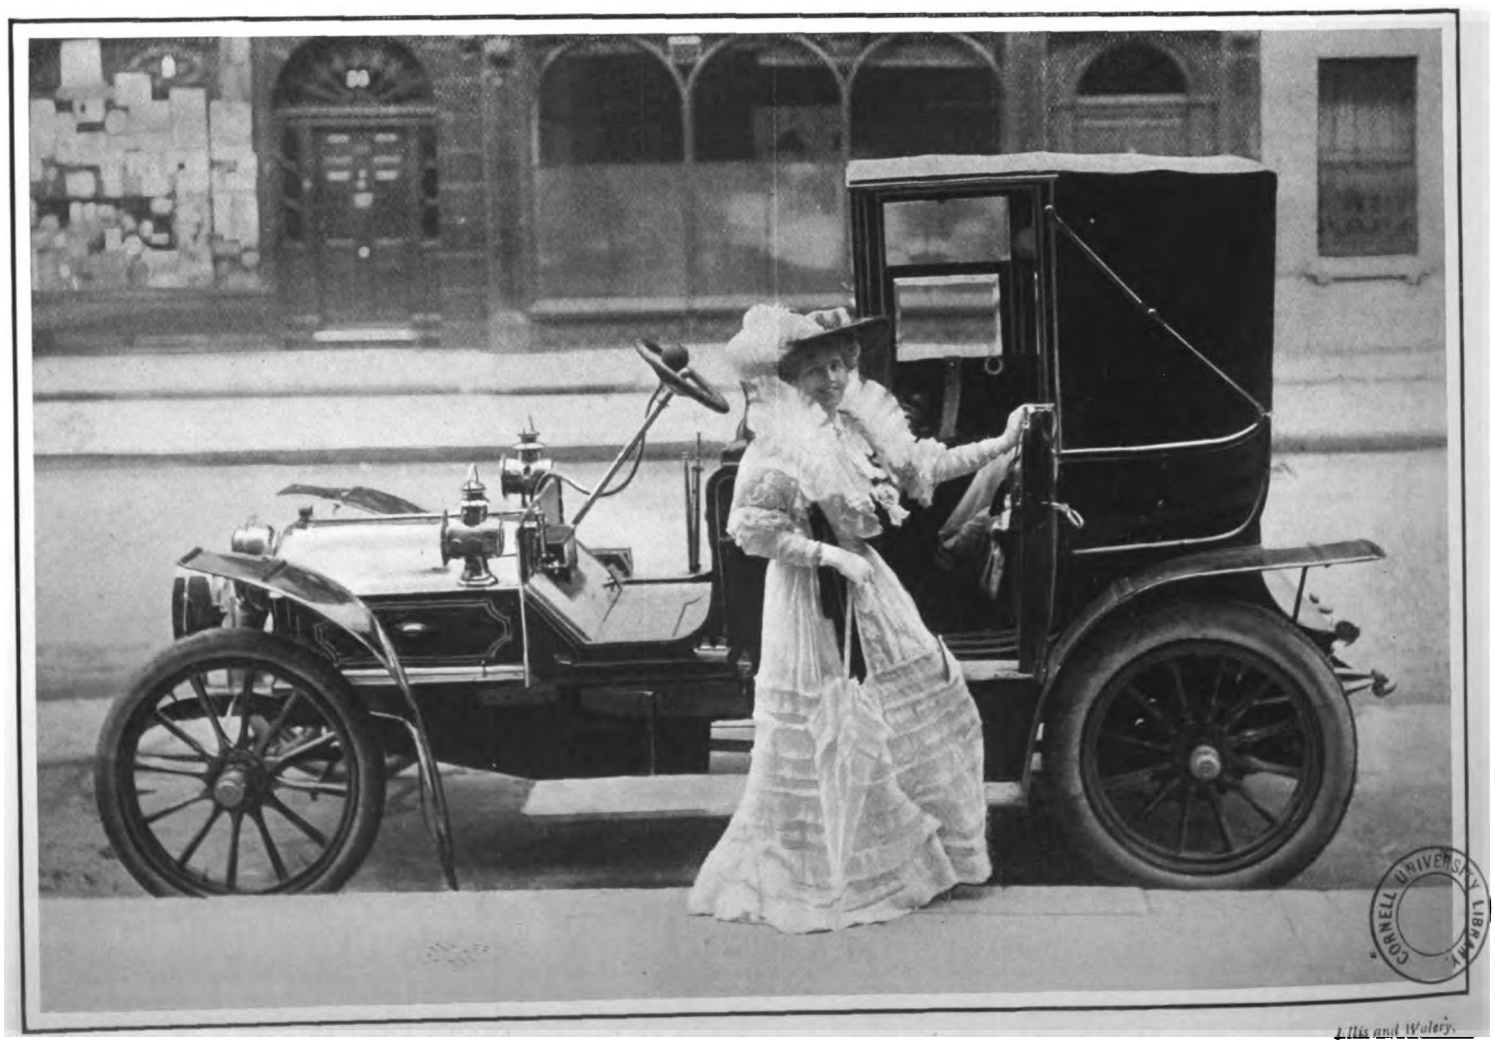
Baras's records were made at Ostend on November 14, 1904; Guinness's and Rignold's at Brighton on July 22, 1905, and July 20, 1905, respectively. Cissac's three records were made on a single run at Blackpool on July 27, 1905. Earp tied with Baras's kilomètre record on July 28, 1905, at Blackpool.

A prospectus of a new institution, which styles itself the National Automobile Society, has just been issued bearing the names of Lord Armstrong, Sir W. Martin Conway, and Sir Douglas Fox among its vice-presidents. Its objects and aims are set forth at some length in the prospectus, from which we cull the following extract:

"The outcry against the racing car and reckless driver, and the general prejudice of the public, has now reached such a stage that popular opinion is apt to place all automobilists on the same footing, whereas the majority of car owners and users are more strongly than any member of the public opposed to the excesses of the few, inasmuch as the campaign of official terrorism and oppression that is now growing day by day bears more than harshly upon those who have the true interests of the motor-car and its future at heart. The closing of Hyde Park and other restrictive measures, and the recently-introduced Amendment Act, are directly traceable to malpractices such as exist on the part of the small minority, but the effects of which react most upon innocent users of the highways. The principle involved in these measures is also of the utmost importance, and it may safely be assumed that this will be only the beginning of a very far-reaching campaign unless energetic steps are at once taken to uphold the rights of motorists. To this end the society will be able to do very much to remove the existing prejudice and obtain for its members directly and indirectly that measure of justice and recognition which their numerical importance demands."

* * *

In the Midland Automobile Club's hill-climb, recently held in the private grounds of Court House, Shelsley Walsh, near Worcester, the handicap was won by a little De Dion driven by M. G. Patterson. The silver cup presented by Mr. H. C. Holder for the car making the fastest time went to Mr. E. M. C. Instone, who drove a Daimler.



Ellis and Walery.

MISS ELLALINE TERRISS ENTERING HER FIAT CAR.

Digitized by Google

May be viewed and tried at our London Showrooms.

FOR IMMEDIATE DELIVERY

FROM STOCK.

Two new 15-h.p. 4-Cylinder . . .

ARIEL

cars, fitted with side entrance bodies, one painted light green and upholstered in dark green leather, the other painted dark red and upholstered in dark red leather by first-class coachbuilder.

PRICE £550.

We have been instructed by customers to sell the following cars:—

1. 15 h.p. 4-cylinder 1904 type, fitted with landaulette coachwork to seat two inside and two outside, painted dark green, and upholstered in best leather to match. In splendid condition, nickel-plated finish. Price £450, complete with five lamps, horn, and usual tools.
2. 15 h.p. 4-cylinder 1904 type, fitted with tonneau coachwork, front seats bucket shape, to seat five persons, painted light green with fine red line, and upholstered in buttoned crimson leather. Nickel-plated finish. Very smart-looking car, not run more than 1,000 miles. Price, complete, with five lamps, and horn with flexible tube, and usual tools, £425.
3. 15 h.p. 4-cylinder Ariel, fitted with side-entrance coachwork to seat five, front seats bucket shape, latest type, painted dark green, and upholstered in dark green leather to match, plated finish. Price, complete, with five lamps, horn, and flexible tube, £500.

THE ARIEL MOTOR CO., LTD., 127-130, Long Acre, London, W.C.

Full particulars of ARIEL All-British Touring Cars sent free on request.

Trials at any time by appointment.

BY APPOINTMENT.

ROYAL APPRECIATION

AS A

SPECIAL MARK of APPRECIATION

of the excellent running qualities of the

THORNYCROFT CAR

supplied to their order,

T.R.H. PRINCE and PRINCESS CHRISTIAN

of SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN have been graciously pleased to favour us with a

ROYAL WARRANT

of appointment as

MOTOR MANUFACTURERS.

JOHN I. THORNYCROFT & CO., Ltd., Chiswick, London, W.

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

As usual at this season of the year, Fashion is comparatively at a standstill. The heads of our leading firms are all away, partly on their holidays, but many more combining business with pleasure, and eagerly seeking the newest variations of the modes for the early autumn. At present it is somewhat difficult to predict for certain what will be worn, for so many outré modes are introduced by French and Viennese artists that have to be much modified for the English taste. Still, a little bird, who is generally very well informed on these matters, has loudly whispered in my ever-attentive ear. The long, tight-fitting tailor-made coats and skirts, in plain colour tweeds, are the things that will win the day. Plain strappings will be employed as sole trimmings, both on the coat and skirt. Colours such as iron grey, heather, nut brown, and a certain tone of green, something between a reseda and mignonette, will be most in vogue. A new coatee of novel conceit, of which I had a hasty glimpse, and am assured will play a big part in the quite early autumn season, is a most becoming shape for those of short stature. I have just seen some delightful evening gowns that have been made and despatched abroad for coming entertainments, one a black Spanish lace princesse robe, over white satin, softened by two or three layers of white chiffon. The trimming was of graduated widths of ribbon velvet, narrow at the top and spreading out to about 6-in. or 8-in. at the bottom of the skirt; each row of velvet was tapered off and had a single diamond dewdrop at the end. The bodice velvets started wide, and gradually diminished until they met the skirt lines, into which they merged. The effect was charming, and gave such a slender appearance to the figure. Another that was equally distingué was composed of soft Indian crêpe in the new biscuit colour. Lovely panels of a fine cobweb lace were let in at intervals three parts down the skirt, the lower part of which was of numerous graduated flounces of the same fine lace, put on in full billowy waves. The low bodice was particularly quaint, and gave the impression of two sash ends of lace crossed and tied in a simple knot at one side, the ends falling carelessly to the end of the skirt.

A NEW TEA-GOWN IN CREPE DE CHINE.
(Messrs. Robinson and Cleaver, Regent Street, W.)

For the linen and muslin dresses now being so much worn, the latest invention is a form of princesse, in soft silks, to correspond in colour with the transparent robes worn over them. This is cut low, and fits the figure tightly and perfectly, falling full at the bottom of the skirt. This takes the place of the silk linings to these dresses, and comes to us originally from America. This is one more of their practical innovations, and one that will find much favour with most of us; just as have the charming lingerie combinations which have become such general favourites this season.

Tea-gowns are more luxurious than ever, and deservedly so. What is more refreshing than to don these pretty lace and soft muslin gowns after being exposed to the hot rays of an August sun? Here is a delightful specimen of one at Messrs. Robinson and Cleaver's of Regent Street. This is of ciel blue crêpe de chine, with insertions of Valenciennes and soft flouncings of the same, with which flat graduated tucks of the material alternate. The graceful lace three-quarter coat is fastened at the neck by a full rosette of dark blue chiffon, then the falling apart of the lace shows the full folds of crêpe gauged into the waist, and again finished by a knot of chiffon. The long hanging sleeve is correspondingly carried out, and has a truly charming effect. There were some equally pretty gowns in various soft materials at this well-known establishment that are well worth seeing, and the spacious and wonderfully-ventilated show-rooms make shopping most enjoyable, which cannot be said of all shops this weather.

Some of the milliners are already showing some autumn models. Feather hats in all shades of colours seem to be making their appearance. It is a trifle early for these, but one or two in lovely flesh pink tints looked most inviting. I hear a rumour that the old "princess" bonnet is returning to favour, but will only be patronised by middle-aged women. I am afraid there must be a slight mistake somewhere, for it would puzzle anyone to find such people in these days of "beauty doctors." There is no such thing as growing old, gracefully, in these modern times; there is no intermediate stage now, or, at least, scarcely ever. It is woman's duty to remain young as long as she possibly can, and she tries hard to fulfil that duty.

Do not forget, if you have not taken a sufficient supply of veils, laces, and gloves, that Messrs. Charles Lee and Son of Wigmore Street will always send you selections on approval.

R. D.

(From a photograph specially taken for this paper by Lemeilleur and Co.)

Digitized by Google

Preserve your Teeth!

BY USING FRAGRANT

FLORILINE

It imparts a

FRAGRANCE TO THE BREATH

that is rare and delightful.

IT PREVENTS ALL TARTAR and COMPLETELY ARRESTS DECAY.

IS THE CHOICEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.

PRICE Per bottle 2/6 in case.

SOLD EVERYWHERE. THE ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO., Ltd., Proprietors.
33, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

FLORILINE TOOTH-POWDER.
For use with or without FLORILINE.
1/- per large Jar.

A Scientific Method of Growing Hair

The Evans Vacuum Cap provides the scientific means of applying to the scalp the common sense principles of physical culture. Baldness and falling hair are caused by the lack of proper nourishment of the hair roots. This lack of nourishment is due to the absence of blood in the scalp—an abnormal condition. It is the blood which feeds the hair roots, as well as every other part of the body. If you want the hair to grow on the scalp the blood must be made to circulate there. It is exercise which makes the blood circulate. Lack of exercise makes it stagnant. The Vacuum method provides the exercise which makes the blood circulate in the scalp. It gently draws the rich blood to the scalp and feeds the shrunken hair roots. This causes the hair to grow.

Test It Without Expense

You can tell whether it is possible to cultivate a growth of hair on your head by ten minutes' use of the Evans Vacuum Cap. We will send you the Cap with which to make the experiment without any expense to you.

If the Evans Vacuum Cap gives the scalp a healthy glow this denotes that the normal condition of the scalp can be restored. A three or four minutes' use of the Cap each morning and evening thereafter will produce a natural growth of hair. If, however, the scalp remains white and lifeless after applying the vacuum, there is no use in trying further—the hair will not grow.

The Bank Guarantee

We will send you, by prepaid express an Evans Vacuum Cap, and will allow you ample time to prove its virtue. All we ask of you is to deposit the price of the Cap in the Jefferson Bank of St. Louis, where it will remain during the trial period, subject to your own order. If you do not cultivate a sufficient growth of hair to convince you that the method is effective, simply notify the bank and they will return your deposit in full.

A sixteen-page illustrated book will be sent you on request, postage prepaid in full.

Evans Vacuum Cap Co., 923, Fullerton Bldg., St. Louis, U.S.A.

NOW READY.

IN ENGLISH HOMES.

Price £2 2 0 Net.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, LTD., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

BIRKBECK BANK

ESTABLISHED 1851.

Current Accounts. 2 % Interest allowed on minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
Deposits. 2½ % Interest allowed on Deposit Accounts.
Advances made. Stocks and Shares bought and sold.
Apply C. F. RAVENSCROFT, Secretary,
Southampton Buildings, High Holborn, W.C.

TO H.M. THE KING.

THE POPULAR
SCOTCH
IS
"BLACK & WHITE"
WHISKY.

TO H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.

Sole Proprietors: JAMES BUCHANAN & Co., LTD., 26, Holborn, London, E.C.

SULPHOLINE
SKIN LOTION.

Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, Entirely fade away.

Digitized by Google

THE KING'S MENU.

NOW that everyone is making the most of the waning summer evenings, a protracted supper, to which the various members of holiday-making parties, family or otherwise, come in as convenient from seven o'clock onwards, often takes the place of dinner, not only on Sundays, but weekdays too, as under these circumstances it is a much easier meal to cater for.

For the hot dishes, those which can be prepared and served in casseroles and chafing-dishes are incomparably the best, of course, and this applies to luncheon too, when this also is a "movable feast" for all and sundry.

In to-day's menu both the lobster and the curry can be prepared and served en casserole, and then kept hot or reheated au bain-marie, without detriment, or, again, the lobster can be done in a chafing-dish on the supper-table. If it is desired to expand the menu given, a "hot-pot" of mutton cutlets, kidneys, and mushrooms could also be cooked and served in a casserole, or a savoury stew of beef fillets, à la Bourguignonne, so that, as will be seen, when the possibilities of the casserole are realised, supper need differ little, if at all, from the most appetising of little dinners, except for the absence of a rôt.

With regard to the soup, this may well be the consommé Julienne or other of the dozen or so of the famous French potages, such as croûte au pot or potage à la Reine, put up in bottles and tins by Maître Escoffier's Company, from his recipes and under his personal supervision. Should any difficulty be experienced in procuring any of them at country and seaside grocers and stores, my readers should write for a box of them to be sent direct by the Escoffier Company, Ridgemount Street, Tottenham Court Road, London, W.C., or ask for arrangements to be made for the local purveyors to stock them. These remarks also apply to the Sauce Américaine for the lobster, of whose excellence habitués of the Carlton Restaurant will not need to be told. A trial bottle can be got for 1s. 6d. and 3d. for postage direct from the Escoffier Company, by those who have not yet made its acquaintance. It is equally delicious with soles, brill, turbot, and, indeed, almost any fish, as will be seen by Maître Escoffier's recipes in the company's new price list, which also contains numerous recipes by the famous chef. Copies can be had free on application to the Ridgemount Street office. Meantime, here is the recipe as it therein appears for

A SUNDAY SUPPER.

CONSOMME JULIENNE.

HOMARD A L'AMERICAINE.

CHAUDFROID DE CANETONS.

POULET AU KARI.

CREME CHOCOLAT.

SALADE DE FRUITS.

CROUSTADES DE LEGUMES.

HOMARD A L'AMERICAINE.

Take a freshly-killed lobster (the fishmonger will do this just before sending it home if so instructed), cut off the claws, then divide the lobster in half by cutting lengthwise. Put the intestines aside for use later on. Remove the little bag which will be found near the head containing grit. Then divide each half of the lobster into three or four pieces, season with salt and pepper, and turn into a saucepan in which an ounce of butter and a tablespoonful of fresh olive oil (or, failing this, substitute an equal quantity of extra butter) have been heated, and crisp the lobster over a hot fire till the shell is a bright red colour. Now pour over it a spoonful of fine brandy and half a wineglassful of dry white wine, simmer for a few seconds, then add half a bottle of Sauce Américaine (or a whole one for two lobsters), and double the butter, etc., put the lid on the casserole or saucepan and cook for fifteen or twenty minutes. The lobster is then lifted out and kept hot, and the sauce finished off by adding to it the crushed intestines of the lobster, an ounce and a-half of fresh butter, a squeeze of lemon juice, and a pinch of chopped parsley. If the lobster is to be served en casserole replace it in the sauce, when, if prepared in the morning, it can be set aside till evening and then reheated au bain-marie by standing the casserole containing it in an outer pan of hot water, bringing this to the boil, then serving when the contents are hot enough. Mind that on no account must the lobster, etc., stand or get cold in anything but an earthenware or china dish. If, however, the lobster is prepared in a saucepan to be served as soon as ready, when the lobster is cooked arrange it in the dish it is to go to table in, and when the sauce is finished pour it over and serve at once. A simpler form of this dish is obtained by heating up the flesh from a freshly-cooked lobster with some of the Sauce Américaine in the chafing-dish, adding to the sauce some butter, a squeeze of lemon juice, and either a little water, fish stock, or a spoonful or two of light white wine. Or this version of lobster à l'Américaine can equally well be heated up in a casserole au bain-marie, as already described, and thus served in it. Crayfish, prawns, and shrimps are all good, too, like this.

CHAUDFROID DE CANETONS.

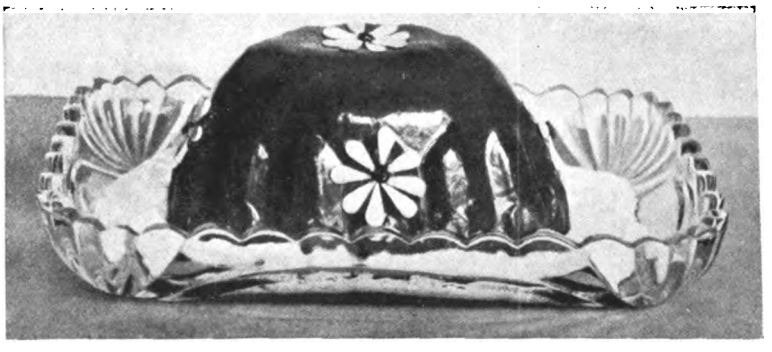
For this the remains of any cold roast ducks at hand can be used and cut up into small neat joints, or, better still, use the breast fillets only from specially-cooked birds, the joints being used for a salmi for another meal. Whether joints and fillets or the latter only are used for the chaudfroid, they are masked with one of the following coating sauces. Cook half an ounce of fine leaf gelatine (melting it in a spoonful of hot water before adding it to the sauce) in three gills of very thick rich brown sauce, espagnole or a brown olive one for choice, then use just as it is setting; or mix three tablespoonfuls of rich mayonnaise and one of stiffly-whipped cream (or failing this last take a gill of mayonnaise) with two gills of just liquid aspic jelly, two tablespoonfuls of finely-minced olives, a few minced capers, and a pinch of coralline pepper, and use to mask the duck before the mixture sets. The quantity of this masking mixture can, of course, be increased or lessened as convenient, if the proportions given of the various ingredients are adhered to. For a small party, for instance, three dessertspoonfuls of mayonnaise and one of whipped cream (or two tablespoonfuls of mayonnaise only), one gill of liquid aspic jelly, and one tablespoonful of minced olives would be sufficient. As will be seen, when catering for two or three people only, two dainty little dishes could be got from a duck by using the breast fillets for a chaudfroid one day and the joints for a salmi the next. When the masked joints or fillets are ready arrange them on a thick bed of broken-up lettuce leaves mixed with mayonnaise, a few minced olives, some washed, boned, and filleted anchovies, and any pickings from the back, etc., of the duck shredded finely. Now garnish round with finely-chopped aspic jelly or with small quartered cabbage lettuce and quartered hard-boiled eggs. When a brown chaudfroid sauce or a Bigarade one (also stiffened with leaf gelatine, of course) is used for coating the duck, a salade cuite made of a variety of cold cooked vegetables, or a bottle of vegetable macedoine (or even cold green peas or asparagus heads alone) can be used for the mount.



CREME CHOCOLAT.
(Specially prepared and photographed for this paper.)

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

COFFEE MUSCOVITE (Le Nord).—One of the nicest is obtained by making a quart of custard, more or less rich, according to taste, mixing in it while still warm a short three-quarters of an ounce of best leaf gelatine which has been dissolved in a little warm water, adding half a teacupful of very strong coffee, and then when nearly cold mix lightly in a pint and a-half of stiffly-whipped cream, a wineglassful of maraschino syrup (1s. a large bottle at any good grocer's); mould at once, cover the mould tightly with its lid, or, failing this, invert the lid of a biscuit tin; stand the tightly-covered mould in a pail of ice and salt (as you say you have not an ice cave, when, of course, you need not cover the top of the mould), place more ice and salt on the top of the mould, and leave for two and a-half to three hours. The mould is then taken out, dipped in tepid water, wiped with a clean cloth, and the muscovite turned out. This should not be done till it is to be served.

FRUIT MUSCOVITE (Rouge et Noir).—Rub sufficient crushed fruit through a fine hair sieve to make a pint of pulp, sweeten to taste with about four ounces of castor sugar. Have ready a pint of rich custard, and while this is still warm mix with it three-quarters of an ounce of fine leaf gelatine dissolved in a little warm water first. When these are mixed stir in the fruit pulp and whip over ice till it is on the point of setting. Now mix in quickly and lightly half a pint of stiffly-whipped cream, and a wineglassful of any liqueur syrup to taste, mixing it first with the juice of a lemon. Mould this mixture at once, and then either set it in the charged ice cave or else cover the mould over tightly, and sink it in a pail of ice and salt for two or three hours, being very careful none of the freezing mixture can get into the mould, or the contents will, of course, be ruined.

WORTH NOTING. — At this time of year, when digestive and intestinal troubles are rife, every house and traveller's bag should contain at least a small tin of the Allenbury's Milk and Cereal Diet, which is a carefully-peptonised preparation, made by Messrs. Allen and Hanbury, and obtained at almost every good chemist's all the world over. When, however, any difficulty is experienced in obtaining it, the firm should be written to at their London address, Plough Court, Lombard Street, when arrangements will be made for one's local chemist to stock it. Doctors pronounce this Milk and Cereal Diet invaluable in gastritis, typhoid, and all febrile disorders, and the best of light foods for those whose health is in any way affected by summer heat. For children, invalids, and dyspeptics it is invaluable all the year round. This is also the case for bad sailors, as if the Diet is made rather thicker than usual (and full directions are given on every tin) it is most excellent for sufferers from mal-de-mer. It only needs mixing with boiling water, so that it is ready at a minute's notice. Assuredly, therefore, no travellers should omit to take a tin of Milk and Cereal Diet with them when en voyage, if only for a day or two. SYBARITE.

Digitized by Google

Dinner's Ready!

For the Nursery Meals nothing excels the plain, simple foods so readily made with

Brown and Polson's

"PATENT"

Corn Flour

and stewed fruit.

Stewed Fruit is more wholesome for Children than fresh, and a Corn Flour milk pudding, hot or cold, is the ideal accompaniment to it.

---

ECONOMY — HEALTH — PURITY

NO BEETROOT USED.

"GLEBE"

REFINED GENUINE

CANE SUGAR

AND

CANE GOLDEN SYRUP

GLEBE SUGAR REFINING CO., Greenock, Glasgow, and St. George's House, Eastcheap, London.

---

РУБЛЬ КОФЕ

(ROUBLE COFFEE.)

THE COFFEE OF THE EPICURE.

BERRIES, FRESH ROASTED,

2/- PER LB.

WE PAY THE CARRIAGE.

It may not sound cheap, but nothing REALLY GOOD ever is cheap.

Follow our directions, and a revelation awaits you of what REALLY GOOD COFFEE REALLY IS.

METATA AGENTS, 17, DEVONSHIRE SQUARE, LONDON, E.C.

---

FOR SMART READING

BUY

THE SEPTEMBER

Boudoir

NOW ON SALE

At all Bookstalls and Newsagents

CONTENTS:

FASHIONS IN MEN
NIGHT AS AN AID TO BEAUTY SOCIETY LEADERS
ART IN DAINTINESS
CHARMING MANOR HOUSES
NELSON'S NEST AT MERTON
PRACTICAL HOUSE DECORATION
THE WEARING O' THE GREEN
FROM THE RUE DE LA PAIX
etc., etc., etc.

1/- And Eighteen other Features of Interest. 1/-

---

The Uses of Cyder:

(a) as a health giver.

(b) as a delicious beverage.

Henry Whiteway & Co., Ltd.

MEDICAL men all over the country are rapidly becoming acquainted with the medicinal qualities of the high-class dry Cyders of Whimple, with the result that they are not only using these Cyders personally, but are constantly prescribing them in a variety of cases subject to dietic treatment.

It is a proved fact that regular consumers of Cyder are exempt from many distressing maladies, such as stone and gravel. Cyder is also an effective remedy for gout and rheumatism.

Not only the phosphorus, but the acids of the apple are of singular use for persons of sedentary habits, whose livers are apt to be slow of action. These acids aid the liver in its work of eliminating from the body the noxious matter which makes the brain heavy and dull, and causes rheumatism and other kindred ailments.

If you would drink Devonshire's Delicious Drink at its very best—if you would realise to the full what a really enjoyable drink Cyder is—you should procure only that brand which comes from the presses of Messrs. Whiteway & Co.

Whiteway's Cyders are made only of the pure juice, from the finest English apples, and are absolutely free from chemical preservatives.

Write for Booklet, Price List, etc., to WHITEWAY, WHIMPLE, DEVON;

or 22 and 23, ALBERT EMBANKMENT, LONDON, S.W.

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

MR. WENTWORTH CROKE, London's latest theatrical manager, received his early education at Evesham Grammar School, finishing his studies at Cambridge. After leaving the University he entered the offices of a large public company, thereby gaining valuable business experience. Becoming imbued with the spirit of theatrical enterprise, he produced in the provinces "Three of a Suite," by Forbes Dawson, and later became proprietor of "The Christian," by Hall Caine, which he is still touring in the country. He next became general manager for the highly-successful play "Florodora," and, having acquired the principal rights, took the late Mr. H. J. Callan into partnership, and later toured the play as sole proprietor.

MR. WENTWORTH CROKE

Who is shortly producing "The Gay Lord Vergy" at the Apollo Theatre.

---

MISS DEBORAH VOLAR, the young primâ donna, who so successfully succeeded Miss Isabel Jay as Veronique a few weeks ago at the Apollo Theatre, is only twenty-one. She studied singing with Mr. H. J. Wood and Mr. Richard Temple. Miss Volar made her début two years ago as the Princess in "The Country Girl" at Daly's, and subsequently played the title rôle in the provinces, returning to London to take up Miss Marie Studholme's part in "The School-Girl" at the Prince of Wales's Theatre. Mr. George Edwardes, with his usual judgment, has secured a three years' contract with Miss Volar.

---

AN unusual opportunity is being afforded to those who reside in the great cities and towns of the Midlands and the North for visiting France, an extraordinarily cheap fare to Boulogne being announced. For the return trip from Manchester and district the fare is 18s. 6d., and from Sheffield, Nottingham, and Leicester the fare is proportionately low. Messrs. Dean and Dawson of 82, Strand, W.C., have arranged the trip, to give thirteen hours in Boulogne on August 26, and are receiving the hearty co-operation of the Great Central and South Eastern and Chatham Railways. These companies will run the trains by their direct line, which avoids the crossing of London. The best steamers of the Short Sea Channel Service are requisitioned for the trip, which is causing extraordinary interest in Boulogne. The Great Western Railway is also running, in conjunction with Messrs. Dean and Dawson, a similar cheap trip from Birmingham and district.

---

THE Premo Film Pack, that wonderfully convenient and effective daylight changing device for flat films, fulfils its purpose so creditably that it is difficult to suggest directions in which improvements may be effected. Perfect and useful though it be, however, there is needed one feature to complete its claim to perfection, and that feature is now being introduced by Messrs. Kodak, Limited. The new feature is the device by which it becomes possible to remove one or more exposed films for development, notwithstanding the fact that the Pack may be only partially exposed. It is sometimes convenient to limit exposures and develop them straight away, in which case the six exposure and the "double-two" spools are a great boon. Hitherto, it has been impossible to do the same with the Film Pack—the whole twelve had to be exposed; but the change removes the disability, and one may now extract for development a single exposure without disturbing the unexposed films.

---

THERE can be no doubt that the popularity of sea trips on Sunday is rapidly increasing, and the introduction by the Belle Steamers of an express service to Felixstowe and back every Sunday during July and August has been much appreciated and well patronised. Considering that the price of return tickets is only 7s. each, it is not surprising that many tired City men have been seen on board the comfortable "Southend Belle," enjoying the refreshing breezes of the East Coast. Felixstowe has reason to be grateful to the Belle Steamers, for there can be no doubt that this service has been the means of introducing this rising resort to the notice of many people who had not hitherto realised its attractions.

---

THE new edition of "The Handy Hotel Guide" has been much enlarged and improved, and now contains a list of over 1,000 hotels, with particulars as to motor garage, and hotels in India and on the Far East route, as well as sketch maps of North Wales, the Lakes, Cornwall, and Devon.

---

"LITERARY LANDMARKS OF TORQUAY" is the title of an interesting and well-written booklet published by T. Werner Laurie. There can be no doubt that there is a call for

MISS DEBORAH VOLAR

Who has been playing the title rôle in "Veronique" during the last weeks of the run of that opera.

some guide to the literary associations of many of our older spas, and to visitors from America and the Continent it is always a source of wonder that we do not take more interest in these matters. A series of booklets as well produced as "Literary Landmarks of Torquay" would remove the reproach.

Amusements.

APOLLO THEATRE.
HENRY LOWENFELD, Sole Proprietor.
TOM B. DAVIS, Lessee and Manager.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON
Every Evening at 8.15.
"VERONIQUE."
Matinee every Wednesday at 2.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. FRANK CURZON.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
To-night at 8.15,
LADY MADCAP.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.15.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Sole Lessee and Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON
At 8.50,
WHAT THE BUTLER SAW.
By Edward A. Parry and Fredk. Mouillot.
Matinee Every Wednesday and Saturday at 3
Box Office now open. Telephone 4028 Gerrard

DALY'S THEATRE.
Produced by Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES.
To-night and Every Evening at 8.15.
Matinee Every Saturday at 2.30.
THE LITTLE MICHUS.
By A. Vanloo and G. Duval. Music by Andre Messager.
Adapted for the English stage by Henry Hamilton.
Lyrics by Percy Greenbank.
Mlle. ADELINE GENEE in a NEW DANCE.
Box Office 10 to 10.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.
Managers: A. & S. GATTI & CHARLES FROHMAN.
Every Evening at 8.15,
THE CATCH OF THE SEASON,
By Seymour Hicks and Cosmo Hamilton.
The Vaudeville Theatre Company.
Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.

ADELPHI.
Lessee and Manager: OTHO STUART.
Last Nights. To-night at 8.30.
THE TAMING OF THE SHREW.
OSCAR ASCHE, LILY BRAYTON.
Box Office open 10 to 10.
Tel. 2645 Gerrard.

GARRICK THEATRE.
MR. ARTHUR BOURCHIER, Lessee and Manager.
Every Evening at 8.30,
THE WALLS OF JERICHO.
By Alfred Sutro.
Matinee Every Wednesday at 2.30.

CRITERION THEATRE, W.
Sole Lessee: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
Two New Comedies,
At 8.30 TIME IS MONEY.
Mr. Charles Hawtrey as "Charles Grahame."
At 9.15 o'clock. LUCKY MISS DEAN.
Miss Ethel Irving as "Acacia Dean."
Matinee Wednesdays at 3. Box Office 10 to 10.

PROMENADE CONCERTS. — QUEEN'S HALL.
TO-NIGHT AND NIGHTLY AT 8.
QUEEN'S HALL ORCHESTRA.
Conductor: MR. HENRY J. WOOD.
1/- to 5/-. Usual Agents, Chappell's Box Office, Queen's Hall, and Queen's Hall Orchestra (Ltd.), 320, Regent Street.
ROBERT NEWMAN, Manager.

NAVAL, SHIPPING, AND FISHERIES EXHIBITION, EARL'S COURT.
11 a.m. to 11 p.m. Admission 1s.
Naval Construction, Armaments, Shipping & Fisheries
NELSON'S CENTENARY RELICS.
FISHING VILLAGE. Working Exhibits. Model of "Victory."
GRAND NAVAL AND MILITARY CONCERTS
Go on board the full-size Cruiser.
Specially ventilated, coolest Show in London.
Real Batteries of 4.7 Guns, Hotchkiss and Maxims
The Cruiser is manned by a crew of 150 Handy-men
BATTLE OF TRAFALGAR.
"Our Navy." Captive Flying Machine. Great Red Indian Village. Voyage in a Submarine. Haunted Cabin. Famous Sea Fights Musical and Dramatic Sketches. Tillikum Canoe, and many other attractions.

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Mr. Arthur Hamilton Lee | 689 |
| The March of Events | 690 |
| The Dublin Horse Show | 692, 693 |
| The Regatta Season | 694 |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 696 |
| On the Links | 698 |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 703 |
| The Parisians of Paris—The Holiday Home | 704 |
| A Paris Toilette | 705 |
| Under the Burgee | 706 |
| Yachts of the Year | 707 |
| In Northern India | 708 |
| The Traveller—A Holiday in Wales | 710 |
| Cricket | 712 |
| Actresses at Home. XVIII.—Miss Gertie Thornton | 713 |
| Volunteers Under Canvas | 714 |
| The 1st Middlesex at Clacton | 715 |
| Pirates and Piracy—The Buccaneers of the Spanish Main and their Eventful Histories | 716 |
| Some Famous Pirates of the Past | 717 |
| The Racing Season | 718 |
| At the Zoo | vii. |
| Literary Notes | viii. |
| A Holiday in Scotland—By the Midland Route to the North | x. |
| Leaves from a Collector's Note-book—LVI.—The Caricature and Portrait Jugs and Mugs of the Napoleonic Wars | xii. |
| Motoring Notes | xiv. |
| Fashions of To-day and To-morrow | xvi. |
| Paris Restaurants | xviii. |
| Here, There, and Everywhere | xx. |

TO LIBRARIES, CLUBS, HOTELS, Etc.

A Reading Case for THE KING can be had post free on application to the Publishers, George Newnes, Limited, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.

HOTELS.

ENGLISH HOTELS.

TORQUAY (Population 33,625).—PREMIER HEALTH RESORT. Unrivalled climate. Warm in winter. Sunshine-land. Charming drives and sheltered walks. 120 acres of public gardens. Piers.

TORQUAY. Irreproachable water supply and perfect sanitation. Theatre, concerts, and other musical attractions. Medicated baths of all kinds. Express trains from all parts.

For Illustrated Descriptive Books of Torquay, apply FREDK. S. HEX, Town Clerk.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

De Vere Hotel, from 10/6 per day. 'Phone 524.
Broadwalk Hotel, from 8/6 per day. ,, 858.
Prince of Wales' Hotel, from 10/6 per day. ,, 641. Kensington.

Electric Light. Lifts. Everything up to date. First-class cuisine.

BOURNEMOUTH HYDRO.

Sunny Site. Overlooking Sea. Every Bath. Ideal Residence.

EASTBOURNE.

THE HYDRO HOTEL.—A select Residential Hotel on South Coast, 120ft. above sea level. Large gardens, close to the sea. Tennis. Croquet. Bowling Green. Spacious Lounges and Public Rooms. 70 Bedrooms, also Suites, luxuriously furnished, electric light throughout. High-class cuisine. Table d'Hôte or à la Carte. Separate tables. Lift. Billiards. Private 'Bus. Nearest to schools and Links. Close to Parades. Week End terms. Motor Garage with repairing Pits. Lit by Electric Light. For inclusive Tariff (Illustrated), also Programme of Amusements, address—O. F. BERGANN, Manager. Telegraphic Address: "Hydrotel, Eastbourne." Telephone, No. 143, Eastbourne. The new Turkish Baths will shortly be opened.

FOREIGN HOTELS.

BIARRITZ.

GRAND HOTEL.—Winter Season.—First-class establishment. Splendid situation, facing the sea. Patronised by the elité; rendezvous of English Society. Every comfort; excellent attendance and cooking.—MONTENAT, Manager.

AXENSTEIN (Lake Lucerne; 2,350ft. above sea level; electric railway Brunnen-Axenstein).—First-class Hotel. World-renowned climatic health resort; patronised by English society. "Axenstein is the loveliest spot I met with on my journey through Switzerland."—QUEEN VICTORIA.

TENERIFFE

HAS THE FINEST WINTER CLIMATE IN THE WORLD.

THE First-class HOTELS there are
the QUISISANA at Santa Cruz,
the AGUERE and CONTINENTAL at La Laguna, and
the MARTIANEZ (late Grand) at Port Orotava.
All under the Management of C. H. TRENKEL. Prospectus, etc., on application.

SHIPPING.

MOROCCO, CANARY ISLANDS, and MADEIRA LINE OF STEAMERS; 24 days for 20 guineas.—For particulars write Messrs. FORWOOD BROS., 46, St. Mary Axe, E.C.

Patronised by H.M. The King.

DOVERCOURT BAY, ESSEX, HOTEL ALEXANDRA.

The Finest Health and Pleasure Resort on the East Coast. Delightful Climate. Bracing Air. The Hotel, which has recently been visited by H.M. KING, is luxuriously Furnished. Charming Situation. Facing the Sea. Electric Light. Excellent Cuisine. Tennis, Croquet. Motor Garage and Pit. 1 hour 40 minutes express from London.

For Illustrated Tariff, apply A. H. THIEM, Proprietor.

WHELPTON'S PURIFYING PILLS

For Indigestion, Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Sea Sickness.

INVALUABLE FOR LADIES.

8, 14, and 33 stamps.

G. WHELPTON, 4, Crane Court, Fleet St., London.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH. The charmingly situated Seaside Resort on the Dorsetshire Coast.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH. Unequalled for its Marine and Land Excursions. Golfing and Fishing.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH. Temperature higher than that of any other Seaside Resort. See daily reports.

RHEUMATISM. BLAIR'S GOUT PILLS.

The only Remedy that Relieves and Cures all Rheumatic Complaints. Sure, Safe, and Effectual. All Chemists and Stores, 1/1½ & 2/9 per box

MAGNA CIDER.

"The Sparkling Wine of Somerset."

A delicious appetising beverage. Guaranteed genuine apple juice. Declared by Lancet absolutely pure. Strongly recommended by doctors in cases of Gout, Rheumatism, and Obesity. Brut Cider a speciality. Send 22s. for specimen case, containing 1 doz. quarts of Speciality and 1 doz. quarts of a sweeter blend; or 25s. for 2 doz. pints of each quality. Carriage, bottles, and cases included.—MAGNA CIDER CO., Marston Magna, Somerset

THE LEAS HOTEL, Folkestone.

Under New Proprietorship.

300ft. above the sea. Remodelled and furnished by Waring's.

Delightfully situated, commanding extensive views of sea, with ornamental private grounds. Excellent Cuisine, Lawn Tennis, Passenger Lift, Electric Light throughout.

Illustrated Tariff on application to T. H. VINNICOMBE.

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY.

TREES AND SHRUBS FOR ENGLISH GARDENS.

By E. T. COOK.

EDITOR OF THE GARDEN. 12s. 6d. Nett.

Gardeners' Chronicle.—"A good book on trees and shrubs is a real want. Few books are more often enquired for, and until now we have had a difficulty in replying to our correspondents who have asked for information on the point. In these days of trashy gardening books, it is a pleasure to come across one which bears the stamp of original observation, judicious inference, and industrious research."

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, LTD., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY.

NEW PRACTICAL FRUIT BOOK.

THE FRUIT GARDEN

BY

GEORGE BUNYARD, V.M.H.,

AND

OWEN THOMAS, V.M.H.

Price 21/- nett.

507 pages. Size 10in. by 7½in.

"THE FRUIT GARDEN" gives full instructions for the culture of every fruit that is worth growing in Britain, either out-of doors or under glass, and, in addition, contains chapters upon the Value of Fruit Trees as Flowering Trees, Whole Fruit Preservation, Tropical Fruits and How to Grow Them, the Construction of Fruit Houses, Fruit Trees in Pots, Injurious Diseases and Insects, Fruit Culture in America, France, and the Channel Islands, etc.

Review of "The Fruit Garden" from the R.H.S. Journal for May, 1904.

Without any doubt the best book of the sort yet published. There is a separate chapter for every kind of fruit, and each chapter is a book in itself—there is, in fact, everything that anyone can need or wish for in order to succeed in fruit growing. The book simply teems with illustrations, diagrams and outlines. The diagrams on pruning are particularly admirable; we cannot speak too highly of them, and from them anyone should be able to teach himself to be an expert pruner. The book winds up with 100 pages of outline drawings, which should be wonderful aid to identification.

"THE FIELD," February 27th, 1904.

"Written by Practical Experts . . . in all thirty chapters, and these contain practically all that is really essential for the reader to know as to the modern methods employed in the selection, culture, protection, and increase of trees, and the harvesting, storing, or preserving of fruit as grown in the gardens or fruit farms of to-day."

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, Ltd., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

THE COLONEL TAKES THE 19TH (W/HOLE IN ONE!

Head Office:
11,
SO. EXCHANGE PLACE,
GLASGOW.

J. H. ROGER
PROPR.

LESSEE OF
H.M. CUSTOMS (No. 15) BOND,
JAMES WATT STREET,
GLASGOW.

Special Quotations to Golf Clubs.

"COLONEL BOGEY" WHISKY.

GUARANTEED 7 YEARS OLD.

42/- PER DOZEN. CARRIAGE PAID.

THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.

Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS of every description, including TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT. MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.

Handsome Public Rooms, including 2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel. Telephone 56.

Terms from MANAGER.

CLEVEDON (Somerset).

SEASIDE HYDRO HOTEL.

Holiday, Health, and Pleasure Resort. Near Golf Links and Pier. Good centre for excursions by road, rail, or sea. Resident Physician. Fine Baths. Liberal Table.

SECRETARY, Hydro, Clevedon, Somerset.

LELANT, ST. IVES BAY, CORNWALL (close to golf links and station).—Furnished HOUSE, with plate and linen, to LET for Summer months; two large sitting rooms, six bedrooms, one dressing room, bathroom.—"T.B.H.," "Evelyns," Uxbridge.

SOUTHWOLD (best position on the Common; close to Golf Links).—To be LET, well Furnished, for August, the pretty and artistic HOUSE known as "Link's Cottage," containing square hall, two sitting and large recreation rooms, servants' sitting room, seven bedrooms (fourteen beds), bathroom; electric light and telephone.—Apply to Mrs. ROBINSON, on Property.

ON THE BOURNEMOUTH LINKS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, *Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations. High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hôte, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.

THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.

THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.

A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.

Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads. Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.

Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.

Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.

New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare, Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,

Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.

To be obtained from Thos. Cook, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON.

Telephone, 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade and commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.

Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors.

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL.

SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.

Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head.

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.

Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill.

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau, 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 30s. Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address: "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY,

Within easy access of London.

THE BUSH HOTEL.

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers, inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 1s. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable, being on sand.

DEVONSHIRE'S DELIGHTFUL DRINK.—The very best beverage for GOLFERS is WHITEWAY'S PURE CYDER. Refreshing, cooling, and a panacea for Gout, Rheumatism, and Obesity.

Booklets free from WHITEWAY'S, The Orchards, Whimple, Devon, and 22 and 23, Albert Embankment, S.W. Telephone 173 Hop.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

VULCAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E.

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer).

"'Is it a Private House or an Hotel?' is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels."

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGERESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29, Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

1, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

Club Houses can be efficiently and economically lighted by

ACETYLENE.

Write H. BAKER, 49, Victoria Street, S.W.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. Cox, New Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.
MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL.—Brinklea, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library, Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052.

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class. |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned, from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains.

ON BLUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY.

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.
Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Booklet and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

ZÜRICH.—DOLDER GRAND HOTEL, First-class English frequented house in extensive well-wooded grounds, 2,000ft. above sea level. Golf links in front of the hotel; tennis; motoring centre. Electric Tram and funicular service with Zürich Central Station (25 min.). Electro-magnetic therapeutical treatment (E. K. Muller's method).—Manager, E. DIELMANN.

SHERINGHAM, NORFOLK.

THE SHERINGHAM HOTEL,

ADJOINING GOLF LINKS (18 HOLES).

LARGEST HOTEL IN SHERINGHAM. Open all the year round. Handsome Dining Hall, 67ft. long. Numerous spacious Suites of Rooms commanding beautiful Sea and Land Views. Billiard and Smoking Rooms. Excellent and Improved Sanitary arrangements. Extensive Private Grounds. Lawn tennis, croquet. First-class Stables. Accommodation for Motors and Cycles. Through Trains from King's Cross, Peterborough, Birmingham, Leicester, etc.

Telegrams - "Sheringham Hotel, Sheringham."

National Telephone: No. 3. F. EDENS, Manager.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.
Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.
Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & Co.
Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.
MODERATE TARIFF.
Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months.

Perfect Sanitary arrangements.
Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year.

Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel.—Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors, EMMERSON & HARRIS.

THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE

Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit

Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE."
National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms.

Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

Digitized by Google

EVERYONE knows how deliciously refreshing is the smell of the pines, and how one is re-invigorated by a walk through a pine forest. With every breath you seem to drink in new life and energy. In "Antexema Soap" for the hair and skin, you get the delicious and healing scent and virtues of the pines. You cannot possibly have a more delightful soap, either for the bath, nursery, toilet, or a shampoo. It purifies the skin, opens the pores, not only takes dirt and dust off the skin, but out of the skin, and makes the flesh firm and glowing. "Antexema Soap" is emollient and antiseptic, non-poisonous and safe. It makes bad complexions good, and good complexions better, and its use in the bath doubles its refreshing power.

ANTEXEMA SOAP

renders the skin clear, pure, and healthy, and prevents pimples, blackheads, and red, rough, oily skin. When used for washing the hair, it perfectly cleanses the scalp, removes dandruff, promotes healthy and vigorous growth of the hair, and counteracts any tendency to baldness. A magnificent soap for washing baby, as it maintains the daintiness and peach-like bloom of the skin, and makes the hair silky and glossy, therefore, always use it.

Our Free Gift "Antexema Soap" is supplied by all Chemists and Stores at 6d. per tablet, or in boxes of three for 1s. 6d. We are anxious that everyone should try "Antexema Soap," and we therefore make this special offer to our readers. In return for a sixpenny Postal Order we will send post free a sixpenny tablet of "Antexema Soap," and enclose it in a handsome tortoiseshell case decorated with gold, which will be an ornament to your dressing table and most convenient for packing in your dressing-case. If you would like this charming present, mention THE KING and send your Postal Order to the Antexema Company, 83, Castle Rd., London, N.W., and mind you send at once.

J. A. PREECE & SONS

LIMITED,

Riding & Jobmasters,

Have at their customers' disposal a large selection of suitable HORSES, CARRIAGES, and TRAPS of every description, for use in the Country AT REDUCED RATES.

They also invite an inspection of their commodious RIDING SCHOOL, situated at HOLLYWOOD ROAD, South Kensington, within easy access either by Train or Omnibus.

Riding Lessons given daily by experienced Masters at reasonable terms. Superior Hacks for Ladies and Gentlemen. Quiet Ponies for Children. Well-appointed Dressing and Waiting Rooms.

Friends of Pupils admitted Free of Charge to Visitors' Gallery.

For Information & Terms apply to the Secretary,

AT HEAD OFFICES:

248, FULHAM ROAD, S.W.,

or any of the Company's other Branches.

TELEPHONES: 891 KENSINGTON. 1520 KENSINGTON. TELEGRAMS: "PRINCILLON, LONDON."

ST. JACOBS OIL

CURES

LUMBAGO, SCIATICA,

RHEUMATISM,

Neuralgia | Soreness
Bruises | Stiffness

And Bodily Aches and Pains.

In 1/1½ and 2/6 sizes.

Of all Chemists.

CONQUERS PAIN!

42/-

CHARLES LEE & SON,

Specialist Ladies' Outfitters,

98 & 100, WIGMORE STREET

(ONLY ADDRESS).

CAUTION.—Messrs. Lee & Son have no branches, and warn the public against imitations of their goods.

An example in Finest Quality English Crêpe de Chine, with Valenciennes Lace Yoke and Guipure Points, 42/-.

A Blouse suitable for any figure.

POST ORDERS.—The Lady's Pictorial states:—"If you live in the country, have an account with Lee & Son, Wigmore Street; they send the choicest selection of goods by post, while they are cheap for the best Costumiers, Furriers, Lacemen, Specialists in Trousseaus, The Leewig Petticoat, Royal Crescent Veil, Hosiers, Glovers, Milliners, etc.

CHARLES LEE & SON,
WIGMORE STREET.

FIELD'S CANDLES.

NIGHT LIGHTS.

TOILET SOAPS.

LIGHT. LIGHTFUL. DELIGHTFUL.

Grand Prize, St. Louis, 1904.

J. C. & J. FIELD, Ltd., LAMBETH, S.E. Established 1642.

Digitized by Google

THE DUBLIN HORSE SHOW.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

VOL. XX. No. 448. SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 2nd, 1905. PRICE 6D.

Elliott and Fry.

MR. ARTHUR HAMILTON LEE

Civil Lord of the Admiralty and Conservative Member for the Fareham Division of Hampshire.

(See page 703.)

Digitized by Google

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY. THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 448. Saturday, Sept. 2, 1905.

Editorial Offices—20, TAVISTOCK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephones—No. 2,748 GERRARD, AND 7,961 CENTRAL.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

EDITORIAL.

photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

THE KING'S HOLIDAY.—During his holiday, which is now rapidly drawing to a close, King Edward has made good use of his time, and in addition to automobile excursions and an inaugural visit to the golf links, he has been practising croquet, to which game he has returned after some years' neglect. The revival of croquet will undoubtedly receive great impetus from the Royal patronage, and it is already stated that the number of converts to the game in Marienbad has made the hotel-keepers think seriously of turning some of the now neglected tennis courts into croquet lawns. On the subject of the King's return journey there is evidently some little doubt, many believing that his Majesty will pay a short visit to Paris before crossing the Channel. But whether he stays there or not, it is certain that he will be warmly received when he arrives home again on his way to Scotland for the Braemar gathering, and possibly one or two visits to personal friends north of the Tweed.

Tagerspecher.

KING EDWARD ON THE CONTINENT.

His Majesty conversing with the Duke of Cumberland from the saloon carriage which he always uses in travelling on the continent.

THE KING AND LORD CURZON.—It would have been remarkable indeed if, after his resignation, Lord Curzon had not received some message of thanks from the King. For whatever may be the rights and wrongs of the controversy which has led to the resignation—and into them this is no place to enter—Lord Curzon's services to the State, and the Indian Empire in particular, have been so great, so invaluable, that they deserve the warmest recognition from King and public alike. And Lord Curzon has at least the satisfaction of knowing that he has not been superseded, as was the first Earl of Minto, who was another great Viceroy, to suit the personal whim of his Sovereign. Lord Minto, who was Governor-General from 1807 to 1812, was also, it is curious to note, in poor health at the time he quitted India, and he wrote at the time: "It is comical enough that my resignation should have arrived just at the moment they were turning me out without leave." The new Viceroy will have a difficult task to accomplish if he is to eclipse the brilliant record of his forbear at the beginning of the last century, and that of his immediate predecessor. But at least he does not go to the work inexperienced. Canada, as has been pointed out before, is an admirable training ground.

THE QUEEN IN SCOTLAND.—There has been a great influx of Royalty to Scotland this year, and Queen Alexandra has, in motoring around Deeside, been able to call upon many of her near relatives. Apart from the Princess of Wales at Abergeldie, there are the Duke and Duchess of Fife at Mar Lodge, Prince Arthur of Connaught at Fyvie, and Princess Christian and Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein have a round of visits to make north of the Tweed. Deeside this year is indeed busier than it has been for a long time past, and with garden parties here, there, and everywhere, and balls at several of the houses as well, there has been a continual va et vient of the fashionable world, which has been a source of wonderment to the natives, though one would have thought them pretty well accustomed to the autumn invasion by now. The Queen has been out motoring every day that it has been possible, and once or twice she has been salmon-fishing. It is now by no means certain, however, that her Majesty will be in Scotland at the time of the Braemar gathering, which this year promises to be of exceptional brilliance. The oft-postponed visit to Denmark will probably be taking place about that time, and Queen Alexandra will not, assuredly, wish to cut short her stay in her native country, and the strong claims that Scotland has on her affections must give way to Denmark's prior right.

PRINCE ARISUGAWA'S RETURN.—The arrival of Prince and Princess Arisugawa in Japan has been marked by a spontaneous outburst of jubilation. This is due in some measure to the popularity of the Prince and his wife, enhanced by the recognition that has been accorded him in Europe as the Envoy of the Mikado, which gives the Japanese pleasure.

Digitized by Google

THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT

Proceeding to the inspection of the troops quartered at Chester.

THE MAHARAJA OF KHAPURTALA

Purchasing picture post-cards in Trouville, where he has been staying.

THE KING OF PORTUGAL IN THE "AMELIA."

On the occasion of the visit of the British Fleet to Lisbon King Carlos entertained a large party of British officers to luncheon in the Royal yacht "Amelia." In the above illustration he is seen standing on the bridge surrounded by his aides-de-camp.

Felici.

THE POPE SITTING FOR HIS PORTRAIT.

The well-known Dutch painter, Anton van Velic, has been honoured with a series of sittings by Pope Pius X. for a new portrait. But the Pope made it a condition that he should be at liberty to work during the sittings, and this arrangement has been adopted.

Digitized by Google

THE DUBLIN HORSE SHOW.

AT BALL'S BRIDGE AND LEOPARDSTOWN.

(1) A corner of the Horse Show grounds during the luncheon interval. (2) Walking round the judging rings. (3) Mr. John Kerr, M.P., driving the winning pair for the Cochrane Challenge Cup. (4) The Leopardstown races. Finish of the Midsummer Plate. (5) Lord and Lady Dudley and their guests walking round the grounds. On all hands it is admitted that from the business point of view this year's show has been a great success. Bad weather on two days rather marred the social aspect of the gathering, however.

(From copyright photographs by Chancellor and Son and others.)

Digitized by Google

THE DUBLIN HORSE SHOW.

SCENES IN THE GROUNDS AT BALL'S BRIDGE.

(1) The Viceregal guard of honour. A detachment of the Cameron Highlanders. (2) The trotting competitions. Lady Rose, who covered the mile in 2-min. 7 3-5-sec. (3) In the grand stand enclosure. (4) Judging hunters in Class XVI in Ring 5. A noteworthy feature of this year's show has been the number of prizes won by Irish exhibitors. (5) The departure of Earl and Countess Dudley. As usual, the Lord-Lieutenant and Lady Dudley paid visits to the Horse Show in State, and were interested spectators of the proceedings in the various judging rings

(From copyright photographs.)

Digitized by Google

THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT'S TRAVELS.—While the rest of the Royal family are holiday-making, the Duke of Connaught is busily engaged in pursuing the duties of his post as Inspector-General of the Forces. After a short visit in Ireland he has returned to England, and continues his labours by inspecting the troops stationed in the various Military headquarters in the Midlands. From Lichfield to Chester, and Chester to Leeds, and thence again to York, he passed at the end of last week, and no detail was too small at any of these places to escape his attention. It had been hoped, and indeed stated, that the Duke would be in Dublin during Horse Show Week, and would be present at some of the festivities, but the necessity of carrying out his extensive programme of inspections precluded the possibility of his remaining in the Irish capital beyond the time required for the various inspections at the Royal barracks. The Duchess of Connaught and Princess Patricia have been staying with Sir John and Lady Dickson-Poynder at Hartham Park, which dates from the seventeenth century, and which adjoins Corsham Court, Lord Methuen's Wiltshire home.

THE DUBLIN HORSE SHOW.—Marred a little by inclement weather on the fashionable days, this year's Dublin Horse Show was not quite the social success that some of its forerunners have been. From the agricultural point of view, however, the success has been most marked, and it has been a matter for comment that Irish exhibitors have been uniformly successful. The Lord-Lieutenant and Lady Dudley were present, as were the Chief Secretary and Lady Doreen Long, and a large number of well-known members of the Irish aristocracy visited the Ball's Bridge premises of the Royal Dublin Society during the show. Lady Dudley, too, took advantage of Horse Show Week to give a concert in aid of the memorial fund for the Royal Dublin Fusiliers, and among those whose names appeared in the programme were Lady Limerick, Lady Maud Warrender, and Lord Shaftesbury. It is not generally known that Lady Limerick is a magnificent pianist, and Lord Shaftesbury is the possessor of a fine tenor voice. In addition to these distinguished amateurs, a number of popular professional singers appeared at the concert.

M. LOUBET AND SPAIN.—Another round of Royal and Presidential visits will take place this winter, and will begin with the visit of the President of the French Republic to Madrid. Spain is bent on giving M. Loubet a hospitable and enthusiastic welcome, and already a draft programme of festivities, including a grand military tattoo, has been drawn up. In the meanwhile, M. Loubet is quietly enjoying himself shooting quail at the Chateâu of Mazenc, where there is a good supply of game. The King of Spain, too, has been holiday-making at Biarritz, and has been on very friendly terms with everyone there. A French journalist has drawn a most charming picture of the youthful monarch descending from his motor at an American bar, chatting with the crowds of young scions of the Spanish nobility there, and calling them all by their Christian names. But even in France the newspapers have a season of sea-serpents and big gooseberries. A bar-lounging monarch is a novelty in silly season topics though, and one that bespeaks the presence of a very vivid imagination.

Langfier.

MRS. COSMO HAMILTON

Wife of the editor of the World, and a distinguished member of the theatrical profession.

THE KAISER AND HOMBURG.—Next week the Kaiser will visit Homburg, but not for a cure. His visit will only last three days and is entirely Military in character. He will inspect the 18th Army Corps, which is to take part in the Autumn Manœuvres, and he will also unveil the memorial to the Emperor William I. which has been erected there. The Kaiser has been spending his holiday with the Kaiserin at Wilhelmshöhe, the beautiful seat of the Electors of Hesse, which is famous for its beautiful gardens and picturesque park. In a very few months the Emperor and Empress will be celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding, though we are in this country so accustomed to think of the Kaiser as preeminently youthful, that it is a little difficult to realise that he should be so near his silver wedding. And we must, moreover, face the fact that King Edward is not far off his golden wedding. Another eight visits to Marienbad, and the great event will be taking place.

THE TERRITORIAL CONNECTION.—A discussion has recently arisen as to the custom of naming war-ships after counties. This has been described as an innovation, but any student of history knows this to be a fallacy. It is not, however, generally known that it was the Saxon prelate St. Ælfric, Archbishop of Canterbury in the twelfth century, who initiated the movement which has led to the present method of naming war-vessels. He left his best ship and armour of defence for sixty men to the King, and he bequeathed a ship to Kent, and another to Wiltshire. These ships were reminders that inland counties, as well as those on the coast, were interested in the defence of this country by sea.

Digitized by Google

THE REGATTA SEASON.

AT RYDE, SHANKLIN, AND EASTBOURNE.

(1) The Ryde Juvenile Regatta. Final of the Tub Race on the Canoe Lake. (2) Miss M. Morgan, winner of the Canoe Race for girls at the Ryde Juvenile Regatta. (3) The Shanklin Regatta. Whyte Ladye, winner of the race for the 20-ft. class. (4) On the beach at Shanklin. (5) The crowd on Eastbourne beach during the progress of the regatta. The huge concourse of people present on this occasion is believed to mark a record in crowds at seaside regattas.

(From copyright photographs by W. A. Rouch, J. Coster, and others.)

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

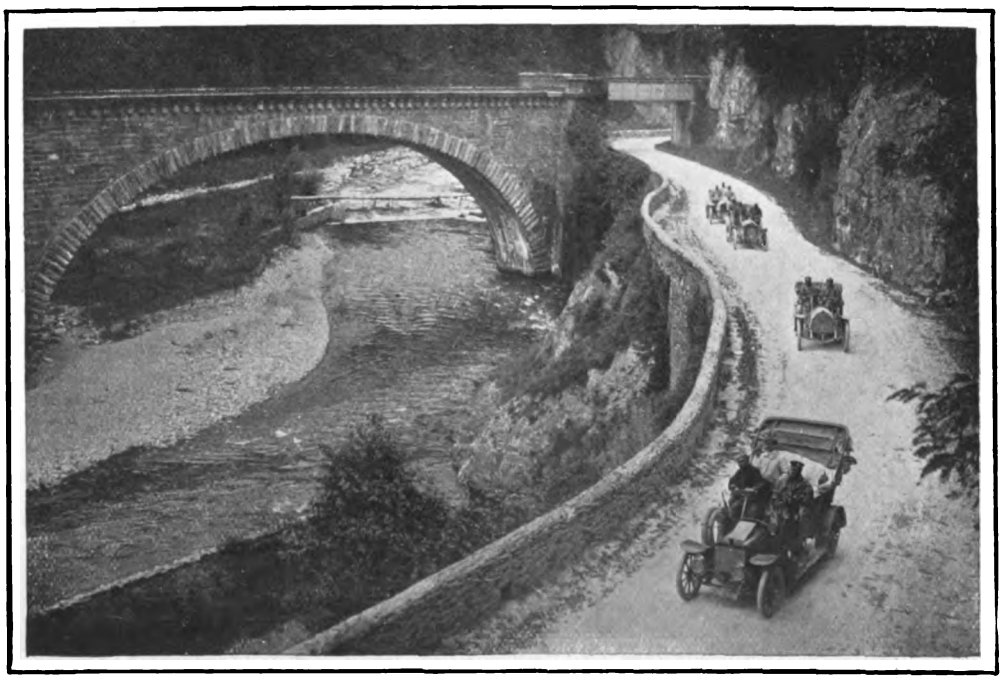
THE next few months are likely to prove a crucial period in the history of automobilism, as the findings of the Royal Commission on Motor Traffic, which will shortly commence its sittings, are bound to have an important influence on future legislation. The Motor Car Act, which was admittedly an experimental measure, expires at the end of next year, and although pressure on the time of Parliament might possibly cause it to be continued for another twelve months, a drastic revision of its provisions is not likely to be delayed for very long. The constitution of the Commission has given satisfaction to all parties, as it is composed of men of well-known ability, who at present have no decided views on the motor question. Its chairman is the late Speaker of the House of Commons, whose impartiality is obviously above suspicion, and it is inconceivable that Parliament, when it undertakes the task of revising the Motor Car Act, will not consent to be guided largely by the report of the Commission. No time should, therefore, be lost by motorists in preparing their case, and it is satisfactory to learn that the Automobile Club and the Motor Union have constituted a joint committee, which has already set to work in an energetic manner. It is somewhat unfortunate that the Commission should have been appointed at a time of year when it is difficult to impress on the ordinary individual the importance of anything except holiday-making, but I would urge every owner of a motor-car to assist in every way those who are working on his behalf. In the first place, the expense of collecting the necessary evidence to lay before the Commission will be very heavy, and although the club has granted £500 as a first donation, and the union £400 to a special legislation fund, it is probable that a far larger sum will be required in the near future. Every motorist who can afford it should therefore give some assistance without delay, either by contributing to the fund, or perhaps, what is better still, by becoming a member of one or other of the bodies which are fighting his battle. There are other ways, however, in which the individual motorist can help in the work of the joint committee. Hard facts alone will influence the Commission, and an appeal for information under a number of heads will shortly be issued, to which every owner of a motor-car will be able to respond from his local or special knowledge.

THE CONTEST FOR THE PYRENEES CUP.

M. Ader on a Richard-Brasier car. The event was really a reliability trial for cars of from £200 and upwards. There were no English competitors.

It is a pity that the paucity of entries should have necessitated the postponement of the Light Delivery Van Trials. The excuse offered by the manufacturers that they are too busy with their preparations for the Tourist Trophy Race and the autumn shows is not a very convincing one, as the date for the trials was fixed at a joint meeting of the Technical Committee of the club and the trade. The real reason is probably to be found in the excellent business which is being done by the leading makers of cars for pleasure purposes, which has prevented them giving more serious attention to the commercial side of automobilism than the offering of ordinary car chassis, somewhat strengthened, for trade purposes. Every preparation had been made for the trials, which would have constituted a severe test of the merits of the light delivery van, and had the results been satisfactory an enormous impetus would have been given to the use of the motor by tradesmen in a large way of business. The vehicles would have run under conditions closely approximating to those of actual service, and the daily routes had been carefully planned so that nearly every town of importance in the Midlands would have been visited. There is not a shadow of doubt that in a few years time the daily necessaries for one's household will be delivered by motor, and a vast opening awaits those manufacturers who have the foresight to realise the importance of this branch of the industry. The trials are only postponed until next year, and as the trading classes in this country have at present no preconceived ideas as to the superiority of the foreign-built motor, it is to be hoped that British makers will pay attention to the requirements of the light delivery van. They will thus secure for themselves the lion's share in the business which is likely to result from the first independent tests ever held on this side of the Channel into the capabilities of the automobile for carrying light goods.



ON THE PYRENEES CUP COURSE.

The route, which was 812 miles long, starting from Toulouse, and thence to Perpignan, Foix, and Luchon. Cauteret, Lourdes, and Biarritz were next passed through, and the return journey was vid Bayonne, the Valley of the Gave, and Pau to Toulouse

Although the Tourist Trophy Race will take place in less than a fortnight, the date fixed being September 14, very little is known as to the construction of the cars which will take part in the event. According to rumour, however, several of the makers have devoted their chief attention to the change-speed gear of their vehicles, and it is probable that the first result of the race will be some important modification in this portion of a car's mechanism. It is said that one firm has sought to obtain increased efficiency by making the third speed a direct drive, the fourth being geared very high and intended for use only down slight gradients, or when the power required is very small. For cars of medium horse-power there seems much to be said in favour of this arrangement in place of the usual direct drive on the highest gear. It should certainly tend towards increased durability, as at present it is customary to make the top speed somewhat low, in order that as much running as possible may be done without changing gear. As a result, on level roads there is a constant temptation to over-drive the engine in order to obtain a good pace from the car. With the new arrangement the third speed will be the ordinary working gear, and the fourth, like the first, will be reserved for special circumstances.

Digitized by Google

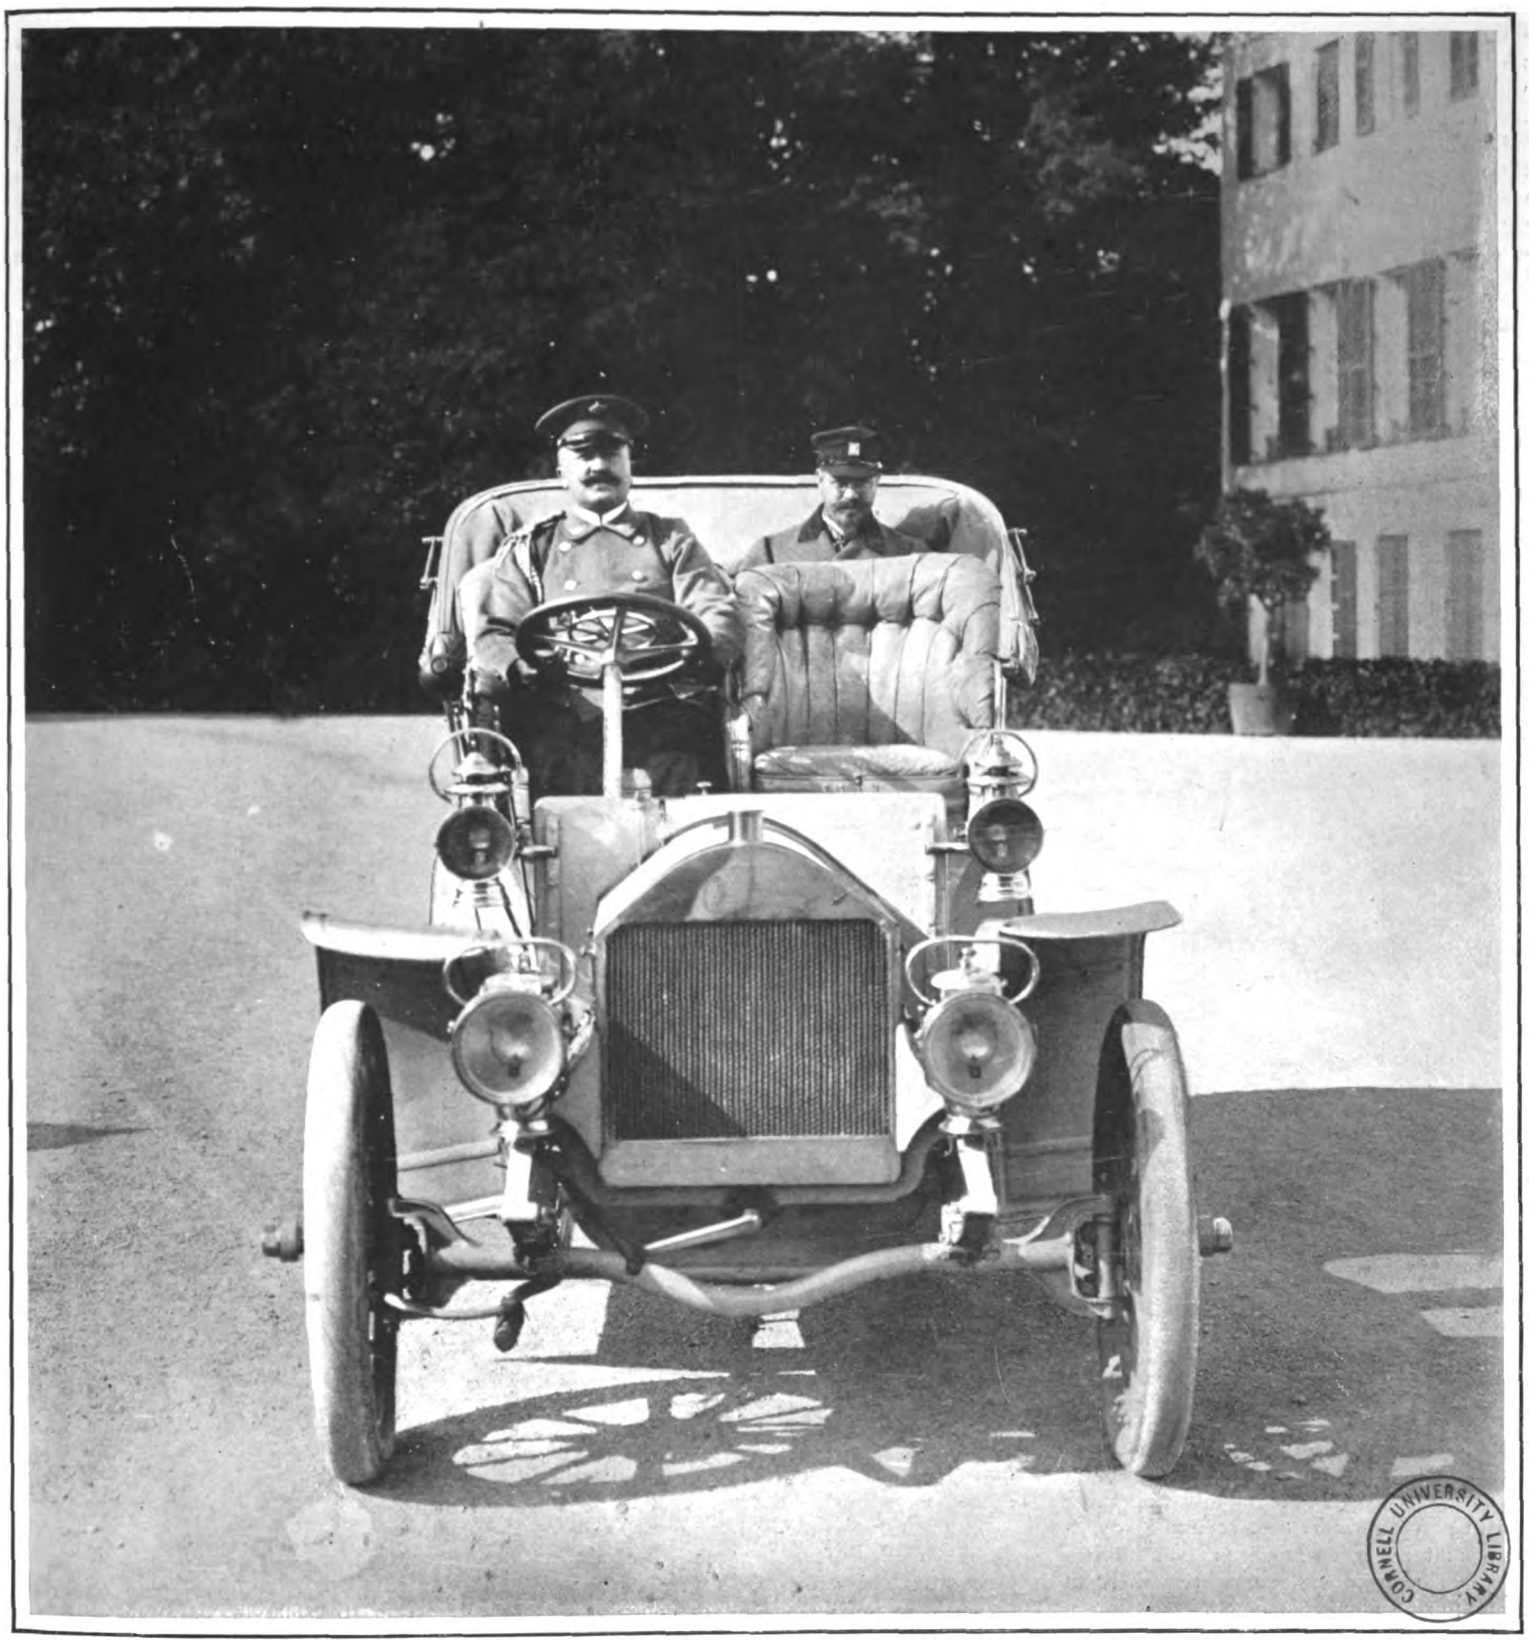
Another maker has designed a six-speed gear which contains only two more spur wheels than the conventional three-speed mechanism. This again is an interesting novelty, which would probably have never seen the light had it not been for the incentive which the Tourist Trophy provides. The device does not appear to be in any sense of a "freak" nature, though it has still to stand the test of actual use. The ideal car would require no change-speed mechanism at all, but so long as the petrol motor is wanting in the flexibility of the steam engine, there will always be the need for some device which will enable the ratio between the crank shaft and the road wheels to be altered at will. For reasons of economy, the small car has hitherto been provided with only two or three speeds, whereas, in fact, the lower the power the greater the need for the multiplicity of speed changes. This the new device gives with apparently a minimum of complication and little sacrifice of space, and, if it proves successful in everyday use, it is conceivable that the 6-h.p. or 10-h.p. car of the near future may be provided with the luxury of a six-speed gear. The changes are said to be effected with remarkable ease, and although the novice might hardly appreciate the innovation at first, the fairly expert driver would quickly recognise the advantage of having a gear which would suit practically every conceivable condition of surface and gradient. The race will be held in the Isle of Man, the course being the same as in the Eliminating Trials.

RADIATOR.



CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Dietrich.

PRINCE LUDWIG FERDINAND OF BAVARIA ON HIS MERCÉDÈS CAR.
From a photograph taken at Munich during the Herkomer Cup contest.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

EDITED BY A. J. ROBERTSON.

THE International professional foursome, which was begun at St. Andrews last week, will take its place in golf history as one of the great events of the game. Not since 1849 has so much public interest been shown in a foursome match; and the revival of the real foursome, as contrasted with the recent innovation of the four-ball match, is welcomed with particular keenness by the older school of player, as well as by all those who love to see brilliant play and individual character revealed in circumstances of genuine dramatic intensity. Whichever side wins—whether Braid and Herd uphold the glory of Scotland, or Vardon and Taylor add another victory to their already great reputation as players—everyone admits that more brilliant play has rarely been seen in a combination, and never so much popular interest generally shown among golfers everywhere to see and to read about the match.

* * *

Looking back on last week's play, there are a few points in the match and the circumstances surrounding it that might be conveniently summarised. First of all, the weather was fine, and this fact no doubt helped to make the crowd of spectators larger than has ever been seen before at a golf match. It is computed that there were between 10,000 and 12,000 spectators following the fortunes of the foursome throughout the thirty-six holes. Trains laden with excursionists poured into St. Andrews the previous day, and on the morning of the match from Edinburgh, Glasgow, Dundee, East Lothian, all the golf greens of Fifeshire, while a party of London golfers left late on Tuesday night so as to be present on the first tee at St. Andrews on Wednesday morning to see Braid strike off the first ball. The night before St. Andrews was so crowded that lodgings and hotel accommodation were strained to their utmost capacity, and the late-comers had a good deal of difficulty to obtain shelter. A special staff of police was drafted into the town in order to regulate the movements of the crowd on the links, to keep order, and to see that the players were not put to the danger of being incommoded. The Town Council had also posted up bills appealing for the loyal and willing co-operation of the public; but notwithstanding all the elaborate and admirably conceived precautions, it is recorded that the immense throng occasionally got out of control. The excitement ran high, and it is no cause for surprise that the zealous enthusiasm of many sightseers at one of the most historic matches ever played overflowed in careless turbulence beyond the careful safeguards of the club committee and the Town Council.

* * *

The committee of the Royal and Ancient Club handled the difficult and delicate problem of keeping the green clear for the players with admirable good sense. The Rev. R. A. Hull, chairman of the Green Committee, addressed the 5,000 spectators around the first tee, appealing for their co-operation. Forty stewards from among the club members, each with a red flag, guarded the line of play to each hole, while six stewards guarded the odd holes, and a similar number took charge of the even holes. There was also a long rope in use to restrain the ardent who, on such occasions, will always insist upon treading on the heels of the players, barely conceding them room to swing their club. As it was, Vardon pulled his ball into the crowd at the fourth tee. It fell against a lady's dress, which in the circumstances was a lucky rub of the green, for had it not been for the dress the ball would have gone into the rough ground. Mr. John L. Low was the referee, and Sir Thomas Parkyns and Mr. W. E. Fairlie the umpires. Their services were only once brought into request, when there was a doubt about Herd having moved his ball while addressing it. The appeal was decided in favour of Herd; and thus from start to finish the match was played without friction. When Braid and Herd won a hole a yellow flag was raised; when Taylor and Vardon won a blue flag was hoisted; and when a hole was halved both flags were raised. This was the ingenious method adopted to signal the result of the play to the crowds of spectators perched on hillocks all over the links and too remote to see the result of the putting at the hole side.

* * *

One feature of the match which was unhappily rather strongly marked was the

Downie, St. Andrews.

THE PROFESSIONAL FOURSOME FOR £400.

Braid, having won the toss, drives off the first ball on behalf of Scotland. Some of the figures in the front row, reading from left to right, are—Mr J. L. Low (the referee), Mr. Ernley Blackwell, Old Tom Morris (seated in the chair), the Rev. Mr. Hull, Herd, Vardon, and Taylor.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

partisan character of the feeling expressed in favour of Braid and Herd. The crowd cheered and applauded whenever the Scottish players achieved a good piece of play or won a hole by a good putt. On the other hand, the crowd was inclined to be sorrowfully silent when Taylor and Vardon became for the time being "the top dog." It was natural, perhaps, that Scottish sympathies should be with their countrymen, but it was a pity that it should have been expressed so aggressively. The consciousness that this feeling existed against them must have been a sore handicap to Taylor and Vardon in the course of their strenuous battle; and the wonder really is that they were not more than two holes down at the end of the day's play. Braid was in splendid form and bore off the honours of the match. Herd was nervous at the start, but the feeling soon wore off, and he, too, showed excellent form. Taylor was steady throughout and occasionally brilliant, while Vardon was not in such good form as he usually is, his weakness being particularly noticeable on the putting green. The scores were—Braid and Herd, 75 and 78=153; Taylor and Vardon, 78 and 76=154. The second stage of the match was played on Wednesday at Troon.

THE INTERNATIONAL PROFESSIONAL FOURSOME.
Taylor driving off for England. Braid is standing at the box on the player's right; on the left ar Herd, Vardon, and Mr. H. S. C. Everard, watching the ball.

* * *

The four professionals afterwards went on to Montrose, where the local golfers had subscribed a purse of £100 for open competition. There was a preliminary scoring round to qualify for match play by the eight lowest scorers. Jack White was in splendid form, returning scores of 75 and 77, beating Braid by a stroke on the aggregate. Taylor came third, Herd fourth, A. Kirkaldy fifth, and Vardon seventh. In the subsequent matches a surprise was created by the defeat of Taylor by Jack White. Vardon also beat Braid and Herd in succession, and then he met A. Kirkaldy in the final of thirty-six holes. At the end of the first eighteen holes Kirkaldy, who played a fine game throughout the tournament, was 3 up on Vardon. This lead Vardon knocked off at the beginning of the afternoon round, but a ding-dong match was only won by Vardon at the last hole by a putt.

* * *

One of the most interesting features of the match was to see Old Tom Morris seated in a chair drawn up at the first tee. When the fine old player saw this foursome of young professionals descend the steps of the club-house amid a ringing cheer, he must have cast his memory back to the old days of 1849, when he, alas! the sole survivor, took a yeoman's share in the great professional foursome of those days with Allan Robertson as his partner against the brothers Dunn. The Rev. Mr. Hull called for a cheer to be given for the old veteran, the hero of many a golfing struggle, and Old Tom, with a gentle pathetic smile, raised his cap in pleased recognition of the compliment.

THE SCAMPER FOR THE NEXT GREEN.
After each hole had been played out there was an immediate stampede of the crowd for the next green. The tramp of the scurrying feet is described as being like the rumble of distant thunder.

* * *

A golf book of particular interest is promised for the autumn. Mr. H. S. C. Everard has written and Mr. George A. Morton, Edinburgh, will publish "The History of the Royal and Ancient Club." By special permission the volume will contain numerous interesting portraits and other illustrations, from original sketches in possession of the club, from rare photographs, and from other sources.

James Patrick, Edinburgh.

SCENE AT THE 17TH HOLE.
Taylor putting, Vardon watching the stroke. It will be noted how closely the crowd has pressed forward on the player.

Digitized by Google

MR. BARRY AT THE TOP OF THE SWING.

FINISH OF THE AMATEUR CHAMPION'S SWING.

THE FINISH OF THE BRASSIE SHOT.

Golfers are probably not aware what an admirable speaker Taylor is at a ceremonial function. He is, indeed, the orator of his professional brotherhood. At the close of the Montrose tournament Taylor addressed the crowd, thanking the tournament committee and the subscribers, paying at the same time a very handsome compliment to his old opponent, Andrew Kirkaldy, who just failed to beat Vardon. One of the most pleasant features of the tournament, he said, had been the magnificent form shown by their veteran friend Kirkaldy, who happened to be the first professional he had met to play against for a money stake. It was pleasing to him to see that Kirkaldy still upheld, as he did when he (Taylor) was beaten by him in 1891, the dignity of Scottish golf, and especially of St. Andrews golf.

* * *

Something like a "Chivalry Golf Tournament" has been instituted this year on the Samaden course in Switzerland. It is certainly an interesting novelty, which some of our own lady players may care some time or other to imitate. In one of the competitions at Samaden last month Mr. C. Lewinger offered a handsome antique silver casket to be won by the man making the best medal round under handicap. The men were nominated by ladies, and the successful squire was to hand over the souvenir to the especial dame whose champion he was, he in return receiving a memento of the occasion, also offered by Mr. Lewinger. Twenty-five nominees played for the trophy, which ultimately fell to M. Despret, who played as the champion of Mme. Mesdach de Kiele. In this competition Mr. A. H. Crosfield and Mr. W. Roper tied for the best scratch scores, 81 each.

* * *

At the recent summer meeting of an historic Fife club two caddies had unexpectedly good cheer. The steward, a new hand, had received instructions to give them "the usual lunch"; and it was only when paying the bill that the member found his order had been read to mean as the lunch usually supplied to members. It is unalloyed pleasure to his friends to hear this member express his satisfaction with the thought that the caddies cannot fail to have enjoyed their salmon and other fixings, with the mild weed and modest "Old Kirk" sanctified to generations of digesting golfers. It is a pleasant, peaceful tale, and differs from all other golfing yarns in that it is strictly true.

The Styles of Eminent Players.

X.—MR. GORDON BARRY, THE AMATEUR CHAMPION.

AT the end of May, at Prestwick, a new star suddenly blazed forth on the golfing world, and dimmed the lustre of the other constellations. There was a small coterie of patient watchers at St. Andrews, however, who had marked the birth and growth of this new planet, and had felt confident that sooner or later it would shine forth and create astonishment. Mr. Barry, indeed, is an illustration of the born golfer. An Englishman by birth and name, he has, however, learnt and played his golf almost entirely at St. Andrews, and it is completely through accident, if I might use the term, that an Englishman has the honour of having won the blue riband this year. It is no doubt the best, if not the only, way to aspire to the highest honours to learn one's golf from the cradle. When the limbs are not altogether formed and fixed, the muscles undeveloped, they can most assuredly be best trained in the way they should go. It is a curious fact, however, that though he saw nothing but St. Andrews golfers, and was

FINISH OF THE CLEEK SHOT.

THE FINISH OF THE IRON SHOT.

FINISH OF THE MASHIE SHOT.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

entirely taught by them, Mr. Barry has not the St. Andrews style. His driving was modelled on the particular St. Andrews swing, but he increased the finish and rather shortened the top of it until it is almost unrecognisable. His iron shots and putting strokes are totally at variance with the accepted code there. But notwithstanding this, Mr. Barry has St. Andrews to thank for his present position. Being at school 100-yds. from the first tee, off he goes for a hole out and a hole in every day, getting his muscles set for the game, and intuitively learning how best to play the shots. Later, at the University in the same place, he had longer time to play whole rounds, always learning. Playing in all conditions of wind and weather, rain or shine, always coming nearer the ideal, until at last he is as he is. And, my readers, believe me, this is no fluke, no flash in the pan. Mr. Barry will always be a factor to be reckoned with, and a full stop for many other aspirants to the great honour which has become his.

But to the pictures. Nos. 1 and 2 are the top and finish of the swing. No doubt my readers are acquainted with the abnormal follow through of Mr. Barry; it is the first thing that strikes one in his game. It is too long, far too long, and sooner or later he must shorten it. It makes him wild, in wind sometimes very wild, and it is impossible to control the ball, knowing that you have to come through as he does. Yet despite this follow through, Mr. Barry's feet never leave the ground; his right toe is perfect, even though his right knee is far too much bent. Still, it is necessary for him, considering the manner in which he brings his body back, for, unlike most other first-class golfers, it is with the whole weight of his body, not wrists, that he gets his length. He drives a beautiful ball, further than most, and with a little pull. Nothing could be more perfect than the top of the swing; it is ideal, and a perfect copy for anyone.

No. 3, finish of brassie shot. It will be noticed that Mr. Barry finishes in exactly the same way as off the tee, right toe and knee exactly the same. Nos. 4, 5, and 6 are iron shots. Mr. Barry plays all his iron shots in an unique way. He does not hit the ball away—he sweeps it away. The whole body from the knees upwards moves round with the club on the upward swing, and comes through with the club on the forward swing. This will be noticed particularly in No. 6, which was quite a short mashie shot. There is no hitting the ball here by the aid of the wrists. It is a sweep of the club by the aid of the body. This is a dangerous style to adopt, and though it suits Mr. Barry to perfection, there is only one man in a hundred who could play the shot by the same method. No. 7, bunkered, and a very good shot at two, I remember. No. 8, putting. Everyone who saw Mr. Barry at Prestwick marvelled at his putting, and it was in truth wonderful. As will be noticed, Mr. Barry putts entirely with iron, and he also putts in an unique manner. Here again he does not hit the ball; he sweeps it into the hole exactly, as Mr. Low has said, "as if he were using a wooden putter." The body moves round as he draws the putter back exactly as he does in iron play. Notice the short grip and both thumbs down the club.

THE AMATEUR CHAMPION BUNKERED.

MR. BARRY'S PUTTING STANCE AND GRIP.

Mr. Barry is, I believe, going to take up residence at Cambridge. His brother, who is another very fine player, is going there also. He will, indeed, be a tower of strength to the Cambridge Golfing Society, and Oxford will have to put her best men forward if she wants to win.

H. FERRIER-KERR.

Corresponaence.

THE LATE JAMES ANDERSON.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE KING."

SIR,—There are not many among the golfers of the present day who remember James Anderson, the winner of the Open Championship in 1877, 1878, and 1879; and thus when they read the news of his death it will be more with a feeling of curiosity to know what kind of a player he was in his day and generation, and at a time when the golfing world is ringing with the deeds of Braid, Vardon, and Taylor.

A. H. Robinson.

THE HARROGATE GOLF CLUB.

The after-luncheon siesta at the club-house. The players are (left to right): Messrs. B. A. Hirst (Ilkley), A. E. Kirk, H. Oliver, H. Russell Smith (Ilkley), C. Stansfeld (Ilkley), J. J. Kayll (captain), Colonel Stuart, and W. S. Easson.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

This sterling golfer passed away after a lingering illness at Thornton on August 16, at the age of sixty-four. He was, in his prime, the very best iron player of the day. One of his sayings was: "I always play to get into the hole as soon as I am within reach of it with any club!" Though always straight and of fair length, he never drove far at any time; but for this he blamed his obesity—which had long been a thing of the past, poor fellow! It is probable that a better judge of the game never existed. About the time when Young Tom was at his best, he and Jamie challenged any two players, and offered to lay £100 to £80; but there were no takers. With the formidable Bob Ferguson he divided honours in four big matches over St. Andrews, Aberdeen, North Berwick, and Musselburgh; and many a tussle he had with Andrew Strath, who won the Prestwick Belt in 1865, which brings us in a way into touch with the venerable Old Philp himself. Jamie served his apprenticeship to club-making with the late Mr. Forgan of St. Andrews, whilst Strath served his with Wilson. Both Forgan and Wilson had been in Old Philp's employment, and the former succeeded to his business, whilst Wilson started in opposition; but though rivals, the two remained friends, as did Jamie and Strath. Jamie was a capital club-maker, and carried on business on his own account for several years in St. Andrews; and thence he went for a time to Ardeer, and thereafter to Perth. He was a son of the famous "Daw," who appears in Lockhart's "A Voice from the Rhine" and Mr. Tom Peter's "Reminiscences," and was familiar to more than one generation on St. Andrews Links as the dispenser of ginger-beer at the end hole. Jamie is survived by a grown-up family, several of his sons being first-class golfers. One of his sons is David Anderson, formerly a club-maker with Peter Paxton at Tooting, and now professional to the Bromley and Bickley Club.
—I am, etc., ST. ANDREWS.

THE WICKLOW LINKS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE KING."

SIR,—Wicklow is not very well known to the average tourist who hurries past the little port on his way to the Devil's Glen or the Seven Churches. The principal town of the Garden of Ireland, however, is coming in for some notice now, especially in the golfing world, on account of the very good golf links recently opened there. The course is an extremely sporting one, and is situated above the town on the north side of Wicklow Head. There is a cosy club-house, where excellent tea may be obtained, and the course possesses the additional attraction of magnificent views of the Wicklow Mountains and of the rugged coastline that stretches away to Dublin, with Bray Head and the Hill of Howth in the distance. Wicklow Head is the nearest point to the Welsh Coast, and on a clear day one may often see Snowdon and her attendant mountains towering above the horizon.

Golfers are a conservative race, and are somewhat unwilling to try a new neighbourhood, but in the opinion of experts the Wicklow links will probably, in course of time, become one of the finest in Ireland, and with its unequalled attractions of scenery and accessibility cannot fail to become widely known and universally popular.—I am, etc.,

KATHLEEN CONYNGHAM GREENE.

THE WICKLOW LINKS.
A view from the 8th hole, the Sugar Loaf Mountain in the distance.

THE WICKLOW LINKS.
The caddie boy on his way down to the 3rd tee.

THE WICKLOW LINKS.
A view of the 1st hole, with a player humming "Remote unfriended, melancholy, slow."

FIXTURES.

September 2.—Leasowe, Rangoon Cup.
September 2.—Royal Portrush, September Meeting.
September 4.—Royal North Devon, Autumn Meeting.
September 4-6.—Sheringham, Autumn Meeting.
September 5.—Royal and Ancient St. Andrews, Jubilee Vase.
September 5.—Royal Eastbourne, Vaughan Cup.
September 7.—Seaford, Autumn Meeting.
September 7-8-9.—Royal Cromer, Autumn Meeting.
September 9.—Glasgow, Autumn Meeting at Killermont.
September 9.—Formby, Autumn Meeting.
September 9.—Tantallon, Autumn Meeting.
September 13.—Littlehampton, Autumn Meeting.
September 13.—Newquay, Lang Cup.
September 15.—Newquay, Headland Cup.
September 16.—Portmarnock, Gold Medal.
September 16—Glasgow, Autumn Meeting at Gailes.
September 16-18.—Lytham and St. Anne's, Autumn Meeting.
September 18-22.—Le Touquet, Open Meeting.
September 21.—Alnmouth, Autumn Meeting.
September 22.—Redhill and Reigate, Autumn Meeting.
September 23.—Hanger Hill, Open Amateur Competition.
September 23.—Manchester, Autumn Meeting.
September 23.—Raynes Park, Autumn Meeting.
September 23.—Wallasey, Autumn Meeting.
September 23.—West Derby, Autumn Meeting.
September 23.—Rochester, Atkin Cup.
September 23.—Sundridge Park, Autumn Meeting.
September 25-30.—Burnham and Berrow, Autumn Meeting.
September 25.—Royal Guernsey, Autumn Meeting.
September 29.—Beckenham, Autumn Meeting.
September 29.—Brighton and Hove, Autumn Meeting.
September 29-30.—Acton, Autumn Meeting,
September 29-30.—Bushey Hall, Open Amateur Meeting and Challenge Cup.
September 29-30.—Hanger Hill, Autumn Meeting.
September 30.—Newhaven, Autumn Meeting.
September 30.—Royal Jersey, Autumn Meeting.
September 30.—Southport, Autumn Meeting.
September 30.—Matlock Bath, Autumn Meeting.
September 30.—Ealing, Autumn Meeting.
September 30.—Wimbledon Park, Autumn Meeting.
October 7.—New Luffness, Autumn Meeting.

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. LIX.—Mr. Arthur Hamilton Lee, Civil Lord of the Admiralty, Conservative M.P. for the Fareham Division of Hampshire.

FEW thoroughfares in Mayfair can boast of historical associations half as interesting as those possessed by Chesterfield Street, where the Prince Regent went to study the art of tying his neckerchief, à la mode, from Beau Brummel, and where Lord Dundonald received the welcome news that he had been restored to his rank and honours by an order of Queen Victoria in Council. The first Lord Dudley, Canning's clever but eccentric Foreign Secretary, Sir Robert Adair the Diplomatist, and the beautiful and talented Caroline Norton, all lived in Chesterfield Street, and it is by no means an infelicitous coincidence that in this centennial year of Nelson's death and victory, the handsome Adam house, so long tenanted by the Hoods, should be the abode of the Civil Lord of the Admiralty who represents at Westminster the southern portion of the English county more intimately connected than any other with the history of the Navy.

Although a soldier by profession the earliest recollections of Mr. Arthur Lee are of ships and the sea, for he was born six-and thirty years ago in the old-world parsonage house of Bridport, the picturesque Dorset town whence, in Henry VIII.'s reign, came all the cordage used in the King's Fleet, and which to-day supplies sailors to nearly every British man-of-war afloat. After becoming head of the Modern side of Cheltenham College, Mr. Lee gained a Woolwich cadetship, and in due course entered the Royal Garrison Artillery. Joining his battery at Hong Kong in 1888, he afterwards did excellent work as Adjutant of the Hong Kong Volunteer Artillery, but somehow or other found time for a good deal of observant travelling in China, Japan, Korea, and Siberia. A series of brilliant articles in Harper's Weekly at once won Mr. Lee the reputation of an expert in all questions relating to the Far East, and just eleven years ago he wrote almost prophetically that "Japan might require some moral and material support, and England is, after Japan, the Power most interested in the independence of Korea. An Anglo-Japanese Alliance would be a linking together of the Great Britain of the West with the Great Britain of the Far East, and the question of the command of the Pacific would be settled once and for all."

Seven years later the necessity foreseen by Mr. Lee became a fait accompli. Meanwhile he had returned to England as Adjutant of the Royal Artillery in the Isle of Wight, and for a time filled the post of Staff Officer to the School of Instruction in Coast Defence at Golden Hill. In June, 1893, he passed into the Staff College, winning unique distinction in the matter of military history and geography. Very shortly afterwards he was appointed Professor of Strategy, Tactics, and Military Topography at the Royal Military College of Kingston, Canada. During his five years' stay in the Dominion he not only visited every part of it, but considerably increased his reputation both as a scientific soldier and able writer. In April, 1898, he arrived in Washington to discharge the duties of British Military Attaché to the Headquarters Staff of the U.S. Army in the field against Spain. In the trenches before Santiago he displayed sterling courage, while the timely aid he afforded the wounded under incessant fire won him the regard and affection of the American force to which he was attached. At the particular desire of the United States Government he was subsequently appointed Military Attaché in Washington. In December, 1899, he married Miss Ruth Moore of New York, although he fully expected to be immediately ordered to South Africa. His services not being required, he determined to exchange the sword of warfare for the pruning-hook of peace and devote his energies to politics in general, and the promotion of good feeling between the English-speaking races of the world in particular.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Lafayette.

MRS. ARTHUR HAMILTON LEE
Wife of the Conservative Member for the Fareham Division of Hampshire.

On his retirement from the Army he received special letters of thanks from both the English and American Governments, and was promoted to the rank of brevet-major. In October, 1900, Mr. Lee was elected Conservative member for the Fareham Division of Hampshire by an overwhelming majority. He rapidly made his mark in Parliament, beginning with a maiden speech which evoked a chorus of applause both within and without the House of Commons. Few men have studied the question of practical Army reform more carefully than Mr. Lee, and exactly three years after his return to Westminster he became Civil Lord of the Admiralty. There was a singular fitness in the appointment, for the Lees of Lee in Cheshire had been sailors for generations. His great-great-grandfather and his great-grandfather, both John Lees, were Naval captains, and his grandfather, Sir John Theophilus Lee (whose beautiful aquatints of Navarino and the Naval duel between the "Shannon" and "Chesapeake" are well known to collectors), served at the battles of Cape St. Vincent and the Nile, and on one occasion opened a ball in Naples with Lady Hamilton as his partner. Mr. Lee has devoted the rare intervals of leisure he can snatch from his official duties at Whitehall to the artistic restoration of his beautiful house in Chesterfield Street, where the link-extinguishers and hammered iron at either side of the entrance remain intact. Both Mr. and Mrs. Lee are ardent collectors of pictures, autographs, and rariora relating to Napoleon and the Navy. The mother of Mrs. Lee, the late Mrs. J. G. Moore, the accomplished wife of the popular "diplomatist of Wall Street," found solace during a long and painful illness in accumulating portraits and MSS. relating to the greatest soldier and organiser of the nineteenth century, and the task is now continued by her son-in-law, who, in the beautiful library with the deep recessed window, shows you Napoleon's Italian despatches, and Josephine's letters to Barras; while on the walls hang seventeenth century paintings of Strafford, Algernon Sidney, Cromwell, and Shakespeare's Earl of Southampton. Autographs and engraved portraits of great value and rarity covered with glass crown a dwarf bookcase running round the room. You pass from Queen Victoria to Benjamin Franklin, from Abraham Lincoln to Robert Louis Stevenson, and from Lord Tennyson back again to Washington. From Josephine's suggestive postscript to Barras', "Bonaparte vous fait mille amitiés il m'aime toujours à l'adoration," you turn to the outspoken words of Nelson written almost before the smoke had cleared away from Aboukir Bay: "Were I to die this moment, want of frigates would be found stamped on my heart." Mr. Lee's practical experience has made him a firm believer in "Reciprocity and Retaliation." He was the first private member to come into the open in support of Mr. Chamberlain's ideas after the fiscal pronouncement of two years ago. He might tell you something of his adventures with Mr. Roosevelt's "Rough Riders" during the Santiago Campaign, or show you the last of Mr. F. C. Gould's caricatures, of which he has just become the possessor. You cannot help feeling that Mr. Lee has in him all the makings of a statesman, and that if Liberalism is to flourish in Chesterfield Gardens under the ægis of Sir John Dickson-Poynder, the Conservatism of Chesterfield Street is safe in the hands of the Civil Lord of the Admiralty and his popular and accomplished wife.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

THE HOLIDAY HOME.

FOR many years we have heard of the advantages of the English system of apartments at British seaside places. We have been told that our French health resorts would be perfect were they conducted on the same principle; that the villa, with the necessity of bringing servants, plate, and linen, was a tiresome arrangement; and that the alternative of a poorly-furnished room with the obligato accompaniments of meals at the neighbouring restaurant, for those unwilling or unable to bear the expense of a hotel or the hire of a villa for the season, was degrading. All this has been the subject of comment, and so strong has been the voice raised in disapproval of the recognised methods of supplying the bon bourgeois with his holiday home, that it has called together a company, a number of financial philanthropists, to build rows of apartment houses on English lines in one of the most-frequented bathing centres near Dieppe. Bow windows and green painted balconies shall greet Parisians and strangers as they descend from the railway carriages. A card with the alluring word "Apartments" shall be placed in the windows of each storey; each shall be let to a responsible landlady, who shall cook and generally "do" for the holiday tenants. And the Englishman when he travels with his wife and family shall feel at home, and the Parisian will wonder how he could have lived without these comforts of a landlady and being "generally done for" for so many years.

But stay, good financial philanthropists, and listen to the voice of one who has travelled to English shores, of one who has met the landlady on her native ground. Will you introduce her into the peaceful Normandy villages? Listen, and "reflect e'er you decide."

Brighton was the scene of my experience. Every Parisian has heard of Brighton. (Times have changed since Bismarck described a Frenchman as a man wearing a comforter, drinking sugar water, and ignorant of geography.)

I found a pleasant street off the King's Road, with semi-detached houses and bright little gardens lining the pavement. A striped holland curtain hung before a door, protecting its new paint from the blistering of the sun. I was struck with the curtain and the card "Apartments" upon the pane of glass above it, and rang the bell.

"Any children?" was shouted at me, as a large, untidy-looking woman opened the door. I assured her there were no children, and was allowed to enter. The house was comfortably furnished, I agreed to pay the amount she asked for the use of her sitting-rooms and bedrooms, and the luggage was safely deposited upstairs.

"No late dinner, I hope," was the next amiable remark. I said we should have liked a late dinner, but to oblige her we would manage with the cold supper she said was customary in "the street." She didn't want the supper taken in the street; she meant that "the ladies who let apartments in this row didn't cook after middle day."

"Smell o' scent, don't you," was the following observation. "Can't abide scent, won't have it in the house," she continued, before I had time to tell her she was mistaken. She seemed a strange woman, but she was the landlady, and, after all, the house was hers, and I need not have remained. But I wanted to understand the advantages of the apartment system.

She certainly cooked our joints "middle day," but we never saw them again. She always said there was not enough to "come up." I never quite knew what she meant by this, beyond that joints were the proper things for families in apartments, and one had to be ordered every day.

For a week I bore with this terrible woman. I shut my eyes to her little thefts. I said nothing about the sugar, the tea, the butter that disappeared from the store cupboard; I listened patiently to the history of her married life and the "goings on" of the husband she divorced; I smiled feebly when she put her head into the drawing-room when I had visitors, and told me she was going to bed and I must turn the light out. But I began to be afraid she took too many liqueurs of Otard after dinner — she had such a fancy for this brand of ours — and I said we were leaving on the morrow. She sat down, and I heard her say something about "not believing her ears." Then she asked what I was going to pay her for the traffic. "Traffic?" I asked. "What traffic?" "The people who called on you," she said; "who sat on my chairs and used my sitting-room. I counted as many as seven one night. And do you think you're going without paying to the end of the month? Do you think I'd have let you my house for a week?" I had to tell the irate lady that apartments were a novelty for me; but, under the circumstances, although I loved novelties, I did not care to remain beneath her hospitable roof.

Reutlinger.

MLLE. LAVALLIÈRE.

The well-known French actress, who has been playing at the Variétés in "Le Sire de Vergy," which is to be produced in an English version at the Apollo Theatre shortly.

Was my experience an extraordinary one? I think not. Although I am quite prepared to believe there are honest and sober landladies, I think we should do well to keep to our villa system in France and not make any rash changes. We have to submit to many inconveniences when the kitchen range does not act properly; when our Paris servants find fault with their accommodation, grumble at the quality of the food, at the washing of their linen, and constantly complain of one thing or another. But when once our arrangements are made with the agent, the key is turned, and the house is our own to do as we like in, to fill with children or visitors, to dine late or early; to do, in fact, as we please.

Let us make up our minds to bear the nuisances we know; to be followed over the small seaside places by the greater part of the villa-letting inhabitants, each waiting his turn to show you "just the thing you want," gesticulating violently, with his short stick and arms protruding a yard from his sleeves, when his "villa" is found damp and undesirable; to put up with many annoyances, but to be master of the temporary home when once we take possession of it. Let us keep the annoyances we know. We know not what is in store for us with a landlady!

FRANCES KEYZER.

Digitized by Google

A Paris Toilette.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

A DRESS OF BLACK SPOTTED SILK GAUZE OVER CREAM TAFFETAS. MAISON ROUFF.

(From a photograph by Reutlinger.)

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

WITH the termination of Ryde Week, the Solent season is usually regarded as drawing to a close; but the present yachting season has not proceeded on ordinary lines in arrangement of dates, and so we find another almost full week's racing following the Royal Victoria Regatta. The Royal Albert two days were in accordance with custom, but the Royal Southampton dates on August 23 and 24 were quite an innovation. One of the dates had been arranged, and the other was due to a postponement from an earlier date owing to the presence of the Fleets at Cowes.

The Ryde Week, true to tradition, provided some very interesting racing, enhanced by the fact that the weather varied each day, with the result that hard and light weather craft alike had their days, and no one boat secured a large bulk of the week's trophies. The week finished on the Friday, but the Royal Southern Club gave a day's racing at Calshot on the Saturday, which attracted more than usual interest owing to the fact that a King's Cup was sailed for.

There was a hard south-westerly breeze blowing, and the competing yachts had a rare dusting. Seven started in the King's Cup Race, but only four finished, the other three, White Heather, Creole, and Merrymaid, meeting with mishaps and giving up. Vendetta, the winner, took the hard weather quite comfortably.

Probably the most noteworthy race of the whole week was that for the 52-footers on Saturday. They were sent over a course of thirty-nine knots, and only one of the four starters survived to the finish. On such occasions one often hears comment in regard to the racing vessels being fine-weather craft and unfitted for hard blows. Those who are thoroughly acquainted with the game, however, know the severity of the test to which they are put in hard-weather racing. Much more canvas is carried than would be put on a cruiser in similar weather. On the day in question, a vessel out for cruising would have been close reefed; but the 52-footers had only a single reef knocked down in mainsail and jib-headed topsails set above, while ordinary headsails were carried. In cruising, also, a vessel would be eased to the hard puffs; the vessel racing, on the contrary, is kept driving, and when on a wind with a big tumble of sea, the strain on gear is enormous, and it is not to be wondered at if something goes.

All the 52-footers have hollow wood masts and spars, and they were watched critically to see how they would come out of the test. Moyana was allowed to get away with a lead of several lengths at the start, and it was recognised that, bar accidents or mistakes, she should have the race in hand. Maymon, Sonya, and Britomart were, however, in close company. Britomart, hitherto none too successful, gave proof early in the race that she had to be reckoned with in a hard blow, for she slipped through Sonya's lee in a reach. Sonya passed her on a close haul to the next mark, but only to he repassed in a broad reach again. The next leg of the course was a turn to windward for about seven miles. Moyana was too far ahead to be reckoned with, but the other three had a grand race. Sonya is recognised as smart on a wind, and the first time she went about and met Britomart on opposite tacks the latter was forced to go under her stern. Britomart in turn caught Maymon on the wrong tack and crossed her bow.

Of course, the close attention these three were paying to each other let Moyana further ahead, and the actual race was for second prize. At the weather mark, Maymon, which had been second, was last, Sonya being second, and Britomart third. It was now a run before the wind, and risky though it was in such a hard blow, spinnakers were set, and the three boats travelled up the Solent beam and beam for a couple of miles. Sonya's spinnaker boom broke, and she set a balloon-foresail as spinnaker, but later the jaws of her gaff appeared to have gone; at any rate, she did not continue after the first round. Britomart was leading Maymon by a couple of lengths at the half journey, and a mile later Maymon was almost on her weather quarter, but never got past. It was a splendid struggle between this pair, each watching every move of the other. Both boats were beautifully handled, Britomart by her owner, and Maymon by A. Hogarth. Britomart succeeded in keeping Maymon astern, but there was little more than a length of clear water between them as they bore away for a broad reach. They tore through the water at a great pace, and rounded the lee mark in the same close order.

There was now a seven-mile beat, and with the tide running against the wind there was a big jump. Britomart was fairly beating Maymon, when one of the deck hands shouted that Moyana was in trouble. Surely enough, as we passed her (I was aboard Britomart), we saw that her bowsprit and starboard cross-tree had carried away. Our sorrow at her mishap was somewhat mitigated by the knowledge that we were now first boat. Our own turn of misfortune was to come; running up the west channel with a couple of minutes' lead of Maymon, the rudder head broke off. We were not far from shore at the time, and there was nothing to be done but let her beach herself, which she did without any apparent injury to hull, and we had the mortification of seeing Maymon sailing by us for the prize which five minutes earlier we had considered almost safe in the locker. Strange to say, none of the mishaps was due to weakness in hollow spars.

CORINTHIAN.

Debenham.

VALDORA

Dr. J. G. Douglas Kerr's 106-ton yawl, which has been racing with some success in the Solent meetings this year.

REGATTA FIXTURES.

September 4 to 6.—Royal Norfolk and Suffolk Yacht Club; Regatta at Lowestoft.
September 9.—Royal Corinthian Yacht Club; Matches.
September 9.—Orwell Corinthian Yacht Club; Handicap Match.
September 16.—Minima Yacht Club, Surbiton; Match.
September 23.—Royal Corinthian Yacht Club; Matches.

Digitized by Google

YACHTS OF THE YEAR.

Copyright.

THÉRÈSE

Owned by Herr Felix Simon, and racing at the Royal Albert Club's meeting. She was built in 1896 for Baron Edward de Rothschild, and was named La Flèche. As Thérèse she is better known at the Baltic regattas than in English waters, though she has been a fairly frequent visitor to the Solent during the past two years.

Digitized by Google

IN NORTHE

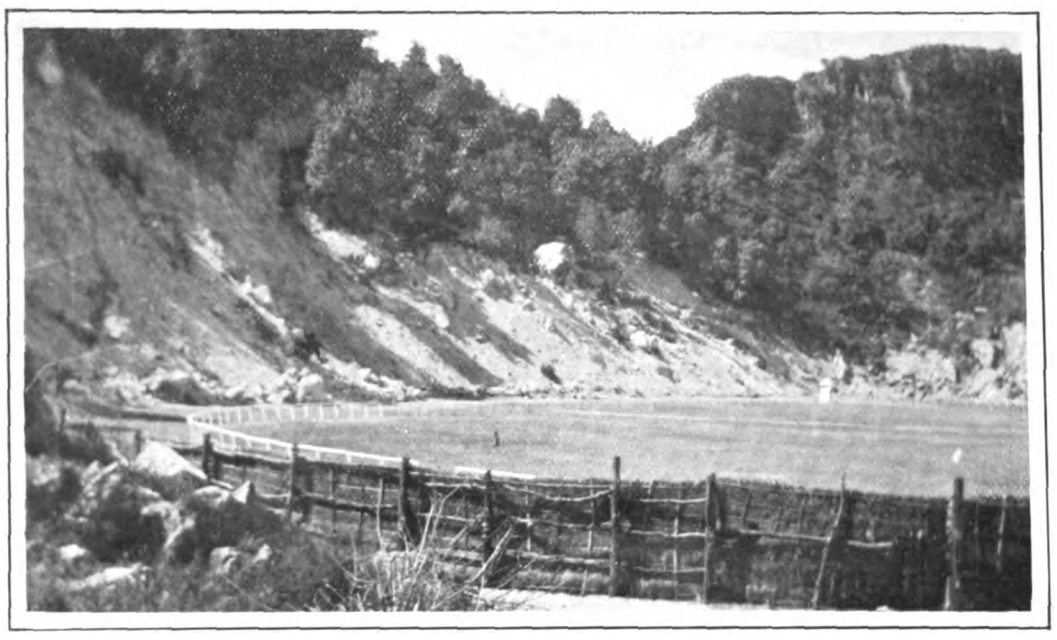
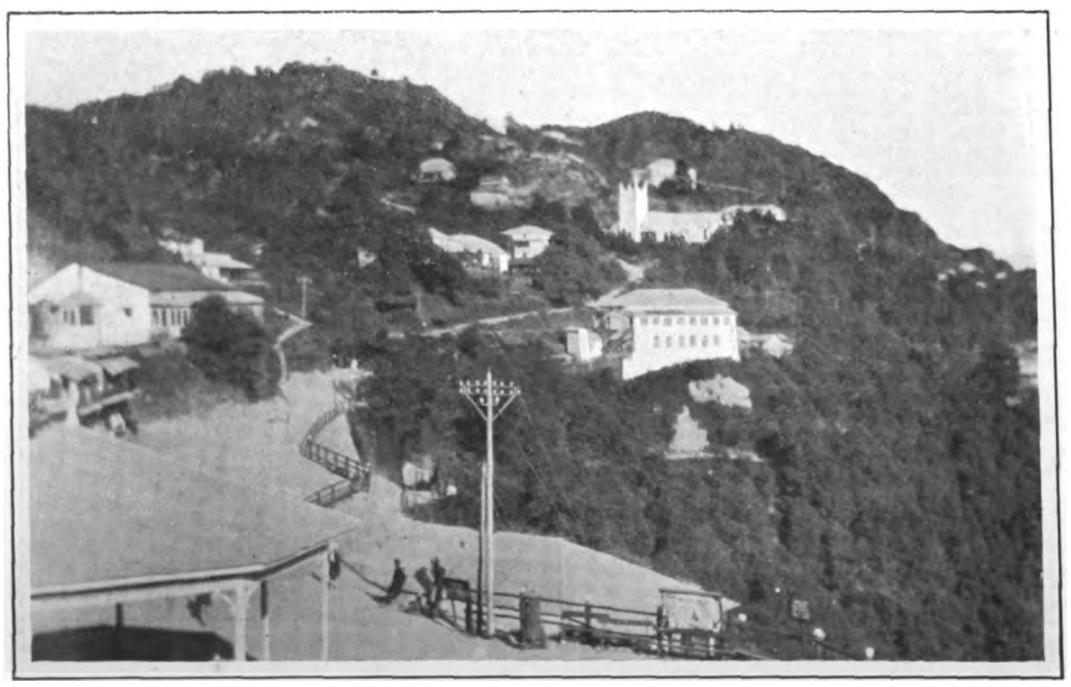
MY LORD THE ELEPHANT.

The Maharaja of Jaipur's State elephant leading a marriage procession through the capital. The street is the main thoroughfare of the city.



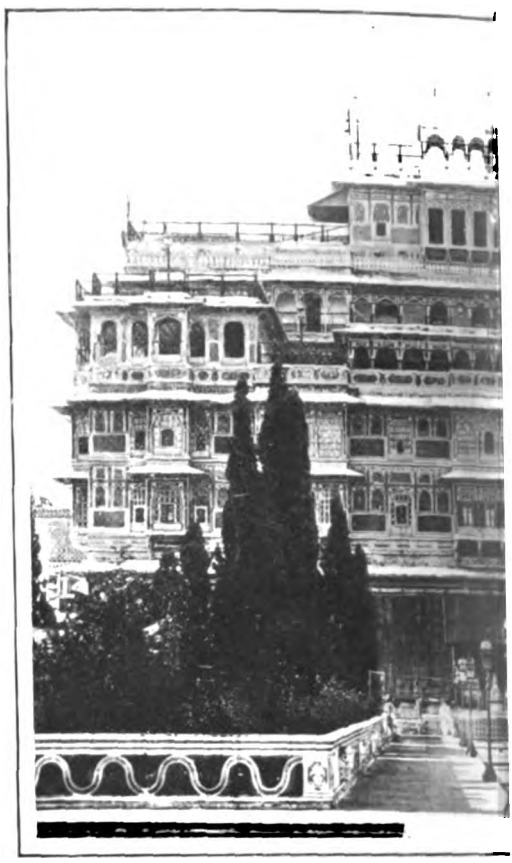
A RACE-COURSE IN THE HILLS.

The new race-course and polo-ground at Mussoorie, artificially constructed on the edge of a steep descent, is a very picturesque feature of the station.



A FAVOURITE HILL STATION.

Next to Simla, and by some preferred to it, perhaps the most popular hot-weather resort is Mussoorie, here seen from the Library.



A MAHARAJA'

This is the Chandra Mahal, the centre building in the [illegible]

A BIT OF

Amber, the former capital of Jaipur, is [illegible] Royal [illegible]

(From copyright [illegible]

Digitized by Google

ERN INDIA.

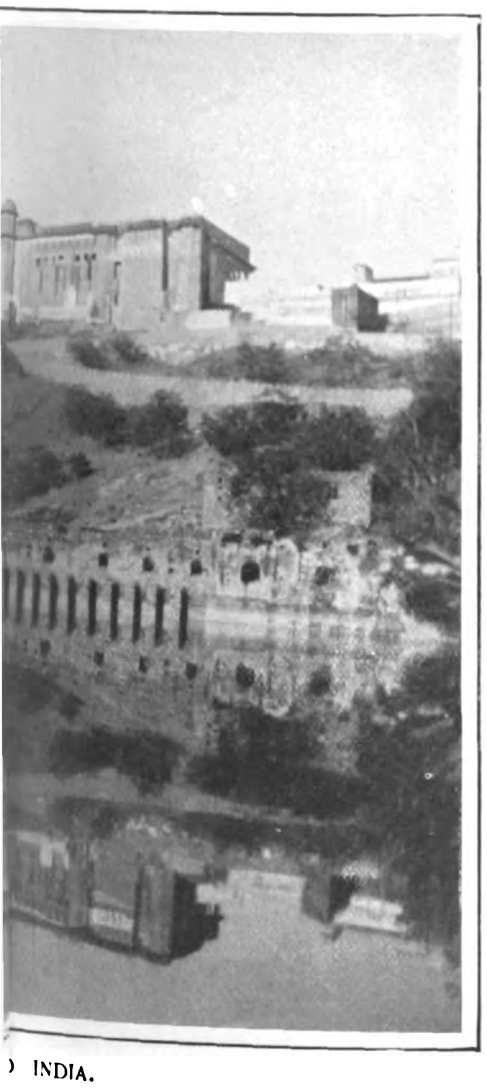
PALACE.

Jaipur. To the left dwell 500 ladies of the household



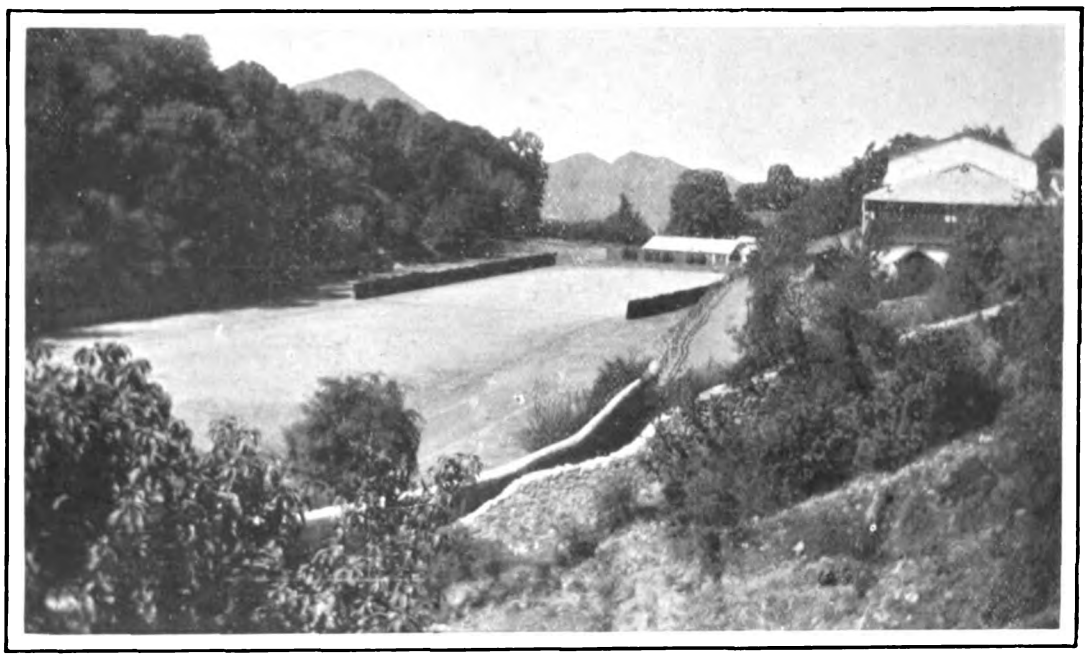
INDIA.

been mentioned by Ptolemy The picture shows the beautiful lake.

(Photo by Lady Lawson.)

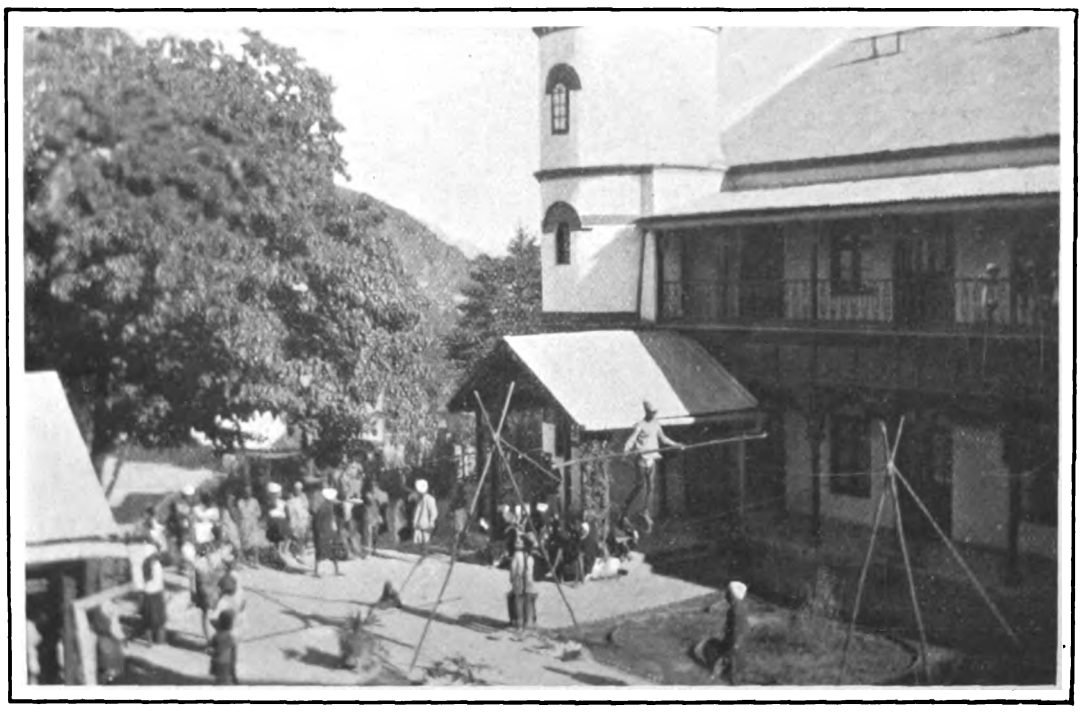
A MODERN NATIVE CITY.

This is a street scene in the latter-day capital of Jaipur, a prosperous independent State in Rajputana. The ekkas, or native carts, are the popular vehicles of Northern India.



"THE HAPPY VALLEY."

In the buildings and grounds devoted to recreation and rest at Mussoorie we have, indeed, a striking contrast to the "Unhappy Valley" of arid and exhausting Sind.



A DIFFICULT PERFORMANCE.

A native acrobat, not content with ordinary difficulties, rope-walking with horns on his feet in the courtyard of the Savoy Hotel, Mussoorie.

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

A HOLIDAY IN WALES.

Maclardie.

ON THE OUTSKIRTS OF ABERDOVEY.

A view on the road to Machynlleth, showing the estuary of the Dovey and the Cardiganshire shore opposite. The Cambrian line follows the course of the river for some distance on its way to Machynlleth.

DESPITE shorter and cooler days, the autumn is an ideal time of year for touring in this country. The great majority of holiday-makers having returned to their homes, we no longer have to fight and scramble for our favourite corner seat, nor engage rooms so many weeks in advance. Travel, in whatever shape or form, is far more comfortable now than a month or six weeks ago; while the country-side has certainly lost none of its beauty. If, then, it is simply a question of where to go, why not choose Wales? The Cambrian Coast, by reason of its mild and equable climate, is specially adapted to holiday-making at this season. The tempering influence of the Gulf Stream is naturally far more apparent here than elsewhere around the English Coast. Along the shores of Cardigan Bay, that vast expanse of sea stretching for a hundred miles or so from Bardsey Island in the north to St. David's Head in the south, are dotted innumerable seaport towns and fishing villages, in any one of which a most enjoyable holiday can be spent. Equally accessible from the North, the South, or the Midlands, the watering-places of the West Coast of Wales are admirably served by the enterprising Cambrian Railways. Aberystwyth, Aberdovey, Barmouth, and Pwllheli are four of the chief centres whence to explore the attractive scenery of Central and North Wales. It is not generally known, perhaps, that the autumn and winter temperature of some of these West Coast towns is as mild as that of even Torquay and Bournemouth, nor that so eminent an authority as Sir James Clarke once declared that a fortnight in Aberystwyth was as good as a month in most other watering-places.

Photochrom.

ABERYSTWYTH FROM CONSTITUTION HILL.

A comprehensive view of this famous Welsh watering-place, showing the extensive promenade and the hills which shelter the town from cold winds. Aberystwyth is resorted to in winter and summer alike by visitors, who so often have compared its fine bracing sea breezes with those of Biarritz.

But it is not merely as a health resort that Aberystwyth has acquired its present fame. The history of the town affords most interesting reading. From the Norman invasion down to the time of Owen Glyndwr, a period of nearly 400 years, Aberystwyth was the scene of incessant bloodshed and destruction, and it is questionable whether any spot in Wales can boast of such a record of frightful carnage. The castle, which forms one of its chief attractions, dates back nearly a thousand years, and in the long-fought-out struggles for supremacy in Wales was taken and retaken times without number.

Country footpaths and lanes, jealously guarded by the Footpaths' Association, lead in almost every direction; besides which there are abundant facilities for driving and coaching excursions to more distant places of interest. The drive from Aberystwyth to the Devil's Bridge forms a pleasant day's outing. There is not an uninteresting mile the whole way. Mountain, valley, forest, and torrent are charmingly blended. The bridge—or, to be more accurate, the bridges, for there are two, one above the other—is one of the most remarkable sights in Wales, and once seen will not easily be forgotten.

Digitized by Google

Wordsworth, who visited this spot in 1824, has left on record his impression of the scene in a poem. A longer drive, involving some thirty odd miles of coaching, is to Llyfnant Valley, remarkable for its sylvan beauties and pretty cascades. Numerous other splendid trips by rail and coach, occupying a day or half a day, may be made: To Talybont, where Taliesin, chief of the Arthurian Bards, was buried; to Craigypistyll, the Artist's Valley, and Borth, with its golf links and fine sandy shore. At Strata Florida are the remains of a fine old Cistercian Monastery, which, until a few years ago, lay hidden amidst an accumulation of farmyard refuse. The abbey, or rather the remaining portions, dates back to the twelfth century, at which time it formed perhaps one of the grandest monastic institutions in the country. In another direction a delightful coach drive by the coast can be taken to Aberayron, where good fishing is to be had. A short run on the Cambrian line takes us to Machynlleth and the Dovey Valley. From here we can explore the picturesque Corris Valley, by means of a light railway which runs alongside the road for the greater part of the way. Those who wish can continue the journey by coach from Corris to Talyllyn Lake, passing the lofty height of Cader Idris on the way.

On his way to Barmouth the visitor will pass through Aberdovey, standing on the north side of the Dovey, an ideal spot for a quiet, restful holiday. There is a splendid stretch of sand, five or six miles long, upon which the younger members of the party can amuse themselves in perfect safety. Boating may be indulged in on the estuary, and the golfer is also amply provided for. Like Aberystwyth, it enjoys a very mild winter climate—so mild, in fact, that the myrtle flourishes out of doors all the year round. Towyn, the next town of importance on the coast, is fast becoming fashionable. Towyn simply teems with antiquity. A cave can be visited along the shore which tradition has assigned to one of the most eventful passages in the life of Owen Glyndwr. Here it was, according to the legend, that he took refuge in the depth of his adversity.

Of late years Barmouth has become exceedingly popular, and no wonder, considering its accessibility for so many interesting places. Snowdon, Beddgelert, Cader Idris, and Dolgelley, are all within the compass of a single day's outing by means of the Cambrian Railways' combined rail and coach excursions. When Wordsworth visited Barmouth in 1824, he says he "took boat and rowed up its sublime estuary, which may compare with the finest in Scotland. . . . With a fine sea view in front, the mountains behind, 'the glorious estuary' running five or six miles inland, and Cader Idris within compass of a day's walk, Barmouth can always hold its own against any rival." The town has, of course, undergone many changes and improvements since Wordsworth visited it. New hotels have been built, while the coaching and railway facilities leave little to be desired. Boating and bathing are much indulged in, though the great charm of Barmouth is found in its splendid walks and drives and incomparable mountain scenery. To mention only a few, there are the Panorama Walk, with its magnificent views, Arthog, Llwyngwril, a typical Welsh village between Towyn and Barmouth, Corsygedol, and Harlech Castle, the most conspicuous object on the Welsh Coast, about eight miles' drive from Barmouth. Fairbourne, a pleasant little village on the south side of the mouth of the Mawddach, facing Cardigan Bay, is rapidly growing in favour. It is only three miles from Barmouth, and boasts, among other attractions, some very beautiful scenery. The sands form the playground for some hundreds of children, who can play and dig and wade the day long without the least fear of danger. There is a good sporting nine-hole golf course close to the shore (temporary members are enrolled at a reasonable charge); in addition, there are three tennis courts, also close to the shore, open to visitors. It should be noted that Fairbourne is a convenient point whence to make the ascent of Cader Idris, which can be made by descending into Dolgelley, and back by train, or descending from Cader to Abergonolwyn, past Tal-y-dyn Lake, and back through Towyn.

Copyright C.N.

A PICTURESQUE WELSH WATERWAY.

At the estuary of the river Maw stands Barmouth, or Abermawddoch, one of the most attractive seaside resorts on the coast of Cardigan Bay. As an excursion centre Barmouth offers special facilities, Snowdon, Dolgelley, and Cader Idris all being within an easy day's journey.

Digitized by Google

THE CRICKET SEASON.

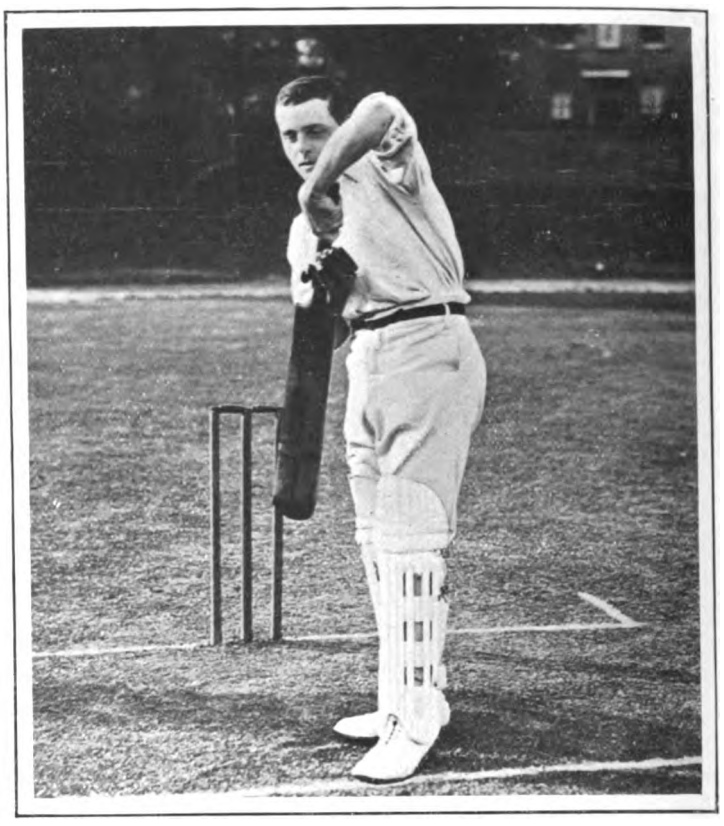
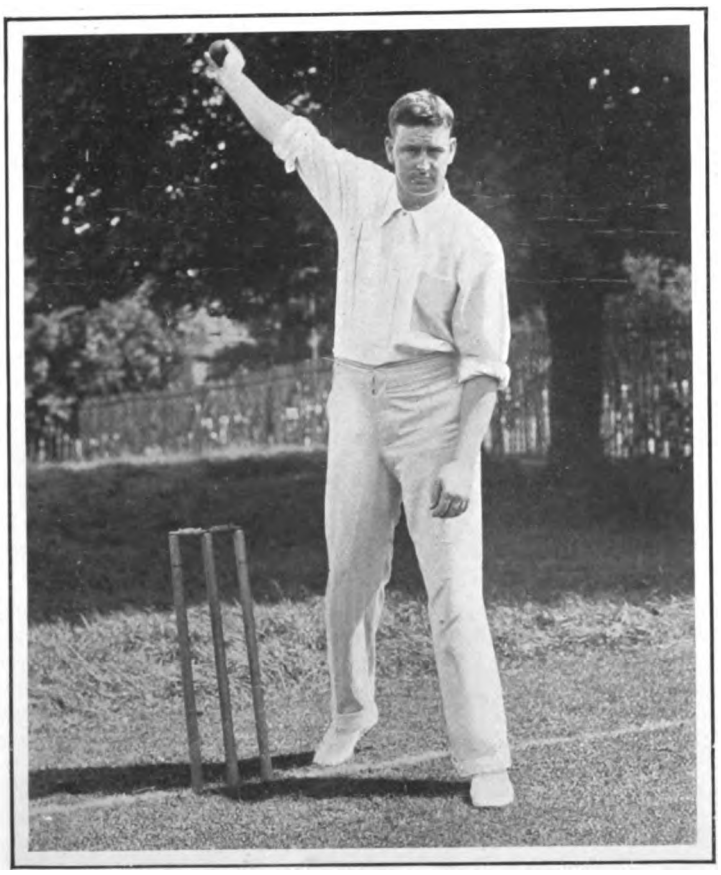
HEAP.

County cricket has seen nothing like the best of this promising young cricketer yet. It was thought that he would be a capable substitute for Hallows, who is the victim of very poor health; but although Heap has done well by fits and starts, he has not this season been of nearly so much use to Lancashire as Hallows was in his exceptional 1904 season. Heap is very young, and as his fielding is first-class, and his left-hand bowling and batting of the type which does not exhaust, he should be one of the mainstays of Lancashire in, say, 1915.



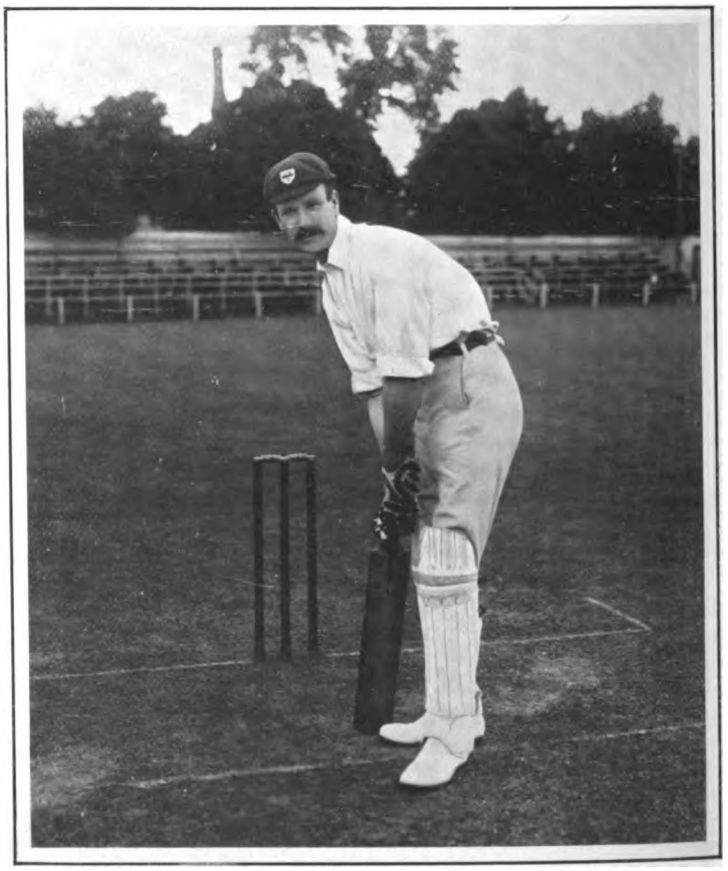
SHARP.

The George Hirst of Lancashire, but that he bowls right as well as bats right, has been in great batting form this season. As an Association football-player, whose clubs are Everton and England, he is, of course, fit as a fiddle when the cricket season comes round. He still gets wickets when the pitch allows him to get some bounce out of it; but for his batting alone he is worth his place in any County Eleven in the country. He is still young, and bids fair to become one of the best bats of his county.



KERMODE.

The same reason which cut short Tom Richardson's first-class cricket career may stop this fine bowler when he should still have several seasons' cricket in him. He is growing too bulky. The tendency to increase of the "too too solid" must be subdued. Kermode has the most workmanlike delivery of any bowler, and with it he makes the ball work in on to the batsman in a wonderful manner at times. He, like Brearley, revels in the sporting wickets of the North, but their wickets are more expensive in the South.



BOWLEY.

Worcestershire cricket at once calls to mind the Foster family; indeed, the county has been nicknamed Fostershire, as a Foster is generally captain or chief run-getter of the side. But much assistance is generally forthcoming from the subject of this photograph, a sterling good batsman who recently scored over 200 runs against Leicestershire, and will very likely go in first for Worcestershire for many years to come. There is nothing very striking about Bowley's cricket, save his bat, but his runs are well got in a quiet, business-like way, for all that.

Digitized by Google

ACTRESSES AT HOME.

XVIII.—MISS GERTIE THORNTON.

MISS THORNTON AT HER HOME AT BARNES.

To enumerate Miss Thornton's occupations off the stage would be to give a list of almost every useful accomplishment and every healthy pastime known. Music and sewing mainly occupy her time indoors, cycling, golf, and gardening outside the house. Miss Thornton and her sisters are all on the stage, and all, curiously enough, owe their introduction to the foothights to Mr. Seymour Hicks. At present Miss Gertie Thornton is appearing in "Lady Madcap" at the Prince of Wales's.

(From copyright photographs specially taken for this paper.)

Digitized by Google

VOLUNTEERS UNDER CANVAS.

VOLUNTEER ENGINEERS AT WORK.

(1) Colonel E. T. Cliff rd, Officer Commanding the 1st Middlesex Royal Engineers (Vols.). (2) The explosion of a fougasse. These blind mines are formed by an inclined hole in the ground, into which a charge of explosive has been inserted, and covered with earth, stones, broken glass, and old iron. It can be exploded either electrically or by instantaneous fuse. (3) Captain and Hon. Major H. H. Taylor, Acting Adjutant 1st Middlesex Royal Engineers (Vols.). (4) Laying foundations for a hut. (5) A hut half completed. These huts are built for housing men in the absence of tent accommodation. (6) The frames of a trestle sling bridge in position. Constructed during the recent camp by Captain Mackenzie of the Royal Indian Engineering College, Coo er's Hill, and a portion of his company. (7) Constructing the frame for a sling bridge.

(From copyright photographs specially taken for this paper.)

Digitized by Google

THE FIRST MIDDLESEX AT CLACTON.

BRIDGE BUILDING AND TRENCH DIGGING.

(1) A trestle bridge constructed to carry infantry in fours, by Captain Marsh and his company, D. (2) Digging a firing trench to give cover to men standing. It is 3-ft. deep, 3-ft. wide, and has an 18-in. parapet. In digging the trench, each man has to excavate a certain amount, the task allotted being 5-ft. along the line, and this portion has to be finished, with parapet and elbow rest, in three hours. (3) The camp kitchens, showing the ovens where the meals are cooked. The ovens are made of clay, lined with sheet-iron, and are used for the cooking of every sort of food. Bread also can be baked in them if necessary. (4) Raising the frame of a bridge. (5) Suspension bridge built to carry infantry in file. Constructed by Captain Montefiore and Lieutenant Page with a portion of their companies, G and F. The bridge spans a distance of 100-ft., and is 7-ft. 6-in. wide. The roadway rests in slings suspended by steel cables, which are "anchored" into the ground to a considerable depth. The bridge, the frames of which are constructed mainly of larch spars, was completely finished and fit for the passage of troops in three days.

Digitized by Google

Pirates and Piracy.

THE BUCCANEERS OF THE SPANISH MAIN AND THEIR EVENTFUL HISTORIES.

THERE is a peculiar glamour surrounding the name of pirate to-day, which did not exist in the days when Morgan and Partuguez, John Davis and Bartholomew Roberts were in the flesh, and roaming the Spanish Main in search of blood and treasure. In his heart of hearts every Englishman feels a certain sympathy with the daring ill-doers of the past, and whatever may have been their crimes (and they were various and numerous), they live in history beside the greatest heroes the British Navy has known.

We recognise to-day that Paul Jones was far from being the "black pirate" his contemporaries considered him. But it is largely to the halo of romance thrown round his name in the days when he first became a public character that his lasting popularity is due. In contradistinction, however, to this pseudo-pirate, there are some very genuine and very real exponents of the art of buccaneering whose names are well known.

Thanks to the way he has been exploited by novelists, Captain Kidd, perhaps the most despicable of the gang, is the most popular; but a much more famous man, and a far greater leader of men, was Henry Morgan, cabin boy, slave, pirate, admiral of the buccaneer fleet, and ultimately knight and Governor of Jamaica. A Welshman by birth, and a seaman by inclination, he was but a lad when he left home for the Isle of Barbados, where when he arrived he found, as many a common seaman did in those days, that he had been sold to a slave-owner. To the plantations, therefore, he went, and at the end of his time, penniless, aimless, and with the strength of an ox, he fell in with the buccaneers of Jamaica, and cast in his lot with them. Five years later the then admiral of the buccaneer fleet, Mansvelt, who was growing old, was casting about for a successor. In young Henry Morgan he found the man he wanted, and to the command of fifteen large ships, manned by 500 cut-throats, the youngster succeeded a very few months later.

That was the commencement of Morgan's palmy period. First El Puerto del Principe was attacked and sacked, but the monetary success attending the expedition was too small to satisfy some of his followers, and they left him. But with a much-reduced force he sacked Porto Bello, the last place that one would have expected even so daring a leader as Morgan to pit himself against. For it was stoutly defended, and two strong forts had to be captured before the attacking force could get near the town itself; and yet so complete were Morgan's dispositions that in one day he stormed and captured the whole town. Not only this, but within a week of it he ambushed and destroyed an overwhelming force that was sent against him from Panama. The loot from this expedition has been estimated at 250,000 pieces of eight in ready money, and large quantities of silks, linen, and other merchandise.

SIR HENRY MORGAN

The greatest of the pirates who infested the Spanish Main in the seventeenth century. He subsequently abandoned his companions and, being made Governor of Jamaica, used all his efforts to suppress the trade by which he had made his fortune.

After Porto Bello, Morgan contented himself for some years with amassing wealth by means of small, detached expeditions; but at last, egged on by his followers, he embarked on the undertaking that was to prove his crowning achievement and his undoing. The sacking of Panama is one of the most ghastly stories in the history of buccaneering. At the head of 1,200 men Morgan set out from Chagre, on January 18, 1671. For nine days the force made its way through country absolutely denuded of every form of life and every means of sustaining life. Warned of their approach, the Spaniards had attempted to starve the buccaneers into abandonment of their scheme. Yet, though reduced to eating leather bags, gnawing the bark of trees, and almost to devouring each other, the force pushed on. At last, dishevelled, famished, and in no condition to have stomach for a fight, they arrived before an unguarded part of the city, thanks to the cunning of one of their guides. Yet one may well believe the inimitable Esquemeling, whose book is still the standard life of Morgan, when he says, "Few or none there were but wished themselves at home, or at least free from the obligation of that engagement, wherein they perceived their lives must be so narrowly concerned." Yet they fought and dispersed a force of 400 horse and 2,400 infantry, of whom they killed some 600. Morgan's losses, too, were heavy, but the booty was enormous. However, Morgan was too domineering; he tried to grab more than his just share, and then escaped the vengeance his followers had vowed to take by vanishing quietly one night and going over to the British Government. He was made Lieutenant-Governor of Jamaica, suppressed piracy with all the force he had formerly devoted to its cause, and lived to a ripe old age, a knight and full Governor of the island.

ANN MILLS

One of the famous woman-pirates.

His career is typical of that of all the others. Horror and rapine, lust for treasure, battle, murder, and sudden death—that was the creed of the ragged outlaws of the sea, a strange, rude race, waifs and strays of every civilised country, who roamed the Spanish Main in the seventeenth century, owing allegiance only to the strongest man among them.

With the beginning of the eighteenth century they were scattered far and wide. Some, like Roberts and Davis, made for the West Coast of Africa, others passed from the West to the East Indies, and there preyed upon the merchant ships of "John Company." Their lives make picturesque reading nowadays; but they were too serious a nuisance to be considered picturesque in the days when the nations of Europe were too busy flying at each other's throats to police the seas properly. H. C. F.

Digitized by Google

SOME FAMOUS PIRATES OF THE PAST.

BUCCANEERS OF THE 17TH AND 18TH CENTURIES.

(1) Captain George Lowther, the Pirate of Matique, at Port Mayo, where he had his headquarters. (2) Captain Edward Low in the hurricane in which he and all the crew had like to have perished. (3) Captain Bartholomew Roberts, who met his death off the coast of Africa in 1720, being killed in action with the "Swallow" (50), commanded by Captain Chaloner Ogle. (4) Captain Edward England, a famous pirate of the Morgan period. (5) Captain Teach, otherwise known as "Blackbeard," from the imitation beard of horsehair he wore to frighten his victims. The house which he made his headquarters in Florida is still standing. (6) Captain Avery, an Indian Ocean pirate, who is here depicted at the taking of one of the Great Mogul's ships.

Digitized by Google

THE RACING SEASON.

A BUSY racing week commenced with the well-attended meeting at Wolverhampton, and the principal event of the day, the Wolverhampton Handicap, fell to Mr. M. Fitzgerald's Mr. Delamere (7-st. 5-lb.), who challenged at the distance, and won easily by three lengths from Braunberg (7-st. 1-lb.) and Sun Bonnet (8-st.). On the following day interest was mainly centred in the Staffordshire Breeders' Foal Plate of 427-sovs. Odds of 7 to 4 were freely laid on the filly by Fortunio out of Sedately, and she justified the appreciation of her supporters by getting well away when the barrier went up, and remaining in front all the way. She eventually finished three-quarters of a length in front of Mr. W. G. Stevens's colt by Teutel out of Your Grace, with Our Favourite third, half a length away. It will be remembered that the winner was only beaten by a head in the British Dominion Two Year Old Race at Sandown Park, and it is rather curious that her dam was the only thorough-bred mare sent to Fortunio in 1902. A very pleasant day's racing ended with the victory of Savernake in the Dudley Mile Maiden Plate, and the name of the winner lends emphasis to the fact that, bad as it is when owners will not name their horses at all, it is infinitely worse if they will persist in bestowing upon them the name of some great race-horse of bygone days.

For the last two or three years much money has been spent in improving the surroundings of the old-fashioned Stockton Meeting, and the executive may well be proud of the result of their labours. Last year they provided the new weighing-rooms, jockeys' dressing-rooms, and effected great improvements in the paddocks, and now, with the recent addition of the admirably-constructed grand stand, they may justly claim that there is no better-equipped or more completely up-to-date race-course in the kingdom. It is just fifty years ago since the first meeting was held at Stockton, and to celebrate the Jubilee Meeting a new race, by the name of the Stockton Races' Jubilee Cup, figured on the programme, and in addition to the 700-sovs. attached to the race itself, a silver trophy was provided for the trainer of the winner, whose rider was presented with a pleasant souvenir in the shape of a gold mounted whip. Proceedings began, in the presence of a capital attendance, with the Trial All-Aged Selling Plate, which went to Avebury, 8-st. 11-lb., being his fourth consecutive victory, but he had all his work cut out to shake off the attention of the two year old, Ignorance, 6-st. 6-lb., and only just got home by a short head. Randall rode a pretty race in the Wynyard Plate of 537-sovs., which he won for Mr. D. Jardine on the colt by Rightaway out of Cydaria, from Cyclops Too and Bellerophon. Captain Laing won the Stockton Handicap with Antonio, who was followed home by Swooper and Tamasha. There was plenty of cheering for the popular colours of Lord Londonderry when it was seen that St. Florentin had the Great Northern Leger within his keeping, and he won his race like a thorough stayer, having no difficulty in beating Liao by a good length and a-half. Curiously enough, the entries for the Stockton Races' Jubilee Cup were exactly fifty in number, but only eight of them took part in the race itself. The meeting of His Majesty, 4-yrs. old, 9-st. 5-lb., Almscliff, of the same age, with 9-st. 9-lb., and Bachelor's Button, 6-yrs. old, 10-st. 2-lb., promised to be interesting. Speculators would not be stalled off His Majesty, who started favourite at 11 to 10, and justified his position by winning by a neck after a most exciting race home with Outbreak, 3-yrs. old, 8-st., with Lord Londonderry's White Star Line beaten into third place by two lengths, the stakes and the cup thus going to Lord Derby, Mr. Lambton, the trainer, receiving the silver cup, and Maher the gold-mounted whip, given by the executive of the meeting as souvenirs of the event. Those bold betters who laid 6 to 4 on Ulalume for the Hardwicke Stakes must have felt very uneasy during the race, for Higgs on Nurang was within an ace of bringing off a 10 to 1 chance, and it was only by a neck that Martin staved off defeat on the favourite. Another tremendous finish was fought out between Lord Derby's colt by St. Frusquin out of Eugenia and Farasi in the Lambton Two Year Old Stakes, the former of the two winning by the shortest of heads in the very last stride.

The last day of the meeting was perhaps the best, as far as the character of the sport provided was concerned, and once more convincing proof has been forthcoming that the public are quick to appreciate real efforts to provide for their comfort and convenience. John Porter, who will in future devote most of his time and energy to the management of the new race-course at Newbury, sent out Polymelus to run for the Durham County Produce Stakes, and the son of Cyllene, improving on his position of third behind Xeny and Thrush in the Stewards' Cup, won the race by a length from Banana and Sauterelle. The defeat of Snow Glory by Athi in the Elton Two Year Old Plate was totally unexpected, and the running of the loser is clearly not correct. Randall got Craigellachie home a neck in front of Scarem after a most exciting finish for the Middlesbrough Welter Handicap, which brought to a conclusion one of the best race-meetings of the season.

CAUKIRE.

W. A. Rouch.

MR. KENNEDY'S FORTUNIO

Sire of the Sedately filly, winner of the Staffordshire Breeders' Foal Plate.

W. A. Rouch.

H. RANDALL ON HIS TRACK.

This ex-amateur jockey has been riding in very good form lately.

Digitized by Google

AT THE ZOO.

SOME POPULAR INMATES AT REGENT'S PARK.

(1) A tame hornbill. (2) A doubtful visitor. (3) Egyptian and African pelicans. (4) The last of the king penguins. (5) An Egyptian pelican. (6) The lion presented by Menelik to King Edward. (7) The kinkajou, a species of racoon.

(From copyright photographs by Mr. Lewis Longfield.

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

CASES of literary ability descending from parent to child are not very numerous, though, indeed, in the lives of most remarkable men it will be found that they owed a great part, if not all, of their genius to their mothers. But it is rare for two generations of the same family to produce authors. Thackeray's daughter is a well-known novelist, Mrs. Richmond Ritchie; Edward Bulwer-Lytton was the father of Owen Meredith; Hartley Coleridge was the son of Samuel Taylor Coleridge; Nathaniel Hawthorne has a less famous son, Mr. Julian Hawthorne; Sir George Trevelyan has a son, Mr. W. B. Trevelyan, who may be as famous as his father some day. A leading instance is that of the two Alexandre Dumas, père et fils; and Aubrey de Vere's father was the author of certain works. We might add that Hazlitt's grandson has inherited, if not his grandfather's genius, at least his love of literature. But the younger Pliny was only the nephew of the elder Pliny; and looking up and down the records of literary history we find few men or women of any eminence, or even popularity, who were the sons or daughters of authors; indeed, it is surprising to find in how many cases the fathers and mothers of authors were people of a very unliterary turn of mind.

Fathers and Sons.

* * *

BUT there is an interesting case just now to the fore, of a very able mother and a son who promises to be as eminent. We refer to Miss Braddon (Mrs. Maxwell) and her son, Mr. W. B. Maxwell. How long is it since Miss Braddon began to write novels? And how many books has she put out since the day her first was published — books which have never achieved greatness, but have interested hundreds and thousands of people who remember them and read them to this day with gratitude? Miss Braddon's vast popularity is the result of honest good work, of good stories, well conceived, and well told. She never "played to gallery" by shrieking at the vices of people whose doors were closed to her; she never blew her own trumpet, nor set up for a spiritual and moral guide with more authority than the churches. She thought of a story and wrote it, and her clean, sweet sentiment, vivid imagination, and gift for story-stelling won her an honoured position, which the collected re-issues of her works prove to be yet unimpaired. Her son, Mr. W. B. Maxwell, came suddenly to the fore a year or two ago with "The Ragged Messenger," and has lately published (with Messrs. Methuen) a new novel, "Vivien," which is full of good work. It tells of a girl of good family but with no means, who is forced to serve in shops for her livelihood; of her hardships and temptations; her persecution by unprincipled men; and her final release by marriage by her fairy prince—"the richest bachelor in the peerage" and a duke. Something of a fairy story? Perhaps, but not too fantastically so for truth. We think Mr. Maxwell too hard on his own sex; but no one can read his account of life in a small draper's shop without being deeply moved by such a picture of the sufferings and trials of a sorely-tried and estimable class of women workers. "Vivien" is a powerful and striking book, which, in spite of its length, holds the attention riveted from cover to cover.

Miss Braddon and Mr. W. B. Maxwell.

* * *

BATH is to be the scene of interesting commemorative celebrations both in September and October. On the 2nd inst. M. René Huchon of Nancy is to unveil the bronze tablet which the Bath Corporation dedicates to the memory of the poets Crabbe, Moore, and Bowles, all of them members of the Bath Literary Institute (where the memorial very appropriately is to be placed), as well as of the coterie of poets who, three-quarters of a century ago, were frequently guests at Bowood. M. Huchon's great work on Crabbe is now complete, and will, in all probability, be produced early next year by Mr. John Murray, the successor of Crabbe's friend and publisher. On the occasion of this interesting ceremony a luncheon will be given by Mr. George Gregory of Bath, bookseller to Queen Alexandra. A collection of unique Crabbe MSS. and other relics will be exhibited during the day. On October 12 a Shakespearian performance by Mr. Benson has been arranged by the lessee, Mr. Egbert Lewis, J.P., in honour of the centenary of the opening of the Bath Theatre. "Richard III." was played in 1805, and will be given also in 1905.

The Bath Celebrations.

* * *

MR. W. J. ROBERTS has just published with Mr. Werner Laurie a chatty and pleasant little book on "The Literary Landmarks of Torquay." Mr. Roberts knows his subject well, and it must be admitted that, for a place which a century ago was little more than a fishing village, Torquay has a very respectable literary history. It begins with William Pengelly, the great geologist, who explored Kent's Cavern. He came to Torquay in 1835, an obscure young schoolmaster; he died there famous in 1894. The next name of importance is that of Elizabeth Barrett (Browning), who went there under her doctor's orders, a sickly but high-spirited girl, in 1838; and it was during her stay there that her brother Edward was drowned while sailing in Babbacombe Bay. The shock nearly killed the young poetess. She worked hard to distract her mind, but when she left the place in 1841 it was with feelings of intense relief. Other names of men of letters who visited Torquay are Tennyson, who went there in 1838, and founded his poem of "Audley Court" on Tor Abbey, the beautiful old Cary house with the barn where the prisoners from the Spanish Armada were confined; J. A. Froude, who was instituted as curate at St. Mary's Church in 1847; Daniel Macmillan, the founder of the great firm of publishers; and Disraeli, who came there to visit Mrs. Bridges Willyams, the lady who left him all her money. Next we have Charles Kingsley, whose connection with Torquay is well known. He wrote "Glaucus" there after studying the pools in the rocks at Livermead, and was boycotted by the prim folks of the place as the author of "Alton Locke" and "Yeast." We have not space to continue the list, and can merely mention the names of Lytton, Miss Christabel Coleridge, Miss Yonge, Mr. W. E. Norris, and Mr. Eden Phillpotts. Several others, however, will be found in Mr. Roberts's interesting little book.

Literary Torquay.

Russell.

MR. W. B. MAXWELL

The novelist. Mr. Maxwell, who is the son of Miss Braddon (Mrs. Maxwell), has just published with Messrs. Methuen a striking and powerful novel, under the title of "Vivien."

* * *

"GRETNA GREEN" has become so much of a proverb, that we have even heard people question whether there ever was such a place, and whether "marriages" were really celebrated there. The questions are fully answered in an entertaining little book by "Claverhouse," called "Gretna Green and its Traditions" (Paisley: A. Gardner), who need not have apologised for his work so humbly as he does in his preface. "Claverhouse" tells you where Gretna Green is, and how it came to be the scene of so many clandestine marriages. Before Lord Hardwicke's Act against irregular marriages was passed in 1754, there were, as all students of old London know, a score or more of "criminous clerks" and other evil-disposed persons in the Fleet and in Mayfair, who made their living by these clandestine or supposititious unions. When the Act put an end to the trade, it became necessary to cross the border, and so came the form of Gretna Green. The first marriage there appears to have taken place just about the time of the Act, perhaps a little before; and elopements are still hallowed, as "Claverhouse" tells us, at the famous spot—Scotch marriages, however, and those mostly of runaway farm servants and so forth. "Claverhouse" gives an account of the "priests" of Gretna Green, past and present, and his little book is full of quaint and amusing information. It is also excellently illustrated from photographs and prints, and may be confidently recommended.

Gretna Green.

* * *

THE name of Max Adeler—what hilarity, what aching jaws and streaming eyes does it not imply! But let no one fly to "The Quakeress," Max Adeler's new novel, in the hope of laughter. Max Adeler, it must be remembered, has turned serious, very serious, and though his new novel has a certain quiet peace and gentleness about it, it is but a commonplace and ill-constructed story. Strangest of all, what humour there is in it is exactly its weakest point.

Readers Beware!

BOOKS TO READ.

Shakespeare's Christmas, and Other Stories, by "Q" (A. T. Quiller-Couch). (Smith, Elder.)
Knock at a Venture, by Eden Phillpotts. (Methuen.)
Driven, by Margaret Watson. (Unwin.)
Twisted Eglantine, by H. B. Marriott Watson. (Methuen.)
My Friend the Chauffeur, by C. N. and A. M. Williamson. (Methuen.)
The New Minister, by Orme Agnus. (Ward, Lock.)
John Henry Smith, a Golfing Romance, by F. U. Adams. (Hutchinson.)
Alton of Somasco, by Harold Bindloss. (Long.)
Confessions of a Ladies' Man, by William Le Queux (Hutchinson.)
Fighting Ships, by F. T. Jane. 1905-6. (Sampson Low.)
Great Batsmen, by G. W. Beldam and C. B. Fry. (Macmillan.)
Canterbury (Ancient Cities), by J. Charles Cox, LL.D., F.S.A. Illustrated by B. C. Boulter. (Methuen.)
Some Famous Women of Wit and Beauty, by John Fyvie. (Constable.)

Digitized by Google

TEN

DAYS

The Art of Being Certain.

The successful man does not "SUPPOSE," he KNOWS, because he takes the trouble to FIND OUT.

When he is a bit "out of fix" he says, "Something is wrong with my food."

Then he proceeds to KNOW by leaving off greasy meats, pasty, sticky and starchy half-cooked wheat and oats, white bread and pastry, and adopting a plain, nourishing diet.

Many men who really KNOW use a little cooked fruit, a dish of ready-cooked, pre-digested GRAPE-NUTS and cream or milk, two soft eggs and a cup of our hot POSTUM FOOD COFFEE; nothing more. The result is CERTAIN in quick relief from trouble and a return to health.

"There's a Reason."

Grape-Nuts

Grape-Nuts Co., Ltd., 66 & 67, Shoe Lane, London, E.C.

MODES.

MAISON LEWIS,

16, Rue Royale, PARIS.

Entrance, 422, Rue St. Honoré.

Place du Casino, MONTE CARLO.
7, Place de la Mairie, BIARRITZ.

210, Regent Street, LONDON. W.

ARE YOU ALIVE

to the fact that thousands of people who were inveterate smokers of extensively advertised cheap paper cigarettes (which are so harmful to the health) have discontinued same, and are now smoking

FLOR DE DINDIGUL

CIGARETTES (All Tobacco Leaf—No Paper).

They are far more satisfying, mild, delightful in flavour, pure, and last much longer than ordinary paper cigarettes. Doctors strongly recommend them. These delightful Whiffs are on sale everywhere, 1d. each, 8/- per 100. Awarded 10 Gold Medals for Excellence.

Importer: BEWLAY, 49, STRAND, LONDON.
Established 125 Years.

7/10ths of ALL

Your little ills will find relief in

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

For HEADACHE,
For BILIOUSNESS,
For INDIGESTION,
For TORPID LIVER,
For CONSTIPATION,
For SALLOW SKIN,
For the COMPLEXION.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

Very small, and easy to take as sugar. Purely Vegetable.

Genuine must have signature

PRICE 13½d.

Brent Good

HIGHEST QUALITY
TURKISH TOWELS
AND SIMILAR GOODS.

SOFT AND ABSORBENT.

THE "OSMAN" TURKISH TOWEL.
THE "OSMAN" TURKISH BATH SHEET.
THE "OSMAN" TURKISH BATH MAT.
THE "OSMAN" TURKISH BATH GOWN.

THE "OSMAN" Turkish Goods enumerated here are an absolute necessity in every household. They are a luxury, but not expensive, and can be obtained at prices within reach of every one. Be sure to buy the "Osman" brand and avoid imitations.

Made by BARLOW & JONES LIMITED, MANCHESTER;

And Sold by all High-class Drapers and Upholsterers.

PRICE'S CANDLES.

GOLD MEDAL PALMITINE
FOR DINING & DRAWING ROOMS

GRAND PRIZE PARASTRINE
FOR USE UNDER SHADES

Digitized by Google

A Holiday in Scotland.

BY THE MIDLAND ROUTE TO THE NORTH.

Photochrom.

THE TWO BRIDGES, DUMFRIES.

The older, consisting of six arches, seen in the foreground, was built in the thirteenth century, and is now merely used by foot passengers between Dumfries and its suburb Maxwelltown. In Burns Street is the house where the great poet died in 1796.

IT would indeed be difficult to suggest a more delightful way of spending a week or a fortnight at this season than a trip to Scotland. The "Midland" is perhaps one of the most interesting of the three routes to travel by so far as scenic attraction and comfort of travel are concerned; while in the matter of speed and comfort it certainly holds its own. The run from London to Carlisle, the ancient border town, is accomplished in a little over six hours by the Midland expresses, and from this point the journey to Edinburgh is viâ the North British Waverley route, and to Glagow by the Glasgow and South Western Line; the Midland trains running through intact to both cities, drawn by the Scotch companies engines. En route to Glasgow and Greenock, the trains pass through the district made famous by the poet Burns, more generally known as the "Land of Burns." Dumfries contains many memorials of the poet, including the house in which he lived after leaving Ellesland in 1791, where he wrote "Auld Lang Syne." Here also is the house in which he died, and the mausoleum in the churchyard of St. Michael. A branch line connects Dumfries with Portpatrick, on the coast, passing through much of the scenery made famous by Scott in his romance of "Guy Mannering." This same district has within later years again come into prominence in the works of Crockett, Ian Maclaren, and many other well-known writers of the present day. Continuing the journey to Glasgow, we pass through Closeburn, which forms part of the scene of the plot in "Old Mortality," and then Thornhill, where at Cragenputtock near by Carlyle wrote his "Sartor Resartus." New Cummock is the home of Boswell, and Mauchline is where Burns married his "bonnie Jean." A short branch line connects the latter spot with Ayr, which, as everybody knows, was the birthplace of Burns. The old Brig o' Doon and Alloway Kirk, immortalised in "Tam o' Shanter," are both conspicuous objects.

Kilmarnock is equally rich in Burns relics; it is also a convenient centre whence to visit a large number of popular Scottish watering-places, including Ardrossan, where steamers may be joined for the Island of Arran. Glasgow itself is not the most pleasant of towns to remain in for any length of time, though it is an unequalled centre for the excursion enthusiast. To enumerate the almost endless variety of excursions which can be made from Glasgow by steamboat and train would occupy more space than is at our disposal. The trip from Greenock down the Firth of Clyde leaves a lasting impression on the traveller, however "seasoned" he may be. Another delightful short cruise can be taken to the Island of Arran, through the Kyles of Bute by Inchmarnock, and the Sound of Bute to Brodick and Lamlash, the latter a favourite golfing centre by the way.

Those who wish to include in their northern tour Sir Walter Scott's country can best do so by joining one of the Midland Companies Edinburgh Expresses which traverse the Waverley district, Melrose being as convenient a point as any at which to break one's journey. The Abbeys of Melrose and Dryburgh, which are close by, possess peculiar interests for every student of Scott. Dryburgh is a particularly fine old ruin, and attracts year by year some thousands of pilgrims who hail from all parts of the world. Abbotsford is perhaps an equally favourite resort for admirers of Scott, whose declining years were spent there. Of the attractions of Edinburgh but little need here be said—its ancient castle and historic landmarks, such as Cowgate and Canongate, the Palace of Holyrood with its legends of the hapless Queen Mary, and other famous personages, all tend to make it one of the most interesting cities in the world.

It will thus be seen that the tourist wishing to gain direct access to the most interesting parts of Scotland—the home and haunts of Burns on the one hand, and Sir Walter Scott's memorials on the other, cannot do better than take his or her ticket by the Midland route.

MELROSE ABBEY

Founded by David I. of Scotland in the middle of the twelfth century, and subsequently the scene of many historical events.

KIRKSTALL ABBEY

Which the visitor can visit on his way to the North. Kirkstall is a station on the North Midland line, and is distant about three miles from Leeds.

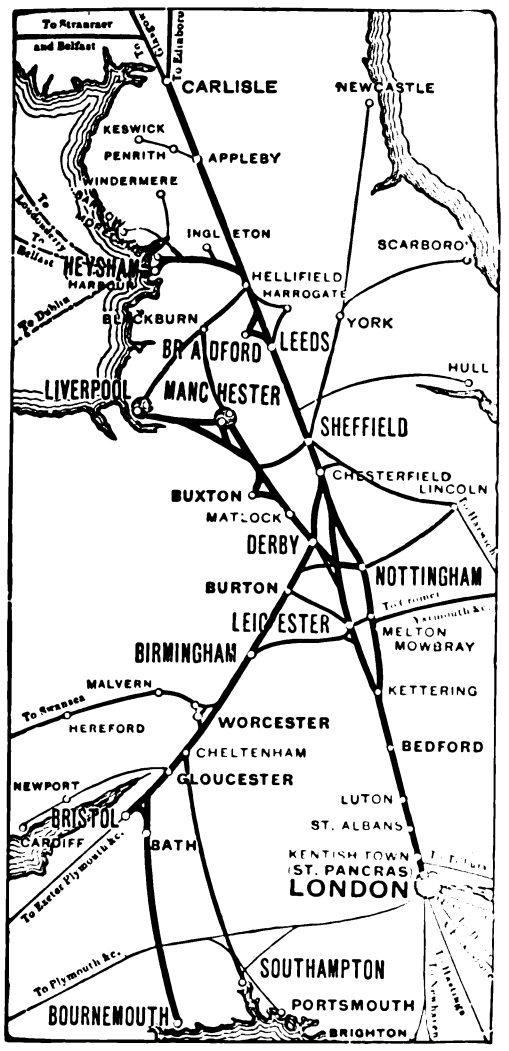
Digitized by Google

THE BEST ROUTE
FOR COMFORTABLE TRAVEL AND PICTURESQUE SCENERY.



Derby, 1905.

MIDLAND RAILWAY.

CONVENIENT THROUGH EXPRESS SERVICES

TO AND FROM

SCOTLAND.

AUGUST and SEPTEMBER.

ENGLAND TO SCOTLAND.

| | |
|---|---|
| 9.30 a.m. | ST. PANCRAS to EDINBURGH, Aberdeen, Perth, etc., via Leicester and Leeds (Luncheon and Dining Cars). |
| 9.45 a.m. | ST. PANCRAS to Sheffield (without stop), Leeds, and GLASGOW (Luncheon and Dining Cars). |
| 11.30 a.m. | ST. PANCRAS to GLASGOW, via Leicester and Leeds (Luncheon and Dining Cars). |
| 11 40 a.m. | ST. PANCRAS to EDINBURGH, via Nottingham and Sheffield (Luncheon and Dining Cars). |
| 1.30 p.m. | ST. PANCRAS to GLASGOW, Greenock, and EDINBURGH (Luncheon and Dining Cars to Glasgow). |
| 7.15 p.m. | HIGHLAND EXPRESS from ST. PANCRAS (SATURDAYS EXCEPTED) WITH DINING AND SUPPER CARS TO LEEDS, AND SLEEPING CARS TO EDINBURGH, ABERDEEN, PERTH, AND INVERNESS. CONNECTING TRAINS FROM PRINCIPAL PROVINCIAL MIDLAND STATIONS. |
| OTHER NIGHT EXPRESSES | Leave St. Pancras at 8.30 p.m. (Saturdays excepted) for GLASGOW and the Clyde, 9.30 p.m. to EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, and North of Scotland, and 12.0 midnight to GLASGOW, etc., Breakfast Car Carlisle to Glasgow (Sundays excepted). Sleeping Cars to various destinations. |

SCOTLAND TO ENGLAND.

| | |
|---|---|
| 9.20 a.m. | GLASGOW (St. Enoch) to ST. PANCRAS (Luncheon Cars). |
| 9.30 a.m. | EDINBURGH to London, arriving St. PANCRAS at 6.5 p.m. (Luncheon Cars Carlisle to London). |
| 10.30 a.m | EDINBURGH to ST. PANCRAS (Luncheon and Dining Car Express). Connections from Perth, Aberdeen, etc. |
| 11.0 a.m. and 1.30 p.m. | Luncheon and Dining Car Expresses, GLASGOW (St. Enoch) to ST. PANCRAS. |
| 2.20 p.m. | EDINBURGH (Wav.) to St. Pancras (Through Carriage from Perth) (Dining Cars Edinburgh to London). |
| 9.30 & 11.0 p.m. 11.15 p.m. Sats. | GLASGOW (St. Enoch) to ST. PANCRAS (Sleeping Cars). Connections from Greenock, etc. |
| 10.0 p.m. | EDINBURGH (Waverley) to St. Pancras. Sleeping Cars from Inverness, Perth, Aberdeen, and Edinburgh |
| 11.0 p.m. | EDINBURGH (Waverley) to St. Pancras (Sleeping Cars). Direct Connections from West Highlands, Montrose, Arbroath, Dundee, Kirkcaldy, etc. |

For complete service see Illustrated Pocket Time Tables FREE ON APPLICATION to the District Superintendent, Midland Railway, St. Pancras; to any of the Company's Stationmasters or Agents; or to Mr. J. Elliott, Superintendent of the Line, Derby.

JOHN MATHIESON, General Manager.

Pure JAEGER Wool

The JAEGER Natural Wool Underwear is GUARANTEED against SHRINKAGE, and is Durable, Soft, and Comfortable.

Pure Wool Sheets and Blankets a Specialty.

FIXED MODERATE PRICES.

THE "CECILIA,"

An Artistic and useful style in Flannel and Wool "Taffeta."....

The Fronts are made with two one-inch folds arranged on each side of a shaped box-pleat.

The soft wide Collar and Cuffs give this shirt a graceful appearance for Golf and Boating.

PRICE FROM 12/6

EXCLUSIVE MATERIALS & DESIGNS.

Wool "Taffeta," "Cambric," "Lattice-Web," Fancy Flannels, etc., specially selected for wearing quality, smartness, and for their pleasant and soft handle.

The most comfortable Shirts, Pyjama Suits, and Night Shirts obtainable for gentlemen.

PURE WOOL is known and recommended by Medical Men to be the safest and best for Summer Wear.

SHIRTS ... ...from 8s. 9d.
NIGHT SHIRTS 12s. 9d.
PYJAMA SUITS 15s. 9d.

Write for Price List (No. 24) containing Patterns and 230 Illustrations. Post Free.

LONDON—
126, Regent Street, W.
456, Strand (Charing Cross), W.C.
30, Sloane Street, S.W.
115, Victoria Street, S.W.
85 and 86, Cheapside, E.C.

BATH—10, New Bond Street.
BRIGHTON—59, East Street.
EASTBOURNE—6, Grove Road.
EDINBURGH—119a, Princes Street.
GLASGOW—16, Buchanan Street.
LEEDS—23, Commercial Street.

LIVERPOOL—58, Church Street and 4, Castle Street.
MANCHESTER—18, King Street.
NEWCASTLE—6, Northumberland Street.
PLYMOUTH—9, George Street.

The JAEGER GOODS are sold in most towns. Address sent on application to Wholesale and Shipping Office, 95, Milton Street, London, E.C.

LOOK FOR THE LABEL! To checkmate the dishonest use of the name of JAEGER look for the label on each article, and insist that the goods be described as JAEGER on invoice.

Digitized by Google

Leaves from a Collector's Note-book.

No. LVI.—THE CARICATURE AND PORTRAIT JUGS AND MUGS OF THE NAPOLEONIC WARS.

THE period of our history between 1795 and 1815 (with one brief interval) was one of unprecedented alarm, uneasiness, anxiety, and excitement. Its central figure was Napoleon Bonaparte, generally called the Corsican Caitiff, Ogre, Devil, Demon, Locust, Toad, Scorpion, Viper, and so forth, until the vocabulary of vituperation and vulgar abuse was exhausted. The prevailing terror was one of foreign invasion. While St. Vincent, Howe, the Hoods, and Nelson were fighting our battles by sea, and later on while Wellington was winning laurels in the Peninsula, and preparing the way for his crowning victory at Waterloo, Charles Dibdin was writing songs by the dozen to stimulate the national spirit, and the sturdy yeomen of the Southern littoral were guarding the beacon-fires which on the approach of the hostile fleet would have immediately made known the imminence of danger from Dover Cliffs to Portland Bill, and from Portland Bill to Penzance. So serious was the state of affairs considered, that it was at one time decided that the King and Court should remove from Windsor to Worcester, where the treasure of the State was to be deposited in the Cathedral crypt. It was in these troublous times, and for long years afterwards, that the British nursemaid was accustomed to silence obstreperous children with the refrain:

"Baby, baby, naughty baby,
Hush, you squalling thing, I say;
Hush your squalling, or it may be
Bonaparte will pass this way.

Baby, baby, he's a giant,
Tall and black as Rouen steeple;
And he dines and sups, rely on't,
Every day on naughty people.

Baby, baby, he will hear you,
As he passes by the house;
And he limb from limb will tear you,
Just as pussy tears a mouse."

The golden opportunity which now presented itself to our great caricaturists was promptly taken advantage of. Rowlandson, Gillray, the Cruickshanks, Woodward, Williams, and others executed characteristic and spirited drawings by the dozen, and the publishers not only sold the prints as fast as the engraver could produce them, but lent out portfolios filled with these diverting caricatures for the amusement of the guests at evening parties. Of the 3,200 Napoleonic caricatures known to exist, at least 1,700 are of English origin The energy of the song-writers and the draughtsmen was emulated by the potters of Leeds, Liverpool, Bristol, and Staffordshire, who turned out by the score jugs and mugs adorned with portraits of popular heroes like Nelson and Wellington, patriotic verses of the Dibdin order, and caricatures of the Man of Destiny, the feared and hated Corsican Ogre, Devil, Demon, and so forth. The state of England and English feeling in those days (that of the West in particular) is admirably depicted in Thomas Hardy's stirring poem of "The Dynasts." It is also vividly reflected in the pottery of the period—the vessels from which our ancestors, while watching the beacons, quaffed their home-brewed beer or homely cider. The subject has certainly not received the attention it deserves, although it presents many attractions and opportunities to the collector. Last year the fine gallon beer-jug commemorative of Bonaparte's retreat from Moscow, and covered with Russian inscriptions as well as English caricatures, was reproduced in the columns of THE KING. Not less quaint and curious is the jug now illustrated, from the well-known collection of Mr. D. Sherratt of Chester. It belonged originally to one Elizabeth Smith, probably a Cheshire publican, and the front of it is covered with amusing rules for the frequenters of taverns. On one side a soldier of the 71st Regiment is depicted in the act of taking prisoner a French officer in Portugal, whilst on the other we have the "transfer" of a well-known caricature in which John Bull is challenging the "murdering Corsican tyrant to mortal combat." Bonaparte (the Devil standing behind him) replies, "O vat a Terrible Jean Bull, me be half afraid, much rather make Peace now I have obtained the Crown. To reign is worth Ambition tho' in Hell." The Evil One adds, "Fight him, dam (sic) him, Bony, you'll sooner come home, and you know how impatiently we wait for you."

STAFFORDSHIRE MUG

Of abou· 1813, with a curious raised portrait of the Marquess of Wellington.

LIVERPOOL CARICATURE JUG.

Very fine specimen of the Napoleonic era, now in the collection of Mr. W. E. Mallett of Bath.

The fine Liverpool jug, on which a soldier of the Black Watch is portrayed in the act of using Bonaparte as a novel form of bagpipes, was purchased by the writer at the Octagon, Bath, where good specimens of the pottery of the Napoleonic wars may often be found. The centenary of Trafalgar is possibly responsible for the recent "creation" of a series of impudent shams and "duffers" now being diligently "planted" in the farm-houses and cottages of the West, possibly for the benefit of the unwary collector. Even cracks and chips are carefully imitated, but the glaze actually covers the transfer, and the print itself is obviously modern. Napoleon ("The Governor of Europe stop'd in his career") is saying, "Ah you tam John Bull, you have spoil my Dance, you have ruin all my Projets," to which John replies, "Pardon Master Boney, we keep this litle (sic) spot to ourselves. You must not dance here Master Boney." To suit the various tastes and purses of dupes, these "Success to the Volunteers" sham jugs have been made in at least three sizes. The portrait mugs of Earl and Marquess Wellington mark two steps in the career of the Iron Duke. The subject is a very interesting one, but as far as the collection of these strange sidelights of Napoleonic history is concerned it is already a case of caveat emptor. B.

STAFFORDSHIRE WARE AND ITS COUNTERFEIT.

(1) Large Staffordshire jug partially decorated with lustre, and a picture in colours connected with the exploits of the 71st Regiment during the Peninsular War. (2) Staffordshire jug with portrait of the victor of Waterloo, described as "Earl Wellington." (3) A cleverly-executed counterfeit of a Napoleonic caricature jug now being put in circulation.

Digitized by Google

MALLETT
& SON

hold and offer for sale specimens of the
HIGHEST QUALITY
OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE
as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.

EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.

AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.
(Two hours from Paddington.)

Old Brass Stand and Lamp.

THE MISSES
H. & I. WOOLLAN
(Under Royal Patronage)
are showing a
UNIQUE
Collection of
Antiques.

Chippendale, Sheraton, and Hepplewhite Furniture. Worcester and Lowestoft Services. Lace, Glass, etc.

Showrooms: First Floor.

28, BROOK STREET, GROSVENOR SQUARE, W.

ONE PENNY WEEKLY. The GARDEN. ONE PENNY WEEKLY.
COLOURED SUPPLEMENTS.
SPECIMEN COPY POST FREE.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, LIMITED, 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

Rare Prints and Portraits
CARICATURES.

Speciality: Rarities of all sorts relating to
NAPOLEON and AMERICA.

GODEFROY MAYER,
41, Rue Blanche, Paris.

Catalogues issued. Rare Prints and Engraved Portraits sought for.
Correspondence Invited.

Mr. Mayer's stock is probably the largest and finest in Europe. He specially caters for the wants and requirements of English and American extra-illustrators.

NEW CATALOGUE OF CHOICE AND RARE ILLUSTRATED and other BOOKS, COLOURED PRINTS, etc.,
SENT POST FREE BY—
GEORGE GREGORY, Bath.
(Bookseller to H.M. Queen Alexandra.)
WANTED, Sporting Magazine, Vol. 30 (1807); also Vol. 37 (1810-11).

MAGGS BROS.,
109, STRAND, W.C., LONDON, ENGLAND.
Dealers in RARE BOOKS AND FINE LIBRARY EDITIONS OF STANDARD AUTHORS, Voyages and Travels, Early Printed Books, 1st Editions of 17th, 18th, and 19th Century writers, Illustrated Works. Also Rare Portraits, Line, Stipple, Mezzotints, and Colour Engravings, and Autographs.
Recently issued—Illustrated Catalogues of Rare Books, Voyages and Travels, Engravings, Autographs. Price 6d. each.

CATALOGUES OF
ILLUSTRATED BOOKS, VIEWS, PORTRAITS, etc.,
GRATIS.
Books and Engravings Bought.
JAMES RIMELL & SON,
DEALERS IN OLD BOOKS AND ENGRAVINGS,
53, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON, W.

WEYMOUTH.—4, Grosvenor Place.
IMPORTANT ART SALE
SEPTEMBER 7th, 1905.
Pictures, Plate, China, Furniture, Enamels. Historical Bureau and Bookcase, given by widow of Frederick the Great to Sir Evan Nepean.
For Catalogues write or wire — MILLEDGE & SON, WEYMOUTH.

THE KING'S COLLECTORS' REGISTER.

For Spaces in the Register apply to "THE EDITOR."

WANTED.

AUTOGRAPHS AND LETTERS.

MSS. of Admiral T. M. Hardy. Good letters wanted.—827, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Autograph of Madame d'Arblay, and the Royal Princesses Charlotte, Auguste and Amelia.—828, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Autograph Letter of the Rev. Edmund Nelson, of Burnham Thorpe. £2 offered.—829, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Complete copies of Fairburn's Journal of Naval Occurrences.—154, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

A Copy of an Admiralty Circular, published Jan. 1st, 1825, describing the naval uniform "which in pursuance of his Majesty's pleasure is to be worn by officers of the Royal Navy." Signed by J. W. Crocker, Secretary of the Admiralty, and containing coloured patterns.—179, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Good copy of the Napoleon Museum, collected and arranged by John Sainsbury. Thick 4to, London, 1845. 25s. offered.—180, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Masonic Song Books, between 1750 and 1782. Good price offered.—181, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Naval Prints published by any of the following:—C. Sheppard, 74, Little Britain; C. Taylor, Holborn (date 1791); J. Fairburn, 110 and 146, Minories (1800-1838); Tabart and Co., London; E. Rushton, Paradise Street, Liverpool; W. Belch, Bridge Street, Boro'; I. Houlston, Strand; R. Sly, 41, Union Street, Somers Town; J. Marshall, Aldermary Churchyard, London.—237, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.—continued.

Good Impressions with good margins of engravings of old London, especially Covent Garden, the Temple, the Strand, Lincoln's Inn.—249, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Prints of Uniform of the Navy, by Rowlandson, Hull, Ulsdall, and Sharp, or any others.—261, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Information or Copies of any Prints showing Doggett, or any of the other pre-Macklin Shylocks.—262, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Masonic Portraits, Pictures, or Certificates, between 1717 and 1790. Good price given.—263, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

View of Carlisle House, Soho, about 1780-1790.—264, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Aquatints of the Battle of Navarino, and the engagement between the "Shannon" and "Chesapeake," after Sir John Theophilus Lee.—265, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Portrait of Henry, Duke of Cumberland, wearing Masonic insignia, by Jones after Thomas Beach, cir. 1780-1782. £5 offered.—266, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Topographical Prints relating to Freemasons' Hall and Great Queen Street, between 1750 and 1800.—267, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Glass Transfer Pictures Wanted, 1 high-class examples of portraits: D. and Mrs. Garrick, Queen Charlotte, Mrs. Piozzi, and others. Good price offered.—526, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Wedgwood or Worcester Masonic Jugs, with the names and numbers of private lodges.—527, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

GOLD, SILVER, Etc.

Pair of very early Sheffield Ware Candelabra.—615, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

FURNITURE.

Oak Corner China Cabinet, geometrically glazed. 30s. Photo.—410A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Complete set of the World Newspaper, from its foundation down to 1896.—133A, The KING'S EXCHANGE.

The Tichborne Trial, in 8 volumes (folio), in original boards, with presentation copy of Lord Chief Justice Cockburn's charge to the jury, 2 volumes.—134A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

GOLD, SILVER, Etc.

Really genuine and fine specimens of Sheffield Plate, in good condition.—608A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

An exceptionally beautiful Worcester Dessert Service; best period and very lovely decorative paintings.—524A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Five Glass Pictures of the Death of Nelson (all different).—525A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Superb Bust of Shakespeare, in Staffordshire ware. Probably the finest in existence.—526A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

THERE are probably few countries which can claim a total immunity from motor-cars. Even far off Basutoland has recently been invaded by the motorist, the first car to enter being a six-cylinder British-built Napier. According to the enterprising owner of the car the roads are not altogether adapted to this form of travel. In some of the drifts the water was actually an inch over the footboard, while the inclines were so steep at times that the petrol tank was lower than the carburettor—a condition of affairs that naturally prevented the engine running. To overcome this difficulty a small tank, holding about a a gallon of petrol, had to be clipped on to the top of the dash-board, the connection to the petrol feed-pipe being effected by means of a piece of rubber tubing. It is our correspondent's intention to continue his tour up country as far as the Zambesi and the Victoria Falls.

* * *

Mablethorpe, the popular Lincolnshire holiday resort, was the scene recently of a successful motor race-meeting, held under the auspices of the Lincolnshire Automobile Club. There were two events, one a handicap by time, the other by distance, and both were won by Captain Newsom on his 30—40-h.p. Daimler, who started at scratch. The course at Mablethorpe is very good for the greater part of the way, and Mr. S. F. Edge, who was among the spectators, has promised to try and lower the kilomètre record there on a Napier before the season is ended.

* * *

The Dowager Queen Margherita, who was motoring with her two daughters and two gentlemen of the suite, recently had a narrow escape on the road leading to Piccolo San Bernardo. It appears that the local mountaineers, who rather bitterly resent the intrusion of the motorist, have been in the habit of piling up heaps of stones here and there, with a view to putting a stop to the nuisance. It was into one of the heaps of stones that the Royal car ran, causing it to overturn. Happily her Majesty was only slightly bruised. The incident has naturally incited a good deal of indignation locally, and several arrests of suspected persons were made soon after the accident.

* * *

The postponement of the light van trials, which had been fixed to take place towards the end of September, has caused a good deal of disappointment in certain quarters. It is stated that the Technical Committee of the Automobile Club have found it necessary to pursue this course owing to the meagre response which their efforts have received. In view of the determined manner in which our Continental neighbours are pushing this important branch of the motor industry, it is, to say the least, a great pity that British manufacturers do not show a little more enterprise in matters of so vital importance. It is scarcely a month since the French manufacturers' successful trial of commercial vehicles was held, and we understand that a similar trial is to take place in Germany in the near future.

* * *

The adoption of motor-omnibuses by the railway companies in this country is becoming pretty general. The Great Eastern Railway is the latest to adopt them, having in hand a number of motor-omnibuses at their Stratford works for use as feeders between the outlying districts and the nearest stations on their line. They have adopted the chain-driven type with four cylinder engines of 30-h.p. It is noteworthy that the wheels are fitted with Sirdar tyres, like the omnibus purchased by the King for use at Osborne House.

* * *

Ever since their splendid performance in the Gordon Bennett race, Fiat cars have been the subject of a good deal of discussion in motoring circles. We are informed that one of these cars has been placed at the disposal of the Prince of Wales during his forthcoming Indian tour by one of the Maharajahs.

* * *

One of the best-known lady motorists, who is remarkable for her glossy hair, invariably uses petrol as a hair-wash, says the Motor-Car Journal. When touring, her chauffeur always sends in half a pint of petrol each evening into the hotel, which his mistress uses with a sponge to cleanse her hair of dust. She says there is no danger of her locks catching fire if she stands for ten minutes before an open window. But there is no doubt petrol as a shampoo is distinctly dangerous. In a Paris Law Court lately a lady proved that a fashionable hairdresser had used petrol perfumed with eau de cologne as a shampoo. He "poured the petrol" over her hair; there was a light on the dressing-table. In a moment her lovely head of hair was in flames, and she was awarded £200 damages to console her for the loss of her tresses—and possibly to buy a wig! It is sometimes difficult to remain beautiful for ever on a motor tour. But it is not wise to try and solve the problem by using petrol on the hair and rouge on the face; for, after all, as somebody remarked the other day, "beauty that's only skin deep isn't worth much on a touring car."

Topical.

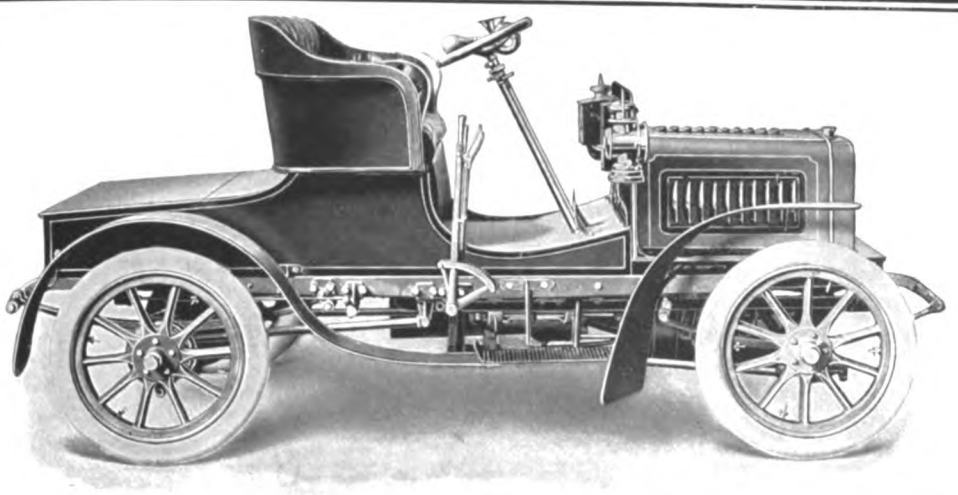
MR. AND MRS. MAX PEMBERTON
On their 20-h.p. four-cylinder Brooke car.

Digitized by Google

"Quite Luxurious."

THE SWIFT CAR.



"In its running the Swift is wonderfully free from that fussy noise which spoils so many small cars. Its twin-cylinder engine, as already pointed out, makes the action very smooth, and reduces vibration considerably. The little car is quite luxurious to ride in, and the advantages secured in comfort and efficiency are well worth the extra price paid for them."

—Motor Car Magazine, Aug. '05.

2 CYLINDERS, 7 h.p. £200 4 CYLINDERS, 12 h.p. Four-seated £375

TRIALS FREE. BOOKLET ON REQUEST.

THE SWIFT MOTOR CO., Ltd.,

Works: COVENTRY. 127-130, Long Acre, LONDON, W.C.

BY APPOINTMENT.

ROYAL APPRECIATION

AS A

SPECIAL MARK of APPRECIATION

of the excellent running qualities of the

THORNYCROFT CAR

supplied to their order,

T.R.H. PRINCE and PRINCESS CHRISTIAN

of SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN have been graciously pleased to favour us with a

ROYAL WARRANT

of appointment as

MOTOR MANUFACTURERS.

JOHN I. THORNYCROFT & CO., Ltd., Chiswick, London, W.

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

THE foremost of all to make an early display of autumn modes is the milliner, and already most of the shops are showing novelties for those still in town. Of course, it is too soon to decide on what will really be the dernier cri, and I can only just give you a few ideas at the moment, for, as usual, all sorts of new shapes are shown, but the right thing will not make its appearance yet. The feather hats always lead at this time of the year, and there are really some very charming shapes which are simply trimmed with coq feathers or flat wings, according to taste. The small round crown seems to be the favourite in these creations, with wide brims, some of which turn up at the left side and some at the back; in fact, the great advantage seems to be that you can adjust them to your own liking. The delicate colourings in these form the novelty. Large hats of all shapes are the latest, the picturesque Gainsborough being likely to take the lead; consequently, feathers are indispensable for this mode. I think I predicted some weeks back that the unbecoming little turbans and miniature styles would not be worn any more. I never saw a more unbecoming mode for the English type of face, and am thankful that they are discarded. Wings, birds, osprey and coq feathers will be seen more than flowers, and velvet shapes will be very prevalent. These will be worn to match the costumes in shade exactly. I hear of velvet fruits and foliage, but do not give them a long reign. Either the crowns will be of small round shape, as seen in the feather hats, or they will be very full, returning to the Henry VIII. period. Two charming early autumn creations are those here illustrated, models from the atelier of the Maison Lewis of Regent Street. The one is a large white felt with a grey outer rim, a trio of white ostrich tips falling over the bandeau and just resting lightly on the hair at one side. The crown is softly draped with two shades of grey velvet. The second is a picture hat of flowered silk, raised in the front with feathers and a Gloire de Dijon rose. Ribbons will also be much used as hat trimmings, especially those that are made the one side of silk or satin and the other of contrasting shades of velvet. These will be made into coquilles, and with an upstanding wing will require no other addition. They will be found economical by the limited-allowance young ladies, as with a little taste and care in the selection they can make the same hat answer for more than one costume. As regards colouring, the chief favourites promise to be, for millinery purposes, all tints of green, russet brown, heather, and purple. Also a new shade of blue, which is something between a Royal blue and violet. I do not think this new colour specially becoming, either to blondes or brunettes; but it is new, and I suppose will be seen a great deal in the autumn costumes. Boleros, or short basqued coats, are the ones

A CHARMING PICTURE HAT OF FLOWERED SILK.
(Maison Lewis, Regent Street, W.)

AN EARLY AUTUMN HAT IN WHITE FELT.
(Maison Lewis, Regent Street, W.)

that will be patronised this month, leaving the long tight-fitting coats for a little later on. Skirts will be worn moderately strapped or braided with the former style, but quite plain with the latter. Also with this the skirt will not be worn quite so short as it has been, but still sufficiently so to clear the ground. Corduroy velvets have had their day, but the plain velvets promise to be much seen in neutral shades. A novel shade I was shown the other day was the exact colour of brown sherry, and looked lovely in the velvet. This was made with a perfectly plain skirt and a very chic little tailor coat, with a tiny inner vest of cream doeskin, fastened with about two dozen very small square dull gold buttons. The back had short habit tails. The coat was finished off all round the edge with a silk waved braid of the same tone. When velvet is not chosen I should advise faced cloth in this particular style, as the rough tweeds which will prevail are not nearly so dressy.

Messrs. Charles Lee and Son of Wigmore Street have a splendid selection of new crescent veils, of which they make a specialité. Their motoring accessories are always of the latest, and they are always willing to send you anything on approval if you have not time to visit their select establishment. For blouses for all occasions you are always perfectly safe here, as they are well cut, and the variety is endless. Mr. Lee is at present abroad, picking up all the latest novelties to be found there.

Children's costumes at the seaside this year have been very simple, very effective, and free from superfluous trappings; they have been able to enjoy themselves thoroughly, and their greatest amusement seems to be fishing from the breakwaters.

R. D.

(From photographs specially taken for this paper by Lemeilleur and Co.)

Digitized by Google

NEW ZEALAND

THE BRIGHTER BRITAIN.

A NEW COUNTRY of marvellous beauty, with a fertile soil and a splendid climate. No extremes of heat or cold.

No droughts. An abundance of water, yet no rainy season.

An Evergreen Land rich in natural products.

A GREAT SHEEP, CATTLE AND DAIRYING COUNTRY.

Cheap farms with helpful assistance to farmers by the Government. Reduced steamer fares from the United Kingdom to New Zealand for persons with small capital.

No private monopoly of Public Utilities; the Government owns and operates Railways, Telegraphs, Telephones and Insurance.

No Lock-outs! No Strikes!! Employment disputes adjusted by Arbitration!!!

NEW ZEALAND IS THE WONDERLAND OF THE WORLD.

Its Thermal Sights are unique in their extent, beauty and weirdness.

The Mammoth Geyser "Waimangu" (Black Water) hurls an immense mass of boiling water, mud and stones over 1,000 feet high.

Hot Mineral Water and Mud Baths; The Curative Baths of Rotorua, Te Aroha and Hanmer are world famous. Government doctors in attendance.

Baths. Gardens. Games. Music.

and picturesque. Here are lakes of great size and depth—canyons that surpass the greatest of other lands—dense forests with a tropical profusion of ferns and flowers—innumerable waterfalls—monoliths of granite many thousands of feet in height—glaciers, snowfields, and the peerless Sounds, with their 400 miles of inside sailing distance.

TRANSIT is convenient throughout New Zealand. Government railways, Express trains, Pullman and Dining Cars. Excellent coastal steamers. Splendid coaching routes. Hotels, good; charges moderate. Government Hotels, Spas, and Accommodation Houses in many of the principal tourist resorts.

Large Mail Steamers with every modern comfort and convenience leave Great Britain for New Zealand fortnightly. Duration of direct journey, 40 days; via Suez and Australia, 44 days; via Canada, 32 days; via San Francisco, 28 days.

The best time to visit New Zealand is during the summer months, from November to April.

ALL INFORMATION regarding Travel, Tourist Routes, Spas, Baths, Sport, etc., etc., is supplied free of charge by the GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENT OF TOURIST AND HEALTH RESORTS, Head Office, WELLINGTON, NEW ZEALAND. Branch Offices throughout the Colony. Information regarding access to New Zealand, Reduced Steamer Fares, Settlement Commerce, Industries, Travel, etc., etc., also supplied at the Office of the High Commissioner for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, London—Mr. J. G. Gow, Commercial Agent for New Zealand, Durban, South Africa, also supplies general information respecting New Zealand.

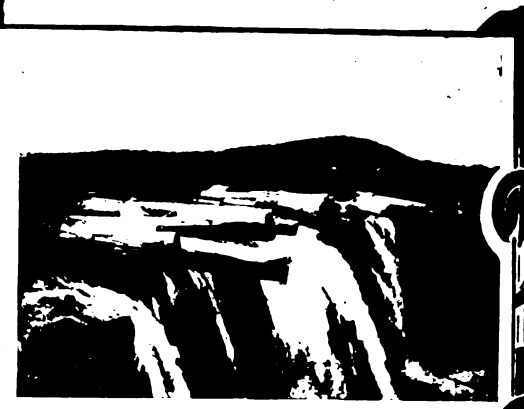
Minister for Tourist and Health Resorts: Hon. Sir Joseph G. Ward, K.C.M.G. Superintendent: T. E. Donne, Wellington, New Zealand. The Superintendent invites correspondence.

See Tourist Department's "Itinerary of Travel" and descriptive Guide Books.

An International Exhibition of Products, Manufactures, Arts, Sciences, Amusements, etc., etc., is to be held by the Government of New Zealand in Hagley Park, Christchurch City, commencing 1st November, 1906, and terminating April, 1907. Full particulars obtainable from the High Commissioner for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, S.W.

HAULING KAURI LOGS THROUGH BUSH, KAURI FOREST, NORTH AUCKLAND.

FELLING KAURI TREE, NORTH AUCKLAND, KAURI FOREST.



WAIRUA FALLS, WAIRUA RIVER, NORTH AUCKLAND.

The ALPINE SCENERY of New Zealand combines the distinguishing features of Switzerland, Norway and America. The Southern Alps extend for 300 miles. Mt. Cook, the highest peak, is belted by the largest glaciers in the temperate regions—the Tasman being 18 miles long and 2 miles wide. Near the foot of Mt. Cook is the Hermitage Hotel. Government guides, Alpine huts, and all necessary Alpine equipment available for use of visitors.

The LAKES of New Zealand are most pleasing in their charm of colour, contour and environment. Rotorua, Rotoiti, Taupo, and Waikaremoana in the North Island; Manapouri, Wakatipu, Te Anau, Wanaka, Kanieri and Mahinapua in the South Island are the most notable. The Lakes of the South Island are surrounded by mountain scenery of singular beauty and magnificence. Steamers and Power Launches. Good Hotels.

The WEST COAST FIORDLAND is indescribably wild

OKOROIRE.

HOT SPRINGS AND SANATORIUM HOTEL.

One of the finest Health Resorts in the Thermal District.

The first place of interest en route to Rotorua, New Zealand.

Delightful NATURAL HOT MINERAL BATHS, free to Guests. Sufferers from Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Affection of the Eyes, Skin Diseases, etc., are often permanently cured by these waters.

CLIMATE.—Beautifully clear and bracing atmosphere, charming surroundings.

SPORT.—The Streams in the hotel grounds are exceedingly well-stocked with Trout. Plenty of Game, viz: Pheasants, Virginian Quail, Wild Duck, Hares, and Deer. Lawn Tennis, Golf, and Croquet.

The drive from Okoroire to Rotorua is one of the most beautiful in New Zealand.

T. MARTIN,
Manager.

NEW ZEALAND.

THE GRAND HOTEL, ROTORUA.

Situated in the Centre of the Hot Lakes District.

Patronised by T.R.H. The Prince and Princess of Wales.

THE HOTEL is in the immediate neighbourhood of the beautifully laid-out Government Gardens, wherein are situated the celebrated "Priest," "Rachel," "Postmaster," "Duchess," and other mineral baths, the curative properties of which are world famous. It has magnificent and lofty apartments, spacious promenade, balconies, snug alcoves, and luxuriously-appointed drawing, music, conversation, reading, smoking, and billiard rooms, perfect sanitation, and is lighted throughout by electricity.

BATH CHAIRS and attendance provided to convey invalids to or from the various bath houses. Tariff 12/6 per day inclusive.

W. J. LEES, Manager.

THE GEYSER HOTEL,

WHAKAREWAREWA, ROTORUA.

Situated in close proximity to the wonderful Geysers and Maori Settlement.

Visitors staying at the Geyser Hotel have continued opportunity of witnessing them as they can be seen plainly from the verandah of the Hotel, also of studying native life and customs.

The Hotel possesses its own private hot and cold curative mineral baths of which the most valued are the "Spout," "Oil," and "Carlsbad" Baths.

It has lately been greatly enlarged and re-furnished in a most comfortable manner. Electric light is established throughout the hotel and baths.

Coaches run regularly between Whakarewarewa, the Rotorua Sanatorium, and Government Gardens.

Tariff 10s. per day or £3 per week, inclusive. For a lengthened stay terms can be arranged

CHAS. E. NELSON, Proprietor.

Digitized by Google

EVERY Anglo-Parisian knows Lapérouse, but if you are a newcomer, and Paris has not yet unfolded its mysteries to you, do not fail to visit this delightful restaurant on the Quai des Grands Augustins, near the Pont Neuf. It is typically Parisian, and bears a cachet of which it is justly proud, as proud as of its excellent cuisine.

Like all old established Paris restaurants, Lapérouse has its history. It is a century and a-half old, and, of course, began its career as a tavern where a capital meal and an excellent bottle of wine could be obtained at a low price. That was in the good year 1755, when Louis XV., the disgraceful, and La Pompadour, the unclean, misguided the country, satisfied that they could do no wrong; for had not the lady Maréchal—an authority on these matters—said: "Depend on it, Sir, God thinks twice before damning a person of quality!" And it is reported that La Pompadour one day took shelter from the rain at Lapérouse, although, be it said in honour of the tavern, it never prided itself on that visit. In those days the great poultry market was held on the Quai, and the farmers who brought their chickens and ducks to town made Lapérouse their headquarters. This went on uninterruptedly till 1860; in fact, it might have gone on for ever but for Baron Haussmann, who started renovating the city, demolishing old quarters, and building new streets. One day the old poultry market was swept away as by a whirlwind; the clientèle of stout sunburnt farmers disappeared, and the poor tavern was left behind, disconsolate, waiting for new customers. It did not wait long. The new proprietor, an enterprising man, altered the character of the place, and from an unpretentious eating house transformed it into a restaurant. The moment, certainly, was well chosen, for these were merry days. Napoleon III. wielded his sceptre in a somewhat shaky hand. The country was dancing on a powder magazine; but it was dancing, spending its money freely, and people flocked to Lapérouse like they flocked to any place where anything good could be seen, heard, or eaten. When the thunder-cloud of 1870 burst over the country, the restaurant on the Quai during the siege of Paris shared the general fate. The Commune was established, and Messieurs les Communards did not mind going far out of their way to pay the establishment a not welcome visit. The wine there, they knew, was particularly good; and so they drank deep, and paid with vouchers of the Committee of Public Safety, believed by them to be a legal tender, but quite worthless, having afterwards never been recognised by the Government of the Republic. These vouchers are now kept as a souvenir, and are treasured away at Lapérouse among other curious documents of bygone days, together with the old leather-bound books wherein, since nearly half a century, all famous luncheon and dinner menus have been entered—a quaint gastronomic library.

To-day Lapérouse can boast of a clientèle not to be met in any other rival house. In close proximity to the universities and the high courts, professors and students, judges and barristers patronise the place, and impart to it, especially at luncheon, a severe tone well in keeping with its surroundings. Now and then, however, the peace of the house is disturbed, and the unsuspecting stranger sees to his amazement the restaurant invaded by smart Society women in tasteful toilettes, with their train of male admirers. They hurry over their luncheon, and the stranger catching sight of the ladies' opera-glasses wonders for what playhouse the elegant crowd is bent. The true Parisian, however, knows what is in the wind, and that they are on their way to one of the Law Courts to attend a sensational trial. I remember the day when Mme. Clovis Hugues, the wife of the famous deputy, was arraigned for the murder of a private detective. Not a table could be had at Lapérouse, and the regular customers had to do the best they could in neighbouring establishments. In the evening, after her acquittal, it was Mme. Clovis Hugues' turn to go there, when her friends offered her and her husband a splendid dinner.

But the old restaurant on the Quai is also a temple of art in its way. L'Ecole des Beaux Arts is not far distant, and the man who has the good fortune to become a Prix de Rome generally celebrates this great event by a luncheon or dinner at Lapérouse. Celebrated painters, sculptors, and musicians, many of them dead and gone, and others now old and grey, have, with the blush of youth, stammered out there their thanks for their friends' toasts. And in the course of years these young men rose to glory and fame, yet they never forgot Lapérouse, where their friends wished them God-speed on the eve of their departure for the Villa Medici in Rome. If the old restaurant were to inscribe on its walls the names of all the celebrities it has welcomed, it would indeed constitute a curious glory roll. But that would be sentimental, and there is nothing sentimental about a Paris restaurateur. He has no time for it.

When you enter Lapérouse do not expect to find one of those gorgeous establishments like we see in London, beautifully furnished, the tables covered with choice flowers, but where the outward paraphernalia conceal the poorness of the cuisine. Here everything is simple and plain. There are no flowers; and, as to the noisy band, if you were to hint at the absence of such a thing, the proprietor would look at you in surprise, and tell you that he thought you preferred to eat your dinner in peace; and, before the second course is served, it begins to dawn upon you that the music would distract your attention from the masterpieces of culinary art set before you, and you lift up your voice in thanksgiving that the world holds chefs and maîtres d'hotels like those at Lapérouse. Some of the specialities:

Filets de Sole Lapérouse.—The filets are poached in a good fish stock with mussels, shrimps, and mushrooms. They are placed in an oblong dish with the mussels, shrimps, and mushrooms around them, covered with a white sauce (a good bechamel), with finely-chopped herbs, such as parsley, tarragon, and chervil. Around this again is a thick line of shrimp sauce. The appearance of the dish is as appetising as the ingredients.

Aloyau Braisé Lucullus.—This is an excellent entrée of filet of beef, braised with Madeira and truffles, garnished with small slices of foie gras tossed in butter, and whole truffles.

Soufflé Palmyre.—A sweet dish to be recommended is this soufflé palmyre. Cut two or three sponge cakes in small pieces and steep in Marie Brizard Aniseed. These are then added to the ordinary soufflé mixture and covered with grated macaroons. After five minutes in the oven the soufflé is glazed with powdered sugar and replaced for another quarter of an hour. For amateur cooks: The soufflé mixture is made with butter, flour, milk, sugar, and the yolks of six eggs. When cold, the whites, beaten to a froth, are added.

Digitized by Google

MEDICAL men all over the country are rapidly becoming acquainted with the medicinal qualities of the high-class dry Cyders of Whimple, with the result that they are not only using these Cyders personally, but are constantly prescribing them in a variety of cases subject to dietic treatment.

It is a proved fact that regular consumers of Cyder are exempt from many distressing maladies, such as stone and gravel. Cyder is also an effective remedy for gout and rheumatism.

Not only the phosphorus, but the acids of the apple are of singular use for persons of sedentary habits, whose livers are apt to be slow of action. These acids aid the liver in its work of eliminating from the body the noxious matter which makes the brain heavy and dull, and causes rheumatism and other kindred ailments.

The Uses of Cyder:

(a) as a health giver.

(b) as a delicious beverage.

If you would drink Devonshire's Delicious Drink at its very best—if you would realise to the full what a really enjoyable drink Cyder is—you should procure only that brand which comes from the presses of Messrs. Whiteway & Co.

Whiteway's Cyders are made only of the pure juice from the finest English apples, and are absolutely free from chemical preservatives.

Write for Booklet, Price List, etc., to WHITEWAY, WHIMPLE, DEVON; or 22 and 23, ALBERT EMBANKMENT, LONDON, S.W.

Henry Whiteway & Co., Ltd.

THE ESCOFFIER

CARLTON DELICACIES,

TABLE & CULINARY SAUCES, PICKLES, SOUPS, & CHUTNEY.

MADE by the "CHEF-DE-CUISINE" to the

CARLTON HOTEL,

LONDON.

Booklet with choice Recipes may be had on application to your own Grocer, or from

6, RIDGMOUNT STREET, TOTTENHAM COURT RD., W.C.

РУБЛЬ КОФЕ

(ROUBLE COFFEE.)

THE COFFEE OF THE EPICURE.

BERRIES, FRESH ROASTED,

2/- PER LB.

WE PAY THE CARRIAGE.

It may not sound cheap, but nothing REALLY GOOD ever is cheap.

Follow our directions, and a revelation awaits you of what REALLY GOOD COFFEE REALLY IS.

METATA AGENTS, 17, DEVONSHIRE SQUARE, LONDON, E.C.

IF YOU ARE BUYING

Any kind of Requisite for Travelling, it will pay you to send for

W. H. SMITH'S

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF

PORTMANTEAUX
TRUNKS
BAGS

And every description of Leather Goods and Travelling Requisites for Home and the Colonies.

Opposite the Abbey,* BATH.

Maker of the ROSEBERY HAT BOX.

LORD ROSEBERY says: "It is an ingenious and useful Hat Box."

CHARACTERISTIC STROKES OF FAMOUS BATSMEN.

By C. B. FRY.

Illustrated by G. W. BELDAM.

Why Golf is Good for Girls.

By MISS BERTHA THOMSON.

Life on the Busy Beach.

By F. G. AFLALO.

Profusely Illustrated.

HOLIDAY CLOTHES - - By LEO TREVOR.

CYCLING ANECDOTES - By R. J. MECREDY.

AND MANY OTHER FEATURES IN

C. B. FRY'S MAGAZINE.

September Issue. NOW READY.

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

MR. CHARLES HAWTREY and Miss Ethel Irving and the full company direct from the Criterion Theatre will commence their travels with "Lucky Miss Dean" and "Time is Money" at the Coronet Theatre, Notting Hill Gate, on September 11. Mr. Hawtrey will then, for the first time, undertake the part of Frederick Ware, the husband of Lucky Miss Dean, a character which should suit him to a nicety.

---

As a change from their usual musical and dramatic fare, Mr. Arthur is next week presenting "Mr. Hopkinson" to his patrons at Kennington Theatre. This comedy is undoubtedly the most clever and successful of the past season. Mr. James Welch will resume his original part of Hoppy, supported by the full London company, and the production will be mounted with the whole of the original scenery from Wyndham's Theatre.

---

AN interesting history is attached to a clever painting of Mrs. Clement Scott, which has just been placed in the vestibule of the Coliseum. This portrait was actually painted on the stage of his beautiful little theatre at Bushey by Professor Herkomer, R.A., during the performance of a play written by the Professor and Mrs. Scott. In this play Professor Herkomer acted the part of an artist, and Mrs. Scott was supposed to sit to him for her portrait. The comedy was presented for six nights, and she appears in the picture as when the curtain fell for the last time on the final scene. Professor Herkomer then had the picture framed, and offered it to Mrs. Clement Scott as a most delightful souvenir of the occasion, and one worth having, too.

---

THE Corporation of the City of Hereford have issued a charming little booklet with a view to assisting those who contemplate residing in or visiting the city. One of the most picturesque, as well as the most historically interesting, places in the country, Hereford will well repay a visit, and some of the more prominent features of the surrounding neighbourhood are illustrated in the booklet.

---

PATENT oil-heating stoves have become more and more popular with the growth of the "flat habit" and the increased difficulty in obtaining servants, and the Rippingille stoves, manufactured by the Albion Lamp Company, Limited, are prime favourites. Ranging in price from 4s. 6d. to £6, they may reasonably claim to suit all requirements, and for some of their higher-priced designs it is not too much to say that they are beyond competition. The Rippingille system of heating by hot water, too, is admirable, free from smell, and as easily managed as an ordinary table lamp.

---

IN their new home at St. George's Hall Messrs. Maskelyne and Devant have attracted more patrons even than in the old "Home of Mystery," and the excellent programme they offer is an entertainment that is not only to be recommended—it ought not to be missed. "The Mascot Moth" is more marvellous each time one sees it, and the other items of the programme are both amusing and instructive.

THE comfortable boats of the General Steam Navigation Company have been carrying as many passengers as they possibly can this year, and their various trips to Margate, Ramsgate, and Yarmouth have been more appreciated than ever. From the beginning of the season, which has been a very good one for steamboat traffic, there has been a continual stream of passengers.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES MUIR.

Mr. Muir is our resident correspondent in New Zealand.

AT the Brixton Theatre this week Mr. Fred Melville's stirring melodrama, "Between Two Women," has been played to most enthusiastic audiences. This admirably-staged production has been eminently to the liking of Brixton playgoers, who are accustomed to have good plays, well acted, offered to them.

---

THE Second Annual Juvenile Regatta at Ryde last week was a great success, and the entries for all the events showed a great increase on the first regatta. The pretty enclosure round the Canoe Lake was well filled with spectators, and the children engaged in the various races for paddle-boats, canoes, skiffs, and tubs had a fine time. In the evening there was a procession of illuminated boats, and the Mayoress presented the prizes to the successful competitors.

---

THE autumn season of the Mermaid Repertory Theatre will be given at the Great Queen Street Theatre, instead of at the St. George's Hall as previously announced, and will open on Monday, September 4. For the first production, Miss Ethel Irving has kindly consented to appear for one week in her original part of Millamant in Congreve's comedy, "The Way of the World," in which Mrs. Theodore Wright will also make her reappearance as Lady Wishfort. The next production will be Mr. Sydney Grundy's comedy, "The Late Mr. Costello," in which Mrs. Theodore Wright will play the part originally created by Miss Rose Le Clercq, and this will be succeeded by Beaumont and Fletcher's comedy, "The Scornful Lady."

A GRAMPIAN CORRIDOR TRAIN

Leaving Aberdeen for the South. These trains are among the finest in the kingdom.

Amusements.

APOLLO THEATRE.
HENRY LOWENFELD, Sole Proprietor.
TOM B. DAVIS, Lessee and Manager.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
Every Evening at 8.15.
"VERONIQUE."
Matinee every Wednesday at 2.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. FRANK CURZON.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
To-night at 8.15,
LADY MADCAP.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.15.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Sole Lessee and Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
At 8.50,
WHAT THE BUTLER SAW.
By Edward A. Parry and Fredk. Mouillot.
Matinee Every Wednesday and Saturday at 3.
Box Office now open. Telephone 4028 Gerrard.

DALY'S THEATRE.
Produced by Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES.
To-night and Every Evening at 8.15.
Matinee Every Saturday at 2.30.
THE LITTLE MICHUS.
By A. Vanloo and G. Duval. Music by Andre Messager.
Adapted for the English stage by Henry Hamilton.
Lyrics by Percy Greenbank.
Mlle. ADELINE GENEE in a NEW DANCE.
Box Office 10 to 10.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.
Managers: A. & S. GATTI & CHARLES FROHMAN.
Every Evening at 8.15,
THE CATCH OF THE SEASON,
By Seymour Hicks and Cosmo Hamilton.
The Vaudeville Theatre Company.
Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. FREDERICK HARRISON.
Wednesday Evening, September 6.
ON THE LOVE PATH.
A Comedy in Three Acts by C. M. S. McLellan.
Miss Ellis Jeffreys and Mr. Gerald Du Maurier.
Mr. Arthur Williams, Mr. Eric Lewis, Mr. A. E. Matthews, Mr. Edmund Maurice, Miss B. Forbes Robertson and Miss Jessie Bateman.
FIRST MATINEE, SATURDAY, September 9.
Box Office now open 10 to 7. Tel. 2933 Gerrard.

GARRICK THEATRE.
MR. ARTHUR BOURCHIER, Lessee and Manager.
Every Evening at 8.30,
THE WALLS OF JERICHO.
By Alfred Sutro.
Matinee Every Wednesday at 2.30.

NEW THEATRE.
Proprietor, SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
To-Night and Every Evening at 8.30.
CHARLES FROHMAN presents
LEAH KLESCHNA.
A Play in Five Acts, by C. M. S. McLellan.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY, at 2.30.
Doors open at 8. Tel. 2473 and 2480 Gerrard.

PROMENADE CONCERTS. — QUEEN'S HALL.
TO-NIGHT AND NIGHTLY AT 8.
QUEEN'S HALL ORCHESTRA.
Conductor: MR. HENRY J. WOOD.
1/- to 5/-. Usual Agents, Chappell's Box Office, Queen's Hall, and Queen's Hall Orchestra (Ltd.), 320, Regent Street.
ROBERT NEWMAN, Manager.

NAVAL, SHIPPING, AND FISHERIES EXHIBITION, EARL'S COURT.
11 a.m. to 11 p.m. Admission 1s.
Naval Construction, Armaments, Shipping & Fisheries.
NELSON'S CENTENARY RELICS.
FISHING VILLAGE. Working Exhibits. Model of "Victory."
GRAND NAVAL AND MILITARY CONCERTS.
Go on board the full-size Cruiser.
Specially ventilated, coolest Show in London.
Real Batteries of 4.7 Guns, Hotchkiss and Maxims. The Cruiser is manned by a crew of 150 Handy-men.
BATTLE OF TRAFALGAR.
"Our Navy." Captive Flying Machine. Great Red Indian Village. Voyage in a Submarine. Haunted Cabin. Famous Sea Fights De Rohan Theatre. Tillikum Canoe, and many other attractions.

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. | | PAGE. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Mr. Richard Biddulph Martin | 719 | The Traveller—What to See in and Around Worcester | 742 |
| The March of Events | 720 | The Cricket Season | 745 |
| Coaching in the Isle of Wight | 721 | The Services | 746 |
| The Disaster at Witham | 722 | The Distribution of Wealth—The Story of a Great Worcester Enterprise | 748 |
| Sport and Pastime | 723 | Motoring Notes | viii. |
| The Crabbe Celebrations at Bath | 724 | Literary Notes | x. |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 726 | Leaves from a Collector's Note-book—No. LVII.—The History of Worcester China from 1774 to 1800 | xii. |
| On the Links | 728 | The Racing Season | xiv. |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 733 | Fashions of To-day and To-morrow | xvi. |
| The Parisians of Paris—The Rise of the Brasserie | 734 | The King's Menu | xviii. |
| At Deauville | 735 | Here, There, and Everywhere | xx. |
| Under the Burgee | 736 | | |
| Yachts of the Year | 737 | | |
| The Worcester Musical Festival—September 10—September 15, 1905 | 738 | | |

TO LIBRARIES, CLUBS, HOTELS, Etc.

A Reading Case for THE KING can be had post free on application to the Publishers, George Newnes, Limited, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.

HOTELS, etc.

ENGLISH HOTELS.

TORQUAY (Population 33,625).—PREMIER HEALTH RESORT. Unrivalled climate. Warm in winter. Sunshine-land. Charming drives and sheltered walks. 120 acres of public gardens. Piers.

TORQUAY. Irreproachable water supply and perfect sanitation. Theatre, concerts, and other musical attractions. Medicated baths of all kinds. Express trains from all parts.

For Illustrated Descriptive Books of Torquay, apply FREDK. S. HEX, Town Clerk.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

De Vere Hotel, from 10/6 per day. 'Phone 524.
Broadwalk Hotel, from 8/6 per day. ,, 858.
Prince of Wales' Hotel, from 10/6 per day. ,, 641. Kensington.

Electric Light. Lifts. Everything up to date. First-class cuisine.

BOURNEMOUTH HYDRO.

Sunny Site. Overlooking Sea. Every Bath. Ideal Residence.

ENGLISH HOTELS—Continued.

EASTBOURNE.

THE HYDRO HOTEL.—A select Residential Hotel on South Coast, 120ft. above sea level. Large gardens, close to the sea. Tennis. Croquet. Bowling Green. Spacious Lounges and Public Rooms. 70 Bedrooms, also Suites, luxuriously furnished, electric light throughout. High-class cuisine. Table d'Hôte or à la Carte. Separate tables. Lift. Billiards. Private 'Bus. Nearest to schools and Links. Close to Parades. Week End terms. Motor Garage with repairing Pits. Lit by Electric Light. For inclusive Tariff (Illustrated), also Programme of Amusements, address—O. F. BERGANN, Manager. Telegraphic Address: "Hydrotel, Eastbourne." Telephone, No. 143, Eastbourne. The new Turkish Baths are now open.

FOREIGN HOTELS.

BIARRITZ.

GRAND HOTEL.—Winter Season.—First-class establishment. Splendid situation, facing the sea. Patronised by the elité; rendezvous of English Society. Every comfort; excellent attendance and cooking.—MONTENAT, Manager.

AXENSTEIN (Lake Lucerne; 2,350ft. above sea level; electric railway Brunnen-Axenstein).—First-class Hotel. World-renowned climatic health resort; patronised by English society. "Axenstein is the loveliest spot I met with on my journey through Switzerland."—QUEEN VICTORIA.

FOREIGN HOTELS—Continued.

TENERIFFE

HAS THE FINEST WINTER CLIMATE IN THE WORLD.

THE First-class HOTELS there are the QUISISANA at Santa Cruz, the AGUERE and CONTINENTAL at La Laguna, and the MARTIANEZ (late Grand) at Port Orotava. All under the Management of C. H. TRENKEL. Prospectus, etc., on application.

SHIPPING.

MOROCCO, CANARY ISLANDS, and MADEIRA LINE OF STEAMERS; 24 days for 20 guineas.—For particulars write Messrs. FORWOOD BROS., 46, St. Mary Axe, E.C.

Patronized by H.M. The King.

DOVERCOURT BAY, ESSEX,
HOTEL ALEXANDRA.

The Finest Health and Pleasure Resort on the East Coast. Delightful Climate. Bracing Air. The Hotel, which has recently been visited by H.M. KING, is luxuriously Furnished. Charming Situation. Facing the Sea. Electric Light. Excellent Cuisine. Tennis, Croquet. Motor Garage and Pit. 1 hour 40 minutes express from London.

For Illustrated Tariff, apply A. H. THIEM, Proprietor.

PERRY & TURNER'S, LTD., "PREMIER" BROUGHAM WAGONETTE.

(Regd. Design No. 112,925.)

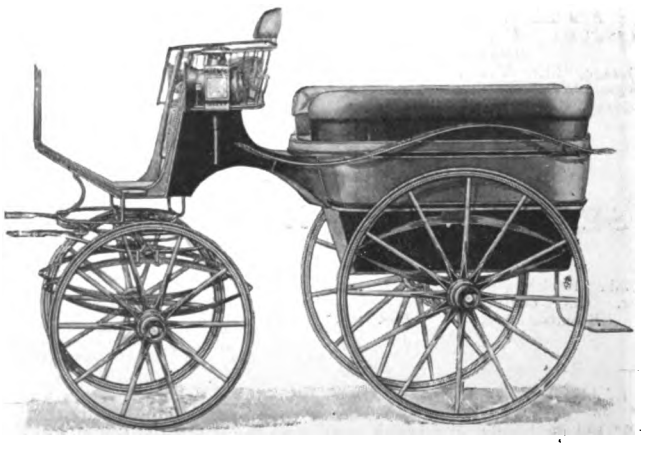
AS A CLOSED CARRIAGE.

BY means of a pulley fixed in the coach house the head of this Carriage is easily and quickly removed, and, with the raised backs, fitted as shown in the sketch, a most comfortable open wagonette is formed.

The front seat is specially designed for a lady or gentleman to drive from, and the seat beside the driver is fitted with a back rest.

It is constructed especially short in draught, and the front and hind wheels track, making it an ideal Carriage for a hilly country or over bad roads.



AS AN OPEN CARRIAGE.

STOKES CROFT, BRISTOL.
FREDERICK STREET, CARDIFF.
Telegraphic Address: "CARRIAGES, BRISTOL."

CATALOGUES AND SPECIAL DESIGNS ON APPLICATION.
Anglo-Canadian Gig Regd. Design, 440,771.
MOTOR BODIES BUILT TO ORDER TO APPROVED DESIGNS.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

THE COLONEL TAKES THE 19TH (W)HOLE IN ONE!

Head Office: 11, SO. EXCHANGE PLACE, GLASGOW.

J. H. ROGER PROPR.

LESSEE OF

H.M. CUSTOMS (No. 15) BOND, JAMES WATT STREET, GLASGOW.

Special Quotations to Golf Clubs.

"COLONEL BOGEY" WHISKY.

GUARANTEED 7 YEARS OLD.

42/- PER DOZEN. CARRIAGE PAID.

THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.

Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS of every description, including TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT. MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.

Handsome Public Rooms, including 2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel. Telephone 56.

Terms from MANAGER.

CLEVEDON (Somerset).

SEASIDE HYDRO HOTEL.

Holiday, Health, and Pleasure Resort. Near Golf Links and Pier. Good centre for excursions by road, rail, or sea. Resident Physician. Fine Baths. Liberal Table.

SECRETARY, Hydro, Clevedon, Somerset.

LELANT, ST. IVES BAY, CORNWALL (close to golf links and station).—Furnished HOUSE, with plate and linen, to LET for Summer months; two large sitting rooms, six bedrooms, one dressing room, bathroom.—"T.B.H.," "Evelyns," Uxbridge.

SOUTHWOLD (best position on the Common; close to Golf Links).—To be LET, well Furnished, for September, the pretty and artistic HOUSE known as "Link's Cottage," containing square hall, two sitting and large recreation rooms, servants' sitting room, seven bedrooms (fourteen beds), bathroom; electric light and telephone.—Apply to Mrs. ROBINSON, on Property.

ON THE BOURNEMOUTH LINKS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations. High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hôte, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.

THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.

THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.

A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.

Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads. Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.

Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.

Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.

New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare, Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,

Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.

To be obtained from Thos. COOK, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON.

Telephone, 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade and commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.

Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors.

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL.

SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.

Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head.

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.

Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill.

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau, 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 30s. Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address: "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY,

Within easy access of London

THE BUSH HOTEL.

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers, inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 1s. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable, being on sand.

DEVONSHIRE'S DELIGHTFUL DRINK.—The very best beverage for GOLFERS is WHITEWAY'S PURE CYDER. Refreshing, cooling, and a panacea for Gout, Rheumatism, and Obesity.

Booklets free from WHITEWAY'S, The Orchards, Whimple, Devon, and 22 and 23, Albert Embankment, S.W. Telephone 173 Hop.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

VULCAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E.

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer).

"'Is it a Private House or an Hotel?' is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels."

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGERESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29, Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

1, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

WANTED, on long Lease, about 200 ACRES of LAND, on sea coast, suitable for golf links.—Apply, with full particulars, "B. A.," c/o THE KING Office, 12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. COX, New Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL.—Brinkles, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library, Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052.

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class. |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned, from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains

ON BLUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY.

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.
Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Booklet and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

ZÜRICH.—DOLDER GRAND HOTEL, First-class English frequented house in extensive well-wooded grounds, 2,000ft. above sea level. Golf links in front of the hotel; tennis; motoring centre. Electric Tram and funicular service with Zürich Central Station (25 min.). Electro-magnetic therapeutical treatment (E. K. Muller's method).—Manager, E. DIELMANN.

SHERINGHAM, NORFOLK.

THE SHERINGHAM HOTEL,

ADJOINING GOLF LINKS (18 HOLES).

LARGEST HOTEL IN SHERINGHAM. Open all the year round. Handsome Dining Hall, 67ft. long. Numerous spacious Suites of Rooms commanding beautiful Sea and Land Views. Billiard and Smoking Rooms. Excellent and Improved Sanitary arrangements. Extensive Private Grounds. Lawn tennis, croquet. First-class Stables. Accommodation for Motors and Cycles. Through Trains from King's Cross, Peterborough, Birmingham, Leicester, etc.

Telegrams - "Sheringham Hotel, Sheringham."

National Telephone: No. 3. F. EDENS, Manager.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.
Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.
Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & Co.
Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.
MODERATE TARIFF.
Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months.
Perfect Sanitary arrangements.
Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year.

Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel.—Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors, EMMERSON & HARRIS.

THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE

Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit

Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE."
National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms.

Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

Digitized by Google

SAVORY & MOORE'S BEST FOOD FOR INFANTS AND INVALIDS

If the food given in infancy is the right food, strong bodies, powerful muscle, and energetic brains will be built up. It is for this reason that "Savory & Moore's Best Food" is so popular with mothers, nurses, and doctors, many of whom use it in their own families, and the most striking proof of its excellence is afforded by the fact that its use has been adopted in so many Royal Nurseries. Dr. W—— writes that he "finds 'Savory & Moore's Best Food' agrees better with children than any other, and always recommends it to his patients as being by far the best assimilated by delicate infants."

The value of "Savory & Moore's Best Food for Infants and Invalids" for convalescents, the aged, and those of weak digestion, is very great. It is enjoyed, and is well digested and retained, when every other food fails One special reason why it is so much appreciated is that it may be prepared in so many different ways, without either its digestibility or nutritive value being in the slightest degree lessened or impaired.

"Savory & Moore's Best Food" is supplied by all Chemists and Drug Stores, in tins, at 1s., 2s., 5s. and 10s. A LARGE TRIAL TIN will be sent post free for six penny stamps by Messrs. Savory & Moore, Limited, Chemists to The King, 143, New Bond Street, London, W., to all who mention this paper, together with handbook of great interest to mothers, nurses, and those having the care of invalids.

DEWAR'S WHISKY

A GUID AULD SCOTCH DRINK

7/10ths of ALL

Your little ills will find relief in

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

For HEADACHE,
For BILIOUSNESS,
For INDIGESTION,
For TORPID LIVER,
For CONSTIPATION,
For SALLOW SKIN,
For the COMPLEXION.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

Very small, and easy to take as sugar. Purely Vegetable.

Genuine must have signature

PRICE 13½d.

Brent Good

CHARLES LEE & SON,

42/-

Specialist Ladies' Outfitters,

98 & 100, WIGMORE STREET

(ONLY ADDRESS).

CAUTION.—Messrs. Lee & Son have no branches, and warn the public against imitations of their goods.

An example in Finest Quality English Crêpe de Chine, with Valenciennes Lace Yoke and Guipure Points, 42/-.

A Blouse suitable for any figure.

POST ORDERS.—The Lady's Pictorial states:—"If you live in the country, have an account with Lee & Son, Wigmore Street; they send the choicest selection of goods by post, while they are cheap for the best Costumiers, Furriers, Lacemen, Specialists in Trousseaus, The Leewig Petticoat, Royal Crescent Veil, Hosiers, Glovers, Milliners, etc.

CHARLES LEE & SON,
WIGMORE STREET.

ALWAYS READY FOR USE. NEVER REQUIRES GRINDING.

KROPP RAZOR

Each Razor in a Case.

BLACK HANDLES, 5/6. IVORY HANDLES, 7/6.

A PLEASURE TO USE.

Wholesale: OSBORNE, GARRETT & Co., London, W.

ST. JACOBS OIL

THE ESTABLISHED CURE FOR

RHEUMATISM

LUMBAGO, SPRAINS, SCIATICA.

"I should like to tell the public of the good St. Jacobs Oil has done me. When quite a boy I had a severe attack of Rheumatism, and could only walk with the aid of crutches, and in consequence I was obliged to give up my work. My parents used nothing but St. Jacobs Oil, and in a very short time I was again able to follow my occupation, and walk morning and night to work and home again, without using the crutches. I have felt nothing of the Rheumatism since, until last November, when I got very wet; but I am glad to say that with a few appliances of your Oil I was again set free.

"(Signed) W. DEACON,
"Rose Cottage, Bradford Street, Eastbourne."

January 12th, 1905.

Price 1/1½ and 2/6; of all Chemists.

CONQUERS PAIN!

Digitized by Google

THE WORCESTER MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

VOL. XX. No. 449. SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 9th, 1905. PRICE 6D.

Dickinson.

MR. RICHARD BIDDULPH MARTIN

Unionist Member for the Droitwich Division of Worcestershire, and one of the Stewards at the Worcester Musical Festival.

(See page 733.)

Digitized by Google

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 449. Saturday, Sept. 9, 1905.

Editorial Offices—20, TAVISTOCK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephones—No. 2,748 GERRARD, AND 7,961 CENTRAL.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected photographs should be returned a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

THE KING AND PEACE.—The war in the Far East is at last really over, and few men can have received with greater satisfaction the news of the agreement which had been arrived at by the Japanese and Russian delegates than King Edward. Since he came to the throne King Edward has seen two wars come to an end, and we may hope that during the remaining years of his reign, which all trust will be many, the amity of nations for which he has personally done so much will not again be disturbed. There is a growing feeling among the nations of Europe that the King is, unobtrusively but none the less surely, moulding England's foreign policy to the end of peace, and there can be no doubt that his people are with him in that as in many other matters. If South Africa was the grave of many reputations, Manchuria and the waters of the Sea of Japan may be said to be the birthplace of more, and it may be hoped that the world will now be sufficiently sick of the carnage of the battlefield to allow it to be said that the Treaty of Portsmouth, N.H., introduced an era of peace more lasting than any that had preceded it.

Ralph, Dersingham.

PRINCE JOHN OF WALES

The infant son of the Prince and Princess of Wales, who has already been photographed several times, though not yet two months old.

THE KING'S RETURN.—At the end of this week the King will be back in the metropolis from his holiday, but only for a very short stay, as he is due at Newmarket next week, and at Rufford Abbey on a visit to Lord and Lady Savile. All the reports speak of his Majesty as having benefited considerably by his stay in Marienbad, and though the weather for his holiday has been far from "royal," he has managed to get about a good deal, and has renewed several old friendships. With regard to his future movements, these are mostly concerned with Scotland, whither he goes at the conclusion of the Doncaster race-meeting. The Braemar Gathering, which had been postponed in the hope that the King would be present, has been restored to its original date, September 7, and the famous Inverness meeting will therefore be taking place about the time these lines are published. The Scottish season this year has been a very brilliant one, and will naturally last longer than usual, in consequence of King Edward's late arrival north of the Tweed. After the review of the Scottish Volunteers at Edinburgh, a visit will be paid to Lord and Lady Burton at Glen Quoich Lodge.

THE KING'S CLOTHES.—Last year it was King Edward's hat that was the great topic of discussion in sartorial circles. This year it is the brazen-faced copying of the Royal garments by certain unscrupulous knights of the scissors and yard measure. We have been told that one costume that his Majesty donned for a walk along the Kurpromenade at Marienbad so took the fancy of the dandies of the place that orders were telegraphed to Vienna, Berlin, and Paris for similar suits to be despatched with all possible haste. One or two of the descriptions of this costume have even been wired to London by enterprising newspaper correspondents, but they contradict each other so flatly, and describe a "get up" which it is impossible to imagine a man of taste as King Edward admittedly is ever attempting to wear, that one is tempted to be dubious of the whole affair.

PRINCE ARTHUR OF CONNAUGHT.—The travels of the King's nephew are becoming so numerous that shortly we shall cease to take any particular note of his despatch on these missions. There can be no doubt that Prince Arthur deserves the confidence that is placed in him, for he has borne himself with much dignity and tact in the missions he has already been entrusted with. He is now again in Germany, this time for the Military Manœuvres, to which he was invited at the time of the Crown Prince's wedding. These manœuvres should especially appeal to Prince Arthur, for it is well known that he is extremely keen in his profession, and does not play at soldiering, as some scions of nobility do. Shortly, too, Prince Arthur will be proceeding to Dresden to invest the King of Saxony with the Order of the Garter. The late King was a K.G., having been appointed in 1882, and the Duke of Fife, who was in those days only Earl of Fife, was the special envoy.

Digitized by Google

COACHING IN THE ISLE OF WIGHT.

W. A. Rouch.

FROM SANDOWN TO BLACKGANG CHINE, BY COACH.

There is no finer way of seeing the beauties of the Isle of Wight than from the top of a coach, with four fine horses drawing the vehicle along at a good pace. Despite the advent of the motor-bus in the Island, the visitors remain faithful to the older form of locomotion. At Windy Corner, which is shown in the above illustration, there is a magnificent view down to the sea, which lies almost sheer below, while on the other hand is a steep hill, almost bare of vegetable life.

Digitized by Google

THE DISASTER AT WITHAM.

Spalding, Chelmsford.

THE WRECKED CROMER TRAIN ON THE PLATFORM.

The unique feature of the accident at Witham last week was the manner in which portions of the wrecked train were piled upon the platform. Hundreds of sightseers visited the scene of the accident on Saturday and Sunday.

Farr.

WITHAM JUNCTION AFTER THE ACCIDENT TO THE CROMER TRAIN

In all ten people were killed and twenty injured by the accident, and an inquest has been opened to enquire into the matter. In addition a Board of Trade enquiry will be held. No cause has been found for the accident up to the present, though several theories have been advanced.

Digitized by Google

SPORT AND PASTIME.

(1) The last bather at Trouville. The close of the seaside season. (2) Lady bathers at Southsea. (3) Otter-hunting in Ireland. Captain Reynolds's otter-hounds at Woodbridge, County Wicklow. The season opened last week, and several packs were out all over the country. (4) The opening of the football season. Last Saturday saw the beginning of another football season, and several matches in the principal leagues drew large crowds. Our illustration shows the match between Woolwich Arsenal and Liverpool at Plumstead. (5) Croquet at Clifton. Miss Wilemann, winner of the Ladies' Single at the tournament at Clifton last Saturday.

(From photographs by W. A. Rouch, the Topical Press Agency, and Chusseau-Flaviens).

Digitized by Google

THE CRABBE CELEBRATIONS AT BATH.

UNVEILING THE MEMORIAL AT THE ROYAL LITERARY AND SCIENTIFIC INSTITUTION.

On Saturday last a bronze tablet, erected to the memory of the poets George Crabbe, Thomas Moore, and William Lisle Bowles was unveiled by Professor Rêné Huchon of the University of Nancy, France.

THE LUNCHEON IN THE GUILDHALL.

After the unveiling ceremony the guests were entertained to luncheon by Mr. George Gregory, to whose initiative the inauguration of the tablet is mainly due. In connection with the ceremony also there was an exhibition of Crabbe rariora. The Hon. H. M. Sewell, representative of Bath in the State Legislature of Maine, U.S.A., was amongst those present at both ceremony and lunch.

(From photographs by W. G. Lewis, Bath.)

Digitized by Google

THE MARCH OF EVENTS.

ACTORS versus JOCKEYS AT LORD'S.

(1) Mr. G. P. Huntley and Mr. Beresford, the umpires at the theatrical cricket match at Lord's on Monday. (2) Mr. Rutland Barrington, who is now playing in "The White Chrysanthemum" at the Criterion, and Mr. George Edwardes, the popular theatrical manager, who is a very keen golf player as well as a cricketer.

THE CHANNEL FLEET'S VISIT TO THE BALTIC

The banquet given at the Kurhaus, Swinemünde, in honour of the arrival of Sir Arthur Wilson and his Fleet at the German port. The Admiral and fifty of his officers were the guests of the Municipality, and were most hospitably entertained.

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

AN enterprising motor firm has inaugurated a scheme which is likely to commend itself to the very large number of owners who have a well-founded objection to entrusting their cars to the ordinary repairer. A travelling workshop has been built and fitted with a lathe, forge, and as complete an outfit of tools and spare parts as the dimensions of the vehicle will permit. In charge of a couple of competent mechanics it will tour the United Kingdom, calling when requested at the houses of the firm's customers, who will thus be able to have practically any repair or replacement carried out at their own doors. There is much to be said for this novel idea, and, always supposing that a reasonable scale of charges is fixed for its services, the travelling repair shop is likely to prove exceedingly welcome in the country. At present, the owner whose car stands in need of attention beyond the scope of skill and appliances of his own driver, is faced with the alternative of entrusting it to a local firm, or forwarding it to the makers, or to some big and expensive establishment in London. There are often serious objections to either course, such as lack of faith in the skill of the local man, or the fear of a bill of inordinate length coupled with weeks of unnecessary delay if a fashionable firm is patronised. Henceforth the owner in difficulties will be able to turn his own motor-house for a time into a fully-equipped repair shop, and have his car refitted under his own eye. The utility of the scheme, for which, by the way, Messrs. Du Cros are responsible, is perhaps less apparent in the case of repairs that require urgent attention, than as a method of enabling a car to be periodically overhauled and tuned up by experts. In any case the travelling workshop is likely to become a popular institution, and Panhard owners will probably not remain for long the only class of motorists who are able to enjoy its advantages.

Of the sixty-two entries for the Tourist Trophy Race nearly a dozen have already been withdrawn for various reasons, but it is probable that at least forty cars will face the starter on September 14. The race will take place over the Eliminating Trials Course in the Isle of Man, and the competitors will be required to make four complete circuits, being a total distance of 208½ miles. There will be no controls, but regulations have been drafted for the purpose of ensuring a reduced speed through the villages. It is difficult to see the necessity for this, as the roads will presumably be closed to traffic. Different drivers are likely to take widely varying views as to the meaning of the order "Drive slowly," which will be signified by a red flag stretched across the road, and unless a fixed limit of speed is imposed through the danger zones, and each car timed at the beginning and end of the stretch in question, a plan which would enormously complicate the running of the race, disputes and protests are sure to arise. Nine a.m. is the time fixed for the start, and the cars will be despatched at 2-min. interval each. The fuel will be supplied by the club, but the competitors will be allowed to choose their own brand. A huge advertisement therefore awaits the distiller who has the luck to provide the spirit for the winning car.

No announcement has yet been made as to the exact quantity of petrol which the cars will receive. As a guide to the makers, it was stated on the conditions that the allowance would be calculated on the basis of one gallon to twenty-five miles of dry, average road—an "average road" being taken to signify that between Oxford and London, viâ High Wycombe. Careful experiments have been made by the club, in order to ascertain how the Isle of Man course compares with the standard road, and an announcement as to the precise fuel allowance will probably be made on the eve of the race. It must not be supposed for a moment, however, that the Tourist Trophy contest is merely a glorified consumption trial. The object of the promoters is to provide a competition which will tend towards the improvement of the ordinary touring car in every respect. A race pure and simple was considered more likely to attract the interest of the public than any other form of contest, but it was obviously essential to restrict the speed to a reasonable and safe average. It is hoped that the limitation of the fuel allowance, and the imposing of maximum and minimum weights for both the chassis and the body, will exclude all the unduly high-powered cars and ex-racers, and give the victory to the vehicle which is most suitable for everyday use, granted always that it is driven with a reasonable amount of skill.

There have been critics in plenty of this year's rules, which are admittedly of a tentative character, but, so far as I am aware, no one has come forward with a scheme which offers a better prospect of success than that evolved by the technical experts of the

Topical.

THE RACES AT SKEGNESS.

The specially constructed track which was used by the Nottinghamshire Automobile Club to enable the cars to cross the loose sand on their way to the shore for their race-meeting last Saturday.

Topical.

THE EVIAN MOTOR-BOAT MEETING ON LAKE GENEVA.

"Antoinette III.," which created a new record for the 100-kilomètres, covering the distance at a speed of 44-kilomètres per hour (23¾-knots).

Digitized by Google

Automobile Club. Fuel limitation and weight restriction might produce a freak, but the maker who won the race with a car which was obviously unsuited to ordinary use would gain little commercial advantage from his victory. Apart from the possible performance of some rule-evading monster, it may be said that the most economical car as regards petrol consumption is likely to be the best in other respects as well. A given quantity of fuel can only produce a given amount of energy, and, therefore, the greater the proportion that is transmitted to the road-wheels, and is thereby utilised for actually driving the car, the lesser the amount that is wasted in work that is harmful to the mechanism. Other conditions being equal, the car which consumes but little petrol should be durable, silent, and free from vibration and smell, all of which are qualities of the highest importance in the ordinary touring vehicle.

A great fuss is generally made in the technical Press when a motor-boat successfully accomplishes an open sea-voyage of a few hundred miles in length. The other day, however, I came across a perfectly-equipped cruising-yacht driven by a pair of petrol motors, which had been in more or less regular use since the year 1899, although no special notice has ever been taken of her wonderful record. She has a comfortable saloon, a large sleeping cabin, pantry, lavatory, etc., amidships, with a roomy well aft, and the usual accommodation for the crew forward. Above the cabins is a promenade deck, on which are placed the wheel and the engine-room telegraph. The two old Daimler engines, which drive her at a speed of about ten knots are fitted with tube ignition, and the owner told me he had never had a breakdown at sea, nor any trouble of a serious nature. With a crew of four — namely, captain, engineer, steward, and deck-hand—he had frequently cruised all along the South Coast, and on two or three occasions he had taken her as far as the West Coast of Scotland. She was kept in the pink of condition throughout, and her neat little engine-room, with its brightly-burnished revolution counters, pump gauges, telegraph dials, and other instruments, was enough to delight the heart of any enthusiastic amateur. She struck me as a thoroughly practical and wholesome type of motor-cruiser, and considering the advances which have been made since the year she was built, the motor-yacht may certainly be regarded as long past the experimental stage. RADIATOR.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Copyright.

THE AUTO-CYCLE CLUB CONSUMPTION TRIALS.

Last week a number of motor-cycles carried out consumption trials under the auspices of the Auto-Cycle Club, running from Thames Ditton to Hindhead. A Clement 16—22-h.p. car led the way, and the first competitor to start was the Rex tri-car, driven by Mr. Appleby.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

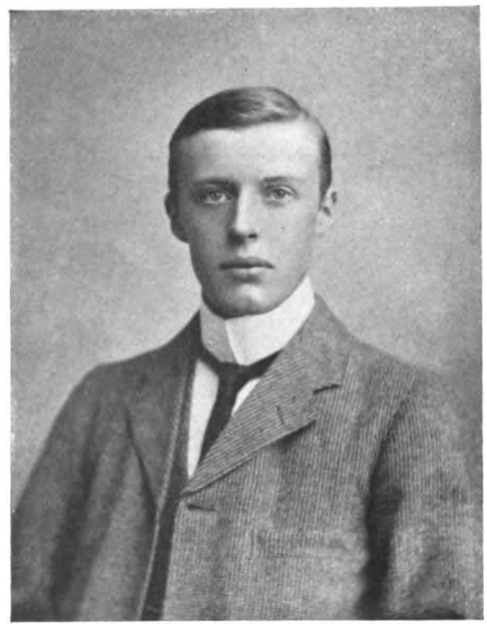
EDITED BY A. J. ROBERTSON.

NO greater surprise has fallen upon the golf world for many a long day than the result of the second match in the International professional foursome at Troon. A substantial lead of twelve holes on one match alone, or a win of fourteen holes out of thirty-six holes played in the course of the day, leaves very little hope that Braid and Herd will ever recover from it sufficiently to make the end of the fight a close one. For one thing, it has to be recognised that Taylor and Vardon were playing just about their normally brilliant and steady game. Each backed up the other so effectually that there was no room for Braid and Herd to trust to the weakness of the other side for winning a hole. If either player on the Scottish side made an indifferent stroke, the hole was looked upon as being practically lost. That remark about sums up the situation—a badly-hit shot at any point of the game meant a lost hole for Braid and Herd.

* * *

The scores of the English side prove that this was the case. Taylor and Vardon were round in 73 and 72 strokes for the two rounds, while it took Braid and Herd 80 and 81. These scores certainly do not represent the high-water mark of Scotland's playing form, though on ordinary occasions they might have been good enough to make a fairly close match of it. The truth, of course, is that Troon seemed to suit Taylor and Vardon better than St. Andrews. The greens at St. Andrews were hard and glossy; those at Troon were much stiffer. Consequently they suited both Taylor and Vardon better in pitching up as well as in putting. Where Braid and Herd fell behind was in the uncertain driving of Braid and the weak putting of Herd. Braid did not play the game which was seen at St. Andrews off the tee and through the green. He pulled and sliced at Troon, and by landing the ball in the rough he was always making his side, so to say, "strain at the collar" in order to recover lost distance and bad direction. Taylor and Vardon kept straight on the line, and by doing so always got good lies for the intermediate shots, while Taylor's deadly pitching on to the stiff greens showed that characteristic part of his game to greater advantage than it has probably ever been displayed before.



THE WELSH CHAMPIONSHIP.

Mr. J. Duncan, jun., the winner of the Welsh Championship played last week.

* * *

Mr. J. Duncan, jun., the winner of the Welsh Amateur Championship for 1905, is a journalist on the staffs of the South Wales Daily News and South Wales Echo, of which newspapers his father, Mr. John Duncan, J.P., of Dros-y-Mor, Penarth, is one of the proprietors. He is twenty-four years of age, and has only been a keen golfer since he left Oxford, where his sport was Rugby football, and doubtless he would have gained his "blue" as a centre three-quarter had he not volunteered for the South African War. He served in Roberts's Horse, and received a medal with four bars. His sister, Miss Blanche Duncan, is a leading golfer, and was runner-up for the Welsh Ladies' Championship of this year.

My Lady of the Links.

By Dr. Macnamara, M.P.

SHE is either a golfer or she is out to display a wonderful white jersey with large gold buttons and a gossamer veil. Usually the latter. You will know for certain if you find a sand model of Mount Ararat on the first tee—scale an inch to the mile.

In this latter, which is by far the more frequent case, all golfing operations may cease upon the course for the time being; for her ladyship is at large. She will lose a ball at every other hole; and, after a protracted and hysterically-directed search, will gleefully pounce upon the first ball that catches her eye and proceed gaily on her devious and Downie, St. Andrews.

THE HOME HOLE AT ST. ANDREWS.

A view of the last putting green at St. Andrews during the professional foursome, showing the bay beyond and a portion of the crowd watching Herd putting.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

wayward pilgrimage. Especially if that ball happens to be a brand-new "Kite." Like her wonderful jersey with the big round gold buttons, her lace stockings, her brown shoes—ah, me! for the havoc those heels of hers work on the greens—her tailor-made skirt, her exquisitely tied gossamer veil, and her artistically-turned Panama, her Caddie-bag is entirely "just so." It is neat and trim of white canvas with newly-minted leather bands. (She always carries for herself, being of the opinion that so to do is to proclaim one's self a golfer without fear of challenge.)

Curiously enough, however, her balls are always horribly hacked, horribly dirty, and of the prehistoric gutty order. If, perchance, you see her playing a new "Spalding White," be sure she has, somewhere or other on the course, played the wrong ball. Indeed, it would have to be a pretty lonely course on which she could not perform this simple operation once or twice in any given week. And as with her balls so her clubs. They are, as a rule, rusty to a degree, and at least one of them is sure to be loose at the head. It is passing strange that in these two particulars she should depart so widely from her general scheme of carefully-thought-out appropriateness.

The rules of the game trouble her but very slightly. She has the coolness and the nerve of an operating surgeon of the R.A.M.C. If she does not cut pits as gashes in her ball with nearly every other stroke, she makes up for the oversight by performing the operation upon the turf. The circumstance does not make her angry. Quite otherwise. She sails sweetly on, strewing her path with the green scalps of victory, and the vivid execrations of the mere male golfer who is following her from afar.

She makes her own local rules to fit the incidents of her game as they arise. A bare patch is, naturally enough, a rabbit scrape, out of which she lifts with avidity but without penalty. The details of her policy of lifting need scarcely be followed, because whenever she lifts—as she does with some little frequency—she always claims to do so without penalty. She has also a very full and generous list of the circumstances under which she is entitled to tee the ball.

THE INTERNATIONAL FOURSOME AT TROON.
A view of the putting green at the end of the Troon links, near Prestwick, Vardon putting

"HER FIRST GOLF LESSON."

But it is upon the putting green that she is the most engaging study. Here her attitude is strictly determined rather by the felt presence of an invisible photographer than by any necessity to sink the ball into the hole. And when the many vicissitudes of her amazing excursion from the tee to the hole are at length ended, and the pin is once more replaced—which, by the way, is a little finale which she very often indeed fails to perform—then commences a long and ardent conversation with her partner. They have been yelling comments across at each other all through the greens. But the really well-sustained debate only commences on the putting green. Out comes a sweet gem of a gold pencil-case, and down goes a dainty little figure—too little, now and then, truth compels me to relate. The debate opens this wise:

"Let's see, I had a short drive and then an iron. That's two!"

"Excuse me, dear," interrupts her ridiculously matter-of-fact partner; "but you took two on the tee. You missed the first drive altogether!"

"Oh, so I did! So I did! I really apologise," she profusely replies. "Two on the tee, then two with my iron, then a mashie——"

"No, dear," again intervenes her more Babbage-like partner. "You had three shots with your iron."

"Oh, no, darling!" she retorts, tartly. "You are really mistaken. My first iron shot landed me down by the hurdles, and my second was just short of the green."

"You are forgetting, dearie," gently but firmly insists her companion. "Your first iron shot took you near the hurdles. Quite right! But you then duffed a shot; and it was your third iron shot that landed you just short of the green!"

She bites nervously at her pencil and looks contemplatively down the vista of a far-away future. At length, after a long and marked silence, punctuated only by the tapping of the pencil-case against her pretty teeth, she says slowly and with conviction: "Quite right! Quite right! Quite right, darling. How silly of me to forget. Two from the tee, three iron shots—quite right, three iron shots—a mashie, and two, no three, yes three putts. That's out in nine. Dreadful, isn't it?"

But that beastly partner is relentless. "Not three putts, dear," says she, sweetly

THE CROWD AT TROON.
Some of the crowd climbing the hills on the Troon links to see the play in the great professional foursome.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

but severely. "Four! Four! Your first putt was not half up. Your second was short. Your third ran past the hole; and it was your fourth that you put down!"

"Four?" demands her ladyship in hysterical query. "Four? Surely not! My first was short. My second ran past the hole; and it was my third that I put down!"

"I am sorry," insists the Inexorable One. "Look," she says, walking halfway across the green. "Your first was about here." ("Yes," nods her ladyship.) "Your second stopped short here," continues the prosaic stickler for hard disagreeable truth, walking a yard or two nearer the hole——

At this point the conversation, having now run into some two or three minutes, and being just as far off an amicable conclusion as ever, is rudely interrupted from the rear. A mere male foursome has been held up during the whole period of this animated discussion, and it has now reached the stage of spluttering and incoherent rage. Eight persons in all, players and caddies, have yelled themselves hoarse, and are weary with frenzied wavings of arms, clubs, and bags. One of the players, a retired Anglo-Indian Major, is mopping his forehead and breathing stertorously with all the preliminary symptoms of apoplexy.

"Oh dear, dear," says her ladyship wearily, "those dreadful men, those dreadful men. I suppose we had better get on!"

They pass slowly to the second tee, still discussing the number of strokes and comparing cards. On the second tee they appear from the distance to enter into an enthusiastic discussion on the advantages of muslin over crêpe de chine for garden-party wear, followed by a demonstration of how Lena Ashwell ought to have crossed the stage as Leah Kleschna in the Safe-robbery Scene in M. Sylvaine's study. Ultimately and with an air of lofty condescension, her ladyship is graciously pleased to let the scowling foursome through.

But there is, I rejoice to say, that other lady on the links. She plays a game that would give trouble to a good ten man on the top of his form. She has the likeliest and most delightfully balanced clubs you ever handled; and plays the mashie with true artistic skill and insight. As for putting, she sends the ball from the club to the hole with a certainty that would not have disgraced Travis on his greatest day. Her drives are always straight and sure, and never less than 120-yds. Her swing is a dream, and her short game would put most scratch men to shame. She does her eighteen holes in quiet, quick, workmanlike style, from the men's tees, and within the two hours. She has far less of the side and vanity of the average man player, and never—unlike him—applauds her own good play. She sees you mark her card with an 8 at the long hole without a murmur. Would there were more like her. As to dress and personal appearance, her ladyship of the white jersey, the big round gold buttons and the gossamer veil, contumeliously dismisses her as "a fright!" But that is only because she is jealous of her golf.

J. Patrick, Edinburgh.

"OLD TOM."

This is the latest photograph of Tom Morris, taken at St. Andrews on the day of the big professional match. Old Tom, who is the sole survivor of the great professional four-some played in 1849, celebrated his eighty-fourth birthday in June last.

Fairweather, St. Andrews.

THE INTERNATIONAL FOURSOME.

The four players who are taking part in the match for £100. Herd and Taylor are standing at the back, Braid and Vardon are seated in front.

Turnberry Golf Course

THE old course of Prestwick has already earned for the county of Ayr a reputation among golfers everywhere. But within the past few years there has been added to the long list of excellent courses in that county another course which is destined in the near future to rank as high as any course in the kingdom.

This is the Turnberry Golf Course.

It is situated upon ground that has historical associations. Near the spot where the golfer drives to the sixth, or Lighthouse hole, was lit unexpectedly the beacon that drew Robert the Bruce. Earl of Carrick, then in hiding in the adjacent Island of Arran, to the mainland to begin the second and successful part of his romantic career. His safe crossing, his landing and seizure of Turnberry Castle—now but a ruin almost level with the ground—near the seventh green, his victorious campaign against the English king, culminating at Bannockburn, are matters of little concern to the average golfer: but that this, the latter half of his career, was begun by the lighting of the beacon near Turnberry Castle, invests the golf course with an interest to Scotsmen, at any rate, that few courses have.

Straight out in mid-ocean, rising 1,100-ft. almost sheer out of the water, majestic and grand, like a watchdog of the Firth, is Ailsa Craig, while miles beyond stretches the enveloping arm of Kintyre. To the north is the Island of Arran, whose lofty peaks—outlined on a fine summer day in a deep blue

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

THE INTERNATIONAL PROFESSIONAL FOURSOME.

(1) A view of the home green at St. Andrews, showing the club-house. (2) Taylor holing his ball for a win. (3) A view of the picturesque tee at the 12th hole, showing Herd driving off. (4) The crowd round the home green. A bird's-eye view of St. Andrews Links, showing the Golfers' Bridge and the Swilcan burn in the middle distance. Some of the spectators at the home green watching Herd putting.

(From copyright photographs by James Patrick, Edinburgh, and others.)

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

against the sky—are a commanding feature in the landscape, while further up the Firth are the more gentle slopes of the Islands of the Cumbraes and Bute. To the south nestles in the bay the fair town of Girvan, and beyond the rugged coast-line, generally flecked with white, winds irregularly to Corsewall Point at the head of Loch Ryan. On the horizon out in the Atlantic can be seen on a clear day little dots of blue, the storm-beaten islands of the North of Ireland.

Since the spring of 1901 neither money nor labour has been spared by the Marquess of Ailsa, on whose ground the course extends, to render it attractive to golfers. Something has still to be done in the way of improvement, notably in affording better lies from several of the tees, and in cutting away the undergrowth along

THE LINK AT TURNBERRY.

The tide coming in at the 7th green. Mr. R. McConnell putting, with Messrs Galloway and Jones looking on.

GOLF AT TURNBERRY.

The 7th teeing ground. Mr. Osborne Marshall (Bombay Golf Club) driving, Messrs. McConnell and Galloway (Turnberry) and Jones (Bombay) looking after the ball.

the sides of the stream which meanders through the course. With these exceptions the course is an exceedingly fine one. "Far and Straight" is undoubtedly the motto of the golfer at Turnberry, for the bents at the sides of the course are both long and thick, and the lover of the brassie will find splendid scope for getting away those fine, low, and far-travelling balls that are a delight alike to player and spectator. The course is rich in the variety of its hazards and holes, while giving to the player of a long ball the full reward of good play. Sand bunkers, strangely enough for a course running along the edge of the sea, are not numerous. This is due to the soil, which, though in the main sandy on the surface, appears to have, at least in the incoming half, a substratum only a few inches thick of a marshy consistency. The lies are so good and the turf is so fine that wooden clubs are used by many of the players instead of brassies.

Several of the holes are of great length, especially the eleventh and the seventeenth, both of which are over 500-yds., the "Bogey" score for the latter being indeed given at 7. The eighth green at the northern limit of the course is situated up on the rocks, with the sea lapping it on two sides and surrounded on the other sides by a grassy cone-shaped mound. When the few slight improvements suggested are carried out the course will be one of the finest. These improvements would quickly solidify the body of the turf, which is inclined to be rather spongy, and would give to the otherwise true putting greens a keenness they at present lack. There is at present a commodious club-house,

THE TURNBERRY COURSE.

A view of the 8th teeing ground. Mr. Jones of Bombay driving, Messrs. Osborne Marshall, McConnell, and Galloway watching the ball.

THE TURNBERRY LINKS.

A picturesque bit of the course. Mr. A. Lauder of Tooting Bec, Troon, and Turnberry driving. and by next year it is anticipated that the light railway from Ayr to Girvan will be finished. As there is to be a station on the railway about 200-yds. from the first tee, and as an hotel of considerable size is being at present erected by the railway company adjoining, golfers, either residing in Girvan or at the hotel, will have facilities for playing over what will be in a few years one of the finest courses in the kingdom. J. A. MARSHALL.

FIXTURES.

September 9.—Glasgow, Autumn Meeting at Killermont.
September 9.—Formby, Autumn Meeting.
September 9.—Tantallon, Autumn Meeting.
September 13.—Littlehampton, Autumn Meeting.
September 13.—Newquay, Lang Cup.
September 15.—Newquay, Headland Cup.
September 16.—Portmarnock, Gold Medal.
September 16—Glasgow, Autumn Meeting at Gailes.
September 16-18.—Lytham and St. Anne's, Autumn Meeting.
September 18-22.—Le Touquet, Open Meeting.
September 21.—Alnmouth, Autumn Meeting.

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. LX.—Mr. Richard Biddulph Martin, Unionist M.P. for the Droitwich Division of Worcestershire, and one of the Stewards at the Worcester Musical Festival.

THE Martins were notable burgesses and chief magistrates of Saffron Walden both before and after the memorable year of the Armada, when Sir Richard Martin, citizen and goldsmith, of the Harpe in Cornhill, served the office of Lord Mayor of London. Sir Richard, who became Warden of the Mint, died Father of the Court of Aldermen towards the end of James I.'s reign, and a century later Thomas Martin, a member of the same family, joined forces with Andrew Stone in carrying on the prosperous banking business established by the Duncombes and their early associates at the sign of the Grasshopper, conveniently situated in Lombard Street, between the Unicorn and the Plough, and in close proximity to Change Alley and Garraway's Coffee-house. In 1723 John Martin purchased the fair estate of Overbury in Worcestershire, and eighteen years later the electors of Tewkesbury sent him to Westminster as one of their representatives, the triumph of Martin and Calvert being commemorated by some of the earliest Worcester plates in existence. A few years after that, viz., in 1746, Ebenezer Blackwell, the friend and champion of George Whitefield and the Wesleys, associated himself with the Martins and the Stones in still further promoting the fame and fortune of the Grasshopper, of which one or more members of the Martin family have been the guiding spirits and presiding geniuses ever since. Tewkesbury remained faithful to the squires of Overbury down to the time of its extinction as a Parliamentary borough twenty years ago, its last member being Mr. Richard Biddulph Martin, who entered his father's business in 1861. Between 1750 and 1850 the Martins, in accordance with the spirit of camaraderie which prevails amongst great bankers, as well as amongst great brewers, had intermarried with the Barings, the Labouchères, the Stones, and the Thorntons. Quite at the beginning of Queen Victoria's reign Mr. Robert Martin had exchanged the old family house in Lombard Street for a roomy mansion in Eaton Square, then only half finished, and generally regarded as "quite in the country." Here in 1838 was born Mr. Richard Biddulph Martin, the sitting member for the Droitwich Division, the last of his race to perpetuate the old Tewkesbury electioneering cry of "Martin and Calvert for ever!" When not looking after his model cottages and other kindred interests at Overbury, Mr. Martin is to be found in a roomy house on the sunny side of Hill Street, Berkeley Square, the historic thoroughfare associated with the lives and memories of "the Good Lord Lyttelton" and his friend Elizabeth Montagu, the first Lord Malmesbury and the first Lord Camden, Lords de Tabley, Albert Conyngham, and Colborne, all of them enthusiastic picture collectors; Henry Brougham, Admiral Philip Durham, last survivor of the "Royal George," and last, but not least, Lord Cornwallis, who built the abode now occupied by Mr. Martin, in the days when architects believed that thick layers of sea-shells between the floors was an unfailing specific against noise.

Born in the year of the late Queen's Coronation, Richard Biddulph Martin first went to the private school anathematised by Mr. Augustus Hare as "the worst in all Europe." Thence he migrated to Middlemist's House at Harrow, then under the rule of Dr. Vaughan. Amongst his contemporaries "on the Hill" were the Duke of Abercorn, the late Mr. Edward Stanhope, Sir George Trevelyan, and Mr. Percy Thornton. From the sixth form at Harrow—like his father before him—he went to Exeter College, Oxford, where Dr. Lightfoot, the eminent rector, had every reason to be satisfied with his diligence. As soon as he had taken his degree, in accordance with the family traditions, he entered the Lombard Street counting-house, where he soon acquired the business traditions of the Grasshopper.

Bassano.

MRS. R. BIDDULPH MARTIN

Wife of the Unionist Member for the Droitwich Division of Worcestershire.

Three years later he married Miss Mary Frances Crozier, the daughter of Admiral Crozier of Freshwater in the Isle of Wight. Mr. Martin has since won many honours and occupied many important posts in the realm of finance. He is a director of the Sun Life and Fire Offices, the Assets Realisation Company, the Debenture Corporation, the Anglo-American Debenture Corporation, and a member of the Council of the Corporation of Foreign Bondholders. He was a founder, and has been president, of the Institute of Bankers, and was for a time chairman of the British North Borneo Company. He has also done good work as one of the honorary secretaries of the Metropolitan Hospital Sunday Fund.

Four years after his marriage Mr. Martin unsuccessfully fought the battle of Liberalism in East Worcestershire in conjunction with the present Lord Cobham. He was not more fortunate twelve years later when he offered himself as a candidate for the City of London; but he scored his first political success during the same year at Tewkesbury, where Thomas Martins, John Martins, and James Martins had found favour in the eyes of the electors for an entire century. The political light of Tewkesbury was extinguished five years afterwards, and Mr. Martin failed to capture Chelmsford as a Liberal in 1885, and in the following year he was again defeated in the Ashburton Division of Devon, where, as a Unionist, he opposed the late Mr. Seale Hayne. In 1891 he won a signal victory in the Droitwich Division of Worcestershire, and was unopposed in 1895. In 1900 he beat Mr. C. B. Harmsworth by a substantial majority. The interests of the agriculturist and the manufacturer are pretty fairly divided in the constituency now represented by Mr. Martin. Salt is, of course, the staple trade of Droitwich itself, but ironworks exist and flourish at Stourport and Stourbridge, and Kidderminster represents the carpet manufacturers of the constituency.

The views of Mr. R. B. Martin on the Fiscal question differ very materially from those of his brother banker, Mr. Felix Schuster. He is in full sympathy with Mr. Chamberlain, and sees no reason why the laws relating to our Fiscal system should be treated as immutable more than any other provisions of the Legislature, nor does he consider that banking has been built up on a basis of Free Trade more than any other business. He regards the policy advocated by Mr. Chamberlain as the only one which can give England the benefits of real Free Trade, and claims for the Government the right to regulate the Fiscal conditions of the country as the occasion requires it. As far as the next General Election is concerned, Mr. Martin is not likely to again present himself as a candidate unless perfect unanimity of opinion and action exists between Unionists and Conservatives.

Mr. Martin was once known as an ardent and accomplished toxophilite. He is also an accomplished artist. Throughout the whole of Worcestershire he is recognised as a model landlord, who has made the health, comfort, and well-being of his tenants and labourers one of the great objects of his life. There are few cottages in England better built or more commodious than those to be seen in the ideal village which surrounds Overbury Court, and are a noticeable feature in one of the loveliest districts of picturesque South Worcestershire.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

THE RISE OF THE BRASSERIE.

IF a French Rip Van Winkle, after an absence of only twenty years, were to come back to Paris, he would utter a pathetic cry, "What have they done to my Boulevards?" And those who heard him would smile good-naturedly, and explain to him that, whilst he was asleep, the world progressed, and that the Boulevards, like everything else, had undergone improvements.

For all that, poor old Rip's judgment would have been correct, for he would have seen at a glance what the man of the present day fails to notice—that the Boulevards have lost their former cachet. They have retained their animated aspect, with their tastefully-arranged shops, their glittering cafés, and the cosmopolitan crowd on its way from the Madeleine to the Rue Montmartre, or vice versâ. But a new element has sprung up, an element that did not exist twenty years ago, which has revolutionised Paris life—the Brasserie.

Victor Hugo's famous words, "Ceci tuera cela," can be fitly applied to Brasseries and restaurants. The beer-house, the huge modern monster, is slowly devouring the restaurant, making a plucky fight, but bound to be worsted in the end.

The streets of Paris, more than those of any other capital in the world, reflect the life of its inhabitants, and the physiognomy of our streets plainly shows the curious evolution which has taken place. This evolution is most discernible in the aspect of the restaurants—the pulse of the Boulevards. These famous establishments are beginning to be slowly deserted by the Parisian, and, were it not for their clientèle of strangers, would, in many instances, have to close.

Of course, many Frenchmen fond of good living continue to patronise Voisin, Paillard, etc., but the majority of them have gone over to the enemy, the Brasserie. It all came about very naturally, and in a measure messieurs les restaurateurs have themselves to blame, by keeping up their prices at high-water mark. As long as business was flourishing the Parisian did not mind paying dearly for a delicately-cooked sole, or a cutlet done to a turn, but when trade began to fall off, he suddenly discovered that lunching or dining at a first-class restaurant is an expensive pleasure, and he started searching for a place where a good repast could be had at a less exorbitant price. He had to search long, for there was little or no supply to this sudden demand. Between the gargotte and the fashionable restaurant there was no middle house. Then the Brasserie sprang into life, and has since become an institution. And it is here that the extraordinary evolution to which I referred is so strongly noticeable.

A well-known French author on his return from England—some forty years ago—wrote how he was nearly poisoned by that horrible beverage called beer, and he expressed the hope that this "Satan's brew" would never cross the Channel and supersede the "bon vin de France." In those days there were just a few beer-houses in Paris, solely frequented by strangers. Twenty years later the French began to take to "Satan's brew," yet steering clear of the beer-house. To-day, however, the incredible has come true. It is the stranger who has invaded the restaurant, and the Parisian who has taken possession of the Brasserie. If an English author wants to study the modern Frenchman, let him spend a couple of days at Pousset's in the Boulevards, where he will get more information—if he be observant—than if he wastes his time on Montmartre or the Latin quarter.

Although there are now many famous Brasseries in Paris, I purposely mention Pousset because it is the most ultra-Parisian. They are doing a tremendous trade—their turnover about £80,000 per year—and the food served is both excellent and by no means exorbitant in price. People at first only used Pousset's as a restaurant, or a place where they could obtain a capital glass of beer. In the course of time, however this Brasserie has become something like the Forum in ancient Rome. All kinds of people assemble there to discuss their affairs, and I dare say that more business is transacted there than on many a public exchange. It is a sort of neutral ground where men of different political creeds meet without coming into collision—the ideal entente cordiale on a wider scale. This entente is amusing to watch in connection with journalists, who have selected Pousset's as their headquarters. The amount of "copy" that issues every night from this establishment is prodigious. Here we can see the man from the Royalist Gaulois seated at the same table as the representative of the Socialistic Petite République. They are both busy writing—possibly against one another—but they clink their glasses, and part with a hearty shake hands and an "Au revoir, mon vieux."

MLLE. ANDREE MEGARD

The celebrated actress recently appearing at the Odéon Theatre.

Dramatic critics crowd in after a "first night," and the printer's devils rush to and fro with matter to be set up or proofs to be corrected, and there is excitement around the critics' table when the bourgeois, supping with his wife and friend, finds out that the man with the loosely-tied cravat is M. Catulle Mendès or M. Emanuel Arène.

To see Pousset's at its best, however, you must look in on popular fête days, or on Christmas Eve. The tables are retained in every nook and corner of the big establishment, and have been booked a month in advance. But on this night there is little beer drunk. Champagne of every well-known brand, and of many an unknown one, flows like water, and everybody drinks and is merry "all the night long," as the poet sings.

Brasseries are famous places for umbrellas. Stacks of them are found after the houses close, and, strangely enough, are seldom or never claimed. After a month they become the perquisites of the head-waiters, and make beautiful presents to provincial relations.

FRANCIS KEYZER.

Digitized by Google

AT DEAUVILLE.

COPYRIGHT LIBRARY

A POPULAR FRENCH RACE-MEETING. Topical Press.

The Deauville race week is one of the pleasantest of the Normandy meetings. Many leading members of Parisian Society are to be seen at the races, and participating in the various amusements in the evening. Notable features during the meeting were the victory of Ecots in the Grand Prix de Deauville, and the sale of a yearling by Cyllene for £3,000.

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

THE concluding week of the Solent big-class racing was one of the busiest of the year. As a rule, the two days' racing at Southsea under the flag of the Royal Albert Club brings this series to a conclusion, and yachts have ample time to replenish stores, if necessary, and get down to Weymouth. This year, however, the Royal Southampton stepped in with two days—the Wednesday and Thursday. The former of these had been arranged, while the latter was a postponement from an earlier day in the month, owing to the presence of the French Fleet in the Solent. There was, therefore, only one day on which to get down to Weymouth, after which it has to be borne in mind that there is only the Sunday intervening between that fixture and Torquay for the passage, so that those craft sailing at every regatta have, with the exception of one Sunday, been under way every day from the opening of Ryde Week on the 15th of the month until the close of Torquay on the 29th. When it is further taken into consideration that the period covered by these dates was characterised by a spell of really hard weather, even those unacquainted with the sport can begin to realise that crews of racing yachts get by no means an idle time.

Last week, in these columns, I referred to the many mishaps that had occurred at the Royal Southern Regatta. All necessary repairs to the different vessels had, however, soon been attended to, and nearly all were able to hoist racing colours again on the Monday. More accidents, and some of a more serious character, were, however, in store.

There was a fine breeze at Southsea on the Monday, and, being able to reach from mark to mark all round the course, the competing vessels soon completed their journey in fast times, Dr. Douglas Kerr's yawl, Valdora, securing the Albert Cup in the big handicap, and Maymon, last year's champion 52-footer, carrying off the prize in her class. On Tuesday the wind was fresh, but nearly all the boats ventured on setting jackyarders. There were, however, some hard puffs, in one of which White Heather was completely dismasted, fortunately without injury resulting to anyone aboard. This mishap has, of course, put further racing for her this season out of consideration.

An interesting race on this day was the handicap for vessels between 25 tons and 50 tons Thames measurement, and as there was no class race for the 52-footers, two of these entered for the handicap. Only one—Britomart—started, and her chief opponents were the older boats of her own class. She was, of course, scratch boat, and it was amusing to see how carefully she was watched by the others, several in turn giving her a weather bowing as they beat to the first mark. While Britomart was engaged with these, Senga got clear away with a long lead. Britomart, when she ultimately got clear, soon commenced to reduce Senga's lead. She overtook her, and had the barren honour of finishing first, the prizes going to others that saved their time from the scratch boat.

The Southampton Club races were started from Calshot. On the opening day there was a hard wind, and all the vessels sailed under reduced canvas. Moyana and Maymon in the 52-ft. race got aground, and Britomart beat the American boat Sonya by 2-min. Britomart has been none too successful during this, her first season; but from her performances in the Solent one almost concludes that she is the hard-weather boat of her class, which is somewhat remarkable when it is considered that she is an extreme type. The second day at Calshot was a very soft one, and racing was tedious. The finish of the 52-footers was interesting. After having been widely separated, three of them closed up and finished within a few lengths of each other, Britomart repeating her success of the preceding day.

The hardest weather of the week was, however, reserved for Weymouth on Saturday. Vessels commenced racing with jackyarders aloft, but later in the day had bare topmasts. The course at Weymouth is a very fine one, and vessels are always within sight. The racing was watched with interest by large numbers of people assembled on the pier and on the Nothe, and there were plenty of exciting incidents. Twenty-one vessels started in the four events of which the programme was composed, but only ten completed the course, the retirement of the others being due in many instances to mishaps of a more or less serious nature. In the big handicap, Vendetta, which might have been expected to do well on such a day, broke her gaff quite early in the race. In the second round a bad smash happened between Lorna and Rosamond. The former was well within her time from all her opponents at the end of the first round, and need not have troubled about any boat in particular, but in overtaking Rosamond on a reach, she elected to try for her weather. Rosamond naturally luffed. Lorna, an older craft, is probably slower on her helm than Rosamond; at any rate, she did not respond smartly to the latter's luff, and ran her bowsprit right across her, with the result that Rosamond lost her bowsprit and had her bulwarks smashed, as well as two of her topside planks split. Brynhild sustained her reputation as a hard-weather craft, and won this race handsomely.

Sonya, in the race for 52-footers, beat Maymon by 20-sec. The other two of this quartette gave up, Moyana with her crosstree carried away. In the handicap for the Weymouth Town Cup, Japonica easily saved her time. This vessel will be remembered as the Herreshoff 20-rater Niagara, which, under Mr. Howard Gould's flag, made such a fine record in the early nineties. CORINTHIAN.

Beken, Cowes.

MAYMON

Winner of the second prize in the race for yachts of the 52-ft. class at the Royal Dorset Yacht Club Regatta at Weymouth. Built at Fairlie, from W. Fife's design, for Mr. S. Butler, Maymon is now in charge of A. Hogarth, who sailed Shamrock I. in the 1899 Cup races.

REGATTA FIXTURES.

September 9.—Royal Corinthian Yacht Club; Matches.
September 9.—Orwell Corinthian Yacht Club; Handicap Match.
September 16.—Minima Yacht Club, Surbiton; Match.
September 23.—Royal Corinthian Yacht Club; Matches.

Digitized by Google

YACHTS OF THE YEAR.

Kirk, Cowes.

BRYNHILD

153-ton yawl, owned by Sir James Pender, Bart. Built by Nicholson of Gosport. She is a splendid vessel in hard weather, won the Cowes Town Prize at the Royal Yacht Squadron Regatta, and finished her racing for this season by winning the principal race at Weymouth in almost half a gale, when she was one of three to finish out of seven starters.

Digitized by Google

The Worcester Musical Festival.

SEPTEMBER 10—SEPTEMBER 15, 1905.

GEORGE III.
From an engraving by Benoist.

THERE are few more interesting or picturesque cities in the Empire than "Ever Faithful Worcester," which, under singularly happy auspices, is to be the scene next week of the 182nd Annual Meeting of the Three Choirs of Worcester, Hereford, and Gloucester, "for the benefit of the Widows and Orphans of Clergymen of the Three Dioceses." The King and Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, as well as the Archbishop of Canterbury, accord their "especial patronage" to this always-important Festival, while, for the first time, the president and the preacher at the opening service next Sunday is Bishop Huyshe Wolcott Yeatman-Biggs, who brings to his new sphere of work in historic Worcester that earnestness and energy which have long made his name a household word in South London. Amongst the stewards figure the names of Lords Coventry, Beauchamp, Cobham, Lifford, Windsor, and Hampton, together with the Deans of Worcester and Hereford, and many of the Parliamentary representatives of the three musical counties, including the Hon. George Allsopp, Sir Frederick Godson, Mr. Alfred Baldwin (the newly-elected chairman of the Great Western Railway), Mr. H. Whiteley, and Mr. Richard Biddulph Martin, the subject of the "Political Pen Picture" in the present issue of THE KING. There are a number of lady stewards, headed by Lady M. A. Winwood Hughes, while Worcester's popular Town Clerk, Mr. Samuel Southall, once more discharges (as very few men can) the arduous duties of hon. secretary. The connection existing between Worcester and music in the past has been long and eventful. The "Ever Faithful" city claims amongst its worthies of the present that most illustrious maestro, Sir Edward Elgar, Mus.Doc., LL.D., who, as might be expected, takes a deep personal interest in the Annual Meetings of the Three Choirs. On this occasion he has given signal proof of his goodwill by arranging the words from the Holy Scripture which form the libretto of the beautiful cantata, "The Hymn of Faith," composed by Mr. Ivor Atkins, the able and popular conductor of the Festival, for production at the afternoon performance of Tuesday next.

QUEEN CAROLINE
The consort of George III.

MME. MARA
The principal female vocalist at the Musical Festival at Worcester in 1788.

FANNY BURNEY
Who has given us in her diary an amusing account of the Worcester Festival of 1788.

The story of the Music Meetings of the Three Choirs from their commencement in 1724 was told by Daniel Lysons, and his work has been recently brought up to date and republished. Many of the most interesting and important of these gatherings have taken place in Worcester. It was there that the philanthropic phase of the "Meetings" was thought out and perfected, and that the beautiful and accomplished Miss Linley (the future Mrs. Sheridan) made her first appearance as a professional singer. This was in 1770, and three years later it was also at Worcester that, as Mrs. Sheridan, she made her last curtsy to an adoring public. Up to the last moment the question of her fulfilling the promise of the programme was a matter of doubt; but Lysons tells us that "Mr. Sheridan, much to his honour, acquiesced in her benevolent intention of singing at the Meeting, and presented the sum of one hundred guineas, which was to have been the remuneration of her transcendent talents, to the charity." In 1777 an Italian opera by Signor Rauzzini of Bath was produced at Worcester, and for a lengthy period from 1785 the sweet-voiced Mme. Mara occupied the highest place in the list of singers.

The publication since last year's Meeting at Gloucester of Mr. Austin Dobson's new and admirable edition of "The Diary and Letters of Mme. d'Arblay" cannot fail to intensify the interest felt in the memorable Festival of 1788, when "Good" King George, "the dear Queen," "the sweet Princesses," with the lively Fanny Burney, Colonel Digby ("Mr. Fairly"), and Colonel Goldsworthy, came by coach from Cheltenham to see the sights and enjoy the fine music, in happy unconsciousness of the coming storm, which, at the time of the threatened

BISHOP HURD
Bishop of Worcester at the time of George III.'s visit to the city.

Digitized by Google

invasion of England by the troops of Bonaparte, narrowly missed making Worcester the temporary metropolis of England, and a place of refuge for the fugitive Royal family. The fourth volume of Mr. Dobson's interesting book tells the whole story of the famous trip to Worcester, from the huzzas of the mob (with one cheer more for the Maids of Honour) and the list of fine company at the episcopal palace, down to impressions of the Dettingen "Te Deum," the frequent mistaking of "poor Lord Courtown with his star" for the King, and Lady Harcourt's inopportune attack of influenza.

That most adroit courtier, Bishop Hurd, proved an excellent host, and so minute is the description given that Bishop Yeatman-Biggs, who now occupies his throne, will have no difficulty in identifying the bedroom in the palace overlooking "Fair Sabrina" ("thick and muddy") occupied 117 years ago by the keen-sighted diarist, who died at Bath in 1840, and whose funeral was performed by her great nephew, the still-living Archdeacon Burney of Croydon! "My bedroom," writes Mme. d'Arblay, "is pleasant, with a view of the distant country and the Severn beneath it, but it is through that of the Princess Royal, which is an inconvenience her Royal Highness submits to with a grace that would make me ashamed to call it one to myself. The parlour for our eating is large and dark and old-fashioned. I made tea in it to-night for Lord Courtown and the two Colonels and Miss Planta, and was so much better for my journey that I felt the influenza nearly conquered." Mme. d'Arblay has much to say about "the very long and tolerably tedious performance, consisting of Handel's gravest pieces and fullest choruses, and concluding with a sermon on the institution of the charity," the inspection of King John's tomb, the evening concerts, the Queen's kindly peep at her bedroom, and the amiability of the Princess Royal, who shared the orgeat prescribed for her own influenza with the convalescent history-maker. Fanny Burney admits that Mara "sung finely," but adds that she was no "favourite of the heart." For that reason the great Gertrude Elizabeth found little favour in the eyes of one who was all heart and sentiment, and Mr. Dobson adds a footnote to the effect that fourteen years later a writer in The Times exclaimed, "How we are ruined! Bruni, the new singer, has 1,400 guineas, Mara 1,000 and a benefit, and Millerd 1,000 for the present opera season." "In the evening the Royal family determined to gratify the Worcester City by appearing at the concert (very Handelian, though not exclusively so), and we (the ladies-in-waiting) were to attend it also, and obliged to make up caps, forsooth, on the occasion, there having yet been none which required any dress without a hat. . . . The box for the Royals was prepared upstairs and made very handsome, but there was no sort of resting-place considered for the attendants, who were forced to stand particular the whole

Harris.

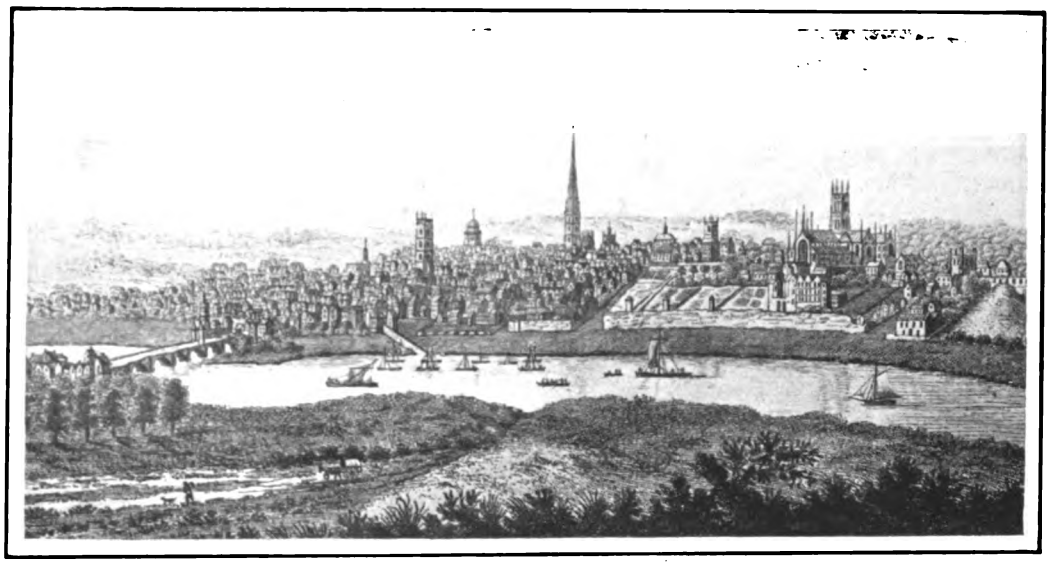
WORCESTER CATHEDRAL

Where the services in connection with the Festival will be held. The orchestra will be accommodated under the west window.



WORCESTER IN 1788.

A south view of the city at the time of the visit paid to it by George III., Queen Charlotte, and the Royal Princesses.

Harris.

SIR EDWARD ELGAR'S BIRTHPLACE.

The Firs, Lower Broadheath, Worcester, where the famous musician was born. Lady Elgar is also a native of Worcester, being the daughter of the late Sir Henry Roberts.

Harris

"ELGAR BROTHERS."

Sir Edward Elgar's father was an organist, and the composer lived in an atmosphere of music.

Digitized by Google

Elliott and Fry.

DEAN FORREST

Who has been Dean of Worcester since 1891, and is a keen lover of music.

Elliott and Fry.

THE BISHOP OF WORCESTER

The Right Rev. H. W Yeatman-Biggs, who became Bishop of Worcester this year.

Bennett.

MR. SAMUEL SOUTHALL

The Town Clerk of Worcester and Secretary of the Worcester Musical Festival.

time." Mme. d'Arblay might have told us that the King wore his blue and gold uniform, and the Queen and Princesses Royal purple gowns, with silver tissue petticoats. Her Majesty's head-dress was a cap decorated with purple ribands, studded with beads of polished steel, no less brilliant than the finest diamonds. The hair of the "sweet Princesses" was ornamented very gracefully with gauze and flowers, and their slippers were adorned with the polished steel rosettes lately invented by Bailey of Gloucester. George III. held a sort of informal levée in the ancient Guildhall, still almost in the same state that it was on its completion "in the Italian style" towards the end of 1723 by Thomas White, a successful Worcester architect, who had been a pupil of Sir Christopher Wren.

Sovereigns on several occasions have feasted in the Guildhall, the portals of which are guarded by effigies of the two Charleses, on whose account Worcester streets were so often dyed with blood. They are surmounted by a statue of Good Queen Anne. Prior to the Royal visit to the Guildhall of August 8, 1788, the Mayor, Charles Trubshaw Withers, was knighted at the Bishop's Palace. When the King arrived in the long Assembly Room (where the present Mayor and Mayoress, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Leicester—the latter a connection by marriage of Sir Edward Elgar—are to entertain their guests during the coming Festival) his Majesty "took a Queen-cake, and said that, though he had never drunk a glass of wine any morning in his life, he must then take one, which he did, and drank 'Prosperity to the City and Corporation of Worcester.'" A number of Quakers were present, who, without removing their hats, bade his Majesty adieu, with the words "Fare thee well, Friend George." The King took it in excellent part, and afterwards, in compliance with the request of the Recorder, sent to Worcester the portrait which next week will look down benignly on the hospitality of Sir Charles Withers's worthy successor.

Nearly half a century rolled by, and Royal guests once more honoured the Annual Meeting at Worcester with their presence. This was in 1830, when the divine Malibran (whose brother, a centenarian, still lives), Mr. and Mrs. W. Knyvett, Mr. Braham, Miss Marian Cramer, Miss Paton, and Signor De Begnis were the "stars." Princess Victoria (then a girl of eleven) and her mother, the Duchess of Kent, came over from Malvern, and were solemnly conducted to their seats by the Bishops of Worcester and Rochester. The Dettingen "Te Deum" was sung, as usual, and at the special request of the Duchess, "Luther's Hymn" was given by the first and finest interpreter of "The Death of Nelson." Quite apart from the magnificent music, it is difficult to imagine any pleasanter autumnal excursion than a pilgrimage to Worcester, with a visit to the verdant valleys of the Severn and the Wye, never more beautiful than in September, or a run through Shrewsbury and Chester to the woods and waterfalls of North Wales by way of a sequel.

Worcester and its Cathedral provide the traveller with an epitome of English history, and you quit it regretfully in perfect accord with the lines in "Boscobel," which declare most truthfully that "it would be difficult to find in the whole realm a city that can vie with Worcester in cheerfulness, prosperity, or beauty of situation. Its inhabitants are as loyal as ever, and ready to fight the old battles o'er again." Floreat semper fidelis civitas

A. M. B.

Russell.

SIR EDWARD ELGAR

The prominent composer whose "Dream of Gerontius" will be performed at this year's Worcester Musical Festival.

Bennett.

MRS. H. LEICESTER

Mayoress of Worcester, who will act as hostess at the reception on the occasion of the Worcester Festival.

Bennett.

MR. H. LEICESTER

Mayor of Worcester, and a relative by marriage of Sir Edward Elgar, who is himself a native of Worcester.

Digitized by Google

Russell.

MR. IVOR ATKINS
Musical conductor at the Worcester Festival.

Copyright.

MME. ALBANI
Principal soprano soloist at the Worcester Festival.

Russell.

DR. A. H. BREWER
Organist at the morning performances.

Purdy.

MISS MURIEL FOSTER
Contralto soloist at the Worcester Festival.

Hoisted.

MISS AGNES NICHOLLS
Soprano soloist at the Worcester Festival.

Connell.

MME. LUISA SOBRINO
Soprano soloist at the Worcester Festival.

Bassano

MR. JOHN COATES
Principal tenor soloist at the Worcester Festival.

Ellis & Walery.

MISS EDNA THORNTON
Contralto soloist at the Worcester Festival.

Copyright.

MR. ANDREW BLACK
Principal bass singer at the Worcester Festival.

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

WHAT TO SEE IN AND AROUND WORCESTER.

May, Malvern.

THE IVY SCAR ROCK, MALVERN.

This point is one of the favourite resting-places on Lady Mary Talbot's Walk, and commands fine views of the Church and Abbey Gateway. The path extends from the valley near Shrubbery House to the end of North Hill.

THE more fact that the ancient city of Worcester is on the eve of celebrating its 182nd Annual Musical Festival should prove in itself a sufficient inducement for some thousands of pilgrims to direct their steps thither during the coming week. Having dealt at some length with the history of this important event in the preceding pages, the object of our present article is to show in what other directions the visitor can amuse himself during his stay in the "Faithful City." Conveniently served by the Great Western expresses from the East and West, and by the Midland line from the Midlands and the North, the ancient city—for such it is, since the period to which it owes its origin is actually unknown—lies in the heart of the Severn Valley, surrounded by a rich and fertile country, famous for its apple orchards and vast hop-yards. The Malvern Hills, including the lofty heights of the Worcestershire and Herefordshire Beacons, form a bold background, while the scenery in the immediate vicinity is, perhaps, unsurpassed for rural beauty and simplicity.

Known to the present generation as Worcester, it has successively been termed Wygraster, Wyrcester, Wearcester, Wurster, and even Hooster. Mention occurs in the Domesday Book of Wirecestre, which, in the year 1080, was an important city, possessing a mint of its own. It is also on record that when England was invaded by the Danes, Worcester was one of the cities which they plundered and laid in ashes. It was not, however, until the reign of Richard I. that its first charter was granted.

The early history of Worcester tells of many a hard-fought battle and determined siege, the last having occurred in the reign of Charles II., resulting in the defeat of the King by the combined forces of Cromwell and Massey on September 3, 1651—just 254 years ago. Charles, who was compelled to fly for his life, escaped north to Boscobel. In his hasty retreat it happened that a waggon of hay blocked the entrance to Sidbury Gate. The King was obliged to dismount and crawl under the waggon, where a fresh horse was

Photochrom.

WORCESTER CATHEDRAL FROM THE BANKS OF THE SEVERN.

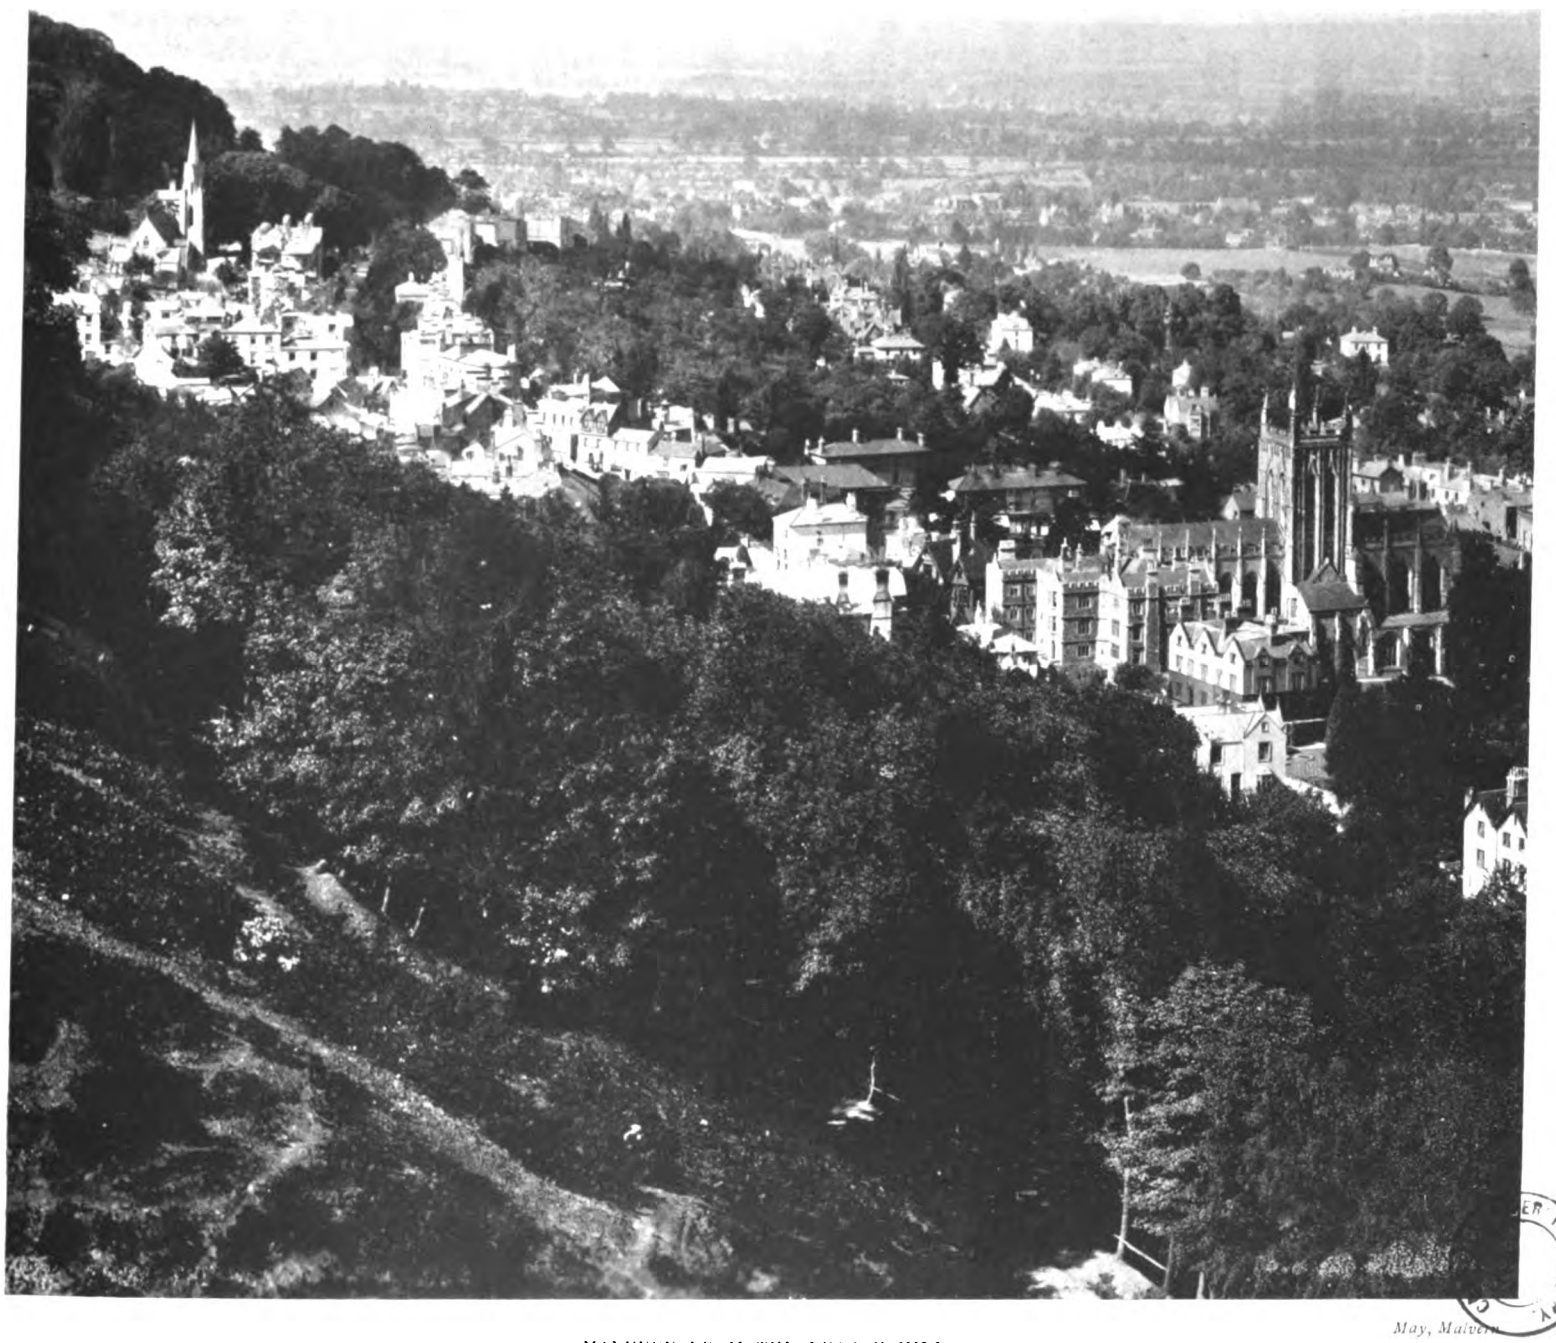
A picturesque view of the wonderful old building in which the 182nd Annual Musical Festival is to be held during the coming week. The Cathedral occupies the site of the original Norman church, of which some interesting traces remain.

Digitized by Google

procured on the other side, enabling him to get clear away.

The chief object of interest to visitors at the present time is, of course, the Cathedral, ascribed to Wulstan, who, nearly a hundred years after his death, was created a saint by Pope Innocent. Every year a special service is held in the Cathedral in memory of St. Wulstan, one of its founders. The great square tower of the Cathedral, upon which Charles I. is said to have held a council of war, forms a notable landmark for many miles around. Charles II. was likewise a frequent visitor to the "Faithfull Citie," and from the famous tower watched the defeat of his army by the Cromwellian forces in 1651. In Sidbury Street can be seen an interesting relic of old Worcester, in the Commandery founded by St. Wulstan in 1085. Succeeding years have naturally wrought many changes in the buildings, though the Minstrel Gallery, the open timber roof, and the fine diamond-pane windows still remain in good preservation. Application for permission to view the interior should be made to Mr. J. Littlebury, the courteous keeper of the Commandery.

Worcester Castle has long since disappeared; its site was in Castle Street. The only remaining relic is the ancient gateway, with embattled tower, called King Edgar's Tower. Here are kept the charters and wills of the diocese, also the marriage contracts. It is perhaps not generally known that so interesting a relic as the marriage contract of William Shakespeare and Anne Hathaway, dated 1582, is in the keeping of the registrar. An entry also occurs in the register recording the death of Mrs. Shakespeare in 1623. This by no means exhausts the many objects of interest which the city of Worcester offers to antiquarian and historian. On no account should a visit be omitted to the famous Worcester



May, Malvern

MALVERN FROM THE BEACON HILL.

A general view of this celebrated health resort, showing the celebrated old Priory Church, dedicated to St. Mary, and formerly the church of a Benedictine Abbey. The building, which in the early part of the nineteenth century was almost in ruins, was carefully restored by the late Sir Gilbert Scott, R.A. The Priory Gateway is interesting as being the last remains of the ancient monastic building.

Digitized by Google

May, Malvern.

A VIEW OF MALVERN CHASE

Formerly known as the great Forest of Malvern. The views from these hills are very extensive, including more than nine counties, with the Cathedrals of Worcester, Gloucester, and Hereford.

Royal Porcelain Works, of which we give an account elsewhere. Among other industries are the glove factories of Dents' and Fownes', where every conceivable kind of covering for the hand is made, and the works of Messrs. Lea and Perrins, whose famous sauce has earned a world-wide reputation. The "ancient city" has many other features of interest, notably the nurseries of Richard Smith and Co., among the largest in the kingdom.

Situated on the banks of the silvery Severn, almost in the centre of the county, the city of Worcester has many advantages as a centre for the excursionist.

Among the places that will repay a visit, and which are within an easy day's journey, are Malvern, Droitwich, Cheltenham, Gloucester, Evesham, Tewkesbury, and the lovely Severn Valley. The eight-mile drive to Malvern takes us through some delightful scenery. The country is largely given over to fruit-growing, while the miles of hop-fields remind one very much of Kent. A feature of this part of the country is the quaint old half-timbered cottages, with their white-washed walls, which lend a distinctly old-world appearance to the scene.

May, Malvern.

THE BRITISH CAMP ON HEREFORDSHIRE BEACON.

There are few more interesting spots to be found among the Malvern Hills than the British Camp, where Caractacus is reported to have entrenched himself during the Roman occupation.

May, Malvern.

HEREFORDSHIRE BEACON.

One of the two loftiest heights of the Malvern Chain of hills. From the summit, an elevation of 1,370-ft., can be seen the whole extent of the ancient Malvern Chase.

Of the town of Malvern itself, with its grand old Priory Church, which can be seen for many miles from the surrounding heights, volumes might be written. The town is most picturesquely situated in the centre of what was formerly the Royal Forest, afterwards the Chase of Malvern, and surrounded by hills. Dr. Nash in his excellent description of Worcestershire says: "It is beyond the power of an antiquary to describe the beautiful prospects from this hill (Malvern). If a distant view delights, here you may see the counties of Monmouth, Hereford, Radnor, Brecknock, Salop, Worcester, Gloucester, Stafford, Warwick, etc., and the three Cathedrals of Worcester, Gloucester, and Hereford, together with many market towns. If you are pleased with a nearer view, the pear trees of Worcestershire when in bloom furnish such a scene as the world cannot equal. On the western side the apple trees of Herefordshire, with their purple hue, make an agreeable diversity; add to this the varied ground, the beautiful little hills, and rich woods which improve the Herefordshire prospect. If to the beauty of the situation we add the purity and salubrity of the air, we may venture to report that, at least for summer months, Malvern is as desirable a residence as any in England."

The country for many miles around Malvern is most interesting from the sightseer's point of view. Ripple, with its twelfth century church, is alone worth visiting, if only for the sake of seeing its quaint old square of houses, with ancient preaching cross in the centre.

Starting from Worcester, one has the choice of numberless excursions both up and down the Severn. There is a daily service of steamers from the bridge to Holt Ferry, while Stourport, Tewkesbury, Gloucester, and Sharpness are all within the compass of a day's journey by water. For the convenience of those who decide to spend a holiday in this interesting district, it may not be amiss to mention that comfortable hotel accommodation may nearly always be relied upon. For example, in Worcester there are the Star Hotel, Hop Market Hotel, and Unicorn Hotel; in Malvern one can choose between some half-dozen of the best hostelries; in Droitwich the Raven and the Worcestershire, both being equally accessible to the Brine Baths.

Digitized by Google

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

H Walter Barnett.

MISS ELEANOR ROBSON

Who is at present playing in America in "Merely Mary Ann." It is announced that when next Miss Robson visits this country it will be to appear in the rôle of a Salvation Army girl in a new play which Mr. Bernard Shaw is writing. The heroine will be a "Major" in the famous missionary army.

Digitized by Google

THE SERVICES.

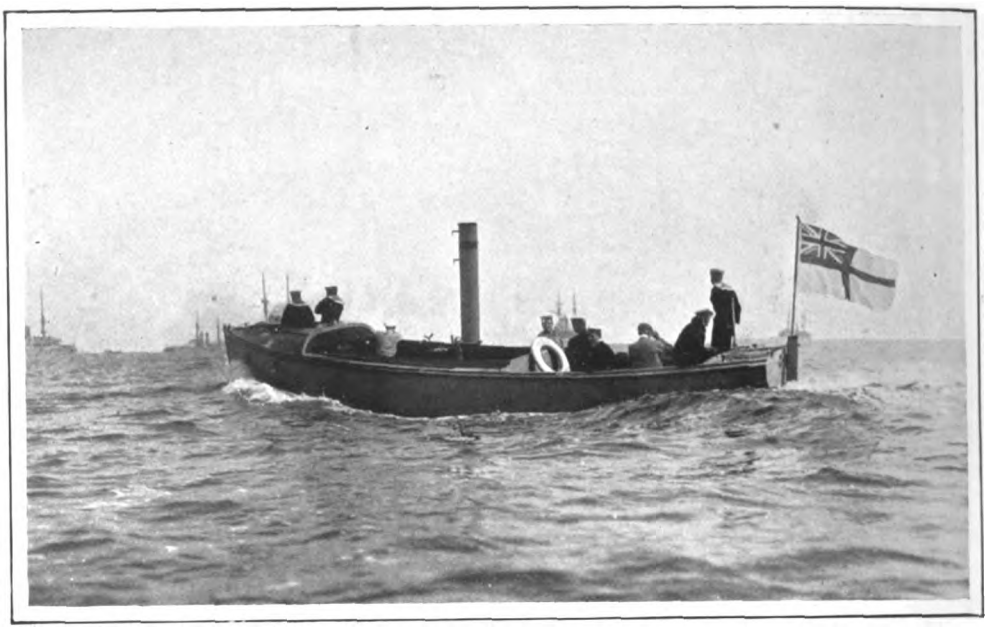
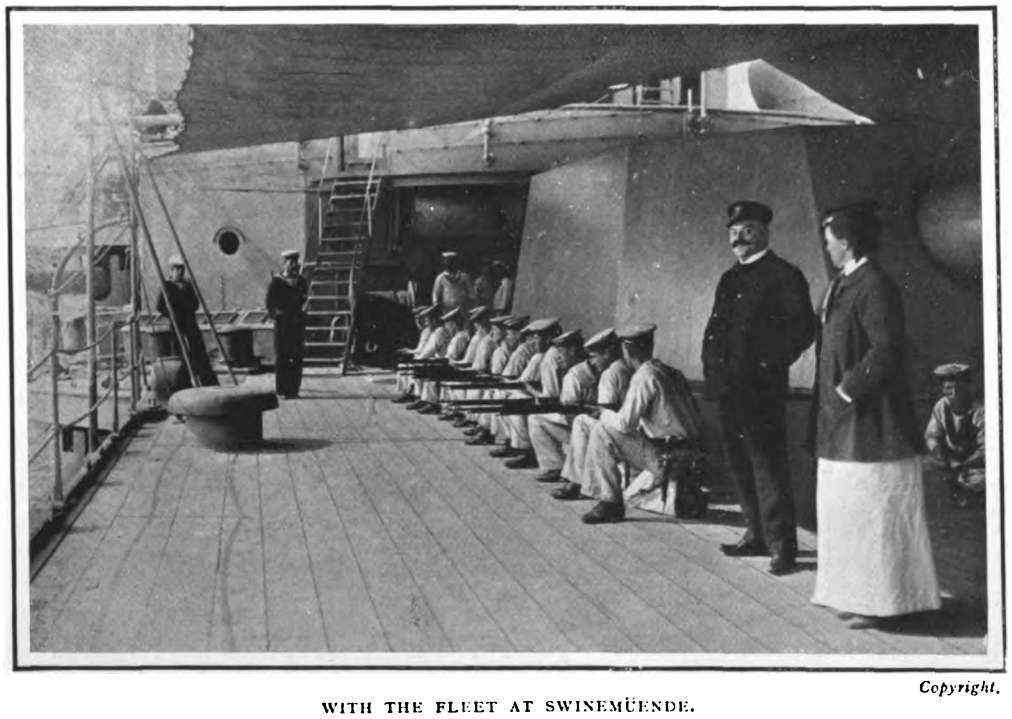
THERE is, the writer of these notes understands, ground for the belief that the authorities really "mean business" in regard to the present movement as to expenses in the cavalry. The harmful thing about previous pronouncements of the same sort was not only that nobody took them seriously, but that too often they were publicly turned into ridicule. In one well-known case which occurred a good many years ago, the fiat had gone forth that champagne was no longer to be given at inspection luncheons. Shortly afterwards a Royal personage went down to inspect a certain very swagger corps commanded by a well-known officer. At lunch the latter remarked to his illustrious guest, "I am sorry, your Royal Highness, that we cannot offer you champagne, as it's against the regulations, but I can recommend the mess ginger-beer." The latter, which, of course, was champagne, was duly served, and H.R.H. partook of it without a murmur, remarking what capital ginger-beer it was. Regulations thus more honoured in the breach than in the observance could do little good. Still more deplorable was the state of things which led to such doubtful tricks as the keeping of a double set of accounts, a private one in addition to that produced when required for the general's inspection. The plainness of speech with which the Army Council has denounced this system is significant. Still more significant will be the official action if the new regulations are not most rigidly adhered to. The belief is prevalent that still some commanding officers will not realise the situation. In such cases there is not much question of risk involved. It is a practical certainty that short shrift awaits the commanding officer, however popular and well thought of, who makes the mistake of not taking the Army Council seriously in this matter.



Copyright.

WITH THE FLEET AT SWINEMÜENDE.

An English picket-boat taking officers to the German ships.



Copyright.

WITH THE FLEET AT SWINEMÜENDE.

Members of the German Navy League on board H.M.S. "Triumph."

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR E. G. BARROW, whose name has recently been prominently before the public in connection with the resignation of Lord Curzon, is such a well-known and highly-distinguished soldier that any recapitulation of his career would be superfluous. But, as one who worked with him many years ago, and who has since watched his rapid advancement with great interest, the writer may express a doubt whether Mr. Brodrick and the Home Government did not attach unnecessary importance to General Barrow's association with the régime from which it is intended to make such a striking departure. For he stands on a somewhat different plane from the half-dozen or so better-known officers who have been closely identified with the Military Department of the Government of India, in that he is really much more a fighting soldier than an office man. It is true that he was for some years in the Military Secretariat; but he had an excellent previous record of war service, and has since last January held command of the Peshawur Division, distinctly a fighting general's post. As Military Supply Member of the Viceregal Council, General Barrow would have furnished a combination of capacity and experience which might well have compelled consideration and respect even from his redoubtable colleague, the Commander-in-Chief.

THE Army Council has doubtless acted wisely in abandoning its intention to abolish the rank of Brigadier-General, and to appoint officers as "Brigadiers" instead. But the latter rank is of very respectable antiquity. It may not be generally known that it was at one period in our history held by an officer second only in combatant importance to the Commander-in-Chief. This was in the reign of Charles II., when for a short time the few thousands of troops which constituted the British Regular Army were under the chiefship of James Duke of Monmouth. The latter had under him as his "eldest brigadier of foot" the man who was afterwards largely responsible for smashing Monmouth at Sedgemoor, namely, of course, Colonel John Churchill, later Duke of Marlborough.

CAPTAIN THE HON. ROBERT FRANCIS BOYLE, recently appointed to the "Leviathan," and as Flag-Captain to Rear-Admiral Lambton, was a "middy" in the "Minotaur" during the Egyptian War of 1882, and he also wears the General Africa medal with the clasp for Gambia, 1904, for services rendered on the West Coast in the expedition against the slave-raiding chieftain Fodi Silah. He was Lieutenant of Admiral Bedford's flag-ship, the "Raleigh," at the time, and landed with the Naval Brigade at Bathurst. In the course of the operations he was dangerously wounded and obtained a mention in despatches. Captain Boyle is the second son of the Earl of Shannon, who sits in the House of Lords as Baron Carleton. He has two younger brothers in the Navy, both Commanders, one the Hon. Algernon, who is in the "Isis" on the North American Station, the other, the Hon. Edward, who is Commander of the "Repulse" at Chatham.

Digitized by Google

The Distribution of Wealth.

THE STORY OF A WORCESTER ENTERPRISE.

IN books on Political Economy there is an ever-recurring phrase: "The Distribution of Wealth." It is a phrase which sums up very tersely the essential factors to national well-being. A country may have a goodly number of millionaires, it may have an opulent aristocracy, but not the less it is a poor country if the people are driven to live at a low standard of comfort. The wealthiest nation is that which best succeeds in distributing its natural products and its manufactures among all classes of the people. The foundation of statesmanship is to foster a just distribution of wealth. It should, too, be the aim of every good citizen to play his part, in the first place, by taking his share in the nation's work and, in the second place, by a wise and judicious expenditure of his earnings, with the view of promoting the happiness and comfort of his family, and of maintaining his self-respect in the circle of friends among whom he moves.

The Futility of Petty Meanness: A Plea for Common-sense.

Hoarded wealth is wasted wealth. The miser who stores up his gold is a useless member of society. Thrift is only a virtue so long as it is not allowed to degenerate into avarice and petty meanness. Let a man by all means make due provision for his future, but that he should starve to-day in order that he may feed fat to-morrow is an act of supreme folly; it is bad hygiene and bad economics. A man of sense is he who reasonably enjoys life as he travels along the path of years, who takes care to have a reserve for the proverbial rainy day, but who never allows a craven fear of the future to numb or deaden the natural and healthy desire to be happy. As a man sows, so he reaps. If he sows a youth and middle age of stunted ambitions, timid doubts, and small-minded economies, he reaps an old age of morbid discontent, of despair of wasted years—wasted because he has neglected till too late the faculty of being happy and of making other people happy.

The Circulation of Money: A Basis of Society.

Every man aids in the better distribution of wealth by wisely circulating the money which he earns. When, for instance, a man makes a purchase for himself, he circulates so much money among those who manufacture and sell; when the good wife buys something for the home she circulates so much money amongst those who produce household goods. Society is built up upon the countless little services of this character which we daily render to each other, and which cause what is known as the circulation of money. None of us is self-sufficient; we are all dependent one on the other. The more we can buy of other peoples' products (consistently with our earnings, and with insurance against illness and old age) the more useful we become to society. It should be the aim of every citizen not only to earn good money, but also to spend it well, and thereby indirectly aid his fellow-workers. It is aid of the most practical kind, far better than the so-called "charity" which too often degrades the recipient.

A Fair Day's Work: A Fair Day's Wage.

In Great Britain wealth is as evenly distributed as in any civilised country. By the even distribution of wealth is not meant the idea—commonly, but erroneously, presumed to be held by Socialists—that one man should have just the same weekly money as his neighbour, and that no man should be allowed to have one penny more. That childish bubble was pricked long ago. The even distribution of wealth means that most men in this country get a fair return for their labour. There are, and there always will be, different classes of labour—unskilled labour advancing by grades to skilled labour, and skilled labour in its turn advancing also by grades till we arrive at the labour of the master-mind and the genius. According to the grade of labour, so the pay. And, on a broad estimate, a man in this country of ours gets a fair return for his labour according to its grade. We are not, of course, living in Utopia, and as a country we have many serious problems to contend with, the chief of which is the sad fact of the unemployed.

Education: The Standard of Comfort.

Happily, however, the wage-earners of this country are in the great majority, and the standard of comfort of their lives is high, and is ever advancing. Perhaps the two great factors towards the prosperity of the working classes have been Free Education and Trade Unions. Education has broadened our minds and enlarged our aspirations, with the necessary sequel that we have sought the means to gratify those aspirations. And Trade Unions, whatever objections may be lodged against them in certain details, have incontestably been of great value in enabling workmen to obtain a fair and living wage. The callous craze for cheapness is so deep-rooted in society, that but for the Trade Unions fixing a minimum wage, and thereby putting a check on "sweating," the wage-earning class in the bulk might still be waiting for a fair and living wage. At any rate, be the causes what they may, the solid fact remains that the wage-earners of to-day regulate their lives by a high standard, and that what to a workman fifty years ago would have been almost an affluence, is to-day merely a competence, accepted as in the ordinary run of affairs.

Transport Facilities: Of Primary Importance.

With the raising of the standard of living there have come, of course, the means by which that standard can be attained and maintained. Among these means is the method of distribution of goods. This is closely related to the distribution of wealth, about which political economists are so concerned. Transport facilities by rail and sea are of primary importance. Those facilities our tight little islands fully enjoy, their very tightness enabling merchandise to be expeditiously radiated from a given centre. That great State monopoly—the Post Office—also does excellent work in distribution. The Parcel Post system is an excellent distributive agency of which we may well be proud. The Press, too, helps by advertising all over the country the latest productions of our factories and mills. The channels of distribution are various and complex, and organisation is constantly tending to improve them.

In Touch with the Heart of Things.

When all is said and done, however, we come to the source which feeds these channels. Throughout the country there are many great distributive stores which throw out their tendrils like a generous vine, and keep outlying districts in touch with the heart of things. A notable and very interesting example of one of these stores will now be described. The story deserves to be read both because it is an inspiring lesson in successful enterprise, and because it may be of material value to the reader in the matter of his household economy. The store now under review is that of Messrs. Kay and Co., Limited, of Worcester. It supplies practically every article manufactured, exclusive of provisions, and affords a noteworthy instance of the truth of the saying that "Nothing succeeds like success." Each year brings to it increased business, a greater number of customers, and, therefore, increased employment in producing the variety of goods in which the company trades. The company has a capital of £100,000, and the shareholders are so satisfied with their investment that it is very rare for any exchange of shares to take place. The chairman of the company is Mr. Kilbourne Kay, J.P., and ex-Sheriff of Worcester, whose genius for organisation has brought the business to its present magnificent proportions, and, like many other firms, the company finds from experience that a provincial city is infinitely better as a distributing centre than a London house. For this reason the firm, some time since, relinquished their London establishment.

A Few Words about Worcester: The New and the Old.

Worcester is a city of great interest and charm, in which the new and the old are happily blended, the kind of town which our cousins in the United States, so unaccustomed to the mingling of ancient and modern, regard with envious admiration. It dates back at least to the seventh century, when its beautiful cathedral was built by certain monks who enjoyed a placid, if primitive, existence on the banks of the Severn. Its quaint traditions have accumulated through the centuries, and the Worcester citizen of to-day, hard-headed business man though he be, has always a sentimental corner in his heart for the city in which he dwells, and for its historical association, which he will relate to you any day with pride. The county of Worcester ranks as one of the best in the kingdom for beauty of scenery, well-timbered acres, undulating and delightful hills and valleys, and rich fruit-growing orchards. The historical fame of Worcester and its cathedral is dimmed in the eyes of an outsider by its success in commercial enterprise. It is, firstly, the great seat of the English glove trade. Messrs. Dent and Co. and Messrs. Fownes Brothers—household names at every hosier's—have large factories in Worcester, where some thousands of workpeople are employed. The city also boasts the largest railway signal works in the world. It is also the home of the beautiful Royal porcelain, to which it gives its name. "Royal Worcester" is known wherever Art is appreciated. Worcester, too, has an unique title to succulent fame, for where in the wide world is the bon vivant who does not know Messrs. Lea and Perrin's Worcester Sauce? Finally, among the many commercial honours to which the city lays claim, a high place must be reserved for Messrs. Kay and Co.'s truly remarkable store.

Digitized by Google

An Honourable Record of Success: One Steady Progress.

The foundation of this well known firm dates back to 1780, and the present proprietors are naturally very proud of their long record of business success. There are always distinct advantages in dealing with an old-established firm, for it cannot fail to be influenced by the honourable traditions which gained for it in the past a wide circle of clients. It is obvious, for instance, that a firm with such traditions will not risk a well-earned reputation by selling goods of indifferent quality, or by tampering in other ways with the faith of its customers. Messrs. Kay and Co.'s success is no mere meteoric brilliancy. The business has acquired its present strength by a constant but gradual increase of trade year by year. Never once has the business gone back; its history has been one steady progress. In a limited sense, therefore, the business is conservative, but that is only a rather stilted way of saying that it is safe. Conservative in the sense of being behind-date, Messrs. Kay and Co. certainly are not. Enterprise, enterprise, enterprise has been the keynote of their success. No firm could merit better the praise of being up-to-date.

Copyright.

VIEW OF AN ORDER OFFICE, KAY'S UNIVERSAL STORES, WORCESTER.

Some of Messrs. Kay and Co.'s clerks dealing with a morning's correspondence in the "Shopping by Post" department.

The Method: Simple and Straightforward

Messrs. Kay and Co.'s method of doing business is a triumph of organisation. Their travellers reconnoitre the country, and are the scouts of the business. They visit every town and village in the British Isles, and are daily promoting the interests of the business. The life of a successful traveller is at the best of times one of strenuous endeavour, and he must always be prepared to meet unexpected difficulties. No matter what may be the general state of trade, he is expected to make progress, and in this respect Messrs. Kay's are splendidly served by a highly-efficient and loyal staff of workers, between whom and the firm the most cordial relations have always existed, and who participate in the prosperity of the firm upon a profit-sharing basis. The firm deal exclusively among the better-class artisans, and have what they may honestly term a splendid connection throughout the kingdom. The basis of the system is very simple. To those who wish to buy upon the instalment system Messrs. Kay and Co. supply goods at catalogue prices, while to those who wish to pay cash down they give discount at the rate of 1s. in the £. In other words, the firm only charge 5 per cent. for deferred payments. Nothing could be fairer to all concerned. As the company only deal with the better class of artisans, they would just as soon supply upon the instalment system as for cash down.

An Army of Agents: Half a Million Clients.

The Agency Department of the business was established about twenty-five years ago by Mr. Kilbourne Kay, the chairman of the company. Many of the present agents started with the company the first year this branch was opened, while there are thousands who have been representing the company for periods ranging from five to fifteen years. A better proof of the conduct of the business could not be given; it is striking testimony to the permanent place it has taken in our home trade. When the business was formed into a company, many of the successful agents became shareholders, thereby acquiring a double interest in promoting the welfare of the concern. To hundreds of agents, their duties are a source of regular income, in addition to affording them a capital training for more important positions in commercial life. At the present time the company have about 500,000 customers and 10,000 agents on their books. These figures are eloquent of the widespread nature of the business. Agents and customers come from all parts of the United Kingdom. The turnover runs into hundreds of thousands of pounds, enabling the firm to take the best advantage of market conditions, and to sell their goods at bedrock prices.

The Instalment System: Based on Sound Financial Principles.

A little time ago the Instalment System, or, as The Times calls it, the "Deferred Payments System," was sneered at by some people. The adoption of the system by The Times (the national paper, of which we are all so proud, and the conduct of which is world-famed) for the sale of "The Encyclopædia Britannica" opened the eyes of these prejudiced folk. As a matter of fact, the Instalment System is based on sound principles, and is found most useful in practice. It is the old story of "giving a dog a bad name." The Chancellors of the Exchequer of every civilised country borrow money and repay it by the instalment method. Municipalities and joint-stock companies borrow in precisely the same manner, and distribute their repayments over a series of years. The operations of building societies are another illustration in point. The method is an accepted article of sound finance. Then why not extend the system so as to apply to individual incomes? The question finds a practical answer in accomplished facts. The advantages of the system are so obvious that people readily avail themselves of it. The Times adopts the system for the sale of all its large books, and other firms, in addition to Messrs. Kay and Co., are assisting people to obtain their immediate requirements by this simple expediency, the only cardinal essential of which is that the customer be honest. Further, the habit of paying by regular weekly or monthly instalments conduces to a systematic outlay of income to the best advantage possible. It discourages expenditure on needless trifles and forces expenditure into a useful groove.

Digitized by Google

Shopping by Post: Creating New Trade.

A month or so ago, a big London firm announced with a flourish of trumpets that it had decided to deliver all parcels carriage paid. The London Press hailed the decision as though it were a startling innovation. As a matter of fact, London was behind Worcester. Messrs. Kay and Co. have for twenty-five years delivered parcels carriage free to all parts of the country, both by post and rail. They have been the pioneers of shopping by post, just as they were among the pioneers of the "Payment by Instalment" system. From wide experience extending over many years, and as a result of dealing with several millions of customers, they have gained unique knowledge of the requirements most in demand for personal and household use among the wage-earners of the country. The bulky catalogue is a complete guide to buyers. In these competitive days, it is not enough merely to supply a "want"; one must go further, and create the "want" which one is prepared to supply. Messrs. Kay and Co. create business. It is impossible to look through their catalogue without finding some article that one would like to possess, although until one had seen the illustration of it, the "want" was merely vague and indefinite.

A Splendid Catalogue: A Warehouse in Miniature.

It is the company's catalogue which enables the "Shopping by Post" to be so successfully conducted. A copy of this extraordinary publication (now in its 13th edition) is in the hands of each agent, whose customers can always refer to it. It is a monster publication of over 300 pages, profusely illustrated on art paper. A description of every article stocked by the company is to be found in its pages. It is, so to speak, a Liliputian representation of the warehouse itself, and the customer studies the catalogue as a Brobdingnagian would study the actual warehouse. The illustrations are produced from photographs of the articles, another instance of the straightforward character of the business. There are many advantages in purchasing from an illustrated catalogue of this character. A variety of goods can be—for all practical purposes—inspected from an armchair, and a choice made without the fatigue of walking from shop to shop. Nor is there any risk of being served with a shop-soiled article. Goods are delivered straight from the factory, free from soil or blemish. The book is illustrated with many beautiful views of Worcester, reproduced from copyright photographs. The compilation represents the work and thought of many months on the part of the managers of the various departments, working in conjunction with the designers and printers. They have their reward in the great request there is for the book all over the country. With the advent of Christmas and the New Year there comes a great demand for novel and appropriate presents. Messrs. Kay and Co.'s catalogue shows a range of thoroughly useful articles at moderate prices. "What shall I give?" is generally a difficult conundrum to us all at Christmas-time. This catalogue will be found to offer many solutions.

Clothing Made to Measure: Pride in Personal Appearance.

In the early history of the firm watches and jewellery were alone dealt in. As the business developed other branches were added, notably tailoring, drapery, boots, and household furniture, and the output of these departments has become so great that watches and jewellery have taken secondary place in the list of articles sold by Kay's. It is in clothing and drapery that the company have during the last five years made great strides, and are now employing many hundreds of workpeople in the various factories associated with the business. Separate catalogues are constantly being issued from these departments. Their success is in great part to be ascribed to the company's system of "making to measure" all suits and costumes. No ready-made garments are kept, except workmen's "overalls" and a few similar articles which are invariably sold ready-made. To-day nearly every man who takes any pride at all in his personal appearance has his clothing "made to measure." Messrs. Kay and Co. have taken great care in meeting this demand, and no little of the success of their drapery and clothing departments is the result of the well-fitting garments made for ladies and men. "To Fit" is the watchword, and the departments do not fail to obey it.

Fourteen Hundred Parcels a Day: Promptness and Accuracy.

The firm's chief distributing centre is at Shrub Hill, Worcester. A visit to this depôt cannot fail to interest anyone who has a taste for organisation. He sees here a remarkable demonstration of "shopping by post." Every mail brings its shoals of letters, and a special staff is seen busy opening and classifying the contents of the firm's correspondence. The clerks in this department begin work an hour before the others come, with the result that a proportion of the day's letters are in every deparment of the warehouse ready for prompt attention at a quarter before nine in the morning. It is an interesting study to look over the list of towns represented among one day's parcels. The list includes towns and villages scattered between, say, Penzance in the South and Aberdeen in the North. In one day Messrs. Kay and Co. have sent out as many as 1,400 parcels. This gives some indication of the firm's popularity. The pivot upon which this great Business Machine turns is Organisation. Everything is systematised to perfection. The offices are large and airy, and every possible labour-saving device has been introduced for the purpose of ensuring promptness and accuracy. Stock is always ready for immediate despatch, and almost all goods are sent the same day on which the order is received. The only exception to this rule is clothing.

No Order Too Difficult: Great Distributive Power.

The company's business is not confined to any one particular county or district. In fact, their great distributive power justifies their claim that their goods are sold in almost every town and village of the United Kingdom. They even go further afield, and do business in the Colonies and British Possessions. Quite recently they received an order from the Cape Government Railways for a supply of station clocks. More interesting still, they lately carried out a large order of brilliantly-coloured silk scarves for the native population of such out-of-the-way places as Adjuah, Tarkwa, and Axini on the Gold Coast of West Africa. No order is too difficult for them. As an illustration of their ability to deal with large orders, it is on record that on one occasion when the demand for English Lever Watches was altogether greater than the company's own workpeople could meet, an order was given to an English manufacturer for no less than 10,000 English Levers, all of one price and pattern. These were duly delivered and sold.

Future Developments: No Stagnation.

So firmly established and prosperous has the business become that, although the offices now occupied by the company are of a most spacious character, giving ample room for nearly 200 clerks, the ever-growing trade demands a larger building. It is intended to acquire a site for the erection of an entirely new block of offices and warehouses. In the new building a very interesting development will be the establishment of a post office on the company's premises. It has come to this, that Messrs. Kay and Co. need their own private post office. Parcels and letters will then be despatched straight from the warehouse, to the advantage alike of the business and of the ordinary traffic at the local postal depôt. There can be no stagnation in a business of this character. It cannot stand still; it must either go forward or fall back. Messrs. Kay and Co. have always gone forward; they are still going forward, and they intend to continue going forward. New developments are always being planned. The proposed new building is typical of the spirit which dominates the management.

A Good Work Well Done: Common Aim Towards Common Welfare.

This article is a roughly-outlined sketch of the progressive Worcester business of "Kay's," one of the largest distributing firms in the country. To fill in the details and to complete the picture would be to write a book. Enough has been written, it is hoped, to fire the imagination of the reader, to appeal to the admiration of a "good work well done," and to suggest, maybe, a practical hint in personal and household economy. A great success in commercial enterprise deserves praise equally with a great success in art or literature. It means—to return for a moment to the opening paragraph of this article—the better distribution of wealth, for commercial success is always in exact ratio to benefits conferred upon the people. Any firm which brings within the reach of the great mass of the people the products of the arts and crafts well merits not only the profit it gains—"the labourer is worthy of his hire"—but also the admiration of thinking men and women. The very success of "Kay's" is evidence of a practical effort in the good cause of common aim towards common welfare, which is the ideal Socialism.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

GENERALLY speaking, motor-car races and reliability trials can scarcely be reckoned among the most exciting forms of sport—at least, that is the more common impression of those who are mere onlookers. The forthcoming race for the Tourist Trophy, which is to be decided next week in the Isle of Man, is likely to prove a noteworthy exception, and some really good sport should be the reward of those who attend the event. The course chosen is to be the same over which the Eliminating Trials took place in the spring, and the cars will be required to make four complete circuits; in other words, a distance of about 208½ miles. There are, probably, few people who understand exactly in what way this competition will tend towards the improvement of the ordinary touring car. Thus it has been left to our worthy contemporary, the Automotor Journal, to explain at length its raison d'être:

"The really important advantage of low consumption to the car-owner is that it effects a far greater saving than is represented by the mere value of the fuel. We refer to the ill-effects produced by any wasted power. A brief consideration will show that there cannot be much power available for doing harm if nearly all the energy that the fuel can give is turned into useful work; but, on the other hand, high fuel consumption is sure to be accompanied by some detrimental effects. It may be that only a part of the fuel is consumed, and then the remainder is liberated to contaminate the air, and, incidentally, to feed the anti-motorist. It may be that some of it is used in unduly heating the cylinders or the exhaust passages, and then the valves are apt to suffer, and, indirectly, the engine is called upon to expend more power in operating and propelling the heavier cooling apparatus; or, most serious of all, it may be that a good deal of the power developed by the engine is expended in wearing away the bearing surfaces of the transmission mechanism, and then just that fatal depreciation which is so impossible to detect in most short-duration trials is in reality taking place on the car."

Notwithstanding the withdrawal of several entrants, there should be between thirty-five and forty starters at the least, including the following makes: Rolls-Royce, Napier, Daimler, Speedwell, Orleans, Wolseley, Siddeley, Thornycroft, New Simms-Welbeck, Spyker, Star, Argyll, James and Browne, Cadillac, Maudslay, Vauxhall, Beeston-Humber, Swift, Rykneild, White Steamer, Clement, Standard, Gladiator, Whitlock-Aster, Dennis, Bristol, Scout, Darracq, Dixi, Peugeot, Rover, Enfield, Mors, Vinot, and Arrol-Johnston. Up to the time of closing for press, we learn that the following cars have been withdrawn: Deasy, Spyker, Star, Renault, Crossley, and Germain.

* * *

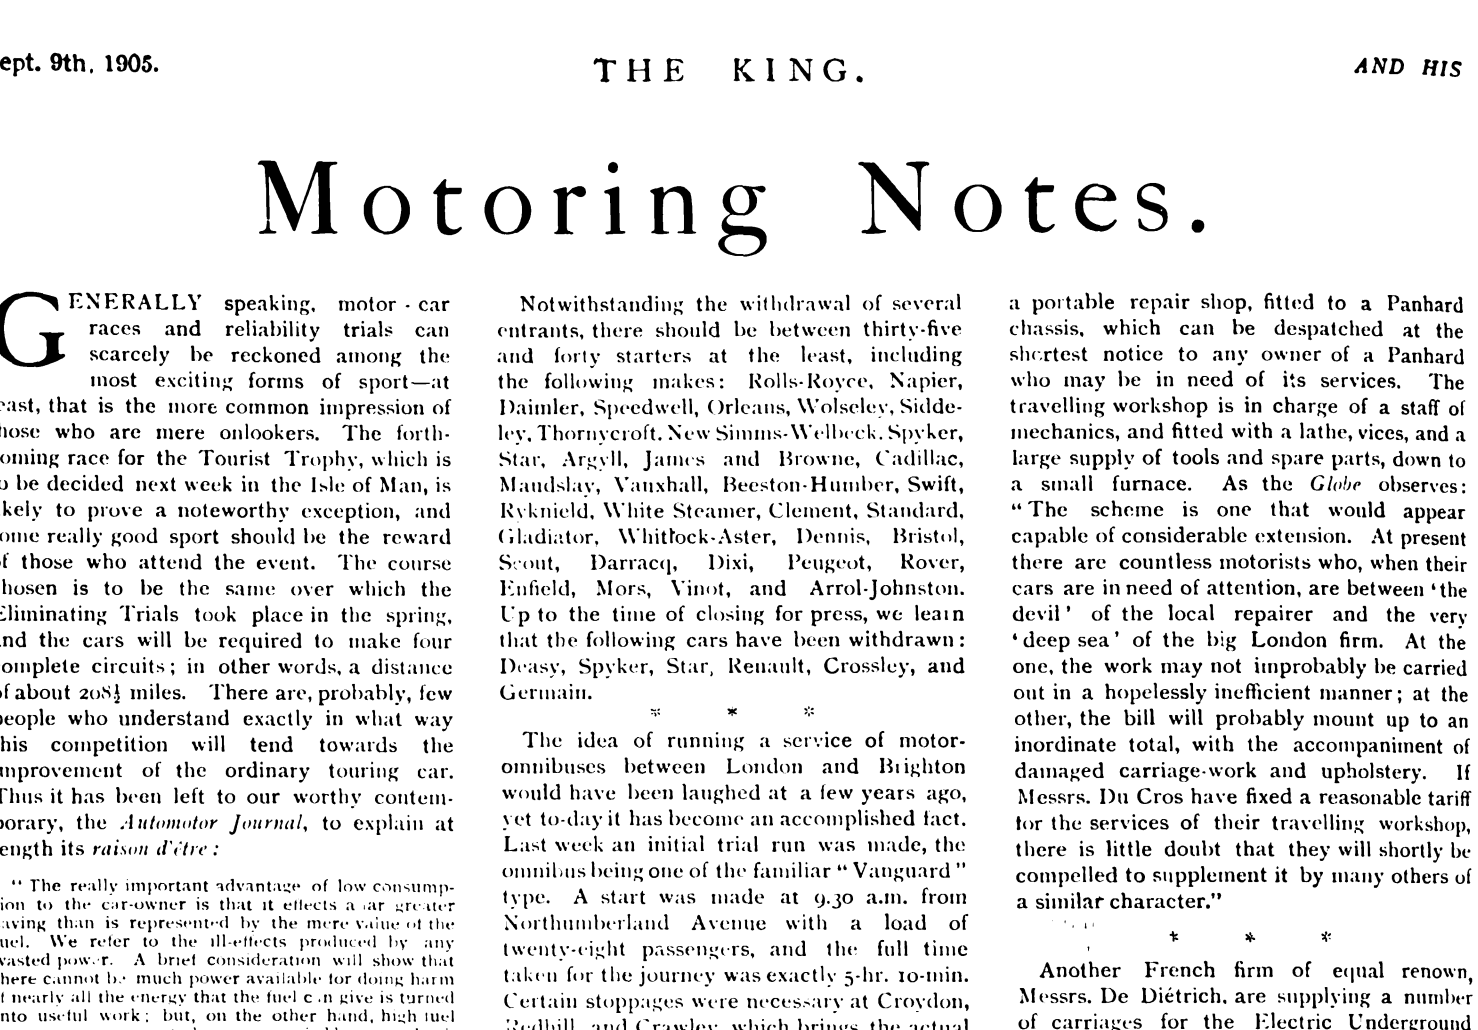
The idea of running a service of motor-omnibuses between London and Brighton would have been laughed at a few years ago, yet to-day it has become an accomplished fact. Last week an initial trial run was made, the omnibus being one of the familiar "Vanguard" type. A start was made at 9.30 a.m. from Northumberland Avenue with a load of twenty-eight passengers, and the full time taken for the journey was exactly 5-hr. 10-min. Certain stoppages were necessary at Croydon, Redhill, and Crawley, which brings the actual running time down by nearly an hour. For those who can spare the time, surely no more enjoyable, or indeed novel, way of reaching this popular watering-place could be devised. Doubtless some time must elapse before the company will be in a position to compete with the railway.

* * *

The latest enterprise of Messrs. Harvey du Cros, whose name has for so long been associated with the famous firm of Panhard, is a portable repair shop, fitted to a Panhard chassis, which can be despatched at the shortest notice to any owner of a Panhard who may be in need of its services. The travelling workshop is in charge of a staff of mechanics, and fitted with a lathe, vices, and a large supply of tools and spare parts, down to a small furnace. As the Globe observes: "The scheme is one that would appear capable of considerable extension. At present there are countless motorists who, when their cars are in need of attention, are between 'the devil' of the local repairer and the very 'deep sea' of the big London firm. At the one, the work may not improbably be carried out in a hopelessly inefficient manner; at the other, the bill will probably mount up to an inordinate total, with the accompaniment of damaged carriage-work and upholstery. If Messrs. Du Cros have fixed a reasonable tariff for the services of their travelling workshop, there is little doubt that they will shortly be compelled to supplement it by many others of a similar character."

* * *

Another French firm of equal renown, Messrs. De Diétrich, are supplying a number of carriages for the Electric Underground Railway in London. These District Railway cars are built entirely at Luneville, in the same works as the De Diétrich cars, with the exception of the electrical apparatus, which is fixed in England. The cars are completely mounted at the works, sent on rails to Rotterdam, and shipped thence by steamers, eight at a time, to London. Messrs. De Diétrich have already delivered fifty-two of these vehicles, and are now finishing sixteen more, which will be delivered shortly.



A NEW 20-H.P. ARIEL.
This car is a sister to the one which gained the gold medal in the recent Scottish Reliability Trials.

Digitized by Google

BENGER'S FOOD

For INFANTS and INVALIDS.

Benger's Food with Milk forms a dainty, delicious and most easily digested cream.

"Retained when all other foods are rejected."
London Medical Record.

Benger's Food is sold in tins by chemists, etc., everywhere.

G. W. R.

THE CHARMING WEST COUNTRY.

THE GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY

EXPRESS SERVICES give every facility for travel to

THE BOLD & ATTRACTIVE COASTS OF DEVON and CORNWALL.

THE CRANDEUR OF THE ENGLISH AND BRISTOL CHANNELS.

THE ROMANTIC EXMOOR and RUGGED DARTMOOR.

THE CHARMING HILLS and VALLEYS of SOMERSET & DORSET.

LONDON and

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Plymouth | in 4 hrs. | 25 | min. |
| Newquay | .. 6 .. | 45 | .. |
| Falmouth | .. 6 .. | 45 | .. |
| St. Ives | .. 7 .. | 10 | .. |
| Penzance | .. 7 .. | — | .. |

Full particulars can be obtained free on application to

THE SUPERINTENDENT OF THE LINE, Great Western Railway, Paddington Station, London.

JAMES C. INGLIS, General Manager.

Diamond Pins and Brooches

£5.0.0 £6.15.0 £18.0.0 £12.0.0 £15.0.0 £8.10.0 £8.15.0 £31.10.0 £25.0.0 £30.0.0 £21.10.0 £9.15.0 £9.15.0 £28.10.0 £14.10.0 £14 £6.6 £22.0.0 £7.0.0 £38.10.0

Hancocks & Co

Corner of Bruton St & New Bond St W.

1905.

MERCÉDÈS MODELS

HERKOMER TROPHY.

Winner: Standard 40 h.p. MERCÉDÈS,

BEATING 79 COMPETITORS.

FOR SEPTEMBER DELIVERY.

28-32 h.p. Latest Type Chassis, fitted with side-entrance coachwork.

40-45 h.p. Latest Type Chassis, fitted with side-entrance coachwork.

Both these Cars will be painted and upholstered the well-known MERCÉDÈS red.

Sele Concessionnaires:

Cannstatt Mercédès, Ltd.,

127/130, LONG ACRE, LONDON, W.C.

Telephone No: 3320 GERRARD.

Authorised Agents as under:—

Telegraphic Address: "TRUENESS, LONDON."

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| London, J. E. HUTTON, Ltd. | Glasgow, RENNIE & PROSSER. | Liverpool, Chester, Preston & Manchester, J. A. LAWTON & CO., Ltd. |
| Leicester, H. A. HAMSHAW. | Edinburgh, J. CROALL & SONS. | Dundee, T. SHAW, Ltd. |

PLEASE MENTION THIS PAPER.

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

WE mentioned last week the coming celebration of Crabbe and two other poets at Bath on September 2. Particulars are now to hand of the more elaborate festival which is to take place at Aldeburgh in Suffolk to commemorate Crabbe alone. The poet was born there in 1754. He was mainly self-taught. He worked in a warehouse for his living, and became servant to a country doctor, and practised himself in a small way without success till 1780, when he came to London. He published "The Candidate" that year; and being befriended—almost rescued from starvation, in fact—by Edmund Burke, was enabled to publish some of his poems, which won him fame and sustenance. He took orders and held various curacies and livings, leading a strange eccentric life till his death in 1832. Time was when he was far more widely read than he is at present. Then came a period of something not far from oblivion; and quite recently the publication of Canon Ainger's life of him in the "English Men of Letters" Series reintroduced, so to speak, to the public a poet who had been forgotten by all but a few real students of English poetry. It is good that his memory should be honoured, and good that his works should be read. They are rugged, wilful, and quaint; but there is the force of true genius beneath their homeliness. Crabbe studied the men about him, and went to Nature at a time when convention was all the fashion in poetry and in life.

George Crabbe.

* * *

THE programme of the celebration arranged for Saturday to Monday, September 16 to 18, is full and interesting. All the local powers are taking part, and the list of patrons includes a number of distinguished names of men and institutions in many nations. Aldeburgh itself will be thoroughly examined, including its church and its vestry books with their references to Crabbe; and there will be drives to Saxmundham, where the poet lived, and other places connected with his life and work. On Saturday, September 16, there is to be a meeting in the Jubilee Hall at Aldeburgh, at which M. Huchon, the French critic, who is also taking part in the proceedings at Bath, will read a paper on "Crabbe's Aldeburgh"; Mr. J. Groves will discourse on Crabbe as a botanist, and Mr. Clement Shorter has been chosen to talk about the poet's place in our literature. One of the most important features is to be a loan collection of Crabbe relics, which will include portraits of the poet by H. W. Pickersgill, R.A., and Millington of Trowbridge, unpublished poems from Belvoir Castle (the seat of the Duke of Rutland, who is taking an active interest in the celebration), and certain letters and autographs. The interest of the neighbourhood is enhanced, also, by its association with Edward FitzGerald, who, as will be remembered, was a great friend of later generations of the Crabbe family.

The Crabbe Celebration.

* * *

BY his study of Disraeli, Mr. Walter Sichel established his claim to be reckoned as a biographer of no small ability, and it is interesting to learn that Messrs. Constable are intending to celebrate "Nelson Year" by publishing a new life of Emma, Lady Hamilton, on which he has been engaged for some time. The book promises to be of some historical importance. Much new material has come to hand of recent years, and of this Mr. Sichel has availed himself, not only in the discussion of Emma Hart's earlier years, but in the greater issues of her influence on politics. It will be remembered that Lady Hamilton claimed to have rendered no small services to the British Nation and Fleet at Naples and elsewhere. The Government stiffly refused to recognise these services, but Nelson, infatuated or not, believed in them, and we understand that Mr. Walter Sichel will show that Nelson was right. In any case, he has a fascinating subject to write on. In Emma's life there were all extremes of wealth and poverty, joy and grief. She was the beloved of Nelson, the friend of a Queen; and yet, as we write, we call to mind a contemporary caricature of her—grossly indecent and contemptibly cruel. If so much romance is found joined to serious historical investigation, Mr. Sichel's book should be of rare interest. It is to be published early next month, and will be illustrated from a hitherto unknown oil-sketch by Romney, and by other portraits, all of which will be reproduced now for the first time.

A Life of Emma Hamilton.

* * *

WE are glad to hear that Messrs. B. and J. F. Meehan of Bath intend shortly to produce a second series of their "Famous Houses of Bath and District." The few fortunate possessors of the first series will know what a mine of information it is on the associations, literary, artistic, political, military, and social, of a city which had the honour of a long and excellent article to itself in the Edinburgh Review for August. Among the topics to be dealt with in the second series the most interesting are the Coronation of King Edgar at Bath in 973, Robert Southey at Bath and Corston, Major André and his family connection with Bath, John Wesley, who came and preached there, as will be remembered, and faced Beau Nash and beat him, Nelson and Bath, General Wolfe and Bath, and the Abbey House. These are only a small selection from a large number of subjects, and, as before, the volume will be sumptuously printed (by the Ballantyne Press) and illustrated, and issued in a limited edition. The introduction is to be the work of Mr. Egerton Castle, who has shown in more than one novel that he knows his Bath.

Bath and its Neighbourhood.

GEORGE CRABBE

Surgeon, parson, and poet, who is the subject of commemorations at Bath and Aldeburgh.

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON AND CO. will shortly commence the publication of one more of their handsome and valuable large works on the world in general, as they might be called. The new one, which has been in preparation for many years, is entitled "The Living Races of Mankind," and is to be issued in twenty-four fortnightly parts at 7d. net each. The work comprises a popular account of the customs, habits, pursuits, feasts, and ceremonies of the races of mankind throughout the world, and contains over eight hundred photographic illustrations from life, with twenty-five coloured plates and maps. The text of the book has been written by eminent travellers and specialists, including Sir Harry Johnston, G.C.M.G., Professor R. Lydekker, F.R.S., Professor Keane, Professor Longford, and Dr. R. W. Shufeldt. It will be printed throughout on English art paper.

Living Races of Mankind.

* * *

WE have received from the publisher, Mr. Sidney Appleton, a handsome volume called "The Book of the Motor-Car," by Mr. R. T. Sloss, a practical work devoted to the history, construction, care, and use of motors. Any notice of it will come more fitly in our motoring columns, and it is enough for the present to say that the work is American in origin, that it has an introduction by Mr. Dave Hennen Morris, president of the Automobile Club of America, and that it is copiously illustrated with diagrams and from photographs. To this we may add a mention of Messrs. Methuen's "The Motor Year-Book, 1905," which is divided into six sections: "Recent Developments in the Automobile Movement," "The Races of 1904," "The Shows of 1904-5," "Tricars," "The Law of the Motor," and "The Cars of 1905-6," all written by authorities on the subject. This, too, is well illustrated.

Motor Books.

* * *

SINCE Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Williamson took to motoring, they have made good literary use of their experiences. "The Lightning Conductor" and "The Princess Passes" have been widely read and enjoyed; and now we have "My Friend the Chauffeur" (Methuen), which is full of fun and sentiment and "go." The idea is good and original. A young Irishman, with a courtesy title, has lost all his money at Monte Carlo. Nothing is left but his motor-car, and that he is persuaded by a friend to turn into a means of livelihood by taking rich American ladies for a tour at so much a head. The scheme works well, and makes a most entertaining book. There is travel in it, love, and movement as rapid as that of Lord Terence Barrymore's own motor. But we do not like the illustrations.

A Motor Novel.

---

BOOKS TO READ.

Shakespeare's Christmas, by "Q" (A. T. Quiller-Couch). (Smith, Elder.)
The Passport, by Richard Bagot. (Methuen.)
The Patient Man, by Percy White. (Methuen.)
Because of Jock, by E. L. Haverfield. (Allen.)
Tongues of Gossip, by A. Curtis Sherwood. (Unwin.)
Green Cliffs, by Rowland Grey. (Hutchinson.)
Gretna Green and its Associations, by "Claverhouse." (Paisley: Gardner.)
A Wanderer in Holland, by E. V. Lucas. (Methuen.)
Great Batsmen, their Methods at a Glance, by G. W. Beldam and C. B. Fry. (Macmillan.)
The Cities of Umbria, by Edward Hutton. (Methuen.)
Parisians Out of Doors, by F. Berkeley Smith. (Funk and Wagnalls.)

Digitized by Google

NEW ZEALAND

THE BRIGHTER BRITAIN.

A NEW COUNTRY of marvellous beauty, with a fertile soil and a splendid climate. No extremes of heat or cold.

No droughts. An abundance of water, yet no rainy season.

An Evergreen Land rich in natural products.

A GREAT SHEEP, CATTLE AND DAIRYING COUNTRY.

Cheap farms with helpful assistance to farmers by the Government. Reduced steamer fares from the United Kingdom to New Zealand for persons with small capital.

No private monopoly of Public Utilities; the Government owns and operates Railways, Telegraphs, Telephones and Insurance.

No Lock-outs! No Strikes!! Employment disputes adjusted by Arbitration!!!

NEW ZEALAND IS THE WONDERLAND OF THE WORLD

Its Thermal Sights are unique in their extent, beauty and weirdness.

The Mammoth Geyser "Waimangu" (Black Water) hurls an immense mass of boiling water, mud and stones over 1,000 feet high.

Hot Mineral Water and Mud Baths; The Curative Baths of Rotorua, Te Aroha and Hanmer are world famous. Government doctors in attendance.

Baths. Gardens. Games. Music.

TRANSIT is convenient throughout New Zealand. Government railways, Express trains, Pullman and Dining Cars. Excellent coastal steamers. Splendid coaching routes. Hotels, good; charges moderate. Government Hotels, Spas, and Accommodation Houses in many of the principal tourist resorts.

Large Mail Steamers with every modern comfort and convenience leave Great Britain for New Zealand fortnightly. Duration of direct journey, 40 days; via Suez and Australia, 44 days; via Canada, 32 days; via San Francisco, 28 days.

The best time to visit New Zealand is during the summer months, from November to April.

ALL INFORMATION regarding Travel, Tourist Routes, Spas, Baths, Sport, etc., etc., is supplied free of charge by the GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENT OF TOURIST AND HEALTH RESORTS. Head Office, WELLINGTON, NEW ZEALAND. Branch Offices throughout the Colony. Information regarding access to New Zealand, Reduced Steamer Fares, Settlement Commerce, Industries, Travel, etc., etc., also supplied at the Office of the High Commissioner for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, London—Mr. J. G. Gow, Commercial Agent for New Zealand, Durban, South Africa, also supplies general information respecting New Zealand.

Minister for Tourist and Health Resorts: Hon. Sir Joseph G. Ward, K.C.M.G. Superintendent: T. E. Donne, Wellington, New Zealand. The Superintendent invites correspondence.

See Tourist Department's "Itinerary of Travel" and descriptive Guide Books.

An International Exhibition of Products, Manufactures, Arts, Sciences, Amusements, etc., etc., is to be held by the Government of New Zealand in Hagley Park, Christchurch City, commencing 1st November, 1906, and terminating April, 1907. Full particulars obtainable from the High Commissioner for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, S.W.

HAULING KAURI LOGS THROUGH BUSH, KAURI FOREST, NORTH AUCKLAND.

FELLING KAURI TREE, NORTH AUCKLAND, KAURI FOREST.

WAIRUA FALLS, WAIRUA RIVER, NORTH AUCKLAND.

The ALPINE SCENERY of New Zealand combines the distinguishing features of Switzerland, Norway and America. The Southern Alps extend for 300 miles. Mt. Cook, the highest peak, is belted by the largest glaciers in the temperate regions—the Tasman being 18 miles long and 2 miles wide. Near the foot of Mt. Cook is the Hermitage Hotel. Government guides, Alpine huts, and all necessary Alpine equipment available for use of visitors.

The LAKES of New Zealand are most pleasing in their charm of colour, contour and environment. Rotorua, Rotoiti, Taupo, and Waikaremoana in the North Island; Manapouri, Wakatipu, Te Anau, Wanaka, Kanieri and Mahinapua in the South Island are the most notable. The Lakes of the South Island are surrounded by mountain scenery of singular beauty and magnificence. Steamers and Power Launches. Good Hotels.

The WEST COAST FIORDLAND is indescribably wild and picturesque. Here are lakes of great size and depth—canyons that surpass the greatest of other lands—dense forests with a tropical profusion of ferns and flowers—innumerable waterfalls—monoliths of granite many thousands of feet in height—glaciers, snowfields, and the peerless Sounds, with their 400 miles of inside sailing distance.

OKOROIRE.

HOT SPRINGS AND SANATORIUM HOTEL.

One of the finest Health Resorts in the Thermal District.

The first place of interest en route to Rotorua, New Zealand.

Delightful NATURAL HOT MINERAL BATHS, free to Guests. Sufferers from Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Affection of the Eyes, Skin Diseases, etc., are often permanently cured by these waters.

CLIMATE.—Beautifully clear and bracing atmosphere, charming surroundings.

SPORT.—The Streams in the hotel grounds are exceedingly well-stocked with Trout. Plenty of Game, viz: Pheasants, Virginian Quail, Wild Duck, Hares, and Deer. Lawn Tennis, Golf, and Croquet.

The drive from Okoroire to Rotorua is one of the most beautiful in New Zealand.

T. MARTIN,
Manager.

NEW ZEALAND.

THE GRAND HOTEL, ROTORUA.

Situated in the Centre of the Hot Lakes District.

Patronised by T.R.H. The Prince and Princess of Wales.

THE HOTEL is in the immediate neighbourhood of the beautifully laid-out Government Gardens, wherein are situated the celebrated "Priest," "Rachel," "Postmaster," "Duchess," and other mineral baths, the curative properties of which are world famous. It has magnificent and lofty apartments, spacious promenade, balconies, snug alcoves, and luxuriously-appointed drawing, music, conversation, reading, smoking, and billiard rooms, perfect sanitation, and is lighted throughout by electricity.

BATH CHAIRS and attendance provided to convey invalids to or from the various bath houses. Tariff 12/6 per day inclusive.

W. J. LEES, Manager.

THE GEYSER HOTEL,

WHAKAREWAREWA, ROTORUA.

Situated in close proximity to the wonderful Geysers and Maori Settlement.

Visitors staying at the Geyser Hotel have continued opportunity of witnessing them as they can be seen plainly from the verandah of the Hotel, also of studying native life and customs.

The Hotel possesses its own private hot and cold curative mineral baths of which the most valued are the "Spout," "Oil," and "Carlsbad" Baths.

It has lately been greatly enlarged and re-furnished in a most comfortable manner. Electric light is established throughout the hotel and baths.

Coaches run regularly between Whakarewarewa, the Rotorua Sanatorium, and Government Gardens.

Tariff 10s. per day or £3 per week, inclusive. For a lengthened stay terms can be arranged

CHAS. E. NELSON, Proprietor.

Digitized by Google

Leaves from a Collector's Note-book.

No. LVII.—THE HISTORY OF WORCESTER CHINA FROM 1774 TO 1800. THE PORCELAIN WORKS AND THEIR ROYAL AND DISTINGUISHED VISITORS.

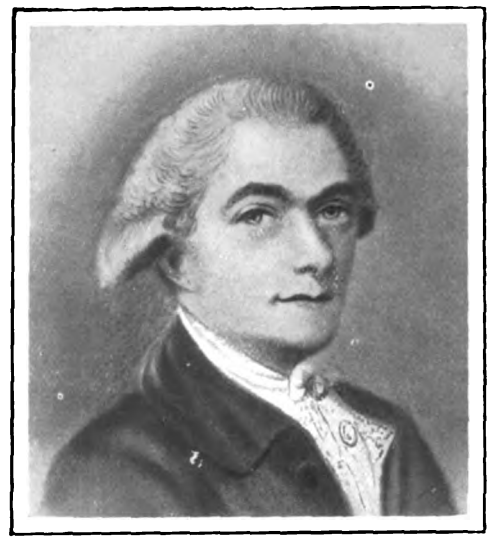
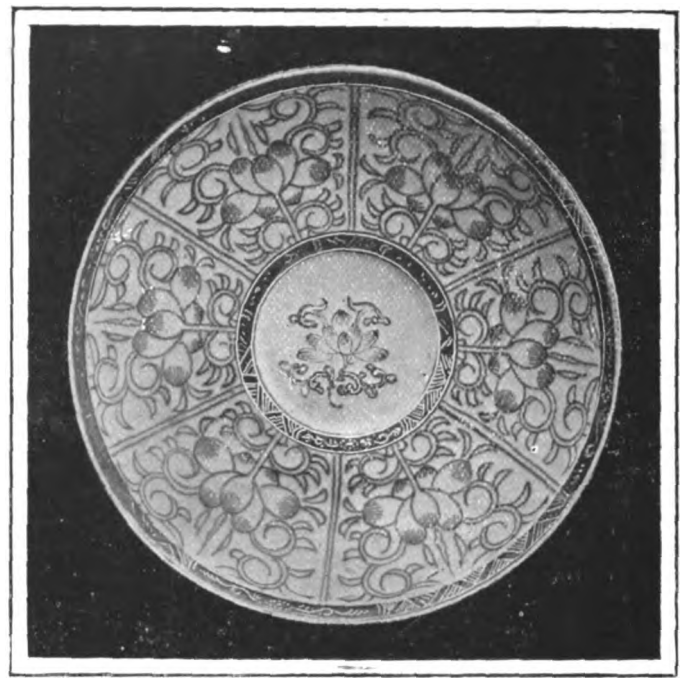
DR. JOHNSON is credited with an unsuccessful attempt to manufacture china at Chelsea. The results were by no means as satisfactory as those he achieved as a brewer of strong beer on Bankside. He passed through Worcester in 1774, but contents himself with a bare record of his visit to the "china warehouse." Two years later Dr. Wall died, having, as Mr. Binns tells us, seen "the exotic which he had so carefully planted and fostered grow into the stately tree, striking its roots deeper and deeper into the soil, and acquiring so strong a constitution as to enable it to outlive all its contemporaries." In 1783 the entire property was bought by Mr. Thomas Flight, an enterprising London merchant, the portrait of whose son Joseph, for whom the works were purchased, is now reproduced in these pages. The price he paid for it was the modest sum of £3,000. The change of proprietorship involved the secession of Messrs. Chamberlain and Son from the business, to the material prosperity of which their skill had largely contributed. The porcelain trade, however, had now obtained a firm hold in the city, and Mr. Binns, with legitimate pride, records the fact that "the quality of the ware was acknowledged, and from the number of apprentices taken on from time to time, the citizens generally had an interest in its perpetuation." New premises were rented at Nos. 33 and 45, High Street, and it was here on the afternoon of Tuesday, August 6, 1788, during the progress of the sixty-fifth "meeting of the three choirs of Worcester, Hereford, and Gloucester," that Messrs. Joseph and John Flight were honoured by a visit from George III., Queen Charlotte, and the Royal Princesses, attended by Lady Harcourt, Lords Harcourt, Oxford, and Courtown, Colonels Goldsworthy and Digby, and last, but not least, the sprightly authoress of "Evelina," who proceeded on foot to "the elegant china shop in High Street, where they remained almost an hour, and greatly admired the beautiful porcelain, and gave orders for an extensive assortment of it." On the Saturday following (August 9), "their Majesties, the Princesses, and several of the nobility went to the china factory, and saw the whole process of china-making, at which they expressed great satisfaction, and the King was pleased to leave ten pounds for the workmen." Mr. Binns informs his readers that "the King was so much gratified with what he saw that he condescended to recommend the proprietors to open an establishment in the West End of London, and at the same time granted his patent, thus giving to Worcester the honour of having the first Royal Porcelain works within its walls." The outcome of this paternal advice was the erection of the once well-known china "repository" at 1, Coventry Street, which was immediately "liberally patronised by the nobility and gentry throughout the kingdom." The early history of the Worcester China Factory is, by a strange coincidence, mixed up inextricably with the annals of the Festivals of the Three Choirs. It was on the occasion of the thirtieth annual "music meeting" of September 20, 1752, that the newspapers first announced the sale of the "new manufacture," with great variety of ware, and, it is said, at a moderate price; it was the sixty-fifth "meeting" which brought Dr. Wall's enterprising successors that powerful patronage which soon made the making of Worcester china a national as well as a local industry. A very interesting token was cast to commemorate the Royal visit, and amongst the accompanying illustrations will be found reproductions of an old print showing the manufactory as it was in 1788, and of a specimen of the "Royal lily" pattern breakfast service chosen by George III. and Queen Charlotte.



MR. JOSEPH FLIGHT

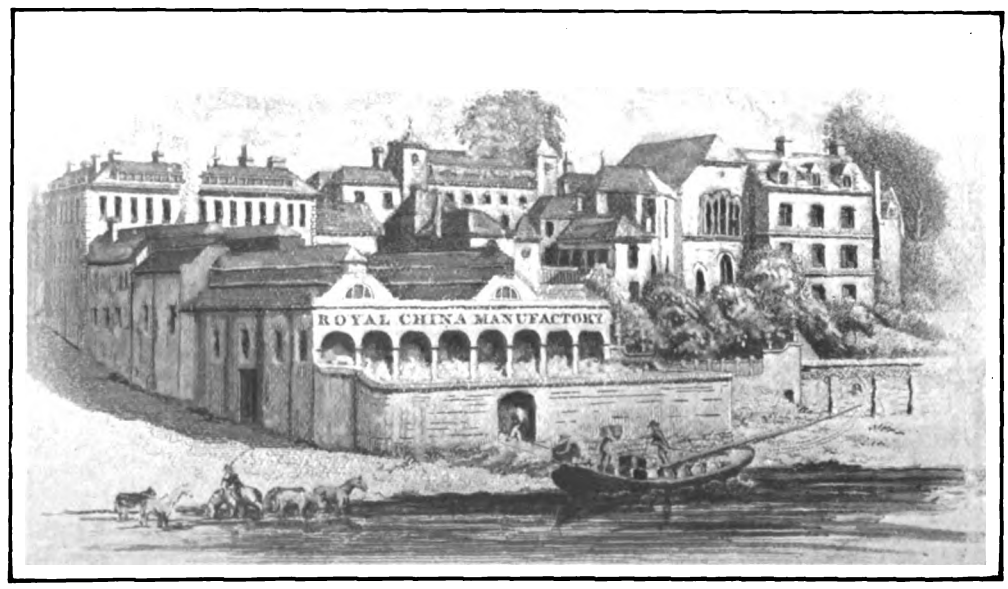
Whose father, Thomas Flight, purchased the Worcester China Works in 1783. It was Thomas and Joseph Flight who received the Royal family.



LILY PATTERN WORCESTER PLATE.

It was this pattern that was selected for a breakfast set by George III. and Queen Charlotte.

In 1789, and again in 1791-92, Messrs. Flight and Barr were honoured with "commands" to make dinner services for the Duke of Clarence, afterwards William IV. Queen Charlotte's breakfast service is typical of Messrs. Flight's early patterns, which are described as "very simple, many of them consisting of blue painted and printed flowers, and a blue band with or without sprigs, more or less richly decorated with gold. The round fluted cup was the shape most in favour; but there was also used a straight-sided cup without a foot, copied from a well-known Sèvres model." The "blue lily" pattern is copied from a Chinese model, and when known as the "Royal lily" at once became popular with the old nobility. It was not till the following March that the Brothers Flight received their appointment "as Worcester Porcelain China Manufacturers to His Majesty." It can still be seen occupying a place of honour by those patrons of the 182nd meeting of the Three Choirs who follow the example set them by George III., more than a century ago, and visit the Royal Porcelain Works, carried on with signal success by those who have inherited the traditions of Dr. Wall and the Brothers Flight, and with the fine taste and discrimination which characterised their famous predecessors and founders of the works. B.



THE WORCESTER CHINA MANUFACTORY.

Visited by George III., Queen Charlotte, and the three Princesses on August 9, 1788.

Digitized by Google

MALLETT
& SON

hold and offer for sale specimens of the

HIGHEST QUALITY

OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE

as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.

EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.

AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.

(Two hours from Paddington.)

---

Rare Prints and Portraits
CARICATURES.

Speciality: Rarities of all sorts relating to
NAPOLEON and AMERICA.

GODEFROY MAYER,
41, Rue Blanche, Paris.

Catalogues issued. Rare Prints and Engraved Portraits sought for. Correspondence Invited.

Mr. Mayer's stock is probably the largest and finest in Europe. He specially caters for the wants and requirements of English and American extra-illustrators.

---

Old Brass Stand and Lamp.

THE MISSES
H. & I. WOOLLAN
(Under Royal Patronage)

are showing a
UNIQUE
Collection of
Antiques.

Chippendale, Sheraton, and Hepplewhite Furniture. Worcester and Lowestoft Services. Lace, Glass, etc.

Showrooms: First Floor.

28, BROOK STREET, GROSVENOR SQUARE, W.

---

NEW CATALOGUE OF CHOICE AND RARE ILLUSTRATED and other BOOKS, COLOURED PRINTS, etc.,

SENT POST FREE BY—

GEORGE GREGORY, Bath.

(Bookseller to H.M. Queen Alexandra.)

WANTED, Sporting Magazine, Vol. 30 (1807); also Vol. 37 (1810-11).

---

BUTLER'S "KEEN" RAZOR

HOLLOW GROUND.
SPECIAL STEEL.
HAND FORGED.
"I know that Razor, it comes from Sheffield."

HIGHEST AWARDS.
GUARANTEED PERFECT, AND BRITISH MADE THROUGHOUT.

"Keen as this razor's edge invisible." (Love's Labour Lost.)

Black Handles ... ... each 3/- & 5/- | Ivory Handles ... ... each 5/- & 7/6
*Per pair, in best Case, 15/-; 7-day set, 50/- | *Per pair in Russia Case, 21/-; 7-day set, 70/-

"CAVENDISH" CARVERS (Regd. brand) keep "an edge that won't come off."
Fine Ivory, 20/-; Imitation ditto or Stag, 10/6 per pair. Post Free of all Dealers.

Sole Makers, GEORGE BUTLER & CO., Trinity Works, SHEFFIELD.

---

Preserve your Teeth!
BY USING

FRAGRANT
FLORILINE

It imparts a
FRAGRANCE TO THE BREATH
that is rare and delightful,
IT PREVENTS ALL TARTAR
and COMPLETELY ARRESTS DECAY.

IS THE CHOICEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.

PRICE Per bottle 2/6 in case.

SOLD EVERYWHERE. THE ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO., Ltd., Proprietors.
33, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

FLORILINE TOOTH-POWDER.
For use with or without FLORILINE.
1/- per large Jar.

---

TO H.M. THE KING.

THE POPULAR
SCOTCH
IS
"BLACK & WHITE"
WHISKY.

TO H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.

Sole Proprietors: JAMES BUCHANAN & Co., LTD.,
26, Holborn, London, E.C.

---

IN A JIFFY!

Polishing boots, leggings, straps—in fact, anything leather—doesn't take long when are used. JUST A SMEAR AND A RUB is all that is wanted! Does them well, too! Leading regiments use them.

WREN'S BOOT POLISHES

Send 7½d. in stamps for samples (black and brown), and put them to the test!
WREN & CO., NORTHAMPTON.

---

THE CLOTH FOR GOLF SUITS.
"Hydea"

is the best English cloth—made of the best English wool—grown on the HYDE Farm, Gloucestershire. It is delightfully soft and elastic—absolutely the best for sportsmen—most durable for out-o'-doors—most handsome for town suits—long thread—refined finish.

THE KING WEARS IT,

and pays no more than you—because there's only one quality at one price. "HYDEA" is stamped on every two yards of the selvedge—that's how you may know it—that, and its excellent surface! Send for FREE Booklet:—

APPERLY, CURTIS & Co., Ltd.,
Dudbridge Mills, Stroud, West of England.

---

ESTABLISHED 35 YEARS (1870).

THE CHARING CROSS BANK.
119 and 120, BISHOPSGATE ST. WITHIN, E.C.,
and 28, BEDFORD ST., CHARING CROSS, London.

Assets, £694,403. Liabilities, £372,291. Surplus, £322,112.

Loans of £30 to £2,000 granted at a few hours' notice in town or country on mortgage of furniture, trade and farm stock, plant, crops, etc., without removal. Also on deeds, policies, and reversions. Distance no object. Easy terms.

2½ per cent. allowed on Current account balances.

DEPOSITS of £10 and upwards received on terms as under.
Subject to 3 months' Notice of Withdrawal 5 per cent. per annum.
" 6 " " 6 " "
" 12 " " 7 " "

Special terms for longer periods. Interest paid quarterly. The Terminable Deposit Bonds pay nearly 9 per cent., and are a safe investment. Write or call for Prospectus.

A. WILLIAMS, H. J. TALL. } Joint Managers.

---

TOOTH-ACHE
CURED INSTANTLY BY

BUNTER'S NERVINE

Prevents Decay. Saves Extraction
Sleepless Nights Prevented.

Neuralgic Headaches and all Nerve Pains removed by BUNTER'S NERVINE. All Chemists, 1s. 1½d., or on receipt of stamps to 13, St. George Street, Norwich.

---

SULPHOLINE
SKIN LOTION.

Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches,
Entirely fade away.

---

BIRKBECK BANK
ESTABLISHED 1851.

Current Accounts. 2 % Interest allowed on minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
Deposits. 2½ % Interest allowed on Deposit Accounts.
Advances made. Stocks and Shares bought and sold.
Apply C. F. RAVENSCROFT, Secretary,
Southampton Buildings, High Holborn, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE RACING SEASON.

JUST a hundred years ago the York August Meeting commenced on a Monday, there was racing every day in the week, and the sport came to a conclusion on the Saturday with a match for 500 guineas, over two miles, between Colonel Thornton's Pegasus (9-st. 6-lb.), ridden by Mrs. Thornton, and Mr. Bromford's Allegro (13-st. 6-lb.), ridden by the famous Buckle, who was beaten by the lady in the run home. It is often claimed that the race-horses of to-day would be incapable of running over the same distances as their ancestors; but even the heroes of the past did not seem to quite relish the long races in which they had to take part. Looking at the card of the York Meeting for 1805, we find it noted that the Duke of Hamilton's colt by Walnut broke down in running for His Majesty's Plate over four miles, and also that in the race for the Gold Cup, over the same distance, a similar fate befel Mr. Mellish's Diddler. A curious side-light is thrown upon the racing of the "good old days" by a commentary written in a corner of the old pages to the effect that "the racing was very severe, and there were many horses which did not eat their food for many days."

Although the attendance at the York August Meeting of this year was hardly as numerous as usual, the meeting may be said to have been a successful one; but the executive might, perhaps, do well to remember that in these go-ahead days it is not altogether wise to rely upon a past reputation as a means for gaining future favours. No one could complain of a want of excitement on the first day of the meeting, for in a fairly long experience I cannot remember seeing four races in succession won by a short head, three of these close finishes going in favour of Lord Derby's representatives, a sequence which commenced with the victory of Verdiana in the Middlethorpe Welter Handicap, was continued when the filly by Persimmon out of Canterbury Pilgrim carried off the Lonsdale Handicap, and completed when Kilruddery, 8-st. 4-lb., got the best of a tremendous race with Ulalume, 9-st. 5-lb., and Norman Mint in the Prince of Wales's Plate of 890-sovs. The spoils went to Lord Derby, but the honours of the contest clearly belong to Sir Edgar Vincent's daughter of Gallinule and The Message. Only three runners could be found for the Yorkshire Oaks, and speculators must have had a rare fright, for they laid 6 to 1 on Costly Lady, who only just scrambled home a short head in front of Koorhaan. Beyond noting that Lady Dandy won the Bradgate Park Selling Handicap, and that Croisette placed the Badminton Plate to the credit of Mr. L. de Rothschild, the remainder of the day's racing does not call for comment.

The second day of the autumn racing at York witnessed the decision of the Ebor Handicap, which is to York much as the Cup Day is to Ascot. None of the top-weights held their ground, and their defection caused 11-lb. extra to be carried by the twelve horses who came out for the race. Mr. J. C. Sullivan was deprived of the services of War Wolf, last year's winner, but he found an excellent substitute in The Page, 7-st. 6-lb., who, very nicely ridden by Higgs, got home a neck in front of Bibiani, 7-st. 4-lb.; with Bitters, 8-st. 9-lb., beaten into third place by three-quarters of a length. It was somewhat curious to notice that seven of the twelve runners wore the "rogue's badge," and as the race was run one cannot help thinking that it was the penalty incurred by Bitters at Haydock Park which prevented her from winning this race for Mr. Alexander. Only three runners came out for the Duke of York Stakes, but there was some speculation as to whether Rouge Croix could give 4-lb. to Polymelus, and finally 11 to 10 was the price offered again t either of the two. Lord Crewe's colt was not long in solving the riddle, for as soon as Morny Cannon asked him to do so, he came out and won cleverly by three-quarters of a length.

Sugar, by Symington out of Sweetie, had won the Rous Selling Plate earlier in the day, and to the same sire belongs the credit of Satira (8-st.) out of Satyrica, who, with a considerable advantage in the matter of weight, won the Convivial Produce Stakes of 540-sovs. by a neck from Cythera (9-st. 2-lb.), and Bridge of Canny (8-st. 9-lb.).

Quite a feature of the racing on the last day of the meeting was the riding of Maher, who rode four winners, beginning with Stealaway in the Stand Selling Handicap Stakes, and following it up by a short head victory on Donnetta in the Harewood Handicap, after a desperate finish with Melayr, who, I think, had none the best of luck in the race.

Everyone was glad to see Tankard, owned by the Duke of Westminster, trained by John Porter, and ridden by Morny Cannon, win the sixty-third race for the Great Yorkshire Stakes, and by the shortest of heads, in the very last stride. Mondamin and Dionard were second and third respectively. Neither Black Arrow nor Admirable Crichton put in an appearance for the historic Gimcrack Stakes; but Mr. W. Hall-Walker had a very efficient substitute in Colonia (9-st 4lb.), who gave the weight and a half length beating to Gingal (8-st. 7-lb.), with Mary Theresa (8-st. 4-lb.) third, a length and a-half away. It is probable that when Mr. Hall-Walker responds to the toast at the Gimcrack Dinner, he will have something to say which will be well worth listening to.

CAURIE.

Copyright.

THE WINNER OF THE GREAT EBOR HANDICAP.
Mr. J. C. Sullivan's The Page, by Winkfield—Annora.

Copyright.

THE YORK AUGUST MEETING.
A view of the enclosure, showing the rings and course.

Digitized by Google

THE WORCESTER ROYAL PORCELAIN WORKS, WORCESTER.

Established 1751.

(NEAR THE CATHEDRAL.)

LATE FLIGHT AND BARR AND CHAMBERLAIN.

THE SHOWROOMS AND MUSEUM

CONTAINING A LARGE COLLECTION OF OLD AND MODERN

WORCESTER CHINA

ARE OPEN FOR THE RECEPTION OF VISITORS, AND THE VARIOUS PROCESSES OF

PORCELAIN MANUFACTURE

may be seen in operation daily, between the hours of 9.30 and 12 a.m., and 2.15 and 5 p.m., except on Saturdays, when the Workshops close at 12, and the Showrooms at 4 o'clock.

The productions of the Works can be obtained of the principal China Dealers in Great Britain and Abroad.

McNAUGHT & CO.

BUILDERS AND DESIGNERS OF HIGH-CLASS

MOTOR BODIES

Illustrated Catalogue, with quotations, free on application.

WORCESTER,

BIRMINGHAM,

213-223, KNIGHTSBRIDGE,

LONDON, S.W.

SPECIALITIES:

LIMOUSINES.
OMNIBUSES.
LANDAULETS.

TRADE MARK.

"CINDERELLA"

For Ladies and Children.

BOOTS & SHOES

ARE MANUFACTURED IN WORCESTER. SHOULD BE WORN BY ALL ENGLISH LADIES.

Nothing Better can be Made or Worn. Made in all Fittings and Width of Toes, and a Fit Guaranteed for all Feet.

LATEST DESIGNS. SMARTEST STYLES. BEAUTIFUL CATALOGUE SENT ON APPLICATION.

J. F. WILLIS, Limited, WORCESTER.

Ask your Bootmaker for "CINDERELLA" Boots.

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

THERE is still no movement as regards definite autumn novelties in the world of fashion. Parisian modistes and milliners are devoting themselves at the present moment to the American visitors, who are preparing for their return journey, and eager to take back all the latest creations which are being carried out for their benefit. Our season will then start, and we shall have weeded out the exaggerations, and found the happy medium.

I saw some very quaint-looking head nets for night wear, and was told they are largely patronised now. These are netted in coarse silks with a full frill, and a ribbon run round the crown and tied in a saucy bow at the right side. They are made in pale colours to correspond with the ribbon insertions of the dainty American night-dresses, now such general favourites with everyone. Some of these, by the way, are so luxurious that it seems criminal to wear them. I was shown to-day a trousseau that was just finished, and was "on show" before being sent out to India. There were night-dresses in this particular make in the most delicate flesh-coloured silks of the very finest and softest quality; the American yoke was of a lovely design of real lace. Others were most beautifully embroidered on the shaped empiècement of silk Indian muslin, the full elbow sleeves finished with very fine Valenciennes. But the practical ones captivated me most, which were made of French nainsook, finely hand-embroidered Swiss muslin constituting the shaped upper portion. The "cache-corset and knicker skirt" combinations were simply charming, and just the very things for the climate. I am told there has been such a run on this particular garment that the manufacturer has been unable to execute the orders fast enough. There has never been a time when underwear has been so extravagantly worn as during this last season. There is an absolute craze for these American novelties, and really they do look so thoroughly fascinating, and are such comfortable and becoming wear, that it is an extravagance with which I quite sympathise. Besides, with the tight-fitting modes they are necessities now. Here is the description of a very charming home dress which is illustrated, one of the models of Mme. Paula of Regent Street. It is of ivory white crêpe de ninon. The skirt has twelve flat tucks all of the same width, with here and there large diamond-shaped incrustations of lace, outlined with primrose and amethyst plaited ribbons. Two deep flounces, also edged to correspond, finish the skirt trimming. The high bodice has a novel yoke, of strapped ribbons in the same two colours, which connects the lace neck-band with the lower portion, headed by a waved lace insertion. The dominant note of the skirt is carried out here also. The sleeves are full to the elbow, where the deep lace outer sleeve falls gracefully apart. This model is most beautifully cut, and is quaintly original.

A MORNING COSTUME IN WHITE CREPE DE NINON.
(Mme. Paula, Regent Street, W.)

The latest in waist-belts is the leather, or rather soft kid, band, with deep Swiss point worn in the front, the back being much narrower than has been seen for some time. The ribbon belt tightly swathed around the waist and finished by a small cut steel or jet buckle is likely to be more worn as the season advances.

The new broadcloth sac coats will all be very much trimmed with heavy embroideries in the same shades as the cloth, stole fashion, or else appliquéd in raised designs in contrasting tones. Those who have old-world stores of silks and trimmings will do well to go through their treasures this season, for anything antique will be quite the correct thing. Chenille-shaded embroideries on satin, I hear, are to be introduced by some of our leading houses. Above all, overhaul your old laces, especially the very fine makes, or the heavy guipures, for both of these will play their parts, the former for the soft full jabots, to be worn with the Directoire coats and bodices, and the latter for the adorning of evening coats.

The fancy for white, which has been so universal in dress, is now being transferred to table decorations, where everything is colourless and of extreme simplicity, although it is a very costly simplicity; the only relieving tone permissible is in the low silver table ornaments, which are perfectly plain, antique shapes being chosen in preference to any others. White chrysanthemums and white winter roses are the favourite floral decorations just at the present moment.

Messrs. Charles Lee and Son of Wigmore Street have such pretty evening and theatre blouses, also some new "Leewig" petticoat flounces for early autumn, and a most advantageous smooth skin caracul coat, which can be worn open or closed, and is lined satin, is to be had for the moderate price of 79s. 6d.

R. D.

(From a photograph specially taken for this paper at the Dover Street Studios.)

Digitized by Google

HOP MARKET HOTEL,

WORCESTER.

High-Class Family and Commercial Hotel.

ELECTRIC LIGHT THROUGHOUT.

BILLIARDS. STABLING.

National Telephone: No. 56. W. LEE, Proprietor.

Unicorn Hotel

BROAD STREET, WORCESTER.

OLD ESTABLISHED . FIRST-CLASS .

FAMILY HOTEL

Patronised by H. R. H. The late Duke of Cambridge.

ELECTRIC LIGHT THROUGHOUT. CENTRAL POSITION.

M. E. PARKINSON, PROPRIETRESS.

National Telephone No. 0172.

STAR HOTEL,

WORCESTER.

The Leading County Family & Commercial Hotel.

NEAR CATHEDRAL.

ELECTRIC LIGHT THROUGHOUT.

Ball Rooms and Hotel entirely Re-decorated. Parquet Floors in Ball Rooms. Grill Room open from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. Ladies' Drawing Room, Billiard Rooms, Smoking Rooms. Posting in all its branches. Rooms for Concerts, Suppers, Wedding Breakfasts, Banquets, Dinners, Company Meetings.

G. E. SPURR, Proprietor.

WORCESTERSHIRE

HAS BEEN DESCRIBED AS

The Garden of England.

My NURSERY AND SEED BUSINESS has been established at WORCESTER since 1756, and is one of the oldest of its kind in the country. When requiring . . .

FRUIT TREES, SHRUBS, ROSES,

or other Nursery Stock, send to me. Everything true to name. Most reliable SEEDS of proved germination. Dutch and other BULBS from the best growers.

GARDEN SUNDRIES.

All that I offer is of the BEST QUALITY ONLY at a Fair Price.

N.B.—I shall be pleased to show visitors round my Nursery, and will convey them to and from my shop in Broad Street on application.

CORRESPONDENCE INVITED. SEND FOR CATALOGUES.

(MENTION THIS PAPER.)

J. H. WHITE, F.R.H.S., WORCESTER.

ESTABLISHED NEARLY 2 CENTURIES.

W. B. ROWE & SON,

BARBOURNE NURSERIES.

Seed Warehouse: 65, Broad Street, WORCESTER.

Specialities: FRUIT TREES. ROSE TREES. CACTUS DAHLIAS. FLORAL WORK.

Raisers of the latest and best Apple in existence, "EDWARD VII." Season Mid-March to Mid-June.

J. W. CASSIDY

(LATE GEORGE BIRLEY & CO.),

Goldsmith & Watch Maker,

64, HIGH STREET, WORCESTER.

AND AT

4 & 12, GREAT WESTERN ARCADE, BIRMINGHAM.

ASK FOR

COURTENAY'S

ORIGINAL & GENUINE

Worcestershire Sauce.

Manufactured from the very choicest ingredients only, and guaranteed absolutely pure.

Manufactory:—WORCESTER.

The . . .

"SPARK" PIANOS

BY ALL THE BEST MAKERS.

TUNING AND REPAIRS.

54, High Street, WORCESTER.

Digitized by Google

THE KING'S MENU.

FILETS DE HARENGS.

When it is desired to simplify service both in kitchen and dining-room, these can be cooked and served in a fireproof china dish as follows: Fillet the herrings and free from bones, then pour a little warm freshly-oiled butter over them, and leave while preparing the following mixture: Rub together a teaspoonful of French mustard, half one of English mustard, a dessertspoonful and a-half of the Escoffier chutney, a pinch of coralline pepper, and a dust of salt and freshly-ground black pepper. When this mixture is smooth, spread a thin layer of it on each fillet, then roll these up securely, arrange these little rolls on strips of hot buttered toast, one for each person, sprinkle with browned bread-crumbs, cook for twelve minutes or so in a moderate oven, and serve garnished with seasoned watercress. Also, after filleting, they can be laid in a buttered baking-tin or fireproof dish, with a little lemon juice and white pepper, covered with a buttered paper, and baked for about ten minutes, then served with maitre d'hôtel, tomato, piquant, raifort, or mustard sauce, to which has been added a teaspoonful of Escoffier chilli vinegar, and a spoonful of minced capers for each half pint of sauce.

POULET AU KARI.

To the cultivated palate there is surely no more enticing dish than the curry in whose concoction French science has combined with Eastern inspiration to produce a perfect whole. The cooks of both nations know that time is an indispensable factor in curry-making, also a complete mastery of the art of stewing. For these reasons an English cook is rarely or never a successful curry-maker, and even with a good recipe and an exigeante mistress it is difficult to impress her with the fact that for a curry of meat to be good it must have long, slow simmering, instead of the quick gallop which is her idea of stewing.

These remarks will show that the casserole is the utensil par excellence for the preparation of a good curry, for it can be set on a trivet (that there may be water between the bottom of the casserole and the stove top or oven slide) in an outer pan of hot water in a slow oven or on the side of a moderate stove, and the contents thus subjected to long gentle heat.

Then a properly-made curry is even better on its second appearance than its first, provided it be carefully reheated, preferably au bain-marie, and that in the first instance it has been left to get cold in an earthenware pan; a metal one is, for this purpose, really dangerous, remember, and may result in ptomaine poisoning and death for those who partake of it. Thus it will be seen that the remains of a curry made and served in a casserole can be set aside in this just as it is till next day, then reheated in it, au bain-marie, for its last appearance.

And now for a skeleton recipe, whereby my readers can curry a pound of any fish, flesh, or fowl to taste. Rub a delicately-clean saucepan over with a cut clove of garlic, then melt in it an ounce and a-half of butter, and fry in this four ounces of finely-minced shallot or onion till a golden yellow, cooking it very slowly and stirring, that it may be evenly coloured. Now add a tablespoonful of curry powder and a dessertspoonful of curry paste (failing this last, one or two extra teaspoonfuls of the powder can be added in its place, but use paste if possible). Now cook the powder and onions together steadily for another fifteen minutes, adding a little more butter if necessary from time to time. Some cooks and writers recommend seven minutes' cooking only after the curry powder is added,

MENU.

CREME D'ECREVISSE.

FILETS DE HARENGS.

POULET AU KARI.

ROAST PARTRIDGE. SALADE.

EPONGE DE FRAMBOISES.

CHOUX AU PARMESAN.

but the quarter of an hour's steady cooking of it will give much nicer results to most tastes, and does away with that raw crudeness which spoils so many English-made curries, and which is simply due to the insufficient cooking of the powder. Now stir in a pint of stock made from the bones, etc., of whatever meat or fish is to be curried—chicken bones and giblets to-day of course. If a thick sauce is desired, this stock should first be thickened with a dessertspoonful of crème de riz. The sauce is then brought to the boil and simmered for fifteen to twenty minutes. Now if the meat or fish is ready cooked, all that is necessary is to have it cut into small neat pieces, lay these in the casserole or chafing-dish, pour the hot sauce over, and let them heat through without ever coming to the boil, and soaking it thus for from one to two hours; then serve. Should the meat be uncooked, however, cut it into neat, small squares and fry it with an ounce of minced shallot in an ounce of butter—very hot, mind, before the chicken and onion are put in—in the casserole. As soon as the chicken is nicely coloured add the pint of curry sauce, and stand aside for an hour in the larder. Now put it in the oven or on the stove and simmer very gently till the fish or meat is done. If the chicken is young, as it always should be for curry, preferably not full grown, in fact, it will be done in about half-an-hour. While it is simmering add the tamarind pulp, or whatever acid gelatinous substance, such as tomato, is used, and then at the last, just before serving, add a gill of cocoanut or other nut milk, for which I give directions further on. For the tamarind pulp, rub half a small pot of the pulp through a fine hair sieve, mixing it with a little boiling stock—whatever kind was used for making the curry sauce—before rubbing it through, then mixing this purée into the sauce before the chicken or meat is cooked. A teaspoonful of green ginger—procurable at Covent Garden or the Stores—pounded to a paste with a little butter, together with a little lemon juice, can also be added to the curry at this stage of the proceedings. With a mutton curry many native cooks use as much as a dessertspoonful of the grated green ginger to the pound of uncooked mutton, sprinkling it over the raw meat before this is marinaded in the sauce, as already described. For the nut milk, this must not be the liquid found on opening a cocoanut, but an infusion made by soaking the finely-grated white meat of the cocoanut in boiling water, and this infusion, when well flavoured, squeezed through muslin and used. When fresh cocoanut is not available, Brazil nuts or almonds can be used in the same way, or a mixture of almonds and cocoanut is liked by many people, in the proportion of two ounces of cocoanut to a dozen sweet almonds; while, when these are used alone, use one bitter one (pounded) to every four ounces of the sweet ones (pounded) to a cupful of boiling water.

In some curries half a pint of this nut milk is used in place of that quantity of stock in making the sauce—i.e., half a pint of the milk and half a pint of the stock are used for the sauce for a pound of meat—but a gill or so more of it must be added towards the last pint of this sauce, as much of the flavour of that used at the start for the sauce will evaporate during the preliminary cooking and marinading.

Of course, the recipe given to-day is for only one of many forms of curry; but the proportions of powder, paste, etc., are small, and it is one generally preferred by European palates to the many more highly-seasoned varieties of curry.

The fresh chutnies known as sambals, which should always be served with a curry, I must deal with when space permits in a future issue.

FILETS DE HARENGS.

(Specially prepared and photographed for this paper.)

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

LITTLE MOULDS OF COLD HAM CREAM WITH FILLETED CHICKEN, ETC. (Ashby).—I think this is what you mean: Mix together a jar of Lazenby's potted ham, a gill of stiffly-whipped cream, two tablespoonfuls of liquid aspic jelly, a drop or two of carmine to make the mixture a delicate pink, and whip them together for a few minutes; then use the mixture to fill some little cutlet moulds, previously lined with aspic jelly. When they are set, turn out, and arrange the moulds alternately with the fillets of a fowl, masked with any nice white chaud-froid sauce, or masked with mayonnaise aspic or cream aspic. Fill the centre with peas or asparagus points tossed in mayonnaise. The chicken fillets should properly be cut from the uncooked fowl, and then be cooked in a buttered tin, with a little lemon juice, in the usual way; but for ordinary occasions they can be cut from the breast of a cold cooked fowl. When celery comes in a delicious dish is made by making an oyster and celery mayonnaise, and arranging round it the ham cream cutlets and the chicken fillets, masked with aspic cream. Another version of these little ham creams is obtained by lining little moulds with aspic jelly, garnishing them with cold cooked peas, then filling the moulds with alternate layers of the pink ham cream and aspic cream. Any nice potted fish, game, poultry, or foie gras can be used for these creams, and if used alone for a simple little cold entrée, either with or without a salad to taste, roughly-chopped prawns or shrimps, or fine flakes of lobster or foie gras, can be mixed with the cream mixture. If very small, round moulds are used, the creams can be mounted on seasoned artichoke bottoms, arranged round a salad dressed with mayonnaise. Yes, cold entrées are, as you say, a great help when rather short-handed during the rush of dishing up, and are generally liked at this time of year.

SYBARITE

Digitized by Google

RICHARD SMITH & CO.'S

NURSERIES at ST. JOHN'S

WORCESTER.

(ESTABLISHED 1804.)

More than 300 Acres of the Choicest Stock in Great Variety. . . .

FOUR ACRES OF GLASS. INSPECTION INVITED.

CATALOGUES ON APPLICATION.

Fruit Trees and Hardy Roses will be sold this coming season at exceptionally low prices.

Nurseries about half-a-mile from Electric Tram Terminus.

Do not be deceived any longer by imitations!

The only genuine Harvey's Sauce is that made by

E. LAZENBY & SON, LD.

The only firm that holds the original recipe for Harvey's Sauce—that has held it for 100 years—is

E. LAZENBY & SON, LD.

The only sauce in the market which is Harvey's Sauce, and not an imitation, bears the signature of

ELIZABETH LAZENBY.

The surest way to get the genuine Harvey's Sauce is to ask for Lazenby's Sauce, and to see for yourself in RED INK across the label the words

LAZENBY'S SAUCE.

No other sauce tendered as Harvey's is genuine.

IF IT DOESN'T BEAR THAT ENDORSEMENT

(Viz., Lazenby's Sauce)

IN RED INK, IT ISN'T HARVEY'S SAUCE AT ALL.

LAZENBY'S SAUCE.

MEDICAL men all over the country are rapidly becoming acquainted with the medicinal qualities of the high-class dry Cyders of Whimple, with the result that they are not only using these Cyders personally, but are constantly prescribing them in a variety of cases subject to dietic treatment.

It is a proved fact that regular consumers of Cyder are exempt from many distressing maladies, such as stone and gravel. Cyder is also an effective remedy for gout and rheumatism.

Not only the phosphorus, but the acids of the apple are of singular use for persons of sedentary habits, whose livers are apt to be slow of action. These acids aid the liver in its work of eliminating from the body the noxious matter which makes the brain heavy and dull, and causes rheumatism and other kindred ailments.

If you would drink Devonshire's Delicious Drink at its very best—if you would realise to the full what a really enjoyable drink Cyder is—you should procure only that brand which comes from the presses of Messrs. Whiteway & Co.

Whiteway's Cyders are made only of the pure juice from the finest English apples, and are absolutely free from chemical preservatives.

Write for Booklet, Price List, etc., to WHITEWAY, WHIMPLE, DEVON;

or 22 and 23, ALBERT EMBANKMENT, LONDON, S.W.

The Uses of Cyder:

(a) as a health giver.

(b) as a delicious beverage.

Henry Whiteway & Co., Ltd.

ECONOMY — HEALTH — PURITY

NO BEETROOT USED.

"GLEBE"

REFINED GENUINE

CANE SUGAR

AND

CANE GOLDEN SYRUP

GLEBE SUGAR REFINING CO., Greenock, Glasgow, and St. George's House, Eastcheap, London.

ARE YOU ALIVE

to the fact that thousands of people who were inveterate smokers of extensively advertised cheap paper cigarettes (which are so harmful to the health) have discontinued same, and are now smoking

FLOR DE DINDIGUL

CIGARETTES (All Tobacco Leaf—No Paper).

They are far more satisfying, mild, delightful in flavour, pure, and last much longer than ordinary paper cigarettes. Doctors strongly recommend them. These delightful Whiffs are on sale everywhere, 1d. each, 8/- per 100. Awarded 10 Gold Medals for Excellence.

Importer: BEWLAY, 49, STRAND, LONDON.

Established 125 Years.

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

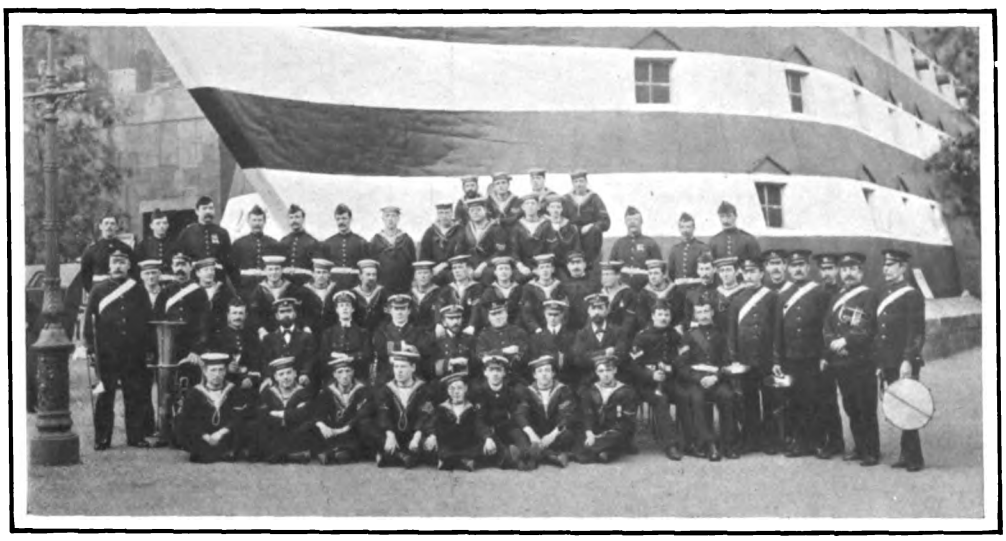
THE little folder published by John Wilson's Successors, Limited, the well-known damask and lace house at 188, Regent Street, London, will be found indispensable by Americans, Canadians, and travellers generally. It is styled "Dollar Equivalents," and shows at a glance the equivalent in English and French money of any amount in dollars. Wilsons' will send it to any applicant, or give it to any caller.

THE season at Spa has been the most successful known for many years, and English visitors are once more well to the fore in the Ardennes. To complete the satisfaction of the present go-ahead burgomaster Spa has won the Grand Prix at Liége against all competing mineral waters.

AFTER a twelvemonth's absence, during which she has been the star of an exceptionally brilliant revue at the Folies-Bergère, Mlle. Anne Dancrey has returned to the Alhambra. Mlle. Dancrey will be found to be admirably suited in her latest creation, which she calls "Maxixe." At the Hippodrome, too, there are many novelties, and the Oxford just now is presenting a very strong bill. The new Military tattoo at the Coliseum, with its symbolic picture of the arrival of Peace, is a striking production worthy of the standard which the management of this popular house have set themselves to maintain.

A LARGE number of people are (according to temperament) chuckling over or smarting under the finale of one of the most surprising of newspaper hoaxes. Tales of the cruise of a mysterious black craft with a dare-devil crew of piratical tendencies were periodically sent to the newspapers on the Continent and in England, and from all accounts fishermen were bordering on panic, and at last made up their minds to sink the boat on sight. The terrible tragedy culminated with a challenge to "Luigi Caro" (the pirate), to meet "owner of 'Irene'" on the Clarence Pier, Southsea, and as there was the possibility of a deadly combat, a large number of people congregated. They did not see a duel, however, but their time had not been wasted, as they noticed a yacht with the injunction to use "Cook's Soaps" writ large on her mainsail. It is more than likely that the good advice which Messrs. E. Cook and Co., Limited, have gone to such expense to give, has had the effect of introducing their excellent soaps to a large number of people.



THE OFFICERS AND CREW OF THE "PYTHON"

The third-class "cruiser" in the Empress Hall, which is the most popular feature at the Earl's Court Exhibition this year.

WORCESTER SAUCE is popular all over the world, and the receipt of an order at the offices of Courtenay's Worcestershire Sauce Syndicate for fifty barrels for America or one of the Colonies is no uncommon event. In the manufacture of real Worcester Sauce wholesomeness of material and proper mixing are very important, and careful maturing subsequently is a sine quâ non. Courtenay's Sauce is always kept for eighteen months or two years before being put on the market, and the result is that it has delicious flavour, and as an appetising delicacy is unapproached.

LANDSCAPE photography nowadays is a fine art, and the many beauty spots around Malvern and Cheltenham have received adequate treatment at the hands of Messrs. Norman May and Co.—some of whose photographs are reproduced in this number—the leading photographers and stationers of the neighbourhood.

IN connection with the Worcester Musical Festival, it has been decided to present the freedom of the city to Sir Edward Elgar, Worcester's famous son. The casket in which the freedom will be presented has been designed and executed by L. Cassadis and Co. of Worcester. The casket is of massive silver, standing on an ebony plinth, and on the obverse are three panels, containing views of Worcester Cathedral and the Guildhall, with an emblematic design in the centre showing a scroll of music and conductor's baton ornamented with palm and laurel. On the reverse are panels showing incidents in his two great works, "Gerontius" and "The Apostles," and on the lid of the casket are the city arms and motto and the recipient's monogram.

LADY OMMANNEY, widow of Admiral Sir Erasmus Ommanney, has presented to the museum of the Royal United Service Institution in Whitehall a small collection of relics of Sir John Franklin, the Arctic explorer. These are specially interesting, as they were the first traces of the winter quarters of Franklin's ships discovered in August, 1850, by Captain E. Ommanney, as he then was, of her Majesty's ship "Assistance." The relics include an old clay pipe, a tiny glass bottle, two pieces of Polar bearskin, and a small painted china plate.

ON Tuesday, the 12th inst., a trophy is to be presented at Portsmouth to the armoured cruiser "Hampshire," by the ladies of that county. It consists of a silver replica of King Arthur's Round Table, now hanging in the great hall at Winchester Castle; while the gift to the wardroom will be a very handsome and artistic silver bowl. The presentation is to be followed by a luncheon, and afterwards the ship will be open to the inspection of visitors.

BROCK'S annual benefit at the Crystal Palace always draws a big crowd to the Sydenham pleasure garden, and it is safe to assume that the gathering this week for the event will be as large as ever. A special attraction is promised in the shape of a reproduction of the firework display at Portsmouth on the occasion of the visit of the French Fleet.

Amusements.

HIS MAJESTY'S. MR. TREE.
Every Evening at 8.
Charles Dickens's
OLIVER TWIST.
Dramatised by J. Comyns Carr.
Fagin ... ... ... Mr. TREE.
Nancy ... ... ... Miss CONSTANCE COLLIER.
First Matinees, Wednesday, Sept. 13th, and Wednesday, Sept. 20th.

CRITERION THEATRE, W.
Sole Lessee: Sir CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Manager: Mr. FRANK CURZON.
Every Evening at 8.30,
Mr. Frank Curzon's Company in
THE WHITE CHRYSANTHEMUM,
A new Lyrical Comedy. Written by Leedham Bantock and Arthur Anderson. Music by Howard Talbot. Mesdames Marie George, Millie Legarde, Isabel Jay, etc. Messrs. Rutland Barrington, Lawrence Grossmith, M. R. Morand, Henry A. Lytton, etc. Matinee every Saturday at 2.30.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Sole Lessee and Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
At 8.50,
WHAT THE BUTLER SAW.
By Edward A. Parry and Fredk. Mouillot.
Matinee Every Wednesday and Saturday at 3
Box Office now open. Telephone 4028 Gerrard.

DALY'S THEATRE.
Produced by Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES.
To-night and Every Evening at 8.15.
Matinee Every Saturday at 2.30.
THE LITTLE MICHUS.
By A. Vanloo and G. Duval. Music by Andre Messager.
Adapted for the English stage by Henry Hamilton.
Lyrics by Percy Greenbank.
Mlle. ADELINE GENEE in a NEW DANCE.
Box Office 10 to 10.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. FRANK CURZON.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
To-night at 8.15,
LADY MADCAP.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.15.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. FREDERICK HARRISON.
Every Evening, at 9.
ON THE LOVE PATH.
A Comedy in Three Acts by C. M. S. McLellan.
Miss Ellis Jeffreys and Mr. Gerald Du Maurier
Mr. Arthur Williams, Mr. Eric Lewis, Mr. A. E Matthews, Mr. Edmund Maurice, Miss B. Forbes Robertson and Miss Jessie Bateman.
Preceded at 8.15 by a Comedy in one Act, called
A PRIVY COUNCIL.
FIRST MATINEE, SATURDAY, September 9, at 2.30.
Box Office now open 10 to 7. Tel. 2933 Gerrard.

GARRICK THEATRE.
MR. ARTHUR BOURCHIER, Lessee and Manager.
Every Evening at 8.30,
THE WALLS OF JERICHO.
By Alfred Sutro.
Matinee Every Wednesday at 2.30.

APOLLO THEATRE.
HENRY LOWENFELD, Sole Proprietor.
TOM B. DAVIS, Lessee and Manager.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
Every Evening at 8.15.
"VERONIQUE."
Matinee every Wednesday at 2. Last Weeks.

PROMENADE CONCERTS. — QUEEN'S HALL.
TO-NIGHT AND NIGHTLY AT 8.
QUEEN'S HALL ORCHESTRA.
Conductor: MR. HENRY J. WOOD.
1/- to 5/-. Usual Agents, Chappell's Box Office, Queen's Hall, and Queen's Hall Orchestra (Ltd.), 320, Regent Street.
ROBERT NEWMAN, Manager.

NAVAL, SHIPPING, AND FISHERIES EXHIBITION, EARL'S COURT.
11 a.m. to 11 p.m. Admission 1s.
Naval Construction, Armaments, Shipping & Fisheries
NELSON'S CENTENARY RELICS.
FISHING VILLAGE. Working Exhibits. Model of "Victory."
GRAND NAVAL AND MILITARY CONCERTS
Go on board the full-size Cruiser.
Specially ventilated, coolest Show in London.
Real Batteries of 4.7 Guns, Hotchkiss and Maxims
The Cruiser is manned by a crew of 150 Handy-men.
BATTLE OF TRAFALGAR.
"Our Navy." Captive Flying Machine. Great Red Indian Village. Voyage in a Submarine. Haunted Cabin. Famous Sea Fights De Rohan Theatre. Tillikum Canoe, and many other attractions

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Mr. David Williamson | 751 |
| The March of Events | 752 |
| Sport and Pastime | 754 |
| On the Continent | 755 |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 758 |
| On the Links | 760 |
| The Styles of Eminent Players—XI.—Mr. Graham | 764 |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 765 |
| The Parisians of Paris—The Seaside in September | 766 |
| Under the Burgee | 768 |
| The Regattas at Torbay | 769 |
| "The Prodigal Son" at Drury Lane | 770, 771 |
| The "Zoos" of the World—No. II.—The Zoo at Sydney, New South Wales | 772 |
| At the Sydney Zoo | 773 |
| The Traveller—A Quiet Dorset Haven | 774 |
| Conway Castle | 775 |
| The Cricket Season | 776, 777 |
| The Services | 778 |
| The Channel Fleet in the Baltic | 779 |
| The Racing Season | 780 |
| Art in the Sale room | vii. |
| Apt Quotations | viii. |
| Literary Notes | x. |
| Leaves from a Collector's Note-book—No. LVIII.—The Pottery and Porcelain of Liverpool | xii. |
| Motoring Notes | xiv. |
| Fashions of To-day and To-morrow | xvi. |
| The King's Menu | xviii. |
| Here, There, and Everywhere | xx. |

TO LIBRARIES, CLUBS, HOTELS, Etc.

A Reading Case for THE KING can be had post free on application to the Publishers, George Newnes, Limited, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.

HOTELS.

ENGLISH HOTELS.

TORQUAY (Population 33,625).—PREMIER HEALTH RESORT. Unrivalled climate. Warm in winter. Sunshine-land. Charming drives and sheltered walks. 120 acres of public gardens. Piers.

TORQUAY. Irreproachable water supply and perfect sanitation. Theatre, concerts, and other musical attractions. Medicated baths of all kinds. Express trains from all parts.

For Illustrated Descriptive Books of Torquay, apply FREDK. S. HEX, Town Clerk.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

De Vere Hotel, from 10/6 per day. 'Phone 524.
Broadwalk Hotel, from 8/6 per day. ,, 858.
Prince of Wales' Hotel, from 10/6 per day. ,, 641. Kensington.

Electric Light. Lifts. Everything up to date. First-class cuisine.

BOURNEMOUTH HYDRO.

Sunny Site. Overlooking Sea. Every Bath. Ideal Residence.

EASTBOURNE.

THE HYDRO HOTEL.—A select Residential Hotel on South Coast, 120ft. above sea level. Large gardens, close to the sea. Tennis. Croquet. Bowling Green. Spacious Lounges and Public Rooms. 70 Bedrooms, also Suites, luxuriously furnished, electric light throughout. High-class cuisine. Table d'Hôte or à la Carte. Separate tables. Lift. Billiards. Private 'Bus. Nearest to schools and Links. Close to Parades. Week End terms. Motor Garage with repairing Pits. Lit by Electric Light. For inclusive Tariff (Illustrated), also Programme of Amusements, address—O. F. BERGANN, Manager. Telegraphic Address: "Hydrotel, Eastbourne." Telephone, No. 143, Eastbourne. The new Turkish Baths are now open.

FOREIGN HOTELS.

BIARRITZ.

GRAND HOTEL.—Winter Season.—First-class establishment. Splendid situation, facing the sea. Patronised by the elité; rendezvous of English Society. Every comfort; excellent attendance and cooking.—MONTENAT, Manager.

AXENSTEIN (Lake Lucerne; 2,350ft. above sea level; electric railway Brunnen-Axenstein).—First-class Hotel. World-renowned climatic health resort; patronised by English society. "Axenstein is the loveliest spot I met with on my journey through Switzerland."—QUEEN VICTORIA.

TENERIFFE

HAS THE FINEST WINTER CLIMATE IN THE WORLD.

THE First-class HOTELS there are
the QUISISANA at Santa Cruz,
the AGUERE and CONTINENTAL at La Laguna, and
the MARTIANEZ (late Grand) at Port Orotava.
All under the Management of C. H. TRENKEL. Prospectus, etc., on application.

SHIPPING.

MOROCCO, CANARY ISLANDS, and MADEIRA LINE OF STEAMERS; 24 days for 20 guineas.—For particulars write Messrs. FORWOOD BROS., 46, St. Mary Axe, E.C.

Patronised by H.M. The King.

DOVERCOURT BAY, ESSEX,

HOTEL ALEXANDRA.

The Finest Health and Pleasure Resort on the East Coast. Delightful Climate. Bracing Air. The Hotel, which has recently been visited by H.M. KING, is luxuriously Furnished. Charming Situation. Facing the Sea. Electric Light. Excellent Cuisine. Tennis, Croquet. Motor Garage and Pit. 1 hour 40 minutes express from London.

For Illustrated Tariff, apply A. H. THIEM, Proprietor.

WHELPTON'S PURIFYING PILLS

For Indigestion, Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Sea Sickness.

INVALUABLE FOR LADIES.

8, 14, and 33 stamps.

G. WHELPTON, 4, Crane Court, Fleet St., London.

RHEUMATISM.

BLAIR'S

GOUT PILLS.

The only Remedy that Relieves and Cures all Rheumatic Complaints. Sure, Safe, and Effectual. All Chemists and Stores, 1/1½ & 2/9 per box

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE

TEOFANI'S

HIGH-CLASS

CIGARETTES.

TEOFANI'S Cigarettes receive the Highest Awards at all International Exhibitions, and are Sold by Leading Purveyors throughout the WORLD.

TEOFANI & CO., LONDON.

THE CLOTH FOR GOLF SUITS.

"Hydea"

is the best English cloth—made of the best English wool—grown on the HYDE Farm, Gloucestershire. It is delightfully soft and elastic—absolutely the best for sportsmen—most durable for out-o'-doors—most handsome for town suits—long thread—refined finish.

THE KING WEARS IT,

and pays no more than you—because there's only one quality at one price. "HYDEA" is stamped on every two yards of the selvedge—that's how you may know it—that, and its excellent surface! Send for FREE Booklet:—

APPERLY, CURTIS & Co., Ltd.,
Dudbridge Mills, Stroud, West of England.

HEREFORD.

THE CENTRE OF THE LOVELY WYE VALLEY

SENT FREE.

An artistic Booklet containing a series of views and descriptive matter of this delightful country and district.

Apply TOWN CLERK'S Office.

The "Country Life" Library.

ROSES FOR ENGLISH GARDENS.

By Miss GERTRUDE JEKYLL and Mr. E. MAWLEY.

Illustrated with 190 full-page Plates. 12s. 6d. Nett.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, Ltd., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
The charmingly situated Seaside Resort on the Dorsetshire Coast.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Unequalled for its Marine and Land Excursions. Golfing and Fishing.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Temperature higher than that of any other Seaside Resort. See daily reports.

SPA, BELGIUM.

(10 Hours from London.)

The Oldest Chalybeate Springs in the World.

Finest Bathing Establishment in Europe. Best cure for Anæmia, Chlorosis, and Heart Affections. Countless attractions, Steeplechases, Horse Show, Concerts, Theatre, Automobile Races, Golf, Balls. For programme write

BUREAU DE PUBLICITE, SPA.

NATIONAL PROVIDENT

Estd.] INSTITUTION [1835.

For Mutual Life Assurance.

Accumulated Fund over £5,900,000.
Paid in Claims ... £12,250,000.

Profits: These are divided every five years solely amongst the Assured; already divided to 1902, £6,160,000.

Endowment-Assurance Policies are issued, combining Life Assurance at minimum cost, with provision for old age, and are singularly advantageous.

48, GRACECHURCH STREET, LONDON, E.C.

APPLICATIONS FOR AGENCIES INVITED.

No Breakfast Table complete without

EPPS'S

The Cream of Cocoas.

COCOA

The Most Nutritious and Economical.

РУБЛЬ КОФЕ

(ROUBLE COFFEE.)

The Coffee of the Epicure

BERRIES, FRESH ROASTED. 2/- PER LB. WE PAY THE CARRIAGE.

It may not sound cheap, but nothing REALLY GOOD ever is cheap. . . .

Follow our directions, and a revelation awaits you of what REALLY GOOD COFFEE REALLY IS.

Metata Agents, 17, Devonshire Sq., London, E.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

THE COLONEL TAKES THE 19TH (W)HOLE IN ONE!

Head Office:
11,
SO. EXCHANGE PLACE,
GLASGOW.
J. H. ROGER
PROPR.
LESSEE OF
H.M. CUSTOMS (No. 15) BOND,
JAMES WATT STREET,
GLASGOW.

Special Quotations to Golf Clubs.

"COLONEL BOGEY" WHISKY.

GUARANTEED 7 YEARS OLD.

42/- PER DOZEN. CARRIAGE PAID.

THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.

Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS
of every description, including
TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT.
MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.
Handsome Public Rooms, including
2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel. Telephone 56.

Terms from MANAGER.

CLEVEDON (Somerset).

SEASIDE HYDRO HOTEL.

Holiday, Health, and Pleasure Resort. Near Golf Links and Pier. Good centre for excursions by road, rail, or sea. Resident Physician. Fine Baths. Liberal Table.

SECRETARY, Hydro, Clevedon, Somerset.

LELANT, ST. IVES BAY, CORNWALL (close to golf links and station).—Furnished HOUSE, with plate and linen, to LET for Summer months; two large sitting rooms, six bedrooms, one dressing room, bathroom.—"T.B.H.," "Evelyns," Uxbridge.

SOUTHWOLD (best position on the Common; close to Golf Links).—To be LET, well Furnished, for September, the pretty and artistic HOUSE known as "Link's Cottage," containing square hall, two sitting and large recreation rooms, servants' sitting room, seven bedrooms (fourteen beds), bathroom; electric light and telephone.—Apply to Mrs. ROBINSON, on Property.

ON THE BOURNEMOUTH LINKS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations. High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hôte, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.

THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.

THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.

A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.

Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads. Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.

Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.

Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.

New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare, Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,

Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.

To be obtained from Thos. Cook, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON.

Telephone, 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade and commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.

Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors.

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL.

SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.

Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head.

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.

Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill.

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau, 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 30s. Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address: "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY,

Within easy access of London.

THE BUSH HOTEL.

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers, inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 1s. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable, being on sand.

DEVONSHIRE'S DELIGHTFUL DRINK.—

The very best beverage for GOLFERS is WHITEWAY'S PURE CYDER. Refreshing, cooling, and a panacea for Gout, Rheumatism, and Obesity.

Booklets free from WHITEWAY'S, The Orchards, Whimple, Devon, and 22 and 23, Albert Embankment, S.W. Telephone 173 Hop.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

VULCAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E.

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer).

"'Is it a Private House or an Hotel?' is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels."

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGERESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29, Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

1, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

WANTED, on long Lease, about 200 ACRES of LAND, on sea coast, suitable for golf links.—Apply, with full particulars, "B. A.," c/o THE KING Office, 12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. COX, New Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL.—Brinklea, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library. Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052.

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned, from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains.

ON BLUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY.

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms e[illegible] Luxuries. Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promen[illegible] Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.
Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Booklet and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

ZÜRICH.—DOLDER GRAND HOTEL, First-class English frequented house in extensive well-wooded grounds, 2,000ft. above sea level. Golf links in front of the hotel; tennis; motoring centre. Electric Tram and funicular service with Zürich Central Station (25 min.). Electro-magnetic therapeutical treatment (E. K. Muller's method).—Manager, E. DIELMANN.

SHERINGHAM, NORFOLK.

THE SHERINGHAM HOTEL,

ADJOINING GOLF LINKS (18 HOLES).

LARGEST HOTEL IN SHERINGHAM. Open all the year round. Handsome Dining Hall, 70ft. long. Numerous spacious Suites of Rooms commanding beautiful Sea and Land Views. Billiard and Smoking Rooms. Excellent and Improved Sanitary arrangements. Extensive Private Grounds. Lawn tennis, croquet. First-class Stables. Accommodation for Motors and Cycles. Through Trains from King's Cross, Peterborough, Birmingham, Leicester, etc.

Telegrams—"Sheringham Hotel, Sheringham."

National Telephone: No. 3. F. EDENS, Manager.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.
Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.
Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & Co.
Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.
MODERATE TARIFF.
Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months.
Perfect Sanitary arrangements.
Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year.

Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel.—Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors, EMMERSON & HARRIS.

THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE

Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit

Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE."
National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL.

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms

Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

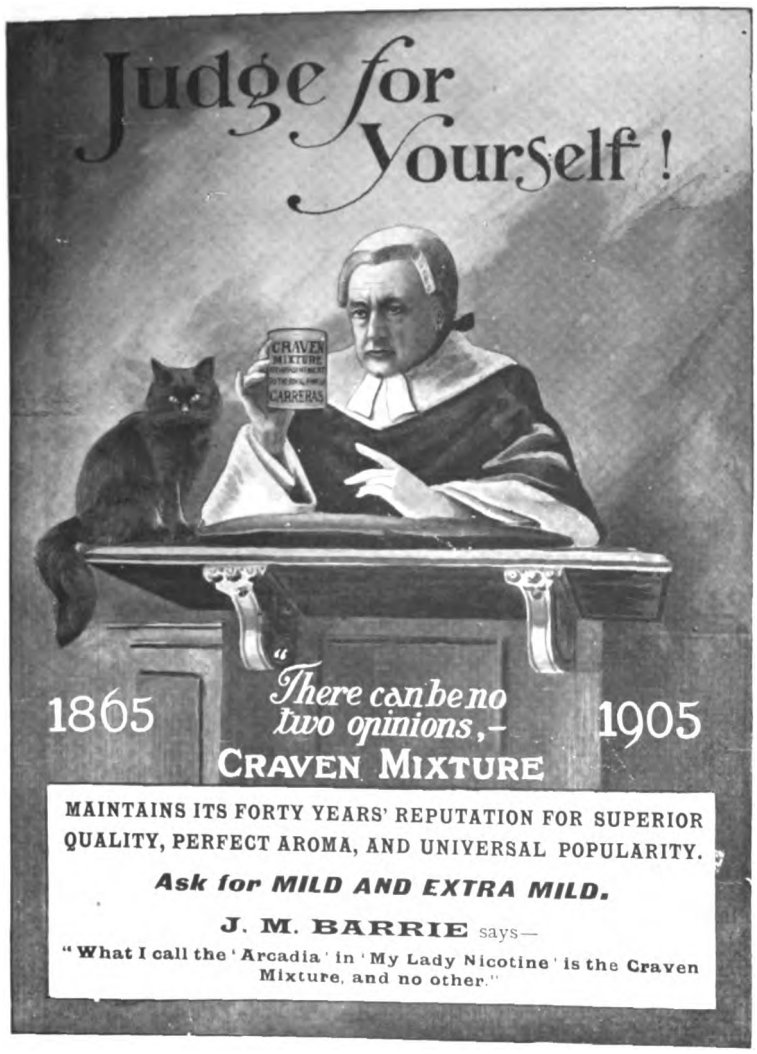
MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google



MAINTAINS ITS FORTY YEARS' REPUTATION FOR SUPERIOR QUALITY, PERFECT AROMA, AND UNIVERSAL POPULARITY.

Ask for MILD AND EXTRA MILD.

J. M. BARRIE says—

"What I call the 'Arcadia' in 'My Lady Nicotine' is the Craven Mixture, and no other."

When selecting from your Jewellers a Patent

GOLD "SELF-CLOSING" BRACELET

be SURE that you get

SAUNDERS & SHEPHERD'S.

THE ORIGINAL MAKE. UNSURPASSED FOR BEAUTY OF DESIGNS WORKMANSHIP AND FINISH.

N.B.—These Bracelets have for some time been stamped inside with S. & S.'s Trade Mark "FLEXINE."

Wholesale only—SAUNDERS & SHEPHERD, LTD., LONDON.

A Sensation

of genial comfort, a soothed skin, a fresh feeling—such are the results of using Cook's "Throne" Toilet Soap, luxury's necessity, in a warm (not too warm) bath. It lathers softly and freely in cold water, too.

OF ALL CHEMISTS AND STORES.

Six Dainty Samples of Cook's Pure Toilet Soaps sent, post free, for six penny stamps.

EDWARD COOK & CO., Ltd., The Soap Specialists, LONDON, E.

THRESHER & GLENNY,

BY SPECIAL APPOINTMENT TO
THEIR MAJESTIES THE KING AND QUEEN AND H.R.H. THE PRINCESS OF WALES.

MILITARY AND SPORTING TAILORS AND GENERAL OUTFITTERS.

Clothing, Leather Goods & Furniture

Of every description for Travellers at Home and Abroad.

Camp Requisites for Sporting Expeditions.

ACTIVE SERVICE KITS.

Tents on view erected and all requisites for Military and Sporting Ca mp use

Experienced Packers attend customer's residence.

WRITE FOR INFORMATION RESPECTING NECESSARIES FOR ALL PURPOSES. ESTIMATES AND ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES TO

THRESHER & GLENNY, 152 & 153, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

CHARLES LEE & SON,

42/-

Specialist Ladies' Outfitters,

98 & 100, WIGMORE STREET

(ONLY ADDRESS).

CAUTION.—Messrs. Lee & Son have no branches, and warn the public against imitations of their goods.

An example in Finest Quality English Crêpe de Chine, with Valenciennes Lace Yoke and Guipure Points, 42/-.

A Blouse suitable for any figure.

POST ORDERS.—The Lady's Pictorial states:—"If you live in the country, have an account with Lee & Son, Wigmore Street; they send the choicest selection of goods by post, while they are cheap for the best Costumiers, Furriers, Lacemen, Specialists in Trousseaus, The Leewig Petticoat, Royal Crescent Veil, Hosiers, Glovers, Milliners, etc.

CHARLES LEE & SON,
WIGMORE STREET.

VOGELER'S CURATIVE COMPOUND

PURIFIES THE BLOOD
AND
CURES INDIGESTION,
CONSTIPATION, LIVER ILLS, SKIN DISEASES.

"I must honestly say your Vogeler's Curative Compound has done me a lot of good. My face and neck are quite clear of the Eczema, and I feel so much better in every respect since taking the medicine. I used to have indigestion and wind very bad after eating, but I am now quite free from both these ailments."

(Signed) Miss S. MORRIS,

June 2nd, 1904. Ash Cottage, Court Road, Malvern.

Price 1/1½ and 2/6; of all Chemists.

LARGE FREE SAMPLE

sent on receipt of penny stamp for postage (mentioning this paper) by the Sole Proprietors,

ST. JACOBS OIL, Ltd., 45, Farringdon Road, London.

Digitized by Google

ON THE LINKS: THE GREAT FOURSOME.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

VOL. XX. No. 450. SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 16th, 1905. PRICE 6D.

Koehne, Chicago.

MR. DAVID WILLIAMSON

Prospective Liberal Candidate for Dulwich.

(See page 765.)

Digitized by Google

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 450. Saturday, Sept. 16, 1905.

Editorial Offices—20, TAVISTOCK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephones—No. 2,748 GERRARD, AND 7,961 CENTRAL.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

THE KING AND QUEEN AT FLUSHING.—Last week for the first time in its history Flushing entertained a King and Queen of England within its harbour, King Edward being on his way home from Marienbad, "feeling better and stronger than ever before," and Queen Alexandra being on her way to Copenhagen, where the Channel Fleet was also visiting. Flushing has not many Royal memories, though of late years the present King and Queen have used it fairly frequently. The Duke of Marlborough frequently used it during his campaigns in the Low Countries, and the only thing that was accomplished by the ill-fated Walcheren Expedition was the capture of Flushing. Stade on the Elbe has many more Royal connections than Flushing, having been the port from which Princess Caroline sailed to marry George IV., and from which the Queen of George III. also sailed when she left her native country.

THE KING IN THE NORTH.—This week King Edward is staying with Lord and Lady Savile at Rufford Abbey for the Doncaster Races, and next Monday he will arrive in Edinburgh for the much-talked-of Volunteer Review. In the Scottish capital he will, as on his previous visit, have as bodyguard the Royal Company of Archers, a corps that is on a footing with the Household Cavalry in England, and which, since it had a charter granted it by Queen Anne, has always had the privilege of providing a Sovereign's Escort in Edinburgh. After the visit to Glenquoich, which follows Edinburgh, the King will go to Balmoral. At Glenquoich there will be several deer drives, and the King will also make motor excursions in the neighbourhood.

THE QUEEN AND THE CHANNEL FLEET.—It was singularly fortunate that the arrival of Queen Alexandra in the capital of her native country should have coincided so exactly with the visit of the Channel Fleet. Indeed, there was a double interest in the event, for one of the principal hosts of the British Naval officers was Prince Charles of Denmark, who married one of Queen Alexandra's daughters, and the long standing and firmly established friendship between the countries is thus cemented by intermarriage in the Royal houses of the two States. King Christian paid a signal compliment to Sir Arthur Wilson in visiting him on board his flag-ship, and at the dinner at the Amalienborg Palace, the friendly character of the speeches, was a splendid augury for the continuance of the pleasant relations between England and Denmark. The Danish Naval Officers' Club also gave a banquet, and in reply to the toast of the British Navy the British Officers extended a cordial invitation to their hosts of that evening to visit England. "The brave Danes, the brothers of England," as Nelson himself called them, are more our brothers to-day even than they were then.

Illustrations Bureau.

KING EDWARD AT FLUSHING.

The King met Queen Alexandra at Flushing on Friday last on his way back from Marienbad. The Queen was travelling to Denmark, having crossed the Channel in the "Victoria and Albert."

THE KING'S LIVERPOOL REGIMENT.—Liverpool is justly proud of the soldiers who have made many a gallant stand on hard-fought fields, and last week a memorial to them was unveiled in St. John's Gardens. The regiment was founded in 1685, and a soldier of that period and one of 1902 flank the central pedestal, on which stands a figure of Britannia, while at the back again is a drummer-boy of the period of Dettingen. The unveiling ceremony was performed by Sir George White, who had some very complimentary things to say of the regiment, though none could say that they were undeserved. "Nec aspera terrent" is the motto of the regiment, and in the spirit of that motto the heroes of the past, who are thus fittingly commemorated, lived and died.

AN INTERESTING ENGAGEMENT.—The engagement is announced of Lord Lewisham, eldest son of the Earl of Dartmouth, and the third daughter of Lord Carrington, one of the most popular Governors who ever represented the Crown in Greater Britain. Lady Ruperta was a child of two years when her father and mother went out to Australia, and as they presided over Government House in Sydney for five years, her memories of New South Wales must be vivid. She is, moreover, named after Lord Carrington's third brother, the Hon. Rupert Carrington, who is now practically a Colonial. He has lived in Australia since 1885, and won the D.S.O. as Major of the New South Wales Mounted Rifles in South Africa. His wife is a daughter of Mr. John Horstall of Widgiewa, one of the greatest runholders in the world. Lady Ruperta is young and pretty, with much of the family charm, and as Lord Lewisham is only twenty-four they will make a very youthful couple. Curiously enough, the Earl of Dartmouth was made Vice-Chamberlain at the Court of Queen Victoria in 1891, and Lord Carrington Chamberlain in 1892.

Digitized by Google

THE MARCH OF EVENTS.

Lafayette.

THE COMING OF AGE OF VISCOUNT MOORE.

A large party gathered at Moore Abbey, Monasterevan, Lord Drogheda's Irish seat, for the coming of age of the Earl's eldest son.

Illustrations Bureau.

THE ROYAL PAVILION AT THE BRAEMAR GATHERING.

Though King Edward did not find it possible to be present at the Braemar Gathering this year, there was a large assemblage of Royalties, among them being the Prince of Wales, Prince Edward, Prince George, and Princess Mary, and the Duke of Connaught. The Prince of Wales and his two sons were in Highland costume, and were very interested in the various events which made up the programme.

Digitized by Google

SPORT AND PASTIME.

(1) The Lawn Tennis Tournament at Hove last week. Miss Carbury serving in the Ladies' Singles. (2) Play in the Hove Tournament. A view from the Grand Stand. (3) Mixed Bathing at Sandown, Isle of Wight. (4) The Bath Horse Show. Miss G. K. Cunliffe's Sam Weller and Buckingham Gentleman. First prize winners for pairs. (5) Marion, Mrs. W. C. N. Chapman's chestnut mare, winner of the first prize for riding horses.

(From photographs by W. A. Rouch and others.)

Digitized by Google

ON THE CONTINENT.

(1) The English newspaper correspondents at the French Military Manœuvres. (2) Generals Chaffee and Bell of the American Army at the French Military Manœuvres. (3) The Ladies' Regatta at Pausilippe, near Naples. Mlles. Pierina and Lina Lanzara, third prize. (4) Mlles. Angeli and Foley, first prize winners. (5) Mlles. Sophie and Albine Cottrau, second prize winners. (6) In the main street of Trouville. (7) A garden party at Trouville during the Grand Semaine.

From photographs by Abeniacar, Gribayedoff, and Chusseau-Flaviens.)

Digitized by Google

PARTIES IN NEW ZEALAND.—For the first time since he came to the front in New Zealand political life, Mr. Seddon has to work against an organised Opposition. The leader of it, Mr. Massey, is a man with a keen sense of humour, a quality in which the Premier himself is notably lacking. He is, moreover, a native of Auckland, and for the past twenty or thirty years the Government has been dominated by the South. But the General Election in November is likely to be more than a struggle between two strong men and two policies. By a curious irony of fate a Labour Party has been brought into existence, which is as antagonistic to Mr. Seddon as it is to Mr. Massey. This of itself is sufficient to give piquancy to the coming campaign, but it does not stand alone. The farmers, frightened at Mr. Seddon's progressive legislation, have formed an organisation of their own, pledged to support Mr. Massey. How formidable the country can be when it once stirs, politicians have discovered in the United States. But Mr. Seddon's grasp of the helm of State is very firm. It will take a powerful combination to displace him INTELLECT AND JOHANNESBURG.—The British Association has done well to send representatives to South Africa this year. The newspapers have been most generous in giving space to reports of its sittings, and the attendance of South Africans has been large. As Lord Selborne truly says, the visit will do much towards enlarging the local horizon and bringing local education into touch with European thought. At Johannesburg the Association finds itself in an atmosphere even more unfamiliar than that at Cape Town or Durban. But it is not uncongenial. The "Golden City," which is a marvel of the modern spirit in its material sense, is also a marvel of educational progress. Its School of Mines is the finest in the world, and its University promises to embody the best features of both English and American institutions of the same kind. It will be to this side of Johannesburg that the representatives of the British Association will appeal. Incidentally they may learn that there is more vice to the square yard on the Rand than anywhere else under the Southern Cross, except, perhaps, Kalgoorlie.

BARTHOLOMEW FAIR.—Fifty years ago was held the last Bartholomew Fair, which, after a great and prosperous existence, covering more than seven centuries, had lost its hold on the public taste and become merely a resort for roughs and undesirable characters. Founded first as a part of the religious celebration of the Feast of St. Bartholomew at the neighbouring Priory, the fair became, after a couple of hundred years, merely a secular amusement, and the disestablishment of the monasteries by Henry VIII. removed from it its last vestige of religious meaning. It became the most theatrical of all the fairs, and at the booths in Smithfield nearly all the great "stars" of the eighteenth century played. Mrs. Pritchard, Mrs. Cibber, Fielding, Hippisley, Doggett, Joe Miller, Penkethman, and even, it is said, Edmund Kean, as a boy, were among those who filled in a fortnight or so of the summer months by taking part in the drolls (or farces) and condensed tragedies which did duty for drama at the fair. Garrick's only connection with the fair was as a visitor, and it is said that on tendering his money at the door of one of the booths one day the doorkeeper refused to take it, but politely requested him to step inside. "We don't take money of one another" was the explanation.

LADY MILBANKE AND HER SON.

Lady Milbanke is the daughter of Colonel the Hon. Charles Frederick Crichton of the Irish Guards, and was married in 1900 to Sir John Peniston Milbanke, of Eartham House, Chichester, Sussex.

"ACCORDING TO COCKER."—The phrase which Arthur Murphy made so popular a century ago in his play of "The Apprentice," bids fair to take on a new meaning now that a certain Dr. Cocker has founded an anti-treating society at Blackpool. But even before the play was written "according to Cocker" was a phrase which marked the termination to any dispute on a point of arithmetic. Cocker was a teacher of writing and arithmetic, and he dabbled, moreover, in picture engraving. His famous book, "The Tutor to Writing and Arithmetic," ran through sixty editions, and remained the standard work on the subject long after its author's death in 1673.

ST. GILES'S DAY.—In this country we are more accustomed to connect the first day of September with "St. Partridge" than with any recognised martyr in the Church calendar. Yet the great number of churches dedicated to the memory of St. Giles would lead one to suppose that he was sufficiently popular to have his name-day, which is September 1, remembered. In England alone he has nearly one hundred and fifty churches named after him, and the Londoner will easily think of St. Giles's, Cripplegate, and St. Giles-in-the-Fields. We get a clue to this particular saint's peculiarity, too, in the name of the neighbourhood in which the first-named church stands. St. Giles, who was an Athenian by birth, but a resident in France (he "hermitised" at St. Gilles, near Arles), was a cripple, and because he refused a Divine offer of a cure, holding his infirmity to be for the mortification of his flesh, he became the patron saint of cripples and lepers.

Digitized by Google

THE MARCH OF EVENTS.

(1) The Cavalry Manœuvres. Saluting the statue of the Duke of Wellington at Strathfieldsaye Park. (2) The memorial to the King's Liverpool Regiment, unveiled last Saturday by Sir George White. (3) The Navy and Army Boxing Championships. Middle weights. Lieutenant R. B. Campbell, Cornwall Light Infantry, beat Lieutenant G. Pears, R.E. (4) Heavy weights. Lieutenant W. S. Craven, R.H.A., beat Lieutenant J. Moore, R.E.

(From photographs by Knight, Aldershot, and Brown, Liverpool.)

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

IN these days of well-designed and soundly-built cars, serious breakdowns are comparatively rare. Up to a week ago I had driven almost daily for considerably over a year without experiencing any roadside trouble, except an occasional puncture, or some minute mechanical defect which a few seconds sufficed to correct. With a record such as this, one comes to regard a car as reliable a means of locomotion as a railway train, and the possibility of delay on a journey hardly enters into one's calculations Within the last few days, however, my faith has been somewhat rudely shaken, although, looking back on the incidents of two troublous runs, I must confess that on one occasion I was solely to blame, and that on the other a slight alteration in the design of the engine would have saved me hours of hard work. My experiences were fairly commonplace, but may perhaps be of value to the novice. I left London on a lengthy tour with that most interesting of vehicles, a perfectly strange car, which had been lent me by the makers to fill the interregnum between the sale of an old machine and the completion of a new one. All went well until within a few miles of our destination, when the sound of the driving chains showed that they were running dangerously loose. Adjusting chains, however, is a messy business, and I took the risk and ran on, with the result that we were shortly stranded with a badly-broken chain that could by no possibility be repaired by the roadside. The inevitable small boy quickly appeared on the scene, and was despatched to a neighbouring farmhouse for a length of stout rope. With this the sprocket, after several failures, due to the rope being unable to stand the strain, was lashed to the frame, and the remainder of the journey was accomplished laboriously on the first speed. It is, perhaps, not generally known that if one sprocket is kept from revolving the power is transmitted through the differential to the other, so that the car can be drived with only one side chain. The strain on the differential, of course, is very great, and it is inadvisable to travel more than a mile or two in this manner. One or two makers provide an arrangement whereby the two halves of the countershaft can be locked together, so that if one chain breaks the car can be driven by the other only, without placing any undue strain on the mechanism and without the necessity of lashing the useless sprocket. The device is one that might be largely imitated, as, although the breakage of a chain is a rare occurrence, the possibility of such an accident is always present.

Topical.

A REMINISCENCE OF THE GORDON BENNETT TRIALS.
A racing car at full speed near Douglas, Isle of Man.

Two days later we started on a run of close on 200 miles that was to carry us practically from one side of England to the other. Once again misfortune overtook us when we were looking forward to a punctual arrival. Twenty miles only remained to be covered, when unmistakable signs of overheating became apparent. On examination the radiator proved to be nearly empty, a fact which I attributed to a slack fan belt and the length of the run. Filling up from a neighbouring pond, we started again without a thought of further trouble. In a few miles the car again began to run faintly, and a knock in the engine showed that our difficulties had only begun. It was nearly dark, and we still had fifteen miles to cover before food and lodging could be reached. Removing the bonnet, I studied the situation, but everything appeared in perfect order, except that the radiator was again empty. While the engine cooled, I tramped to the nearest cottage and obtained a pail of water. Filling up once more, it was soon apparent that the pump was the seat of the trouble. There was no obstruction in the cooling system, but the pump, although outwardly in proper order, was failing to circulate the water. Nothing remained apparently but to dismount the pump and take it to pieces, and I then realised, perhaps more thoroughly than ever before, the value of accessibility. With strange perversity the designer had succeeded in making the removal of the pump a task of hours' duration, instead of the few minutes which would have sufficed with a little forethought on his part. Three bolts secured it to a cross member of the frame; one could only be reached by entirely removing the under shield, which extended nearly the whole length of the car; the other two could not be touched by any spanner without dismounting the radiator! The job was obviously an impossible one to attempt in the dark, and the only alternative was to crawl home as best we could at the risk of a seized engine. The remaining fifteen miles were accomplished in anxious stages of about a couple of miles each, interspersed with weary halts while the motor cooled down and a fresh supply of water was obtained. One has heard a great deal of the hatred with which the motorist is regarded in the country districts; but I must say that it was not apparent on this particular occasion, nor indeed at any period of our tour. A sleepy cottager might well resent being roused out of bed in the middle of the night to fetch water for a broken-down car, but all along the road I met

Topical.

THE TOURIST TROPHY RACE IN THE ISLE OF MAN.
A Speedwell car practising on the course near Castletown.

Digitized by Google

with nothing but civility and willing assistance from the country people, in spite of the fact that the district was one in which the excesses of car testers and works mechanics have become notorious.

A useful accessory which should form part of the equipment of every touring car, is one of the portable electric lamps which can be bought so cheaply nowadays. Its value was forcibly impressed upon me during the run in question, and, but for its help, my difficulties would have been greatly increased. The larger sizes will give a brilliant light for several hours, and as they can be used in any position and with perfect safety, repairs can be effected which would be impossible with the aid of the ordinary paraffin side lamp alone. They can also be employed as a movable search-light, by which sign-posts can be easily read, often without stopping the car. The small electric torches are not as a rule sufficiently powerful for this latter purpose, and it is, therefore, far better to carry one of the square-shaped lamps, which will throw a beam of bright light for ten or twenty yards.

It is to be hoped that the recent conviction of two or three motorists in London for permitting the emission of smoke from their cars will have a salutary effect. The appeal issued by the Automobile Club has been given a wide publicity in both the lay and technical Press, and those drivers who choose to disregard the warning richly deserve some punishment for their want of consideration for others. At the same time, the legality of the convictions is extremely doubtful, and, unless the police had evidence of constant smoke emission by the defendants' cars, an appeal would probably be successful. As I have explained on a previous occasion, only those vehicles come within the scope of the Motor-Car Acts which are so "constructed that no smoke or visible vapour is emitted therefrom except from any temporary or accidental cause." In order to secure a conviction under this clause the police as a rule are required to prove that the smoke was due to a cause which was of neither a "temporary" nor an "accidental" nature, obviously a matter of impossibility in the vast majority of cases. From the motorist's point of view the present law is eminently satisfactory, as it discourages vexatious prosecutions for trivial and purely accidental emissions of smoke. The minority of selfish drivers, however, have taken full advantage of the situation, with the result that the exhaust nuisance has grown to such dimensions in the towns that the next Act is fairly certain to contain a clause of a far more drastic nature.

RADIATOR.

Copyright.

A NEW TYPE OF WOLSELEY CAR.

The Tourist Trophy Race saw the first appearance in public of a 14 h.p. Wolseley which differs in many important respects from the standard model. The inlet valves are mechanically operated, and the engine is fitted with an automatic governor.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

EDITED BY A. J. ROBERTSON.

MR. E. HULTON
Of the Daily Dispatch, who issued the challenge to back Taylor and Vardon.

THE Great International Foursome, in which Braid and Herd have been taking part against Taylor and Vardon for £200 a side, was brought to a close on Saturday last at Deal. It has taken nearly a month to play it over the four greens of St. Andrews, Troon, St. Anne's, and Deal; and, greatly to the disappointment of everyone, the match came rather tamely and prematurely to a close in the defeat of Braid and Herd by 13 up and 12 to play. The match has excited an enormous amount of interest in golfing circles, and even among classes of the community whose interest in the game has been purely academic and tepid to the point of indifference. This great amount of interest arose not merely because the stake to be played for was unusually high, but mainly owing to the brilliant play sustained over a long series of years by the two Scottish and the two English professionals. In professional golf, these four players have been in a class altogether apart from their professional brethren; so that when the match was arranged everyone at least hoped, as well as expected, that the battle would be close and exciting up to the last few holes.

* * *

From the match-playing point of view, it would seem that the opening round at St. Andrews was the best and most evenly contested of the series played. There the play was of the good give-and-take order. First one side got a lead, and then the match was brought back to "all square," until at the end of the day's play the Scottish representatives just managed to get the better of Taylor and Vardon by 2 holes. But this slight lead was rapidly wiped out on the western green at Troon, and here the English players, by sustained steadiness of play and uniformly brilliant form, not only wiped off their deficit, but gained the substantial lead of 12 holes

MR. GEORGE A. RIDDELL
Of the News of the World, who accepted the challenge on behalf of Braid and Herd.

THE FINAL OF THE FOURSOME AT DEAL: THE CROWD ROUND THE 17TH GREEN, HERD PLAYING THE APPROACH SHOT.

THE CROWD AT DEAL: SOME OF THE SPECTATORS ON THEIR WAY TO THE 17TH HOLE.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

with which to begin the remaining half of the match over the English greens. Again, at Lytham and St. Anne's, Braid and Herd caused the match to take almost a sensational turn by reducing the lead of the English players to 7 holes, instead of the dozen. That the play was good may be judged by the scoring, which was 74 for Braid and Herd and 75 for Taylor and Vardon. At this point in the forenoon round Scotland had only knocked off one hole, but in the second round Braid and Herd brought out an extremely strong game, especially on the putting green, and they were enabled at the close of the day's play to raise the hopes of those who still expected a fairly close finish to the match at Deal by beginning the final thirty-six holes with a deficit of 7 holes only.

THE PROFESSIONAL FOURSOME.
Braid playing an approach shot to the 4th green.

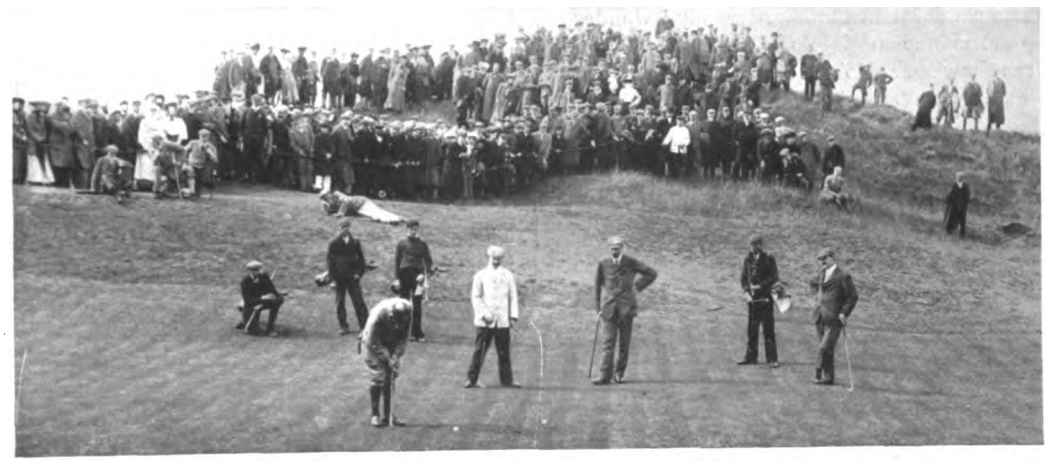
THE FINAL ROUND AT DEAL.
Vardon taking the line of the putt at the 1st hole.

The scores were, Braid and Herd, 71; Taylor and Vardon, 74.

At Deal on Saturday a high south-westerly wind was blowing, accompanied by occasional showers. There were probably not more than 2,000 spectators on the course throughout the day's play. With such a gusty wind as that which blew on Saturday the only hope for the players was to keep their balls as straight on the line as they possibly could. There is not too much margin on the Deal course for erratic driving, and the bent on either side of the course is of the toughest. There is no denying that in keeping the line almost with scrupulous exactness Taylor and Vardon left nothing to be desired. They were rarely even at the edge of the bent, and both Taylor and Vardon, playing sometimes against a head wind, a cross wind, a following wind, yea, a wind that blew "fra a' the airts" at some of the holes, showed their consummate mastery of the clubs by striking the ball occasionally off the heel of the club as well as off the toe, in order to secure the advantage of the carrying wind towards the putting green. Braid and Herd, too, showed their ability in this respect, but their success was not so markedly consistent. It was a fine sight to see one of Braid's terrific tee shots, played for about 200-yds. across the heads of the spectators standing in the bent far down the course, come gently back with the wind on to the fair green and roll there nicely for the next shot.

* * *

But the wind told more severely on the driving of Braid and Herd than it did upon that of Taylor and Vardon. The ball was



THE CROWD AT THE SECOND GREEN.
Vardon preserving England's lead by holing a putt for a half.

AGAINST A HEAD WIND.
Taylor driving a "wind cheater" against the wind.

never kept low enough by the Scotsmen. At the end of the flight the ball soared high in the air and was carried by the gusts into the bent, giving too often a heavy, tufty lie for the next shot, with consequent great loss of distance. Taylor, on the other hand, was marvellously exact in driving consistent "wind cheaters." The trajectory of his tee shots was invariably low, straight down the middle of the course, and the ball seemed to have more than the usual amount of run. Vardon was not so good at this particular shot. His balls travelled slightly higher, but they, too, were beautifully straight. There were a few cleek shots by Vardon, however, which assuredly could not be out-distanced by any player with a wooden club against the wind, while their straightness and the nicety with which the distance had been judged frequently evoked a round of applause.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

THE INTERNATIONAL FOURSOME AT ST. ANNE'S.
Braid putting on the 3rd green. Taylor is kneeling on the right of the picture.

The match was played in the morning round at Deal by Taylor and Vardon with terrific energy. They gave nothing away by looseness or carelessness. They kept Braid and Herd "on the collar" all through, and they forced the pace with the keenness of players who might have been 13 down instead of 13 up. Braid and Herd felt conscious of the strain, and strove heroically to stave off the impending doom. But neither of the Scotsmen putted up to his previous form, while pulled and sliced shots into bent and bunker added to their difficulty and distress. The play of the winners was really a wonderful performance considering the gale of wind and the showers, combined with the narrow course. They were round in 38 and 40=78, while Braid and Herd took 87.

* * *

When all the players returned to the clubhouse a kindly informal compliment was paid to Mr. John L. Low by the four professionals. Mr. Low has acted as referee at all the four stages of the match, travelling from Scotland to be present at Lytham and Deal. Each of the professionals presented Mr. Low with a club—a brassie from Vardon, a mashie from Taylor, an iron from Braid, and a play club from Herd. It was their wish to show not only their personal gratitude to Mr. Low for superintending the play, which proceeded from first to last without friction of any kind, but to join together in making a little marriage present to Mr. Low, who is to be married at St. Andrews at the end of the month. The professionals may rest assured that this tribute of their esteem and good wishes will be highly prized by Mr. Low.

* * *

The congestion of players that takes place every summer and autumn on the old course at St. Andrews has long been an acute problem for the local authorities to handle. As time goes on that congestion will increase rather than diminish, for though there are now three courses at St. Andrews, the majority of local golfers, as well as visitors, prefer to play their game round the old historic course. Various suggestions have been made with the view of coping with the difficulty, but no real

THE THIRD STAGE OF THE INTERNATIONAL FOURSOME.
Taylor driving from the first tee at St. Anne's. Braid is on the right, and Mr. A G. Tait between the two, with the stewards' flag.

and satisfactory remedy has been found. At the recent monthly meeting of the St. Andrews Town Council proposals were submitted on behalf of the Royal and Ancient Club suggesting that a charge should be imposed for play on the old course similar to that which prevails for the use of the new course. The Town Council, fearing probably a great popular outcry against the imposition of a charge, have refused to agree to the proposal. Yet the choice at St. Andrews lies between two courses—either to impose a very small charge for the use of the links on all players, or to face the probability of seeing a gradual exodus of the golfing visitors who help so much to make the general community so prosperous.

THE INTERNATIONAL FOURSOME AT ST. ANNE'S.
Vardon driving from the 10th tee. Taylor is behind the box, and Mr. J. L. Low on the left.

FIXTURES.

September 16-18.—Lytham and St. Anne's, Autumn Meeting.
September 18-22.—Le Touquet, Open Meeting.
September 21.—Alnmouth, Autumn Meeting.
September 22.—Redhill and Reigate, Autumn Meeting.
September 23.—Hanger Hill, Open Amateur Competition.
September 23.—Manchester, Autumn Meeting.
September 23.—Raynes Park, Autumn Meeting.
September 23.—Wallasey, Autumn Meeting.
September 23.—West Derby, Autumn Meeting.
September 23.—Rochester, Atkin Cup.
September 23.—Sundridge Park, Autumn Meeting
September 25-30. — Burnham and Berrow, Autumn Meeting.
September 25.—Royal Guernsey, Autumn Meeting.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

1.

2.

3.

4.

THE PROFESSIONAL FOURSOME AT TROON.

(1) Braid attempts a long putt. (2) Vardon putting. (3) Taylor driving from the 1st tee; the referee and other officials watching the flight of the ball. (4) The crowd watching the play on the last green.

(From photographs by the British Press Agency and Miller, Prestwick.)

Digitized by Google

The Styles of Eminent Players.

XI.—Mr. JOHN GRAHAM, Jun.

THE FINISH OF THE DRIVE.

THE FINISH OF THE BRASSIE SHOT.

THE FINISH OF THE IRON SHOT.

FIRST impressions are generally the soundest, and certainly in the case of Mr. Graham I have had no cause to alter mine. I saw him play first at North Berwick about ten years ago, and I well remember the strong impression he gave one of his great command over all his clubs, even at that stage of his golfing career. I think there are few golfers who have such an intimate acquaintance with their clubs and a knowledge of how to play all sorts of shots.

Mr. Graham has a particularly easy and taking style; there is seemingly no effort about it at all, but, aided by long arms and very powerful wrists, he gets the ball a long way. It is needless to write about Mr. Graham's exploits in the golfing world—they are known everywhere. He has, indeed, been unlucky not to win the Championship as yet. Several times he has been going strong for it, and looked like being a winner, when an unlucky shot or two, or a badly-played hole, dashed the cup from his lips. Still, I am sure he will drink it to the dregs in the years to come.

Mr. Graham plays most of his golf round Liverpool, and wins most of the medals of the clubs he belongs to round there, in the teeth of such past masters as Messrs. Hilton and Ball. We do not see enough of him in Scotland, worse luck! but whenever he does come he is enthusiastically welcomed, for we like a good sportsman as well as a fine golfer.

No. 1, finish of drive. The first thing that strikes one about this photograph is its ease. There is evidently no violent effort here; everything is self-contained and certain. The other thing that strikes one is how close the feet are together. Mr. Graham has a narrow stance for all his shots. Notice how well and high up the hands come through, and how the club is well raised. Notice also the powerful wrists, for they are the cause of his length, aided, I think, by length of arm, for Mr. Graham's arms are, I am sure, a little longer than usual for his height. He drives a long ball with a suspicion of pull, occasionally (man must err) exaggerated, and he gets a large amount of run on the ball after landing.

No. 2, finish of brassie. Mr. Graham, like all Hoylake golfers, has a complete command over this club. It seems to be a penchant of the trio at Hoylake—Messrs. Ball, Hilton, and Graham. They all like playing pulls slices, and half-shots with it, and Mr. Graham is not a whit behind the other two in showing his mastery over the club.

Nos. 3 and 4, finish of iron and mashie shots. Here it is that Mr. Graham excels. He is, indeed, a past master in the use of them. He can play all sorts of shots with them, preferring, however, to play them high and with a large amount of cut. He and Taylor are, to my mind, in a class by themselves in playing the short mashie pitch. The numberless times they get the ball stone-dead with them is extraordinary, and when you see them playing the shot you always have a horrible feeling that, perhaps, the ball will go in. Notice how well the powerful wrists and hands come out in No. 4.

No. 5, putting. Mr. Graham is a good putter, is wonderfully certain with those yard putts, the fear of all golfers. He putts with a "wrynecked," but not exaggerated; it is a copy of Park's, I believe. He follows through well, and hits the ball hard, hands very low down on the shaft, and feet close together, more like the stance for a wooden putter.

No. 6, bunkered. May it be his last!

H. Ferrier-Kerr.

FINISH OF THE MASHIE SHOT.

THE PUTTING STANCE.

IN THE BUNKER.

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. LXI.—Mr. David Williamson, Prospective Liberal Candidate for the Dulwich Division of Camberwell.

TIMES have greatly changed since William Hone described Dulwich as "the prettiest of all the village entrances in the environs of London," and Priscilla Wakefield spoke of it as "a pleasantly retired hamlet of Camberwell, having no high road passing through it." The onward march of the speculative builder has of late years sadly impaired the pristine rusticity of Dulwich, and few people nowadays are disposed to remember the pious liberality of "Master" Edward Alleyn, the saving virtues of Dulwich Spa, the good cheer of the Green Man, the famous alumni of Dr. Glover's Academy (Lord Byron and Captain Barclay of pedestrian fame amongst them), or the whereabouts of the modest dwellings once tenanted by Oliver Goldsmith, George Grote, and Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Hall. The Half-Moon, the Crown, and the Greyhound, however, probably continue to flourish in Dulwich village, and men still alive can remember the halcyon days when Wilkie, Campbell, Dr. Babington, Thackeray, Dickens, and Mark Lemon were constant frequenters of the Dulwich Club. Men go to Dulwich no longer either to take the waters or to wander in > "Spring green lanes

> With all the dazzling field flowers in their prime,
> And gardens haunted by the nightingale's
> Long trills and gushing ecstasies of song."

Nevertheless, the uplands of Champion Hill, Herne Hill, and Denmark Hill are still popular places of residence, and the latter has lost few of the natural attractions which commended themselves to John Ruskin and Felix Mendelssohn.

By a strange coincidence (in spite of the fact that by the irony of fate the mantle of militant Conservatism, once worn so bravely by Sir Blundell Maple, has descended for the nonce on the shoulders of Dr. Rutherfoord Harris) the Dulwich highlands have become a veritable Parnassus for Prospective Liberal Candidates and Members of Parliament. Here are to be found Mr. Edmund Robertson, K.C., M.P. (who has spoken with great effect for Mr. Williamson's candidature), so long the able representative of Dundee; Dr. T. J. Macnamara, M.P., who won the neighbouring Division of North Camberwell; Mr. George A. Hardy, L.C.C., who is contesting the Stowmarket Division of Suffolk; Mr. C. Goddard Clarke, L.C.C., the candidate for the Peckham Division of Camberwell; Mr. C. F. G. Masterman, who is opposing Mr. Ernest Gray, M.P., in North West Ham; Mr. G. N. Barnes, the Labour candidate for a division of Glasgow; Mr. T. W. Dobson, one of the candidates for Plymouth; Mr. Ernest H. Lamb, who is standing for Rochester; Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji, who is a candidate for Lambeth; and last, but not least, Mr. David Williamson, who will cross swords with Dr. Rutherfoord Harris whenever it pleases Mr. Balfour to appeal to the country. In any case the Prospective Liberal Candidate for the Dulwich Division of Camberwell is no stranger to those whose suffrages he is wooing. For some years past he has lived and laboured amongst them, and those who are in "the know" (irrespective of their personal political opinions) are more and more convinced that if any man is likely to reverse the verdict of the last five elections, that man is David Williamson. Born six-and-thirty years ago in Guildford, Mr. Williamson went straight from school into a printer's office, and there began an apprenticeship to practical journalism in all its branches, which ended in his being appointed editor of "Hazell's Annual" at the age of twenty-three.

MR. A. O. HUME, C.B.
President of the Dulwich Liberal Association.

This position not only led him to write on a great variety of topics, but made him an experienced compiler of biographies in the days before "Who's Who" was published or even thought of. For some considerable time Mr. Williamson was Mr. Clement Shorter's ready helper as assistant-editor of the Illustrated London News, and he ultimately became the successful editor of the Windsor Magazine.

Of late years Mr. Williamson has been something of a free-lance, both as regards literature and journalism. Thousands of his shilling "Life of Mr. Gladstone" were sold on the very day of the death of that eminent statesman, and equal success attended his "lightning" memoir of President McKinley and other volumes of biography. He is a frequent contributor to the daily Press, and his chief occupations for some time have been to write on biography and speak on politics. He is one of the very few men who can do both with equal success.

Mr. C. F. G. Masterman, who fought the battle of Liberalism in Dulwich on the death of Sir Blundell Maple, who, Mr. Williamson frankly admits was in many respects a model Member of Parliament, succeeded in arousing the local opponents of the present Government from their lethargy and depression of well-nigh a quarter of a century. Mr. Williamson was born a keen politician as well as an enthusiastic journalist (for politicians and journalists, as well as poets, are born, not made), and he has continued the campaign so ably begun at the last contest by Mr. Masterman. Great progress has been made since 1903, when the fight at Dulwich was the first which followed Mr. Chamberlain's declaration on the subject of our national Fiscal policy. In three weeks (although no meetings were held until after the funeral of Sir Blundell Maple) Mr. Masterman reduced the majority of 1895 from 3,082 to 1,437. Since he became the Prospective Liberal Candidate for the division, Mr. Williamson has held no less than one hundred meetings, many of them being in the open air. He has many devoted supporters and sympathisers, none more so than Mr. A. O. Hume, C.B., son of the well-known "Member for India," who is President of the Dulwich Liberal Association.

Just nine years ago Mr. Williamson took a bride from the "West Countree" in the person of Miss Allan of Plymouth, who is now the mother of four charming children. Mr. Williamson talks with absolute frankness of his political programme and aspirations. "I am standing," he says, when asked for an explicit statement of his views, "for social reform. I want to see a change of the land laws by which our cities may be saved from the daily incursion of labourers unable to get a living in the country, and by which the towns may be enabled to acquire land for public benefit. I want to see education taken as seriously as it is in America, and 'equality of opportunity' become an actual fact. I stand for a reform of our methods of taxation, so that the wealthy landowner and millionaire may be compelled to pay in a greater proportion than the over-burdened professional man and the patient, long-suffering middle class. On Imperial questions I stand for a strong link with our Colonies, but I am convinced that any alteration of our Free Trade policy would not effect this, and I am equally certain that Tariff Reform would injure the enormous proportion of our population by adding to the cost of their living, and by curtailing our trade. I want the reforms at home, for which we have been waiting far too long, to be carried out—old-age pensions, labour colonies, control of the liquor traffic, and the improvement of the homes of the people—instead of fantastic and expensive expeditions and wars under the guise of a spurious Imperialism."

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

THE SEASIDE IN SEPTEMBER.

EVERYBODY has seen or heard of the elegance of fashionable seaside places during August, but few know the same places in the following month. September at Trouville and the neighbouring resorts is a different experience. Hotel-keepers are amiable, anxious to please; will feed and house you for one-tenth of the price they asked a week ago, and be glad to have you. Is it really the same man, with obsequious bow and wide smile, who takes your bag and helps you alight, who knows you are to pay 10-fr. a day for the same accommodation he offered you for a hundred during the race week? There is only another month of the season, and if he cannot make large profits he must make small ones. It is not in the nature of the average Frenchman to take small profits, but he must fill his hotel. Charles, the chef he engaged during the famous week, has gone, but the Septemberites are not in the smallest degree interested in the staff of the kitchen. They do not trouble about the quality of the champagne that the ham was poached in! There will be no insolent criticism of the Purée favorite! The September client wants a good square meal, with fresh fish, fowl, and joint, plenty of everything, washed down with carafes of cider, and does not care if it is Charles or James, or plain Marie, who cooks it. And it is not only the cooking, but everything that has changed.

The "planks," the fashionable promenade, still crowded on fine days, has a different aspect. The elegant white embroidered dresses, the hats from the Rue de la Paix have disappeared, and in their place solid serge and, what we would call under ordinary circumstances, garden hats—the most ordinary of straws and imitation Panamas, caught up coquettishly enough with a pearl pin covered with a white gauze or muslin veil. These veils are ubiquitous. Old, young, or middle-aged all wear a white veil tied over their hats. Some arrange it gracefully, and it suits a young face; others pull it into a tight line about their ears, that is anything but becoming. A windy day brings out the most remarkable of wraps, from the horse blanket to the golf cape. Nobody cares; it is September.

Copyright.

TROUVILLE IN SEPTEMBER.
The promenade on the "planks."

Copyright.

THE WANING SEASON AT TROUVILLE.
Morning on the sands.

And the casino! The poor, miserable casino! How it suffers! In one of the neighbouring plages to Trouville, the casino is still frequented. But by what a melancholy crowd! The morning sees a fencing bout with sportive youths in white, who load the green-covered gaming table in the club-room with their collars and cuffs, their friends and relations lining the walls. The evening brings together all the "half" element hidden somewhere or other during the day. There is a rakish air about them, men and women, a demi-semi-quaverish air of mock elegance that is irresistibly comical. Milliners and dressmakers aping their millionaire clients can be seen any day by those who know them.

I had the luck to be near a group of gaily-dressed people when a party of men and women joined them. They were very lively, very happy, in their rough motor-coats and flying veils, and they talked for the benefit of the "gallery." "Oui, ma chère, eighty miles an hour, not a mile less. Our car flew like a bird. A forty-eight Mors, ma chère." And I recognised husband and wife, our smartest milliners in the Rue de la Paix. They were beaming. They played baccarat with the seediest-looking company ever collected in a gambling-room, with a "bank" bought for two louis; they called to one another to know who was that smart woman who had just come in; they knew everybody, by name at least, either as their clients or the clients of another firm. They sailed out of the casino to join their car. But they spoilt their effect, sadly spoilt it, if they only knew, by waving the tips of their fingers to their admiring friends, calling out "Bon soir, Monsieur et Dame!"

Is there anything in the English language that classifies man or woman as surely as this: "Bon soir, Monsieur et Dame"? It is so delightfully typical of the under-educated.

Even the "petits chevaux" feel the influence of September. Little boys stand in the front row looking at the little horses unmolested, for the gamblers are timid. They throw their francs on the "baud." Occasionally, however, a more venturesome player leans over and places a 2-fr. piece on a number, and even the croupier looks up. What has come to the Septemberites. Two francs on a number! And when the number happens to win? The player almost feels uncomfortable taking so much money from the establishment.

Digitized by Google

Villers-sur-Mer is, however, a charming place if you can look on and laugh. The country is all your own. You can walk for hours in the sunniest of paths, bordered with gaily-trimmed gardens and bright little villas. You can mount the wooded road to the Manor Farm, and drink home-brewed cider, and eat Normandy bread with the creamiest of butter and the necessary dash of salt. You can do, in fact, as you please in the easiest of ways, if you do not want the company of your equals. If you do, do not come to Villers in September. A Frenchman who respects himself—as they say here—goes shooting in September; he leaves the seaside to "mussels." Everybody has gone. The pastry-cook sells nothing but brioches and madeleines—equivalent to buns and sponge cakes—and although the signboard with "Ices of all kinds" is still over the door, it would be useless to ask for this refreshment, for even the ice-maker has packed his bag. For the Septemberite there are no ices. But he has one consolation—the knowledge that he pays 10-fr. to-day for the enjoyment of sea and air that would have cost him tenfold in August. FRANCES KEYZER.

Keutlinger.

A DINNER-DRESS IN OLD ROSE EMBROIDERED SATIN.
(Maison Ney Sœurs.)

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

WITH the Torbay Regattas the racing season is always regarded as nearing the end, and this year it almost concluded the season, there being but one fixture of importance—that at Dartmouth—following it, the Plymouth Week, which for many years followed it, having this year been held in July. The later regattas always suffer to a certain extent in the matter of entries, and there are many owners who, after a season's hard racing, will not cross the boundary into the month of September for the few remaining fixtures, preferring perchance to get away to the moors. As one after another of the racing craft retires, there is naturally less inducement for the others to continue. Torbay has, however, always proved attractive to yachtsmen, and the regattas have always drawn a fair number of entries. The beauties of the place are an undoubted attraction, while the course is recognised to be an excellent one.

Copyright.

ON BOARD THE COMMITTEE BOAT, TORBAY ROYAL REGATTA.

The central figure is Mr. J. D. Brown, hon. secretary of this regatta, who has taken an active part in its management for the last forty-seven years.

This year, however, these fixtures were decidedly out of luck. Vessels had had a hard day's sailing at Weymouth. Several boats met with mishaps of a more or less serious character, and it was hardly to be wondered at that, with only the Sunday intervening between the two regattas, and a half gale blowing, none put in an appearance for Monday's matches, which had consequently to be postponed until Wednesday. Some got under way from Weymouth on Monday, but there was a big sea off Portland Bill, and only one of those that put out (Rosamond) held on, and she had a dirty passage round to Torquay. Zinita and Betty were in harbour, and so there were three competitors for the big handicap on Tuesday. Rosamond won this, and her victory under all the circumstances gave great satisfaction. She repeated her success on the following day. She had been the worst crippled of all the vessels that had met with accidents at Weymouth, and at Torquay she still bore some of the scars which she received in collision with Lorna.

During Tuesday night and early on Wednesday morning several of the other vessels that had been expected arrived, and there were a fair number of competitors in that day's races, which had been postponed from Monday. Taken as a whole, however, it has to be admitted that the attendance of yachts was below the average even of more recent years, attributable mainly, of course, to the cause already referred to—the heavy weather after the Weymouth fixture. Up to the Tuesday morning it almost looked like a total collapse of the regattas.

It is a point worthy of notice, that within the last six years the Monday's regatta at Torbay has had to be postponed on no fewer than three occasions, and I understand that the town committee responsible for the management of the first day's racing, at the same time that they decided upon the postponement, also considered the expediency of fixing upon the Wednesday in future instead of the Monday. This would meet with the approval of the majority of yachtsmen, as, under conditions which have prevailed for some years past, it has always been somewhat of a struggle to get to Torquay for Monday's racing with only the one day intervening for the passage from Weymouth. It must not be imagined that the inability of yachts under certain circumstances to effect a passage is due to any defects in the matter of weatherly qualities on the part of the modern craft. Racing vessels are often driven through weather that cruisers would not select for getting under way in. There are other considerations that must at times weigh with the keenest owners. Racing entails at times very severe work on the skippers and crews, and they cannot be expected to keep at it day after day without cessation, and although owners and crews alike would regret the possibility of losing a day's racing, there were doubtless some who were not altogether displeased with the day's enforced rest after the long spell of hard weather-racing they had already experienced.

The greatest disappointment felt locally was over the non-appearance of two of the 52-footers, more particularly as one of the absentees was the new Mylne boat. However, keen interest was taken in the duel between Maymon and Sonya. Eager enquiries had been made relative to the arrival of the American boat, everyone being anxious to see the latest Herreshoff production, and it must be confessed that many were disappointed at Maymon's defeat. All sportsmen are generous enough to wish a stranger a fair measure of success, but somehow they prefer any such victories to take place elsewhere than in their own waters.

If one excepts the Clyde, it is doubtful if there is any district where the racing is watched with keener interest than at Torbay. In some places hardly any heed is paid to yachting, residents in a town being unable to tell you if a regatta is in progress. Not so at the western port. Crowds await the arrival of the yachts before the regatta, and all vessels new to the port come in for a large share of attention, while on the actual racing days the vast majority of those who assemble at various points of vantage to view the sailing understand the sport, and take an intelligent interest in it.

Copyright.

THE FLAG OFFICERS AND SAILING COMMITTEE, ROYAL TORBAY YACHT CLUB.

The names, reading from left to right, are: Back row—Mr. R. Boyd and Colonel G. Stovell; Middle row—Mr. A. Clarke, Mr. R. C. Lee, Major Bogle, and Mr. Thelluson; Seated on deck—Mr. F. L. Carslake and Mr. Lancaster Shaw.

At Torquay we meet with two classes of boats which we do not see further eastward. These are the western one design class and the jolly-boats. The boats belonging to the former class are a nice little type of cutter, about 23-ft. on the waterline, and they race at all the regattas from Torquay to Plymouth. The jolly-boats are, as their name implies, open boats 18-ft. in length. They are fitted with centre boards, and carry a fair spread of canvas. They turn out in all weathers, and provide some excellent sport. The class is indeed an excellent school for young amateurs.

CORINTHIAN.

Digitized by Google

THE REGATTAS AT TORBAY.

Porter, Torquay.

BETTY

Yawl, 143 tons, belonging to Mr. J. Hamilton Penn. She is not one of the regular cruiser-racers, but takes part in handicaps occasionally. She won the last big race of the season at Dartmouth, when in a fresh breeze she easily saved her time from the scratch boat, Zinita.

Porter, Torquay.

START OF THE JOLLY-BOATS.

These are a very popular class of open boats of 18-ft. length, and are responsible for some keen racing. They are very popular amongst young amateurs, to whom they form an excellent means of becoming proficient sailors.

Digitized by Google

"THE PRODIGAL SON"

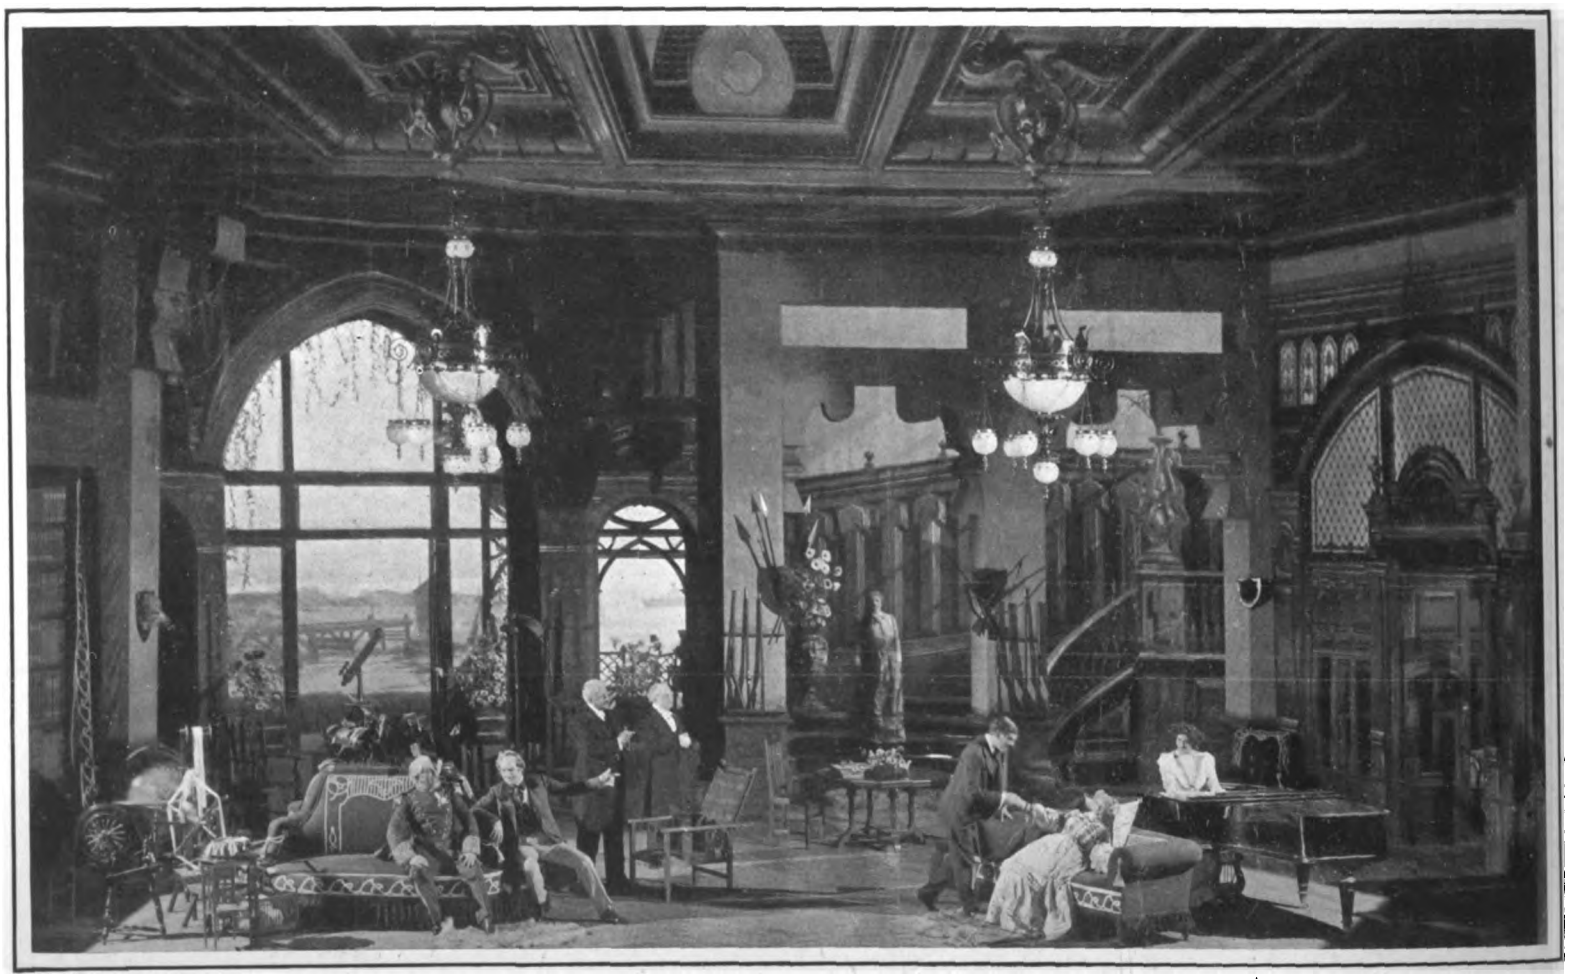
THE BETROTHAL OF OSCAR AND THORA AT THE INN FARM.



AT THE GOVERNMENT HOUSE A YEAR LATER.

The autumn production at Drury Lane this year is adapted by Mr. Hall Caine from his own novel, "The Prodigal Son." In the first act we learn that Magnus Stephensson (Mr. Frank Cooper) is betrothed to Thora Neilson (Miss Lily Hall Caine). He learns, however, that she loves his brother Oscar (Mr. George Alexander), and so arranges that he and Thora shall be married, thus unselfishly giving up his own hopes Oscar, however, soon tires of his wife, and when he meets her sister Helga (Miss Nancy Price) he speedily transfers his affections to her. The three of them tour Europe, and at Monte Carlo Helga gambles recklessly. To meet her debts, Oscar forges his father's name; but the forgery is discovered on the return to Iceland, and the shock of this, together with the knowledge that Oscar no longer loves her, kills Thora. Oscar is driven from home with Helga, but

(From photographs by Lu[illegible]

Digitized by Google

AT DRURY LANE.

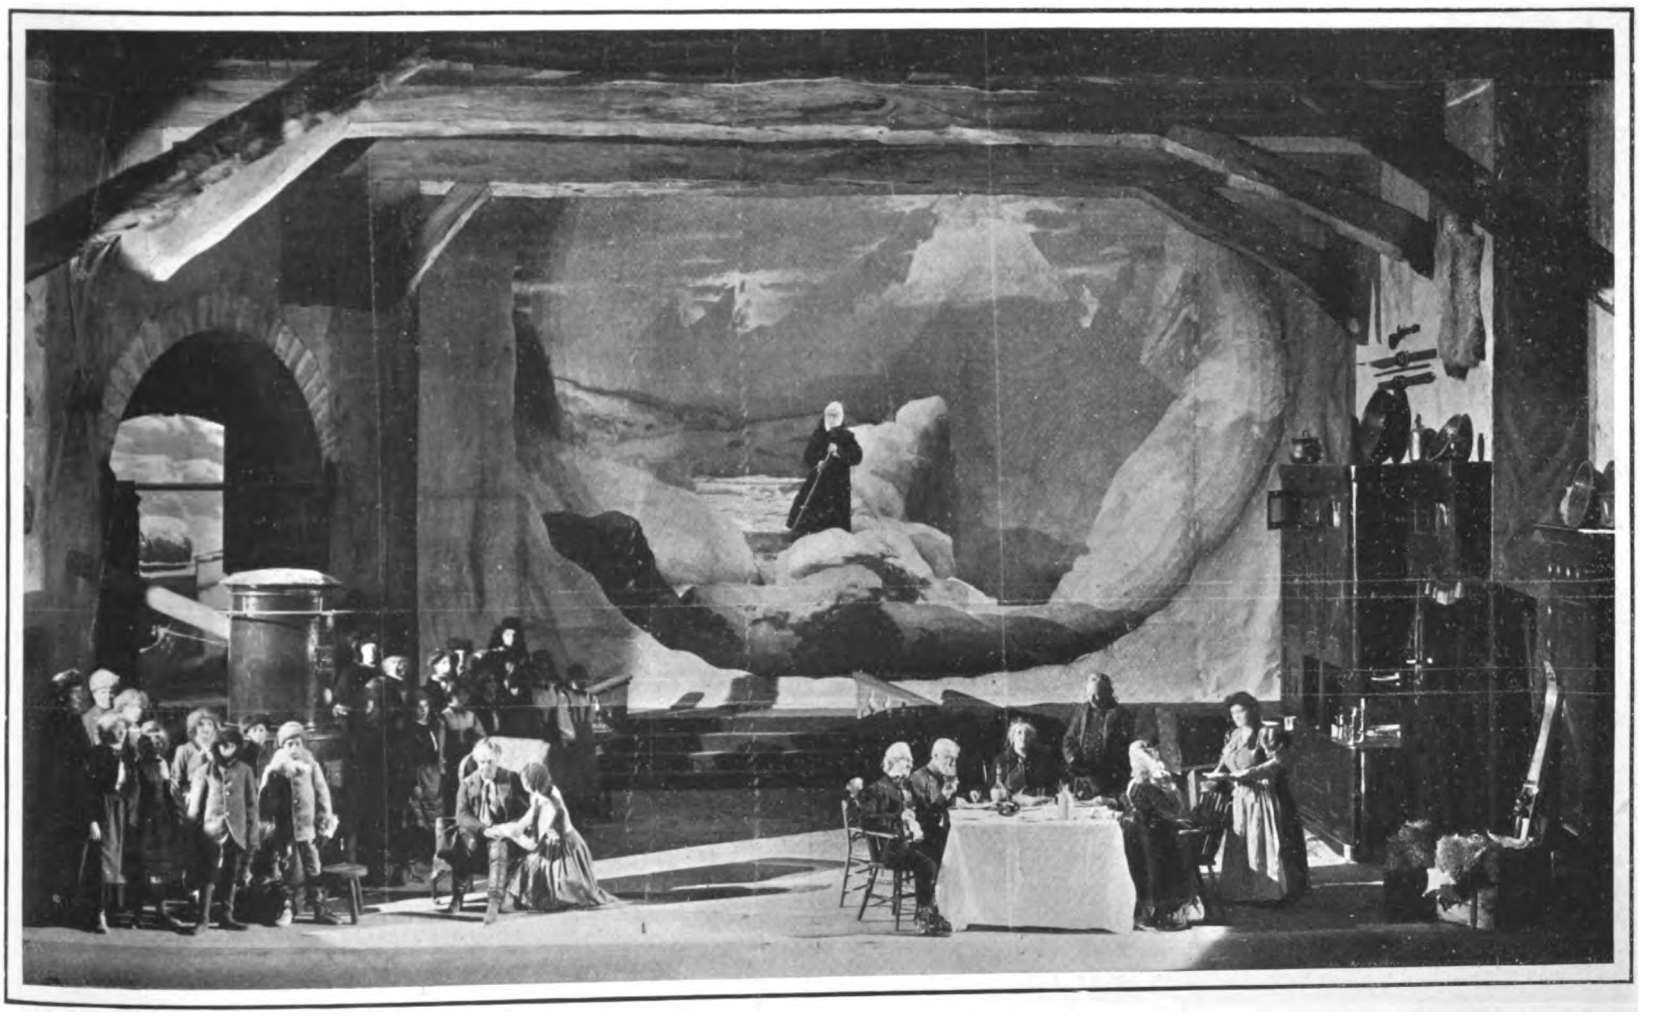
THE DISCOVERY OF OSCAR'S FORGERY OF HIS FATHER'S NAME.



THE RETURN OF THE PRODIGAL AFTER MANY YEARS.

his father meets the bill by mortgaging his property. During the subsequent five years Oscar and Helga spend their time in riotous living on the Riviera and elsewhere. At last Oscar goes so low as to cheat at cards, and, stung with remorse, he decides to give up Helga and start a new life. He takes to composing music, is successful, becomes rich, and at last summons up courage to return to Iceland. He finds that his father is dead, and that the old home is about to be sold up to meet the interest on the mortgage. He is not recognised, and leaving more than enough money to meet the wants of his mother and brother, who have adopted and brought up Thora's daughter Elin (also played by Miss Lily Hall Caine), he steals away again. But the final tableau shows us that after wandering among the hills for some days he has been brought home again.

Digitized by Google

The "Zoos" of the World.

II.—THE ZOO AT SYDNEY, NEW SOUTH WALES.

PERHAPS the prominent feature of the Zoological collection of the Sydney Zoo—at any rate in Australian eyes—is the great display of carnivora; indeed, the breeding of these is carried on with conspicuous success and little or no difficulty. Lions, tigers, jaguars, pumas, and leopards occupy separate cages, and the majority of the specimens shown have been bred in the Gardens. Nine species of bear are represented, among them being the Polar, brown, Syrian, Isabelline, black, Japanese, Malayan, Himalayan, and sloth. The handsome Polar bear has roomy quarters, with a large pond in the centre, where he does not seem in the least distressed by the climate, and takes considerably more exercise in hot weather than many animals from warmer parts; and that their tropical surroundings suit the bears is evidenced by the fact that the pair of Isabellines last year reared a cub. Ungulates are well represented. A fine pair of yaks, with their coal black woolly-coated little calf, form an interesting group; but these, unlike the bears, feel the heat acutely, and are much distressed on a hot summer day. To the English and foreign visitors the Australian animals are of the greatest interest, and the Sydney collection contains all the herbaceous, carnivorous, and insectivorous marsupials, and many of the interesting egg-laying mammals found in Australia. There is, of course, a great collection of kangaroos and wallabies, and concerning these a curious letter was received lately from Japan, from the authorities of a Japanese Zoo, requesting that some kangaroos should be sent them, because—the writer went on say—"they were so kind and attentive to their young in carrying them about that they would make a good object-lesson to the Japanese people." The kangaroo section at Sydney contains several species of these beautiful animals, many of which are delightfully tame. Mr. Le Souef, the director of the Zoo, tells me that, if kindly treated, kangaroos will become docile and affectionate, though the old bucks are sometimes treacherous and spiteful.

The large carnivorous marsupial wolf from Tasmania, the natural enemy of the smaller kangaroos of that island, is one of the rarest. It was once found on the mainland, too; but the advent of the dingo, a stronger and swifter animal, is said to have put an end to its existence there. Another Tasmanian animal in the Gardens is the ursine dasyure, quite one of the ugliest creatures alive. A thick-set, stumpy body, covered with coarse black hair, is set on short crooked legs, and, with a square massive head, makes a repugnant and formidable creature, which gives some reason for its being called "Tasmanian Devil." Ursines are snarly and pugnacious in captivity, and those seen in the Sydney Zoo are generally quarrelling when not asleep. The little viverrine dasyures, or native cats, with their white spotted yellow or black coats, are both attractive and pretty, but are extremely shy and most unfriendly. The dasyure pens are generally a great centre of attraction in the Gardens.

ONE OF THE ISABELLINE BEARS
In the Moore Park Zoological Gardens, Sydney, N.S.W.

Another special house is devoted to the tree marsupials, but these, being nocturnal animals, are of little interest in daylight.

The Tasmanian sooty opossum, now very scarce and hard to procure, is very handsome, and the most valuable fur-producing mammal in the Colonies. The authorities are proud of this specimen. Here, too, are the delicate flying phalangers, which are rare in captivity, and distinctly pretty and most interesting to watch. A thin flap of skin, stretching laterally between the fore and hind legs, makes a sort of sail, by which they can cover considerable distances between trees.

Jacob, a very interesting orang-outang, lived in the Gardens for upwards of six years (orang-outang, by the way, is the Malayan word meaning "man of the woods"). By careful training he became very expert and intelligent, and when given money would make straight for the refreshment-room to purchase fruit. This clever ape smoked a pipe with evident enjoyment, and drank tea from a cup like a human. He was never happier than when helping the gardeners to fill their barrows with rubbish; but poor Jacob joined his comrades in the "happy hunting grounds," and to-day Moore Park bewails his loss.

Birds are a big class in the Sydney Zoo, and the large running birds, such as ostriches, emus, cassowaries, and rheas, occupy a series of paddocks. The ostriches usually manage to hatch some chicks, which, however, are hard to rear in the confined space; but these birds, I am told, pay their way in Sydney, their valuable feathers being readily purchased by the local milliners.

The "Bird of Prey" House contains a good collection of vultures, eagles, hawks, owls, etc. Here the pure white Australian gos hawk is a striking bird that commands popular attention, and vies with the handsome Australian white-bellied sea-eagle for pride of place. But the most noteworthy inmate of the Cockatoo House is the rare black cockatoo, a bird seldom kept alive in captivity. This unique specimen feeds on sunflower seeds, and seems to enjoy the best of health.

Parrots naturally make the Parrot House the gaudiest corner of colour in the Gardens, and as most of the Australian parrots are excellent talkers — though they cannot equal the Amazons in this respect—the conversation in the "House" is extensive and ear-splitting. The clever magpies and laughing jackasses are also delightful groups.

The Zoo was founded in 1879, when a band of persons, interested in zoology and acclimatisation, started to introduce useful fauna into the State; and, thanks to the energy of the late Mr. Walter Bradley, much valuable work was done at this period. In 1881 the present grounds in Moore Park were granted to the Society, and later the Gardens were laid out and its zoological character settled with much zeal under the superintendence of Mr. Charles Moore, the director of the Botanical Gardens.

The annual attendance—about 175,000—shows that the Zoo in Sydney is as popular as the Regent's Park Gardens in England, as, in fact, a Zoo is in every part of the world.

I am indebted to the courtesy of the director of the Sydney Zoological Gardens (Mr. A. S. Le Souef) for some of the photographs, as also much of the interesting data which form the basis of my article. A. S. R.

Digitized by Google

AT THE SYDNEY ZOO.

SOME AUSTRALIAN BIRDS AND BEASTS.

Copyright.

(1 and 2) Australian magpies. (3) The laughing jackass. (4) In the kangaroo enclosure. (5) The elephant. (6) The land tortoise, one of the oldest inhabitants in the Gardens. (7) Reeves's pheasant.

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

A QUIET DORSET HAVEN.

Hare, Bridport

PIER TERRACE, WEST BAY.
The principal residential quarter of the town.

Hare, Bridport.

A GENERAL VIEW OF WEST BAY.
This delightful little Dorset watering-place lies between high cliffs and at the head of a wide and much-frequented bay.

Hare, Bridport.

THE PIER AT WEST BAY.
In a heavy gale the sea at West Bay is a magnificent sight, and huge waves dash over the pier with tremendous force.

WITHIN a mile of Bridport, and at the head of a wide and handsome bay, there lies a little village which is known to but a few, comparatively speaking, of the great army of holiday-makers, but which for those few is a delightful haven of rest and quiet. The Dorset Coast is studded with charming little villages and healthful holiday resorts, but West Bay can claim to be most favoured in those attributes which conduce to popularity. Situated so that it may almost be called a suburb of Bridport, which is a large and flourishing borough, amidst scenery that is equal and even superior to that which has served to make other South Coast resorts prosperous, West Bay is an ideal resort for those to whom the "fashionable" resorts have become distasteful by reason of their modishness. Nor is it a modern, mushroom village. To meet the growing demands of visitors, a large number of new houses have, it is true, been erected, but in the main West Bay remains what it has been these 200 years past—a typical Dorset village.

In the middle of the last century it was looked upon as an admirable home for consumptives; and though it does not nowadays enjoy that reputation, its open situation, with fresh breezes and clear atmosphere, must recommend it to parents who, when taking their children for a holiday, look for some place where the thick air of the town may be washed out of their lungs, and those organs strengthened.

Standing on the esplanade or at the end of the pier, there is a wonderful stretch of coast-line brought into view. From Portland on the east to Torquay on the west, there is a beautiful succession of bay and headland, the cliffs under the bright sunshine taking on such colours as make them almost rival the famous cliffs of Alum Bay, and the sea, a deep and beautiful blue, softly lapping the golden shore, on whose broad expanse the children may safely and comfortably erect their magic castles in sand, or rear the giant towers on which to plant, with the patriotism of young England, a monster Union Jack. And behind is the haven which existed so far back as the reign of Edward I., and which at various times has been the subject of Acts of Parliament for improvement and repair. For though upon a summer day the sea at West Bay is as peaceful and calm as any village duck-pond, there comes the winter with its gales, and the huge breakers toss and storm, sweeping across the pier in masses of white foam, and turning the whole bay into one seething whirlpool. In the record gale of 1824 the sea-water reached as far as Portville, and timber was floating about in the fields. But these gales are of very infrequent occurrence during the holiday months, and the season at West Bay, which is at its height in August and September, is favoured by Neptune if not always by Jupiter Pluvius.

In one respect West Bay is thoroughly up to date. It possesses an admirable golf links and club-house, where visitors are always sure of being cordially received. The links are situated upon the cliffs, and have been known to try even championship players; so that the visiting golfer may be sure of a good game on a picturesque and pleasantly-situated ground.

Digitized by Google

CONWAY CASTLE.

Conway is one of the best centres in North Wales for the tourist or photographer in search of beautiful scenery. All the elements of the picturesque are to be found in this neighbourhood, which is conveniently reached by the excellent express service of the London and North Western Railway Company. The town itself affords interesting studies of old-time architecture, and the Castle, which was built by Edward I. in 1284, was the scene of much bloodshed during the long-fought-out struggles for supremacy in Wales. The fine suspension bridge, which was erected by Telford in 1826, is 327-ft. in length between the supporting towers, and cost £40,000.

Digitized by Google

THE CRICKET SEASON.

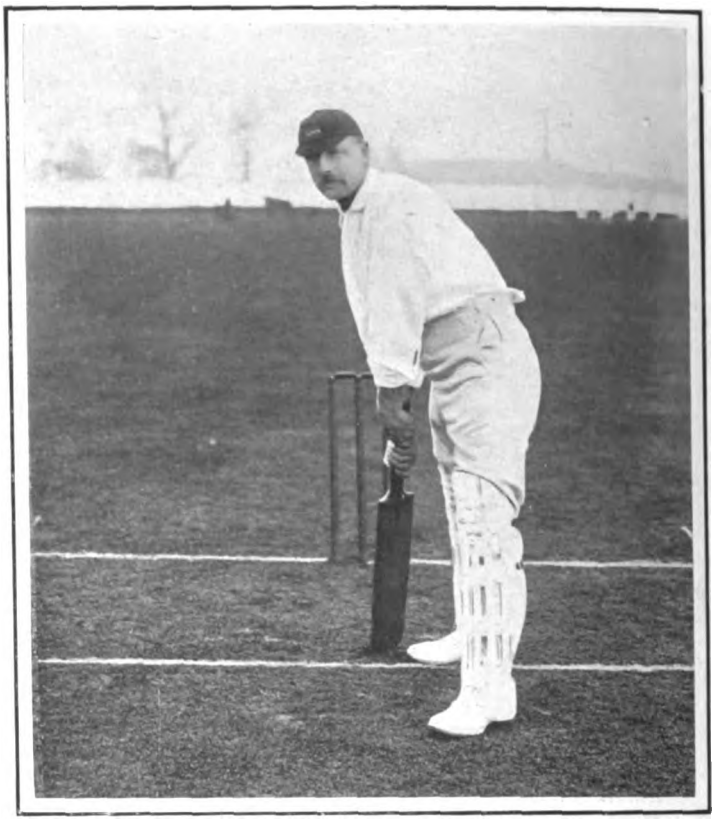
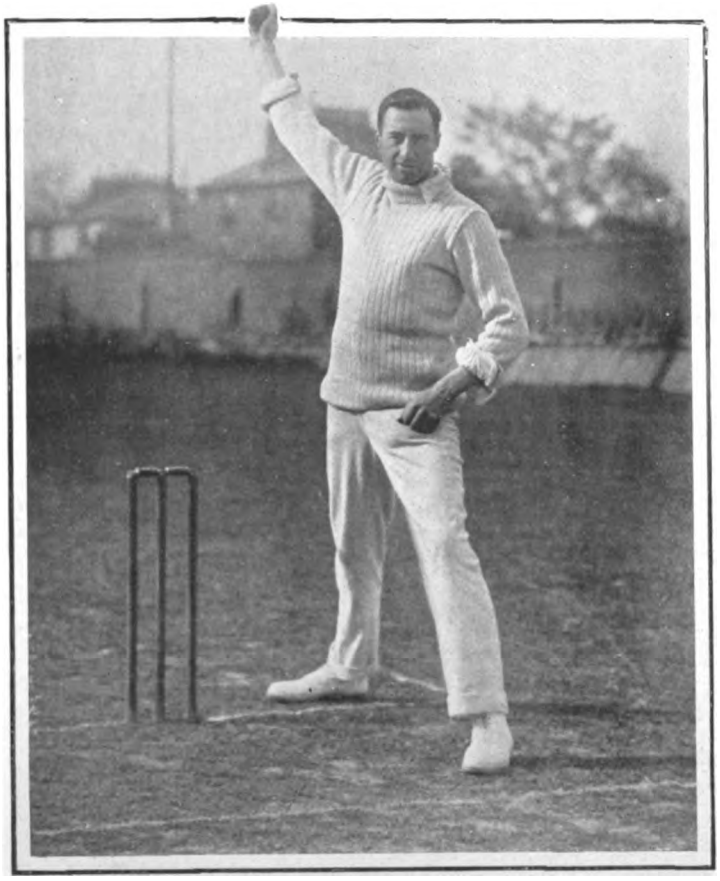
CUFFE.

An importation from the Antipodes, this cricketer bids fair to keep his place in the Worcestershire XI. Much might be written against the evil of importing cricketers to assist an English county eleven to win the English County Championship; but, since Middlesex set the fashion, more than one other county has been on the qui vive for likely cricketers from "down under." This is one of the chief causes in the falling off of public support of cricket that has been so marked and frequently commented upon of recent years.



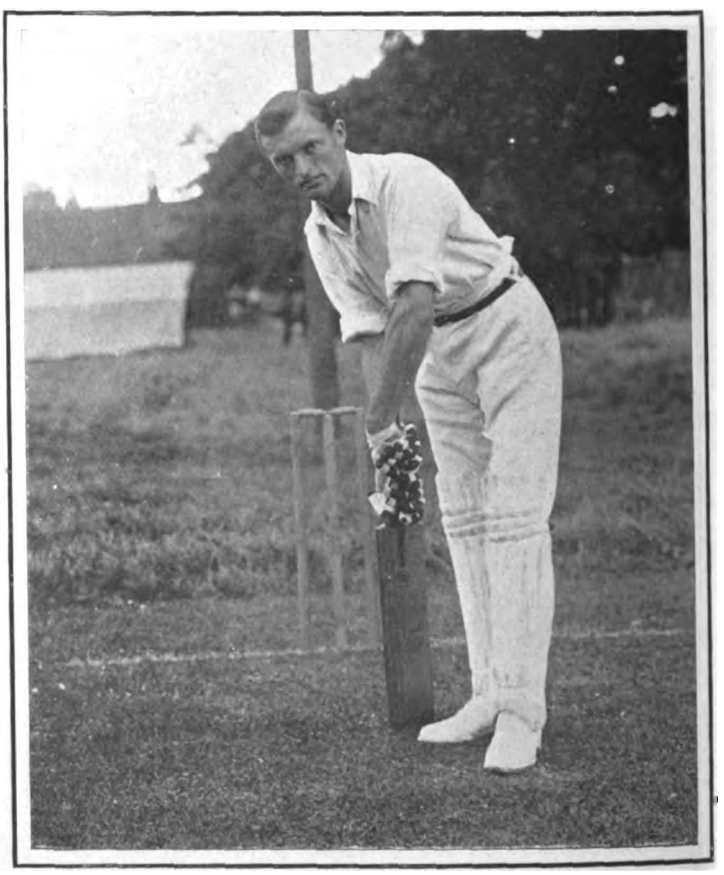
C. E. DE TRAFFORD.

To speak to him or to see him would give one the impression that the Leicestershire captain must be a batsman of the gentle, if plodding, type. Any such illusion is very soon dispelled when he opens his county's innings, as all the odds are that he has a powerful forearm wristy stroke at the very first ball bowled to him. Recently he scored all of the first 35 runs made against the Australians, then 55 out of 59, the other four runs being byes, and was finally out for an innings of over 60 before the score had reached 70. Such an innings is typical of C. E. De Trafford's batting.



J. R. MASON.

There are in England three or four cricketers who, if circumstances permitted them to participate regularly in first-class cricket, would make the work of the Selection Committee much more arduous than it is now. L. C. H. Palairet, J. R. Mason, C. J. Burnup, J. Douglas, and C. M. Wells are five such, and assuming these five to be simultaneously at the top of their form, which of them would be left out in favour of any of the cricketers who have done sufficiently well for England this season? Jack Mason is the best-class all-rounder in Kent, and business claims alone prevent him from representing England in England, as he has done five times in Australia.



SEYMOUR.

A product of the famous Tonbridge nursery, which is so admirably presided over by Captain McCanlis and T. Pawley, this dashing young batsman has done many good things for Kent. He was, if report is true, exceedingly fortunate to be numbered among the scorers of 100 in both innings of a first-class match, as the second 100 of his two in the match at the Mote, Maidstone, last year, against Worcestershire, was put together by lucky as well as very bad cricket. That is, however, all in the day's journey, and was but the reward for numerous other long innings. He is a good field in the slips, where in the second innings of the South Africans at Canterbury, August 25, 26, 27, 1904, he took six catches.

Digitized by Google

THE CRICKET SEASON.

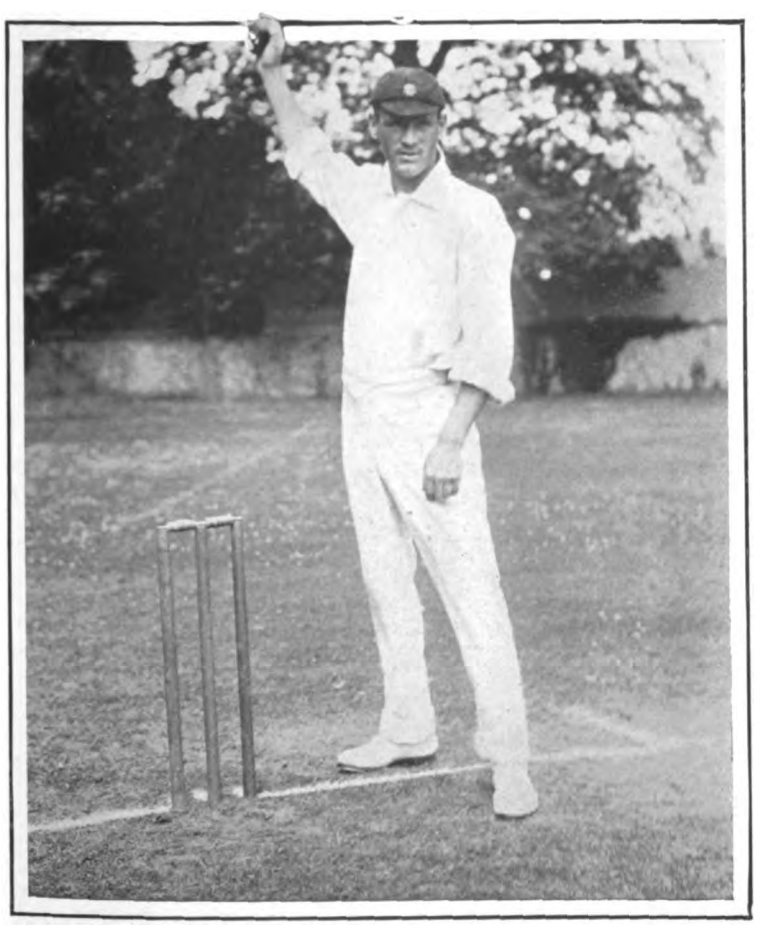
N. A. KNOX.

With youth and energy to back up undeniable ability, this Old Abeynian must in the ordinary course of things become England's best amateur fast bowler. Probably the fact that he tires sooner than Brearley kept him out of the fifth Test match, as many good judges hold a higher opinion of his bowling powers than they do of those of the Lancashire player. No other fast bowler to-day has a style which promises so well as that of Knox. He is the first Surrey amateur since C. E. Horner to secure 100 wickets for Surrey, and Horner's feat was accomplished over twenty years ago.

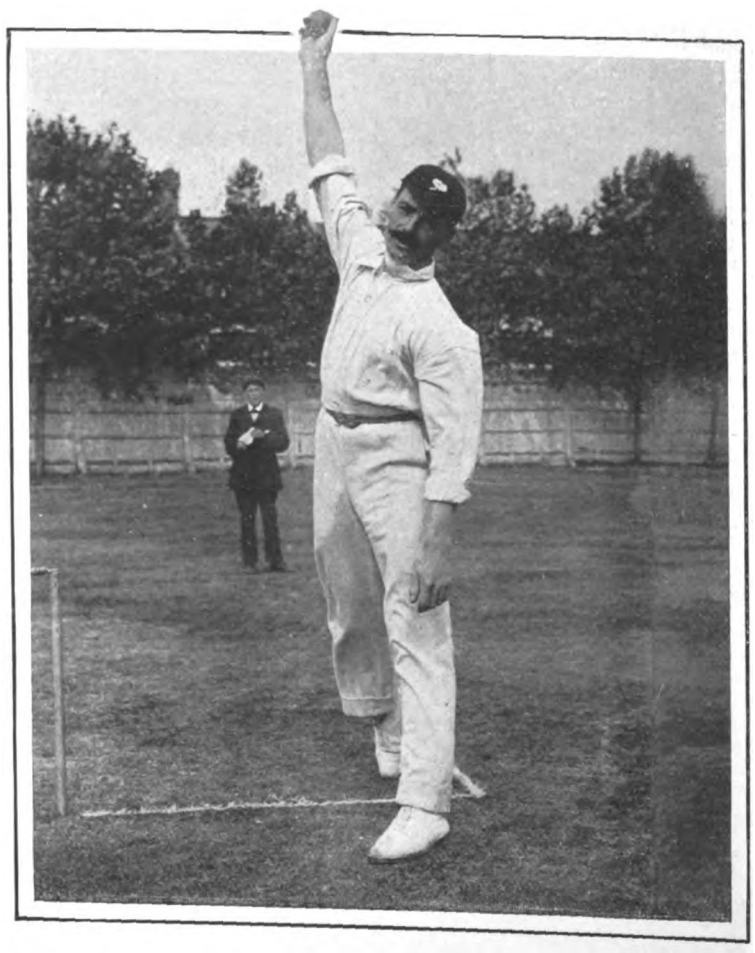
G. C. B. LLEWELLYN.

This season has witnessed a return to form of the South African cricketer who qualified, by residence, for Hampshire. Anyone who either saw Llewellyn playing in, or looked up his batting and bowling averages for, 1904, would never believe that he was twelfth man for England at Birmingham in May, 1902. Such was the case. Last season his batting average was 14, and his bowling average 37 for 40 wickets. He had the satisfaction of scoring two centuries in the match against Derbyshire. He was at 90 not out over-night in securing the second 100, then hit a 4, and was bowled directly afterwards, next day.



W. LEES, SURREY.

The fortune of England in winning the toss five times in succession in the Test matches was probably the misfortune of the Surrey fast medium right-hand bowler, Walter Lees, for, had England met with a reverse at Nottingham, and lost the toss at Lord's, the Australians might have been two up and three to play. Such a state of affairs has in the past always brought with it changes in the personnel of the losing side, which would have given Lees the honour of playing for England. He was twelfth man at Nottingham, and never chosen again. He is probably the best bowler for all sorts of wickets now playing.



RINGROSE.

In this fine fast medium right-hand bowler, who bears a striking resemblance to Captain E. G. Wynyard, D.S.O., Yorkshire hoped they had found a foil to the fast left of Hirst or slow left of Rhodes. This position he has not quite succeeded in filling so far. That he is an excellent bowler on his day, like so many others, goes without saying. This season he had one exceptional day against the Australians, securing nine wickets in an innings against them. He makes the ball go across with his arm as well as come back quickly off the pitch. Ringrose is not a run-getting batsman.

Digitized by Google

THE SERVICES.

IT is satisfactory to learn that what may be called "lights out gunnery" is receiving very close and practical attention on the part of our Naval authorities. There is no doubt that, although this can hardly, with exactitude, be regarded as a lesson learned from the Russo-Japanese War, the latter has brought into stronger relief the necessity for something more than mere watchfulness on the part of battle ships likely to be subjected to torpedo attacks at night. The huge disproportion between the value even of destroyers and armoured cruisers, and the willingness with which many commanders would sacrifice two or three of the former on the chance of getting a torpedo home on one of the latter, render it intensely desirable for the bigger craft to make more and more certain of putting a swift end to any mosquitoes that may harass them. Nocturnal defensive tactics of this sort require constant practice if proficiency in them is ever to serve as a real deterrent to an active and resolute enemy. But such practice, difficult and rather dangerous as it may be, should bring its own reward. When the captain of a battle-ship knows that his gunners can send a destroyer to the bottom nearly as promptly at midnight as they can at noon, he may be pretty sure that an enemy, equally aware of this circumstance, will think twice before attempting such exploits as those repeatedly performed with considerable though not conclusive success by the Japanese at Port Arthur.

Bracing, Exeter.

THE UNVEILING OF THE STATUE OF GENERAL SIR REDVERS BULLER AT EXETER.

An interesting ceremony took place at Exeter last week, when Viscount Ebrington, the Lord-Lieutenant of the County, unveiled an equestrian statue erected by the county and city in honour of the General. The statue is the work of Mr. Adrian Jones, and when it was unveiled, the choir sang Elgar's "Land of Hope and Glory," in which Mr. C. T. Ross, one of the Hon. Secs., took the tenor solo.

A VERY interesting appointment was that of Captain Lionel Halsey to the "Powerful" on completing. Captain Halsey was last year Commander of the "Good Hope," to which he was appointed in 1902, but he previously served as Lieutenant in the ship of which he has now command, and that, too, in an historical connection. For Lieutenant Halsey of the "Powerful" was in charge of the 4·7-in. gun in Princess Victoria Battery, Cove Hill Redoubt, during the siege of Ladysmith, subsequently, towards the end of the siege, acting as Captain Lambton's Executive Officer with general charge of all the Naval guns. As a matter of course, Lieutenant Halsey was mentioned in despatches for those services, and received special promotion to Commander on New Year's Day, 1901.

THERE is a great deal of Naval, Military, and Constitutional history packed up in the family antecedents and connections of Captain Rosslyn Erskine Wemyss, M.V.O., Extra Equerry to the Prince of Wales, who has lately been appointed to the "Suffolk." Captain Wemyss belongs, of course, to the great Scottish family of Wemyss, the head of which is the Earl of Wemyss and March. Several of the Earls of Wemyss have been Lord High Admirals of Scotland, and one of Captain Wemyss's forbears was the late Rear-Admiral James Erskine Wemyss, who, again, was the son of Lieutenant-General William Wemyss, M.P., grandson of the fourth Earl. The family has intermarried with that of Erroll, which has a particularly fine Military record. A connection of Captain R. E. Wemyss, Lady Hilda Charteris, was the first wife of the Right Hon. St. John Brodrick, formerly Secretary of State for War. Captain Wemyss, himself, entered the Navy in 1877, and is well known in connection with the command of the Royal Naval College, Osborne.

THE recent announcement as to Cavalry reorganisation is another and, on the whole, a welcome reminder of the evidently earnest intention of the present Military authorities to place the British Cavalry on a sound, permanent footing. There is also unquestioned significance in the enquiries which the Army Council has been making as to thirty-acre sites for the erection of Cavalry barracks. It would seem, indeed, that we are on the point of entering a new era as regards our Cavalry, and at present the signs are hopeful for those who have consistently held that the main desideratum is to reckon our Cavalry as a thing apart, and to keep on levelling it up, instead of trying to bring it down to the Mounted Infantry, and even the cyclist plane, as some cranks would have done if they had had the chance. There is a grain of sense, after all, in the old joke about the chief uses of Cavalry in a modern battle being "to give a tone to the proceedings"; but, of course, everything depends upon the sort of tone to be given. When we may count on our Cavalry giving the right kind of tone to every campaign in which we are engaged, we shall have attained a highly-important object, and it looks very much as if we were on the right tack. Moreover, judging by The Times accounts of the recent Trainings, the Cavalry themselves are going strong and straight in the same direction.

IN the appointment of Major E. Thornton Taylor to the post of Commandant of the Royal Military College at Kingston Canada, special regard has doubtless been had to the fact that the officer in question is a former graduate of that institution. Such a claim would have special weight at the present moment, when the Canadian Military system is undergoing such extensive reorganisation on independent lines. But, in any case, the appointment is an excellent one, since Major Taylor combines high accomplishments with important practical experience. Not only does he hold a Staff College certificate, but for four or five years he was a D.A.A.G. for Instruction in India, and to be that one must know one's work both as a soldier and as a teacher very singularly well and thoroughly.

THE recent letter in The Times headed "The Curse of the Army," and signed "Sagittarius," in which a general roster for regimental promotion is advocated, cannot, of course, be suitably discussed here. But it deserves mention as containing an epoch-making proposal, and the writer, for one, has no thought of treating that proposal with bigoted scorn. But there are practical objections of which "Sagittarius" did not take due note. The added expense, for instance, would probably be terrific. In the Navy one of the chief objects attained by short-term appointments is that officers learn the ways of various types of ship. Certainly the letter of "Sagittarius" gives one "furiously to think."

Digitized by Google

THE CHANNEL FLEET IN THE BALTIC.

H.M.S. "EXMOUTH" Gale and Polden.

Flag-ship of Admiral Sir Arthur Knyvet Wilson, K.C.B. The Channel Fleet, which is returning to British waters this week, has just completed a month's cruise in the Baltic. During its stay abroad the Fleet was everywhere accorded a friendly reception, and the many entertainments which were provided were much appreciated by both officers and men.

Digitized by Google

THE RACING SEASON.

WHEN Mr. W. Hall-Walker's crack colt, Black Arrow, declined to take part in the race for the Lavant Stakes at Goodwood, there were plenty of wiseacres ready to declare that no reliance could ever again be placed in him. These prophets of evil were wrong, for in the Champion Breeders' Foal Plate, which was run for on the first day of the Derby Meeting, the son of Count Schomberg and Black Cherry gave no cause whatever for anxiety, either at the start or during the race, which he won with the most consummate ease from Spearmint and the colt by Rightaway out of Cydaria, Victorious being among the unplaced competitors. So far as the two year old colts of the season are concerned, the only possible rival to Black Arrow appears to be Admirable Crichton, and the meeting of the two in the Champagne Stakes at Doncaster will be looked forward to with the greatest interest. Those people who are in the habit of decrying the modern thorough-bred as an animal of no power or substance, may perhaps be not a little astonished when they come to look at such a two year old as Black Arrow, of whom, by the way, an excellent likeness, taken by Mr. W. A. Rouch, accompanies these notes. Another race of some interest on the same day was the Friary Nursery Plate, for which fifteen went to the post, the prize going to Sal (7-st. 13-lb.), who finished a length and a-half in front of the filly by Ocean Wave out of L'Excepcion (7-st. 11-lb.), with Lamb and Flag (7-st. 9-lb.) beaten into third place by five lengths. The remainder of the day's racing does not call for much comment beyond noticing the tremendous finish for the Chaddesden Selling Plate, which Gay Gordon won by a short head from St. Hilary, who in turn was only a similar distance in front of El Maestro. If the weather was worse, the sport on the second day of the meeting showed considerable improvement, hough the Champion Breeders' Biennial Foal Stakes of 1,000-sovs. must have proved a sad disappointment to speculators, as indicated by the returns of the betting, which were as follows: 5 to 4 on Rouge Croix, 5 to 1 each against Chestnut, the Eugenia gelding; 6 to 1 St. Florentin, and 10 to 1 Cyanean, who won in a canter by a length and a-half from Chestnut, third place being filled by St. Florentin. This was the first race won by Cyanean this year, though at one time last year she was considered to be amongst the best of the two year olds; in any case, it will be advisable to entirely ignore the running of Rouge Croix on this occasion. Everyone was pleased to see a couple of races fall to the share of Lord Ellesmere, one of them being the Chatsworth Plate, which Gower (7-st. 6-lb.) won rather cleverly from Glenamoy (8-st. 12-lb.) and Sandboy (9-st. 5-lb.). The start for the Devonshire Nursery Plate was anything but a good one, but the favourite, Barcelona Park, got well away in the centre, and after making all the running, stalled off a resolute challenge from Lovania, and won a good race by a neck; six lengths away the colt by Jeddah out of Simonella was third.

W. A. Rouch.

COLONEL W. HALL-WALKER'S COUNT SCHOMBERG.
The sire of Black Arrow.

Fine weather and the attraction of the Peveril of the Peak Plate of 1,000-sovs. over the straight mile brought a crowded attendance for the third and last day of the Derby Meeting. The field which turned out to do battle for the big race was strong, both in numbers and in quality. But when it came to racing the much-improved Pomegranate, carrying 6-st. 11-lb., took the measure of her opponents in a few strides, and won easily by three lengths from Sansovino (8-st. 7-lb.), Cape Verde (6-st. 5-lb.) being third, a length and a-half away. The winner is by Persimmon out of Briar Root, and was purchased by R. Day at the December sales for 600 guineas for her present owner, Sir E. Vincent. Nydian, by Martagon out of St. Nydia, carried off the Elvaston Nursery Plate for Mr. R. H. Henning, and the Burton Plate, the last race of the day, enabled Transfer to win 101-sovs. for Sir E. Cassel in the hollowest of canters.

The appearance of the weights for the Cesarewitch and the Cambridgeshire has put an end to many anticipations, and extinguished the hopes of one or two astute individuals. As far as one can see at present, the handicappers are to be congratulated on their work. Not much serious consideration can be given to these two handicaps until the appearance of the acceptances, though for the first of the two races such animals as Karakoul, Saltpetre, Song Thrush, His Majesty, and Palmy Days do not appear to have been harshly treated; while for the Cambridgeshire the same may be said of Rouge Croix, Challacombe, Donnetta, Vril, and Transfer, though it must always be remembered that if the French candidates are really the high-class three year olds they appear to be, the weight apportioned to them will not prevent them from winning. CAURIRE.

W. A. Rouch.

COLONEL W. HALL-WALKER'S BLACK ARROW, BY COUNT SCHOMBERG—BLACK CHERRY.
The winner of the Champion Breeders' Foal Plate.

Digitized by Google

Art in the Sale-room.

A LOVER'S ANGER.

As Cloe came into the room t'other day,
I peevish began; where so long could you stay?
In your life-time you never regarded your hour:
You promised at two; and (pray look, child) 'tis four.
A lady's watch needs neither figures nor wheels;
'Tis enough, that 'tis loaded with baubles and seals.
A temper so heedless no mortal can bear—
Thus far I went on with a resolute air.

Lord bless me, said she; let a body but speak:
Here's an ugly hard rose-bud fall'n into my neck;
It has hurt me, and vexed me to such a degree—
See here! for you never believe me; pray see,
On the left side my breast what a mark it has made!
So saying, her bosom she careless displayed:
That seat of delight I with wonder surveyed,
And forgot every word I designed to have said.—PRIOR.

(From a mezzotint after Wheatley, in the possession of Mr. J. Pollard, Spur Street, W.)

Digitized by Google

APT QUOTATIONS.

IN MAIDEN LANE.

"Such labour'd nothings, in so strange a style
Amaze th' unlearn'd, and make the learned smile."—POPE.

(Drawn by Savile Lumley.)

Digitized by Google

Two Classes of Fair Women

Some are fair because they happen to be so, others attain the clear, rosy complexion, soft skin, clear eyes, easy, graceful carriage to their healthful bodies because they are careful what those bodies are made of; in other words, they select food that will nourish. They don't eat "everything that comes along."

The best "Beauty Doctor" in the world is a good, pure food. Rich, greasy, or poorly-cooked foods will ruin the finest complexion a woman was ever blessed with, and all the cosmetics and treatments she may give it will only cover up, not remove the blemishes.

The treatment must come from the inside, for the pores of the skin must have the proper food to be healthy.

A lady living in the West of London writes as follows:—

"Grape-Nuts food has done me a world of good. Some years ago I fell a victim to a serious illness, which did great damage to my constitution. I gave up hope of ever recovering my natural good health until last winter, when tempted to try Grape-Nuts, more from a liking for that kind of food than from any hope of it doing me good.

"I found to my surprise after a week or two's trial that I was getting quite plump, my voice and chest much stronger, and my complexion beautifully clear. In fact, since taking the Grape-Nuts my friends say I look ten years younger, and I believe them, as my glass tells me it is true."

Name given by the Grape-Nuts Co., Ltd., 66, Shoe Lane, London, E.C.

Grape-Nuts

An Ideal Peptonised Food specially adapted to the needs of both Invalids and the Robust.

The 'Allenburys' DIET

This Diet is recommended for general use in place of ordinary milk foods, gruel, etc., and is particularly adapted to the needs of Dyspeptics, Invalids and the Aged. Being largely predigested it is easy of assimilation. A cup of the "Allenburys" DIET is useful between meals in convalescence. It can be made in a moment the addition of boiling water only being required.

The "Allenburys" DIET may be taken on going to bed in the place of stimulants. Being easily digested it promotes tranquil and refreshing sleep, free from the depressing reaction in the morning, which often follows the taking of spirits.

For those who cannot readily digest milk the 'Allenburys' DIET is a welcome substitute, as it does not cause indigestion and flatulence.

Although the "Allenburys" DIET is a food for ADULTS and is quite distinct from the well-known "Allenburys" Foods for Infants, yet it is also of great value as a restorative food for young children, especially during convalescence.

In tins at 1/6 and 3/- each of Chemists, &c.
A large sample posted on receipt of 3 penny stamps.

Allen & Hanburys Ltd., Lombard Street, London.

THE KING.

The Scottish Church Dispute.

THE TIMES says:—
"For variety of interest and excellence of illustration, THE KING has no superior in the pictorial press."

The Free Church v. The United Free Church.

The issue of this paper for September 23rd will contain A FULL AND IMPARTIAL ACCOUNT of the HISTORY of the SCOTTISH CHURCH CONTROVERSY, ILLUSTRATED with PORTRAITS of the CHIEF MINISTERS AND LAYMEN connected with the DISPUTE and the ROYAL COMMISSIONERS engaged in its SETTLEMENT.

A BRILLIANT RÉSUMÉ of one of the most FAMOUS CAUSES CÉLÈBRES of the RELIGIOUS WORLD.

Of all Booksellers, and of GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

THE ceremony of unveiling a tablet to the three "Wiltshire Poets," Crabbe, Moore, and Bowles, which took place at Bath on Saturday, September 2, and of which we published some illustrations last week, was a ceremony that did honour alike to the poets, to the city of Bath, and, incongruous as the idea may sound, to the entente cordiale. The passer-by, seeing the names of these poets inscribed on the tablet on the outer wall of the Royal Literary and Scientific Institute, will remember three men who, though among the lesser lights of English poetry, deserve to be remembered; Bath is honoured by her own remembrance of the poets' connection with her old-established and still-flourishing Institution, at the inauguration of which in January, 1826, all three were present; and as to the entente cordiale, was not the speech at the ceremony, the speech which struck all hearers as a model of style, of critical acumen, and of knowledge of English literature, made by a Frenchman, M. René Huchon, a professor at the University of Nancy?

The Three Wiltshire Poets.

* * *

THEY were not Wiltshire poets at all, said M. Huchon, with true French accuracy and a charming ingenuousness. They all had been poets before they came to Wiltshire, for by the time they came there their poetic work was done. But an exception must be made in the case of William Lisle Bowles, who is, to our thinking, almost the most interesting of the three. It was more than right that he should be honoured in Bath, for there he found the first admirer of his work. It was the present chairman of the Bath Literary Institute, Mr. T. Shum, F.S.A., who told again the story of Bowles's first visit to Bath. A stone's throw from where the tablet may now be seen, and where the speaker was standing as he told the story, was the bookselling and publishing shop of the famous Mr. Cruttwell, a name very familiar to all interested in the literary history and associations of the Queen of the West. To Mr. Cruttwell there entered one day in the year 1789 a youth whose garb clearly proved him to be on a walking tour. He had a manuscript in his hand, the manuscript of fourteen sonnets, of little merit, perhaps, in themselves, but destined to be of immense importance to English literature. They had been "written chiefly on Picturesque Spots during a Journey" in the North of England, Scotland, and some parts of the Continent. The youth, had Mr. Cruttwell known it, was a young clergyman still at Oxford, but had already suffered two disappointments in love, the first through poverty, the second through the death of the lady, and the sonnets were the result of, and the relief from, his dejection. Would Mr. Cruttwell publish them, and what would he give for them? Mr. Cruttwell would give nothing for them; but if the youth cared to lay down £5, one hundred quarto copies should be printed, to try their luck in the world.

William Lisle Bowles.

* * *

THE offer was taken and the money laid down. The slim pamphlet appeared, and in less than a year five times as many had been sold. For this was, in a way, the poetry the young England of the day was looking for. A new spirit was abroad, not only in France, which that year was in the throes of revolution, but in England, too, where the bloodless revolt from the classical, formal, hide-bound, matter-of-fact eighteenth century was just beginning to stir. It was to the young men, and especially the young poets, that these fresh, simple, natural sonnets appealed. Burns and Cowper had already, each in his measure, thrown off the shackles, but it was William Lisle Bowles's sonnets which the young Coleridge, then still a boy, though a big boy, at Christ's Hospital, copied out no less than forty times for himself and his friends, because he was too poor to buy the book. It was William Lisle Bowles's sonnets, neglected to-day, which gave the impetus to Wordsworth, Southey, and the whole movement of the English poetry of the revival. Bowles's poetry, as M. Huchon well said, was the first lyrical poetry of the nineteenth century.

What his Poetry Did.

* * *

BATH has a special reason to be proud of his memory, therefore, as being the abode of his first publisher; and he continued to publish with Cruttwell (save once when he went to Salisbury) thereafter. And having mentioned Cruttwell, we may add that it was to a bookseller and publisher of Bath, Mr. George Gregory, himself an enthusiast in English letters and the associations of his city, that the idea of the recent ceremony was due. But, after all, nothing in Bath is so captivating or so interesting as Bath herself, and the visitors to the ceremony were fortunate in having some portions of Mr. Broadley's "Bath Collections," as well as of his "Crabbe Collections," laid out for them in the Council Chamber of the Guildhall.

Bath the Beautiful.

* * *

THE Crabbe Collection was of absorbing interest. Here were the original letters to Burke, of which we spoke last week, one imploring aid, the other giving a long account of his early struggles and miseries; the manuscript of "The Library"; a letter from Dr. Johnson to Sir Joshua Reynolds, praising "The Village"; and any number of letters, diaries, and so forth, all of which, with many more, have been studiously worked over by M. Huchon in preparing his forthcoming "Life of Crabbe," which Mr. Murray is to publish in English early next year. But the mind lingers most willingly over a portion of the "Bath Collection," the unpublished original Rowlandsons, the portraits, caricatures, sketches, letters, manuscripts, and other treasures, which make up a mine of curious, interesting, and most important information. The mere presence of such priceless things as those lent by Mr. Broadley made the occasion one of unique interest.

The Broadley Collections.

* * *

THE ceremony, with its concomitant hospitality, brought forth a great number of interesting details of literary history. Among other notable features was the presence of Mr. Harold Marsh Sewall, a senator of the United States, who hails from Bath, Maine, U.S.A. Mr. Sewall was at one time the American Representative at Samoa, and while there he made the acquaintance of Robert Louis Stevenson, who makes mention of him, it will be remembered, in his letters. One day Stevenson complained to Mr. Sewall that people were constantly asking him which was his favourite character in his own novels. "You, Mr. Sewall, have never asked me that question," he continued, with (who knows?) perhaps a very justifiable wish that he had. "Why is that?" "For a simple reason, Mr. Stevenson," replied Mr. Sewall. "I've never read any of your books!" One can readily imagine Stevenson's delighted burst of laughter at the candid reply.

A Stevenson Story.

* * *

WHILE we are on the subject of Bath and its literary associations, we might mention that one of the visitors to the ceremony was Mrs. Clemenson, the great-great-niece of the famous Mrs. Montagu, the "Queen of the Blue-Stockings." Her published work is almost forgotten now, but her personality lives; and it anything could make it yet more vivid, it will be the publication of her letters. She was a great letter-writer, and her letters contain the best, in modern opinion, of her work. Some of them are known, a vast number remain unknown, and these have been arranged and edited by Mrs. Clemenson, and the publication of them will be begun by Mr. Murray in January. The whole scheme is of the greatest interest, but it is too early yet to say more.

Mrs. Montagu and her Letters.

* * *

NO one should fail to read "A Servant of the Public" as soon as ever it can be procured. It is not exciting, it is not exhilarating; but it contains the most subtle, profound, and courageous study of a temperament that we have seen for some time. The temperament is that of an actress, a virtuous woman (there is no scandal in the book), but one whose curse it is to sacrifice everyone else to herself. She is charming, to some extent well-meaning, and lovable; but she lives in a false world, a world of emotions and poses, and hence the trouble she brings on all who come into contact with her. Mr. Hope's view of life is not optimistic. The second-best, he seems to say, is all anyone can look for in this world of ours; but there is no feeble railing at destiny, nor morbid delight in gloom. More and more he is becoming a novelist who thinks—and we have none too many of them. His latest book goes deeper than any of its predecessors, and will increase his reputation with all who value the higher qualities in fiction.

Mr. Anthony Hope's New Novel.

THE THREE "WILTSHIRE POETS"

Thomas Moore (on the left), George Crabbe (in the centre), and William Lisle Bowles (on the right), who were commemorated at Bath on Saturday, September 2. These portraits appeared at the head of the menu card of the public luncheon given by Mr. George Gregory of Bath, by whose kindness we reproduce them here.

BOOKS TO READ.

A Servant of the Public, by Anthony Hope. (Methuen.)
Shakespeare's Christmas, and Other Stories, by "Q" (A. T. Quiller-Couch). (Smith, Elder.)
The Passport, by Richard Bagot. (Methuen.)
Twisted Eglantine, by H. B. Marriott Watson. (Methuen.)
The Patient Man, by Percy White. (Methuen.)
The Man, by Bram Stoker. (Heinemann.)
Green Cliffs, by Rowland Grey. (Hutchinson.)
A Wanderer in Holland, by E. V. Lucas. Illustrations by Herbert Marshall. (Methuen.)

Digitized by Google

NEW ZEALAND

THE BRIGHTER BRITAIN.

A NEW COUNTRY of marvellous beauty, with a fertile soil and a splendid climate. No extremes of heat or cold.

No droughts. An abundance of water, yet no rainy season.

An Evergreen Land rich in natural products.

A GREAT SHEEP, CATTLE AND DAIRYING COUNTRY.

Cheap farms with helpful assistance to farmers by the Government. Reduced steamer fares from the United Kingdom to New Zealand for persons with small capital.

No private monopoly of Public Utilities; the Government owns and operates Railways, Telegraphs, Telephones and Insurance.

No Lock-outs! No Strikes!! Employment disputes adjusted by Arbitration!!!

NEW ZEALAND IS THE WONDERLAND OF THE WORLD.

Its Thermal Sights are unique in their extent, beauty and weirdness.

The Mammoth Geyser "Waimangu" (Black Water) hurls an immense mass of boiling water, mud and stones over 1,000 feet high.

Hot Mineral Water and Mud Baths; The Curative Baths of Rotorua, Te Aroha and Hanmer are world famous. Government doctors in attendance.

Baths. Gardens. Games. Music.

and picturesque. Here are lakes of great size and depth—canyons that surpass the greatest of other lands—dense forests with a tropical profusion of ferns and flowers—innumerable waterfalls—monoliths of granite many thousands of feet in height—glaciers, snowfields, and the peerless Sounds, with their 400 miles of inside sailing distance.

TRANSIT is convenient throughout New Zealand. Government railways, Express trains, Pullman and Dining Cars. Excellent coastal steamers. Splendid coaching routes. Hotels, good; charges moderate. Government Hotels, Spas, and Accommodation Houses in many of the principal tourist resorts.

Large Mail Steamers with every modern comfort and convenience leave Great Britain for New Zealand fortnightly. Duration of direct journey, 40 days; via Suez and Australia, 44 days; via Canada, 32 days; via San Francisco, 28 days.

The best time to visit New Zealand is during the summer months, from November to April.

ALL INFORMATION regarding Travel, Tourist Routes, Spas, Baths, Sport, etc., etc., is supplied free of charge by the GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENT OF TOURIST AND HEALTH RESORTS. Head Office, WELLINGTON, NEW ZEALAND. Branch Offices throughout the Colony. Information regarding access to New Zealand, Reduced Steamer

STEAM CLOUDS AT WAIMANGU.

LAKE ROTOCHU.

MOKAU FALLS, LAKE WAIKAREMOANA.

The ALPINE SCENERY of New Zealand combines the distinguishing features of Switzerland, Norway and America. The Southern Alps extend for 300 miles. Mt. Cook, the highest peak, is belted by the largest glaciers in the temperate regions—the Tasman being 18 miles long and 2 miles wide. Near the foot of Mt. Cook is the Hermitage Hotel. Government guides, Alpine huts, and all necessary Alpine equipment available for use of visitors.

The LAKES of New Zealand are most pleasing in their charm of colour, contour and environment. Rotorua, Rotoiti, Taupo, and Waikaremoana in the North Island; Manapouri, Wakatipu, Te Anau, Wanaka, Kanieri and Mahinapua in the South Island are the most notable. The Lakes of the South Island are surrounded by mountain scenery of singular beauty and magnificence. Steamers and Power Launches. Good Hotels.

The WEST COAST FIORDLAND is indescribably wild

Fares, Settlement, Commerce, Industries, Travel, etc., etc., also supplied at the Office of the High Commissioner for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, London—Mr. J. G. Gow, Commercial Agent for New Zealand, Durban, South Africa, also supplies general information respecting New Zealand.

Minister for Tourist and Health Resorts: Hon. Sir Joseph G. Ward, K.C.M.G. Superintendent: T. E. Donne, Wellington, New Zealand. The Superintendent invites correspondence.

See Tourist Department's "Itinerary of Travel" and descriptive Guide Books.

An International Exhibition of Products, Manufactures, Arts, Sciences, Amusements, etc., etc., is to be held by the Government of New Zealand in Hagley Park, Christchurch City, commencing 1st November, 1906, and terminating April, 1907. Full particulars obtainable from the High Commissioner for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, S.W.

OKOROIRE.

HOT SPRINGS AND SANATORIUM HOTEL.

One of the finest Health Resorts in the Thermal District.

The first place of interest en route to Rotorua, New Zealand.

Delightful NATURAL HOT MINERAL BATHS, free to Guests. Sufferers from Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Affection of the Eyes, Skin Diseases, etc., are often permanently cured by these waters.

CLIMATE.—Beautifully clear and bracing atmosphere, charming surroundings.

SPORT.—The Streams in the hotel grounds are exceedingly well-stocked with Trout. Plenty of Game, viz: Pheasants, Virginian Quail, Wild Duck, Hares, and Deer. Lawn Tennis, Golf, and Croquet.

The drive from Okoroire to Rotorua is one of the most beautiful in New Zealand.

T. MARTIN,
Manager.

NEW ZEALAND.

THE GRAND HOTEL, ROTORUA.

Situated in the Centre of the Hot Lakes District.

Patronised by T.R.H. The Prince and Princess of Wales.

THE HOTEL is in the immediate neighbourhood of the beautifully laid-out Government Gardens, wherein are situated the celebrated "Priest," "Rachel," "Postmaster," "Duchess," and other mineral baths, the curative properties of which are world famous. It has magnificent and lofty apartments, spacious promenade, balconies, snug alcoves, and luxuriously-appointed drawing, music, conversation, reading, smoking, and billiard rooms, perfect sanitation, and is lighted throughout by electricity.

BATH CHAIRS and attendance provided to convey invalids to or from the various bath houses. Tariff 12/6 per day inclusive.

W. J. LEES, Manager.

THE GEYSER HOTEL,

WHAKAREWAREWA, ROTORUA.

Situated in close proximity to the wonderful Geysers and Maori Settlement.

Visitors staying at the Geyser Hotel have continued opportunity of witnessing them as they can be seen plainly from the verandah of the Hotel, also of studying native life and customs.

The Hotel possesses its own private hot and cold curative mineral baths of which the most valued are the "Spout," "Oil," and "Carlsbad" Baths.

It has lately been greatly enlarged and re-furnished in a most comfortable manner. Electric light is established throughout the hotel and baths.

Coaches run regularly between Whakarewarewa, the Rotorua Sanatorium, and Government Gardens.

Tariff 10s. per day or £3 per week, inclusive. For a lengthened stay terms can be arranged.

CHAS. E. NELSON, Proprietor.

GNL

Digitized by Google

Leaves from a Collector's Note-book.

No. LVIII.—THE POTTERY AND PORCELAIN OF LIVERPOOL.

LIVERPOOL HERALDIC PLATE
In the possession of Miss H. Woollan.

THE story of "potting" in Liverpool is one of no ordinary interest, and it has been admirably told by the late Mr. Joseph Mayer, who was at once an expert, an antiquarian, and a collector. Genuine Liverpool ware is easily recognisable, both by its creamy whiteness and phenomenal lightness. The exquisite softness and delicacy of Liverpool "transfer," as shown in rare eighteenth century specimens, like those now reproduced, rival the high qualities shown in the finest contemporary productions of the Worcester kilns, and it is still a moot point as to whether the credit of the invention and first use of the transfer process belongs to the one or the other of these great "potting" centres.

In 1754, at the time when Dr. Wall first began to make experiments in Worcester, several "pot-works" flourished in that portion of Liverpool formerly known as "Town's-end." Here Alderman Shaw turned out several pieces of merit, although his ordinary manufacture was of the common Delft style for domestic use. It was at another Liverpool factory, situate in Harrington Street, at the back of Lord Street, that, Mr. Mayer asserts, the art of printing upon earthenware was discovered by John Sadler. This was in 1756, and Mr. Mayer possessed many affidavits drawn up in support of Mr. Sadler's claim to the invention with which Dr. Wall is generally credited. It is certain that Wedgwood thought so highly of Mr. Sadler's skill that he sent his far-famed "Queen's ware" in the plain body from Staffordshire to Liverpool by waggon for Mr. Sadler's manipulation. Another enterprising Liverpool potter of the period was Mr. Chaffers, who discovered an unworked seam of soapstone in Cornwall, and commenced the making of china in Liverpool about 1760. He died in the midst of so great a success that Josiah Wedgwood confessed himself outdone.

Another Liverpool potter, Seth Pennington, imitated Oriental china so cleverly that it was almost unrecognisable. Pennington's "ovens" stood on the "Bank," and close to it was the factory of one of the last of the celebrated Worcester potters, Zachariah Barnes, who died in 1820. The art died out in Liverpool about 1840. The decoration of a dated tea-pot in the writer's possession is almost identical with the style of ornamentation which distinguished the productions of Pennington, but other considerations help to identify it as the work of Richard Chaffers. Local politics played an important part in Liverpool "potting." Hence the "Plumper Mug," "The Potter's Song," and very possibly the Tarleton jug, which passed from the Wynne Ellis Collection into the possession of Mr. D. Sherratt of Chester. Mr. Mayer makes no mention of the name of I. Johnson which appears on it, apparently as that of the maker or printer, but the Penningtons intermarried with a family bearing that name. General Sir Banastre Tarleton (1754-1833) was the son of a Liverpool merchant. In 1775 he obtained a commission in the King's Dragoon Guards, and subsequently distinguished himself during the American War. He was returned for Liverpool in 1790, but the jug probably dates from 1783 or 1784. The full-length portrait from which it was "printed" was painted by Reynolds in 1782 for Colonel Tarleton's mother. Still more striking is the Wolfe jug, lately in the collection of Mr. James Tregaskis of High Holborn. The artistic merit of the landscape on the reverse side of it is certainly very great. Christian's tortoiseshell jugs and plates were also a form of Liverpool pottery, and so, a little later, was the Herculaneum ware, the best-known mark of which was the bird from which Liverpool derives its name. B.

LIVERPOOL TRANSFER JUG
Marked I. Johnson, Liverpool, and embellished with a portrait of Colonel Tarleton, M.P. for Liverpool, after the picture by Sir Joshua Reynolds. From the Wynne Ellis Collection.

EARLY LIVERPOOL PLATE
In the possession of Miss H. Woollan.

LIVERPOOL TRANSFER JUG
Of the eighteenth century. Reverse, showing a landscape.

LIVERPOOL PLATE.
Liverpool ware is distinguishable by its creamy whiteness.

LIVERPOOL TRANSFER JUG.
Obverse, showing the death of Wolfe. Period about 1770-1775.

Digitized by Google

MALLETT
& SON

hold and offer for sale specimens of the

HIGHEST QUALITY

OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE

as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.

EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.

AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.

(Two hours from Paddington.)

---

Rare Prints and Portraits
CARICATURES.

Speciality: Rarities of all sorts relating to
NAPOLEON and AMERICA.

GODEFROY MAYER,
41, Rue Blanche, Paris.

Catalogues issued. Rare Prints and Engraved Portraits sought for.
Correspondence Invited.

Mr. Mayer's stock is probably the largest and finest in Europe. He specially caters for the wants and requirements of English and American extra-illustrators.

---

Old Brass Stand and Lamp.

THE MISSES
H. & I. WOOLLAN
(Under Royal Patronage)

are showing a
UNIQUE
Collection of
Antiques.

Chippendale, Sheraton, and Hepplewhite Furniture. Worcester and Lowestoft Services. Lace, Glass, etc.

Showrooms: First Floor.

28, BROOK STREET, GROSVENOR SQUARE, W.

---

MAGGS BROS.,
109, STRAND, W.C., LONDON, ENGLAND.

Dealers in RARE BOOKS AND FINE LIBRARY EDITIONS OF STANDARD AUTHORS, Voyages and Travels, Early Printed Books, 1st Editions of 17th, 18th, and 19th Century writers, Illustrated Works. Also Rare Portraits, Line, Stipple, Mezzotints, and Colour Engravings, and Autographs.

Recently issued—Illustrated Catalogues of Rare Books, Voyages and Travels, Engravings, Autographs. Price 6d. each.

---

BUTLER'S "KEEN" RAZOR

HOLLOW GROUND.
SPECIAL STEEL.
HAND FORGED.
"I know that Razor, it comes from Sheffield."

HIGHEST AWARDS.
GUARANTEED PERFECT AND BRITISH MADE THROUGHOUT.

"Keen as this razor's edge invisible." (Love's Labour Lost.)

Black Handles ... ... each 3/- & 5/- | Ivory Handles ... ... each 5/- & 7/6
*Per pair, in best Case, 15/-; 7-day set, 50/- | *Per pair in Russia Case, 21/-; 7-day set, 70/-
"CAVENDISH" CARVERS (Regd. brand) keep "an edge that won't come off."
Fine Ivory, 20/-; Imitation ditto or Stag, 10/6 per pair. Post Free of all Dealers.

Sole Makers, GEORGE BUTLER & CO., Trinity Works, SHEFFIELD.

---

ARE YOU ALIVE

to the fact that thousands of people who were inveterate smokers of extensively advertised cheap paper cigarettes (which are so harmful to the health) have discontinued same, and are now smoking

FLOR DE DINDIGUL
CIGARETTES (All Tobacco Leaf—No Paper).

They are far more satisfying, mild, delightful in flavour, pure, and last much longer than ordinary paper cigarettes. Doctors strongly recommend them. These delightful Whiffs are on sale everywhere, Id. each, 8 per 100. Awarded 10 Gold Medals for Excellence.

Importer: BEWLAY, 49, STRAND, LONDON.
Established 125 Years.

---

IF YOU ARE BUYING

Any kind of Requisite for Travelling, it will pay you to send for

W. H. SMITH'S

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF

PORTMANTEAUX
TRUNKS
BAGS

And every description of Leather Goods and Travelling Requisites for Home and the Colonies.

Opposite the Abbey,* BATH.

Maker of the ROSEBERY HAT BOX.

LORD ROSEBERY says: "It is an ingenious and useful Hat Box."

---

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

IN order to overcome an objectionable feature of the running-in of a new car, which usually results in the emission of a quantity of smoke, Messrs. Panhard and Levassor of Regent Street have originated a novel device. Before a car leaves their depôt a flexible hose is attached to the exhaust pipe and led into a smoke chamber. The engine is then run until all the superfluous oil has been consumed. By this means the emission of smoke is largely prevented when the car is used on the road. The firm's travelling workshop is now completed, and ready to assist the owners of Panhard cars in any part of the country. We are informed that it will be in the Northampton district this week.

* * *

The "Henry Edmunds" Hill-climbing Trophy, which was won for the first time by Mr. Campbell Muir at Castlewellan, Ireland, in 1903, will be competed for on Wednesday, September 27. By the kindness of Mr. Philipson-Stow the course will be laid in the grounds of Blackdown Park, Fernhurst, Sussex, the scene of the Auto-Cycle Club's Hill-climbing Trials early in the summer. The competing vehicles must be of a recognised tourist type, furnished with lamps, mud-guards, efficient silencers, and proper body, and must carry four passengers (including driver) of an average weight of 150-lb. The chassis price is restricted to £1,000, including tyres. No car which has taken part in a competition for racing cars is eligible. Entries will be received at the Automobile Club up to noon on September 20.

The Pyrenees Cup has been awarded to the 24-h.p. De Diétrich, driven in the trials by M. Sorel. The second prize, a cup offered by the President of the Republic, was won by a 15-h.p. Brouhot. A 10-h.p. De Dion was third, and a 22-h.p. Berliet fourth. The winner was fitted with Michelin tyres and Samson's anti-skies.

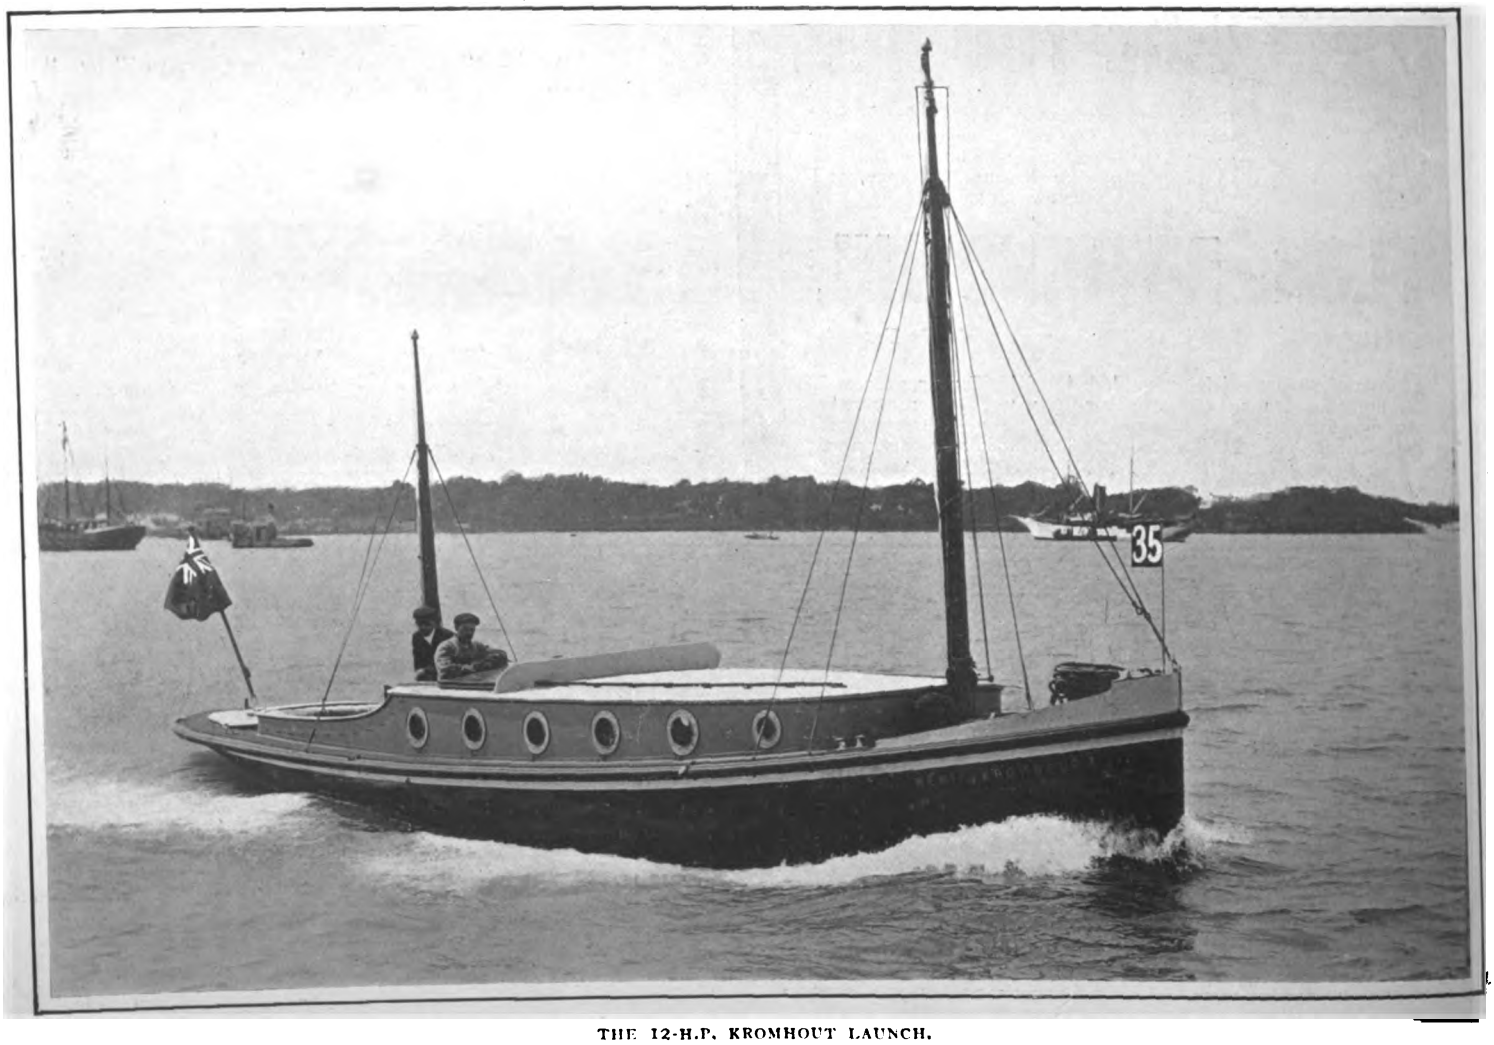
* * *

The value of the driving and mechanical proficiency certificates granted by the Automobile Club is beginning to be appreciated by the members of the motor industry. Messrs. Jarrott and Letts require all their employés who are engaged in driving cars to pass the examination, and obtain certificates from the club. Moreover, the firm has made it a rule under no circumstances to recommend a driver to a customer who does not hold the certificate. It is to be hoped that the heads of other firms will follow the example of Messrs. Jarrott and Letts, as it would quickly lead to the elimination of the reckless and unskilful drivers from the ranks of the profession. The granting of a club certificate is dependent upon the candidate possessing a suitable amount of skill, and also a knowledge of the law and conventions of the road. In the case of a paid driver, the certificate has to be renewed annually, and this will not be done if the holder has been guilty of reckless or inconsiderate behaviour, or has otherwise proved himself unworthy to be classed as a capable and trustworthy driver. The next examination will be held by the club on the 28th inst. at 119, Piccadilly. Particulars can be obtained from the secretary.

H.R.H. the Princess of Wales has recently become the possessor of a handsome Daimler car. The body, for which Mr. H. G. Mulliner of Brook Street is responsible, is of the limousine type, and the internal accommodation provides room for three on the main seat, with two additional seats, which can be folded up when not in use. The side windows and those behind the driver let down into the body, allowing all the advantages of an open carriage to be enjoyed without its drawbacks. The rear window is a fixture, so as to prevent the ingress of dust into the interior. The fittings are on an elaborate scale, and include silk blinds, trays, pockets, racks, watch, speaking tube, and electric light. Her Royal Highness took an active interest in the building of the car, and personally instructed Mr. Mulliner in many of the details connected with it.

* * *

During the hearing of a number of summonses against motorists at the Hornby Petty Sessions some severe comments were made from the Bench regarding the action taken by the police. At the conclusion of the evidence, the magistrates said that they had compared the policemen's watches, and found that they did not keep time as stated. They thought it would be better if the police were stationed at places, such as villages and dangerous corners, where any breach of the speed limit would be a danger to the public, instead of timing motorists on open stretches where the road was clear. A measured distance of 220 yds. was not a fair test in their opinion, and they dismissed all the cases before them.



THE 12-H.P. KROMHOUT LAUNCH.

This new boat, which was built in Amsterdam, is fitted with a Kromhout paraffin motor, and in the recent Reliability Trials at Southampton secured the gold medal and Autocar Challenge Cup for the best all-round performance. Messrs. Perman and Co. of Charing Cross House are the English agents for the makers of the Kromhout.

Digitized by Google

1905.

MERCÉDÈS MODELS

HERKOMER TROPHY.

Winner: Standard 40 h.p. MERCÉDÈS,

BEATING 79 COMPETITORS.

18/28 Mercédès Tonneau built in 1905, painted and upholstered Mercédès red, cape hood over rear seats, folding glass screen back of front seats, only slightly used, complete with side lights, tail light and horn, usual tools. Inspection and trial invited. Price £775.

IMMEDIATE DELIVERY.
28/32 latest type, complete with side entrance coachwork.
40/45 latest type, complete with side entrance coachwork,
Painted and upholstered Mercédès Red.

IMMEDIATE DELIVERY.
18/28 fitted with Rothschild Limousine coachwork.
A Car for all weathers.

Solo Concossicnnairos:

Cannstatt Mercédès, Ltd.,

127/130, LONG ACRE, LONDON, W.C.

Telephone No.: 3320 GERRARD.

Authorised Agents as under:—

Telegraphic Address: "TRUENESS, LONDON."

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| London, J. E. HUTTON, Ltd. | Glasgow, RENNIE & PROSSER. | Liverpool, Chester, Preston & Manchester, J. A. LAWTON & CO., Ltd. |
| Leicester, H. A. HAMSHAW. | Edinburgh, J. CROALL & SONS. | Dundee, T. SHAW, Ltd. |

PLEASE MENTION THIS PAPER.

WAS FIRST, 1897.
STILL THE BEST, 1905.

THE

GROSE NON-SKID AND PUNCTURE-PROOF BAND.

EXPLANATION OF DIAGRAM . . .
(a) Intermediate Leather to prevent rivets from injuring Rubber Cover. (b) Leather Tread with Steel Studs. (c) Leather Cover vulcanised on the ordinary Tyre which is taken down over the Beaded Edge.

Send for Particulars of the "Grose" Band and Tyre combined. . . . .
A Revelation in Tyre Construction.
A Revolution in Price.

All particulars from the Sole Manufacturers,
GROSE, LIMITED, NORTHAMPTON.

Telegrams: "CASE." Telephone 111.

J. A. PREECE & SONS

LIMITED,

Riding & Jobmasters,

Have at their customers' disposal a large selection of suitable HORSES, CARRIAGES, and TRAPS of every description, for use in the Country AT REDUCED RATES.

They also invite an inspection of their commodious RIDING SCHOOL, situated at HOLLYWOOD ROAD, South Kensington, within easy access either by Train or Omnibus.

Riding Lessons given daily by experienced Masters at reasonable terms. Superior Hacks for Ladies and Gentlemen. Quiet Ponies for Children. Well-appointed Dressing and Waiting Rooms.

Friends of Pupils admitted Free of Charge to Visitors' Gallery.

For Information & Terms apply to the Secretary,

AT HEAD OFFICES:

248, FULHAM ROAD, S.W.,

or any of the Company's other Branches.

TELEPHONES: 891 KENSINGTON. 1520 KENSINGTON.

TELEGRAMS: "PRINCILLON, LONDON."

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

THE sudden spell of warmer weather with which we have been lately favoured has brought out all the last remnants of our summer toilettes; and the sea-side resorts have been again gladdened by the bright-coloured linens and muslins which were everywhere prevalent. The favourite white serge and alpacas were most prominent, and certainly looked more seasonable than the airy fabrics, just at this unsettled season of the year especially. We are tending slowly, but very surely, towards the "Directoire," which gains ground daily. I have had glimpses of some lovely coat models in this delightfully picturesque mode, one in a peculiar shade of tan cloth, the capes being lined with reseda green brocade and the wide lapels likewise. It had a charmingly arranged jabot of old Flemish point, and the buttons were of lovely old enamel. Another was in olive green, the linings of ivory satin, and the capes just showed a tiny piping all round of the white. These cloths in the new shades of olive and dahlia, which will be much worn, are specially dyed for certain Paris firms, and cannot be obtained elsewhere. There is such a difference between these shades and those of the less expensive materials, that they do not bear comparison at all.

The long evening coats of black heavy guipure are very apart, and Messrs. Charles Lee and Son of Wigmore Street have some delightfully new models. By the by, the trousseau department is assuming gigantic proportions at this house, and really you can go far before you will do better for dress-making. You always get good value and good workmanship at reasonable prices. The "Leewig" petticoat, too, has become absolutely indispensable to anyone who takes any interest at all in fashionable details.

A CHARMING TEA-GOWN IN IVORY NET
With chenille spots and floral design.

Velvets, brocades, and valuable old laces will be the favourite materials used for ceremonious and state occasions. Alas, for fashion's fads and fancies, I am told that valuable lace flounces and laces of all descriptions are being dyed to match the colours of the velvets and silks which form the groundwork of the gowns. It is a whim which I trust will not prove general, for all the beauty and delicacy of these will be lost when they assume artificial shades. There is a graceful evening dress of soft creamy mousseline and lace with delicately-shaded embroideries, in tones of cream and orange. The pointed swathed belt of Oriental satin in the same tint defines the waist, and wide draperies of the lace form the sleeves and décolletage. Another charming gown is the ivory-spotted net négligée or tea-gown. The lower part of the dress has a soft lace flounce of Valenciennes, headed by a flat fold of silk, above which is a chenille embroidered floral design, all in the same colouring. The ribbons and embroidered fichu of the bodice portion are all carried out in the ivory shade, and the effect of the tout ensemble is most restful to the eye.

Blouses, or more correctly speaking bodices, will be worn in velvets and pannes; in the latter material there are to be seen some lovely shades, with a small self-coloured design. These are made over fitting silk linings, the velvets or pannes, as the case may be, slightly draped, and drawn to a long point in front, a shaped double-breasted appearance being given by large buttons and turned-back collar and revers of sicilienne. The sleeves are large and full to the elbow, with wide turned-back cuffs. A full jabot and frills of old lace form the finishing touches. These will be seen with sicilienne skirts, graduated velvet bands on the lower part, and the whole in exactly the same tone of colour. This at present seems one of the favourite novelties for home wear. In nut brown, mouse and Orleans plum shades these will make most elegant and, at the same time, practical gowns.

Hats are coming, in all shapes. Excepting that size predominates, there is so far nothing very new; but another week will decide the novelties. As the autumn season is so short, it will be gone almost before we realise that summer has once again departed. Feathers and wings will be used together, and ospreys will be very much in requisition on velvet toques. The princess bonnet with strings is a shape that, I think, has come to make a long stay with us, once more. Velvet crowns, something after the Beefeater shape, only flattened down and much tilted at one side, with either wings or groups of ostrich tips. One I saw in black velvet, with this crown, and a rather wide brim which could be bent to any shape to suit the wearer, had a soft white lace scarf loosely draped around, and a trio of lovely white feathers formed a charming cache-peigne. This is worn very much on one side, and is marvellously becoming both to fair and dark. Altogether for millinery purpose, as well as dress, velvet is most eminently suited to all people, the effect is so softening to the skin and gives such a refined appearance to most features, however prominent or harsh they may be. Velveteen will be also worn, but is not nearly so chic.

R. D.

(From a photograph specially taken for this paper at the Dover Street Studios.)

Digitized by Google

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Prevents the Hair from falling off.

Restores Gray or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.

Being delicately perfumed, it leaves no unpleasant odour.

IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin, or even white linen.

Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.

Ask your Chemist or Hair-Dresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.

Prepared only by the . . .

ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO., Ltd.,
33, Farringdon Road, London, E.C.

NOURISH & FLOURISH!

For Infants & Invalids.

Finest Breakfast & Supper Food.

FRAME FOOD

succeeds when other Foods fail. Babies who, from digestive or other trouble, cannot assimilate their food, quickly thrive on Frame-Food (containing Wheat Phosphates which Build up the Frame).

Hundreds of Mothers' letters testify to this.

N.B.—If weakly Babies thrive, how good Frame-Food must be for the stronger Babies! They ALL thrive on it.

REPORT
Particulars of CASE
when a Shilling 1 lb. Tin shall be promptly sent
FREE for TRIAL
(Mention this paper.)
FRAME-FOOD CO., LTD.,
The Famous Factory, Standen Rd., Southfields, London, S.W.

If you want a friend on whom you can always rely, then possess a

'SWAN' Fountain Pen

10/6 to £20. All hands suited.
Of all Stationers. Catalogue free.
Mabie, Todd & Bard
79 & 80, High Holborn, W.C.
Branches:—
London:
93, Cheapside, E.C.
95A, Regent St. W.
Manchester:
3, Exchange Street.

ESTABLISHED 35 YEARS (1870).

THE CHARING CROSS BANK.
119 and 120, BISHOPSGATE ST. WITHIN, E.C.,
and 28, BEDFORD ST., CHARING CROSS, London.

Assets, £694,403. Liabilities, £372,291. Surplus, £322,112.

Loans of £30 to £2,000 granted at a few hours' notice in town or country on mortgage of furniture, trade and farm stock, plant, crops, etc., without removal. Also on deeds, policies, and reversions. Distance no object. Easy terms.

2½ per cent. allowed on Current account balances.

DEPOSITS of £10 and upwards received on terms as under.
Subject to 3 months' Notice of Withdrawal 5 per cent. per annum.
" 6 " " 6 " "
" 12 " " 7 " "
Special terms for longer periods. Interest paid quarterly. The Terminable Deposit Bonds pay nearly 9 per cent., and are a safe investment. Write or call for Prospectus.

A. WILLIAMS, H. J. TALL, } Joint Managers.

BIRKBECK BANK

ESTABLISHED 1851.

Current Accounts. 2 % Interest allowed on minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
Deposits. 2½ % Interest allowed on Deposit Accounts.
Advances made. Stocks and Shares bought and sold.
Apply C. F. RAVENSCROFT, Secretary,
Southampton Buildings, High Holborn, W.C.

SULPHOLINE
SKIN LOTION.

Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches,
Entirely fade away.

MEDICAL GALVANISM

HAS CONQUERED some of the most obstinate complaints after all other remedies have failed.

HALE'S IMPROVED ELECTRIC BELTS and BATTERIES for wearing next the body without blistering or injuring the skin. These appliances are

PERFECT GENERATORS OF ELECTRICITY, and are most comfortable in wear. Price One Guinea.

RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, and GOUT are speedily REMOVED by this powerful Agent.

ELECTRIC BELT and SUSPENSOR, price 42s., for MEN, for VARICOCELE, Nervous Debility, and Exhaustion, Bladder Weakness, etc.

Pamphlets Gratis. Consultations Free.

HALE & SON, Medical Galvanists,
117, CHANCERY LANE, LONDON.

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY.

GARDENING FOR BEGINNERS.

By E. T. COOK.

THIRD EDITION.

Price 12s. 6d. nett.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20 Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, Ltd., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE KING'S MENU.

FILETS DE POISSON A LA VENITIENNE.

Soles, plaice, or whiting are nice like this. Fillet and trim the fish neatly, then roll up the fillets, tie them up, brush over with oiled butter, season with salt, white pepper, and a little lemon juice, lay them in a well-buttered baking-tin, cover with a buttered paper, and bake for rather under a quarter of an hour, or for small fillets ten minutes is enough. Before cooking the fillets make half a pint of stock from the bones and trimmings of the fish, a bouquet of herbs, a sliced onion, a clove, and three or four peppercorns, then thicken this with four ounces of white roux, made by cooking two tablespoonfuls of flour with two ounces of butter, and then, when this has boiled up well, stir in a gill of cream, a squeeze of lemon juice, and the well-beaten yolks of two eggs. Pour some of this sauce over the fillets of fish. After untying and arranging them in the dish they are to be served in in a circle, fill this with potato balls, pour the rest of the sauce over these, sprinkle with finely-minced parsley, and serve. For the potato balls peel half-a-dozen waxy potatoes, and with a vegetable scoop cut some round balls from them and boil these in milk and water till tender, but not broken. Tomato sauce is very nice with these potato balls and fish fillets, especially if a spoonful or two of claret or light white wine be added to the sauce.

CROQUETTES DE GIBIER.

Take a pound of cold game, free from skin, sinew, etc., and pass it twice through the mincing-machine, season it with a dust of pepper, and mix it with a full half pint of thick, well-reduced hot brown sauce, made with game stock and flavoured with mushrooms or truffle essence, a spoonful or two of red wine, and a teaspoonful of Lemco. Stir this well with the minced game, adding a little grated ham or tongue if these are at hand, then spread the mixture out on a dish till cold. Meantime prepare some thinly rolled puff paste, and also some very thin slices of cold boiled fat bacon. When the mixture is firm put a little of it on each slice of bacon (which must be thin as a wafer, mind, and should therefore be stood on ice before slicing to make it firm), then roll up, enclose in puff paste, brush this over with egg, dip in crushed vermicelli, and fry a crisp golden brown in plenty of smoking fat. Some people omit the bacon, and roll the mixture in a casing of puff pastry only, but in this case it is well to add some diced cold boiled fat of ham or bacon to the minced game before mixing it with the sauce. A boat of tomato sauce can accompany the rissoles to table, while if cold poultry takes the place of the game, celery sauce is nice. Any cold meat mixed with a suitable sauce can be used like this by adhering to these proportions.

EPONGE DE FRAMBOISES.

If fresh fruit is available, draw down sufficient raspberries in the preserving pan to yield a pint of juice, strain this and sweeten it with Glebe castor sugar, and return to the clean pan, together with three-quarters of an ounce of fine French leaf gelatine which has been previously dissolved in two tablespoonfuls of water. Stir over the fire altogether, taking care that the sugar is perfectly dissolved, then lift the pan off the fire, add a spoonful of fine brandy liqueur, syrup, or lemon juice, and when the mixture is nearly cold whisk in the stiffly-whipped whites of two eggs, and whisk it all together to a stiff sponge, then mould before it is quite firm in the usual way. A drop or two of carmine may be added to the juice, etc., when the pan is lifted off the fire, to make the sponge a pretty colour after the egg whites are added. Any fruit juice, fresh or bottled, can be used like this, and a popular and cheap summer sweet produced with very little trouble. Sometimes less gelatine is used, and then the sponge piled up in individual portions in those old-fashioned long-fluted wine glasses collectors of old glass search for so eagerly, or the sponge can be piled up roughly in a large dish. Either way, pipe or pile whipped cream, sweetened and suitably flavoured, on the top of the sponge.

A LITTLE DINNER.

CONSOMME.

FILETS DE POISSON A LA VENITIENNE.

CROQUETTES DE GIBIER.

PETITES CREMES AUX ABRICOTS.

CHOUX AU PARMESAN.

BOUCHEES AUX SARDINES.

CHOUX AU PARMESAN.

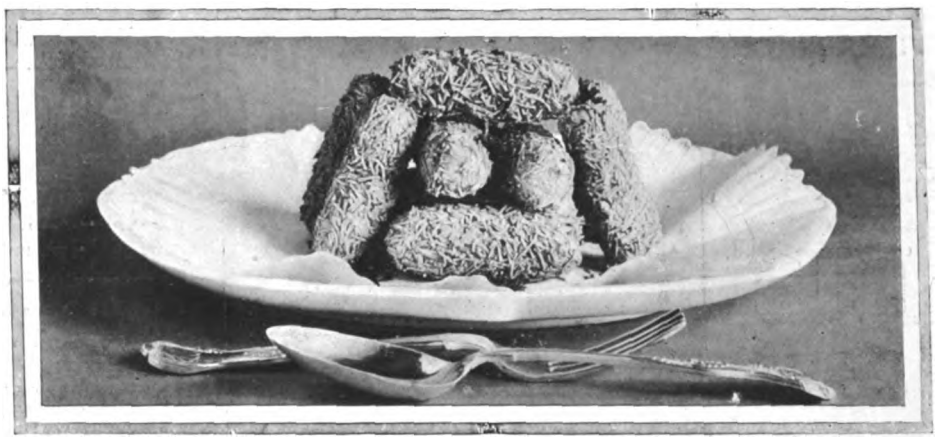
The choux for these can be bought ready-made from a confectioners, and then filled at home, or the choux themselves made at home, too, by the recipe given below. For the filling whip some cream very stiff, mixing with it some finely-grated Parmesan cheese and a seasoning of celery salt and coralline pepper, and when quite stiff pipe it with the choux. Brush over the tops of these with oiled butter, and sprinkle them with coralline pepper and finely-minced parsley before serving. The filling can be varied by whipping up a gill of cream and a Pomel cheese together, seasoning it, and then with a forcing bag and plain pipe filling the choux with the mixture. For the choux paste put four ounces of butter, two ounces of grated Parmesan, and half a pint of water into a stewpan together, and when they boil stir in quickly five ounces of fine dry flour. Stir well together and cook the mixture for a few minutes on the side of the stove. Now lift it off, let it cool, then work in one by one three whole eggs, being careful to mix each egg in thoroughly before adding the next. Now with a forcing bag and plain pipe force out the mixture on to a lightly-buttered baking sheet, forcing out the paste either into long strips about 3-in. long, as for eclairs, or else into little balls about the size of a walnut, then bake in a moderate oven. Anchovy-flavoured whipped cream can be used instead of the cheese-flavoured one given to-day with this same cheese-flavoured choux paste.



CROQUETTES DE GIBIER.

(Specially prepared and photographed for this paper.)

BOUCHEES AUX SARDINES.

Wash, dry, and bone some sardines, sprinkle them with freshly ground black pepper, salt, and Marshall's Tarragon vinegar, and let them marinade for an hour or two. Now pound part of them with an equal weight of Cheddar cheese, and spread with this some very light croûtons of cheese pastry. Arrange fillets of the rest of the seasoned sardines on the top, and garnish with a little chervil and the yolk and white respectively of a hard-boiled egg rubbed through a fine wire sieve. If preferred hot, the cheese and sardine purée can be heated up carefully au bain-marie, and spread on the pastry croûtons while these are still hot, then the fillets also heated up between two plates in the oven and the rest of the garnish added just before serving.

NOTES AND NEWS.

It is rare in English commercial records to find that it was a woman who laid the foundations of a great manufacturing house. Such, however, was the case with the firm of E. Lazenby and Son, which, considerably over a hundred years ago, was founded by Elizabeth Lazenby, the maker of the original Lazenby's Harvey Sauce, every bottle of which sold to-day still bears the familiar signature, "Elizabeth Lazenby." Thus it was that she became the founder of one of the largest and most successful businesses of its kind in the world, and the pioneer of a new trade, for up till then the universal custom had been for each individual housewife to make, at an infinite expenditure of time and labour, and very uncertain results, her own cruet sauces, pickles, and store cupboard dainties in general.

One finds one's self wishing that Elizabeth Lazenby could see the huge warehouses and factories her descendants have found it necessary to build in Trinity Street, Southwark, Crimscott Street, Bermondsey, Cole Street, Globe Street, and Fort Street, S.E., to enable them to cope with the immense business, typically British in magnitude and stability, which by skill, enterprise, and straight dealing, they have built up.

To tell of all that is produced in the factories and stored in the warehouses would be impossible in the space at my disposal to-day, so I must content myself with saying that E. Lazenby and Son are amongst our largest manufacturers of soups, soup squares, potted meats, and fish, jellies, pickles, condiments, and sauces, including, of course, the Lazenby's Harvey Sauce, and latterly one which is running this a close second in public favour, namely, the creamy, delicious Chet Sauce, which is the best of relishes with cold meat as well as with chops and steaks. Then the Lazenby firm is also amongst the largest importers of salad oil, olives, capers, honey, sardines, fresh salmon, lobster, and fruits.

Finally, I must not omit to mention the famous lemon squash, prepared from fresh lemons only, and the most refreshing and delicious of summer beverages. This, like all the other specialities of the firm, is not only procurable all over the United Kingdom, but is exported direct by the firm to South Africa and Canada, and through shippers to India, China, and Japan, the West Coast of Africa, Australia, New Zealand, and South America, so that every English exile can supplement native cooks' deficiencies by the Lazenby table delicacies, prepared and packed under unimpeachable conditions.

Should there be difficulty in procuring them, however, either at home or abroad, a letter to the firm's offices, 18, Trinity Square, London, S.E., will get this rectified if the name and address of one's local stores be given.

SYBARITE.

Digitized by Google

MEDICAL men all over the country are rapidly becoming acquainted with the medicinal qualities of the high-class dry Cyders of Whimple, with the result that they are not only using these Cyders personally, but are constantly prescribing them in a variety of cases subject to dietic treatment.

It is a proved fact that regular consumers of Cyder are exempt from many distressing maladies, such as stone and gravel. Cyder is also an effective remedy for gout and rheumatism.

Not only the phosphorus, but the acids of the apple are of singular use for persons of sedentary habits, whose livers are apt to be slow of action. These acids aid the liver in its work of eliminating from the body the noxious matter which makes the brain heavy and dull, and causes rheumatism and other kindred ailments.

The Uses of Cyder:

(a) as a health giver.

(b) as a delicious beverage.

If you would drink Devonshire's Delicious Drink at its very best—if you would realise to the full what a really enjoyable drink Cyder is—you should procure only that brand which comes from the presses of Messrs. Whiteway & Co.

Whiteway's Cyders are made only of the pure juice from the finest English apples, and are absolutely free from chemical preservatives.

Write for Booklet, Price List, etc., to WHITEWAY, WHIMPLE, DEVON; or 22 and 23, ALBERT EMBANKMENT, LONDON, S.W.

Henry Whiteway & Co., Ltd.

DURING THE CHANGEABLE WEATHER

BEETHAM'S LAROLA REG.

Will PRESERVE the SKIN from the effects of the SUN and WINDS, also counteract the effects of HARD WATER, Entirely Removing all ROUGHNESS, REDNESS, IRRITATION, and TAN,

KEEPING THE SKIN SOFT, SMOOTH AND WHITE IN ALL WEATHERS.

DELIGHTFULLY SOOTHING AND REFRESHING.

INVALUABLE for the COMPLEXION.

Bottles, 1/-, 1/9, and 2/6 each. Of all Chemists and Stores.

M. BEETHAM & SON, CHELTENHAM.

7/10ths of ALL

Your little ills will find relief in

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

For HEADACHE,
For BILIOUSNESS,
For INDIGESTION,
For TORPID LIVER,
For CONSTIPATION,
For SALLOW SKIN,
For the COMPLEXION.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

Very small, and easy to take as sugar.

Purely Vegetable.

Genuine must have signature

PRICE 13½d.

Brent Good

Preserve your Teeth!

BY USING FRAGRANT FLORILINE

FLORILINE TOOTH-POWDER.

For use with or without FLORILINE.

1/- per large Jar.

It imparts a

FRAGRANCE TO THE BREATH

that is rare and delightful.

IT PREVENTS ALL TARTAR and COMPLETELY ARRESTS DECAY.

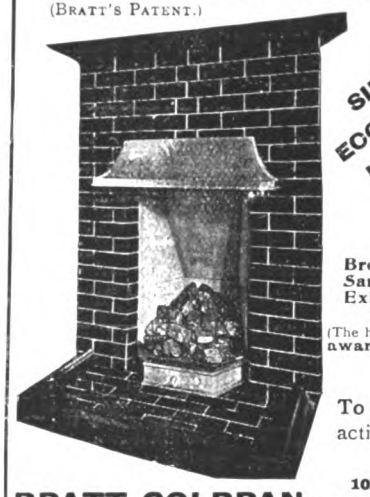
IS THE CHOICEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.

PRICE Per bottle 2/6 in case.

SOLD EVERYWHERE. THE ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO., Ltd., Proprietors. 33, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

THE "HEAPED" FIRE

(BRATT'S PATENT.)



SIMPLE, ECONOMICAL LABOR SAVING.

Bronze Medal Sanitary Exhibition. 1905.

(The highest and only award given to Fire Grates.)

To be seen in action at . . .

BRATT, COLBRAN & CO., 10, MORTIMER STREET, LONDON, W.

DELICIOUS COFFEE

RED WHITE & BLUE

For Breakfast & after Dinner.

ECONOMY HEALTH PURITY

NO BEETROOT USED.

"GLEBE"

REFINED GENUINE

CANE SUGAR AND CANE GOLDEN SYRUP

GLEBE SUGAR REFINING CO., Greenock, Glasgow, and St. George's House, Eastcheap, London.

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

In our issue of last week it was stated that the casket in which the Freedom of the City of Worcester was enclosed on the occasion of its presentation to Sir Edward Elgar, was designed and executed by L. Cassadis and Co. of Worcester. The correct description of the firm is J. W. Cassidy (late George Birley and Co.), 64, High Street, Worcester.

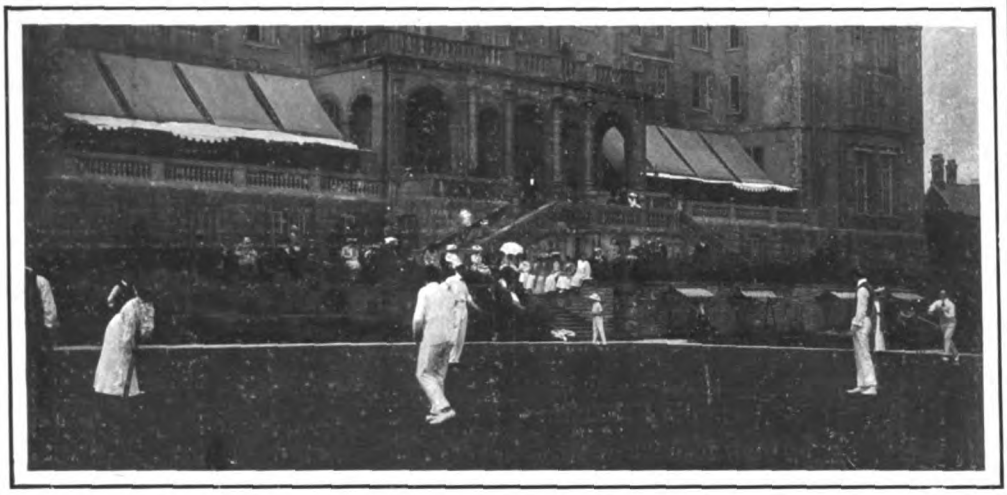
Albemarle Street has played an important part in the history of London club-land. Some of the more ancient houses have been successively the scene of five or six ventures of the kind, and it was in one of the Albemarle Street clubs, now extinct, that Thomas Knox Holmes pinned up the despatch which gave the Rothschilds the news of Waterloo. No. 7 is still the site of the Thames Yacht Club, and immediately opposite the amalgamation of two fine old L-shaped early Georgian mansions affords ample accommodation for the Junior Conservative Club, which was founded in 1889 as the successor of another club—the American. The Junior Conservative Club finds favour in the eyes both of the Church Militant and the Army, and its numerical strength exceeds 3,500. The committee is a strong one, and the present popular secretary, Mr. F. Balfour Lees, is fast bringing all the arrangements up-to-date. The new smoking-room is exceedingly comfortable, and both the chef and steward are thoroughly capable. Other improvements are talked of. The subscription for town members is only four guineas, and that for country members two guineas. It has, moreover, the advantage of possessing numerous bedrooms, and being literally only a dozen paces from both Piccadilly and St. James's Street.

The General Steam Navigation boats are not running beyond Margate now, the season being practically at an end, and the last trip will take place on Monday next. The company's services to the Continent and the North of Scotland have been very popular this summer, and the combined tours in the Pyrenees, Algeria, the Ardennes, Scotland, and Scandinavia, by steamer, rail, and coach, have introduced large numbers of people to these beautiful resorts. An admirably produced guide-book, containing full particulars, may be obtained at the offices, 55, Great Tower Street.

Mr. B. W. Findon is about to publish a short history of the Playgoers' Club.

The 342nd performance of "The Walls of Jericho" takes place at the Garrick Theatre this week, and Mr. and Mrs. Bourchier will resume their original parts of Jack Frobisher and Lady Alethea respectively. Matinées of this play will be continued on Saturday as well as Wednesday afternoons.

The latest issue of the Jaeger Bulletin is as interesting as the first number, and contains an amusing interview with Mr. Bernard Shaw. Jaeger Pure Wool Wear is a favourite with Mr. Shaw, as with many other people, but the Jaeger trade mark should be looked for on all goods. Like everything successful, the Jaeger goods have been unscrupulously imitated all over the country.



LADIES' CRICKET AT THE EMPIRE HOTEL, BUXTON. Copyright.

The spas of England are not perhaps so well patronised as they might be, but at Buxton, with its numerous handsome hotels, the season of 1905 is proving a very popular one.

Without doubt an increasingly large number of people who, during the months of August and September, by their doctors' instructions, undergo a "cure," instead of wending their way to one or other of the Continental spas now patronise those of their own country. Buxton, that most beautiful spa, set in the heart of the Derbyshire vales, is this year enjoying one of the most successful seasons it has experienced for some time; everything is favourable, the weather is good, and there is no lack of suitable amusement and recreation provided by the authorities controlling the delightful Pavilion Gardens, the Opera House, and the Golf Course, the latter, by the way, one of the finest in the North of England. Croquet, tennis, and golf tournaments have all been in full swing.

The newly-discovered Murillo, entitled "Christ Healing the Paralytic," has been engraved, and is being published by Messrs. William Doig of 174, New Bond Street. The original picture drew lovers of Murillo's works from all parts of the world whilst it was exhibited at their gallery, and, on account of its importance and religious significance, the picture is to be exhibited throughout England, and is now on exhibition at Eastbourne.

The Tivoli this week celebrates its fourteenth anniversary, and a magnificent programme, comprising practically every music hall star in Great Britain, will be presented. At the Alhambra there is also a very strong programme just now, and the Urbanora pictures of an ascent of the Wetterhorn are among the most marvellous productions the biograph has yet given us. Mlle. Anne Dancrey, in "Maxixe," continues to arouse great enthusiasm each evening.

On June 30 last the West Indian mail contract lapsed, and the West Indies for the first time since 1842 became dependent for its mails on chance communication. The Royal Mail Steam Packet Company has, however, stood by the Colonies, and has, since the termination of the subsidy, maintained the service practically as before without any subsidy from His Majesty's Government, and the chairman and court of directors have now determined to extend their line to New York by re-establishing the company's passenger service connecting the West Indies with New York. This means that passengers will now be able to take passage for this interesting voyage by a first-class British liner, while passengers for the United States during the winter months can, if they so desire, avoid the rigours of a North Atlantic voyage and travel to their destination through the sunny seas of the West Indies, a route which will no doubt appeal to some.

Amusements.

HIS MAJESTY'S. Mr. TREE.
Every Evening at 8.
Charles Dickens's
OLIVER TWIST.
Dramatised by J. Comyns Carr.
Fagin ... ... ... Mr. Tree.
Nancy ... .. ... Miss Constance Collier.
Matinees To-day (Saturday), Sept. 16th, Wednesday Sept. 20th, and Saturday, Sept. 30th, at 2.15.

CRITERION THEATRE, W.
Sole Lessee: Sir Charles Wyndham.
Manager: Mr. Frank Curzon.
Every Evening at 8.30,
Mr. Frank Curzon's Company in
THE WHITE CHRYSANTHEMUM,
A new Lyrical Comedy. Written by Leedham Bantock and Arthur Anderson. Music by Howard Talbot. Mesdames Marie George, Millie Legarde, Isabel Jay, etc. Messrs. Rutland Barrington, Lawrence Grossmith, M. R. Morand, Henry A. Lytton, etc. Matinee every Saturday at 2.30.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: Sir Charles Wyndham.
Sole Lessee and Manager: Mr. Frank Curzon.
At 8.50,
WHAT THE BUTLER SAW.
Preceded by Mr. Chas. Bertram at 8 20.
Matinee Every Wednesday and Saturday at 3
Box Office now open. Telephone 4028 Gerrard.

DALY'S THEATRE.
Produced by Mr. George Edwardes.
To-night and Every Evening at 8.15.
Matinee Every Saturday at 2.30.
THE LITTLE MICHUS.
By A. Vanloo and G. Duval. Music by Andre Messager.
Adapted for the English stage by Henry Hamilton.
Lyrics by Percy Greenbank.
Mlle. ADELINE GENEE in a NEW DANCE.
Box Office 10 to 10.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. Frank Curzon.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
To-night at 8.15,
LADY MADCAP.
Matinee Every Wednesday at 2.15.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. Frederick Harrison.
Every Evening, at 9.10.
ON THE LOVE PATH.
A Comedy in Three Acts by C. M. S. McLellan.
Miss Ellis Jeffreys and Mr. Gerald Du Maurier.
Mr. Arthur Williams, Mr. Eric Lewis, Mr. A. E Matthews, Mr. Edmund Maurice, and Miss Jessie Bateman.
Preceded at 8.30 by a Comedy in one Act, called
A PRIVY COUNCIL.
Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.
Box Office now open 10 to 7. Tel. 2933 Gerrard.

GARRICK THEATRE.
Mr. Arthur Bourchier, Lessee and Manager.
Every Evening at 8.30,
THE WALLS OF JERICHO.
By Alfred Sutro.
Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.

APOLLO THEATRE.
Henry Lowenfeld, Sole Proprietor.
Tom B. Davis, Lessee and Manager.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
Every Evening at 8.15.
"VERONIQUE."
Matinee every Wednesday at 2. Last Weeks.

PROMENADE CONCERTS. — QUEEN'S HALL.
To-Night and Nightly at 8.
QUEEN'S HALL ORCHESTRA.
Conductor: Mr. Henry J. Wood
1/- to 5/-. Usual Agents, Chappell's Box Office, Queen's Hall, and Queen's Hall Orchestra (Ltd.), 320, Regent Street.
Robert Newman, Manager.

NAVAL, SHIPPING, AND FISHERIES EXHIBITION, EARL'S COURT.
11 a.m. to 10.30 p.m. Admission 1s.
Naval Construction, Armaments, Shipping & Fisheries.
NELSON'S CENTENARY RELICS.
FISHING VILLAGE. Working Exhibits. Model of "Victory."
GRAND NAVAL AND MILITARY CONCERTS WITH THE FLEET.
GO ON BOARD THE FULL-SIZE CRUISER.
THE SUCCESS OF THE SEASON.
Real Batteries of 4.7 Guns, Hotchkiss and Maxims. The Cruiser is manned by a crew of 150 Handy-men.
BATTLE OF TRAFALGAR.
"Our Navy." Captive Flying Machine. Great Red Indian Village. Voyage in a Submarine. Haunted Cabin. Famous Sea Fights. De Rohan Theatre. Tillikum Canoe, and many other attractions.

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Mr. E. E. Micholls, J.P. | 781 |
| The March of Events | 782 |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 788 |
| On the Links | 790 |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 795 |
| The Parisians of Paris—Clients and Saleswomen | 796 |
| The Church Dispute in Scotland. By Oliphant Smeaton, M.A., F.S.A. | 798 |
| Royal Reviews in Scotland | 805 |
| The Traveller—Some Northern Health Resorts | 806 |
| Under the Burgee | 808 |
| The Doncaster Week | 809 |
| Letters of a Playgoer to a Friend in the Country | 810 |
| Popular Singers at Home—No. XIX.—Miss Carmen Hill | vii. |
| Literary Notes | viii. |
| Leaves from a Collector's Note-book—No. LIX.—The Influence of William Billingsley and Thomas Pardoe of Derby on the "Potting" of South Wales | x. |
| Motoring Notes | xii. |
| Fashions of To-day and To-morrow | xiv. |
| The King's Menu | xviii. |
| Here, There, and Everywhere | xx. |

TO LIBRARIES, CLUBS, HOTELS, Etc.

A Reading Case for THE KING can be had post free on application to the Publishers, George Newnes, Limited, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.

HOTELS.

ENGLISH HOTELS.

TORQUAY (Population 33,625).—PREMIER HEALTH RESORT. Unrivalled climate. Warm in winter. Sunshine-land. Charming drives and sheltered walks. 120 acres of public gardens. Piers.

TORQUAY. Irreproachable water supply and perfect sanitation. Theatre, concerts, and other musical attractions. Medicated baths of all kinds. Express trains from all parts.

For Illustrated Descriptive Books of Torquay, apply FREDK. S. HEX, Town Clerk.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

De Vere Hotel, from 10/6 per day. 'Phone 524.
Broadwalk Hotel, from 8/6 per day. ,, 858.
Prince of Wales' Hotel, from 10/6 per day. ,, 641. Kensington.

Electric Light. Lifts. Everything up to date. First-class cuisine.

BOURNEMOUTH HYDRO.

Sunny Site. Overlooking Sea. Every Bath. Ideal Residence

EASTBOURNE.

THE HYDRO HOTEL.—A select Residential Hotel on South Coast, 120ft. above sea level. Large gardens, close to the sea. Tennis. Croquet. Bowling Green. Spacious Lounges and Public Rooms. 70 Bedrooms, also Suites, luxuriously furnished, electric light throughout. High-class cuisine. Table d'Hôte or à la Carte. Separate tables. Lift. Billiards. Private 'Bus. Nearest to schools and Links. Close to Parades. Week End terms. Motor Garage with repairing Pits. Lit by Electric Light. For inclusive Tariff (Illustrated), also Programme of Amusements, address—O. F. BERGANN, Manager. Telegraphic Address. "Hydrotel, Eastbourne." Telephone, No. 143, Eastbourne. The new Turkish Baths are now open.

FOREIGN HOTELS.

BIARRITZ.

GRAND HOTEL.—Winter Season.—First-class establishment. Splendid situation, facing the sea. Patronised by the elité; rendezvous of English Society. Every comfort; excellent attendance and cooking.—MONTENAT, Manager.

AXENSTEIN (Lake Lucerne; 2,350ft. above sea level; electric railway Brunnen-Axenstein).—First-class Hotel. World-renowned climatic health resort; patronised by English society. "Axenstein is the loveliest spot I met with on my journey through Switzerland."—QUEEN VICTORIA.

TENERIFFE

HAS THE FINEST WINTER CLIMATE IN THE WORLD.

THE First-class HOTELS there are
the QUISISANA at Santa Cruz,
the AGUERE and CONTINENTAL at La Laguna, and
the MARTIANEZ (late Grand) at Port Orotava.
All under the Management of C. H. TRENKEL. Prospectus, etc., on application.

SHIPPING.

MOROCCO, CANARY ISLANDS, and MADEIRA LINE OF STEAMERS; 24 days for 20 guineas.—For particulars write Messrs. FORWOOD BROS., 46, St. Mary Axe, E.C.

Patronised by H.M. The King.

DOVERCOURT BAY, ESSEX,

HOTEL ALEXANDRA.

The Finest Health and Pleasure Resort on the East Coast. Delightful Climate. Bracing Air. The Hotel, which has recently been visited by H.M. KING, is luxuriously Furnished. Charming Situation. Facing the Sea. Electric Light. Excellent Cuisine. Tennis, Croquet. Motor Garage and Pit. 1 hour 40 minutes express from London.

For Illustrated Tariff, apply A. H. THIEM, Proprietor.

Preserve your Teeth!

BY USING

FRAGRANT

FLORILINE

It imparts a

FRAGRANCE TO THE BREATH

that is rare and delightful,

IT PREVENTS ALL TARTAR and COMPLETELY ARRESTS DECAY.

IS THE CHOICEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.

PRICE Per bottle 2/6 in case.

SOLD EVERYWHERE. THE ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO., Ltd., Proprietors.
33, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

FLORILINE TOOTH-POWDER.

For use with or without FLORILINE.

1/- per large Jar.

OONNOISSEURS SMOKE

TEOFANI'S

HIGH-CLASS

CIGARETTES.

TEOFANI'S Cigarettes receive the Highest Awards at all International Exhibitions, and are Sold by Leading Purveyors throughout the WORLD.

TEOFANI & CO., LONDON.

No Breakfast Table complete without

EPPS'S

The Cream of Cocoas.

COCOA

The Most Nutritious and Economical.

NATIONAL PROVIDENT

Estd. INSTITUTION [1835.

For Mutual Life Assurance.

Accumulated Fund over £5,900,000.
Paid in Claims ... £12,250,000.

Profits: These are divided every five years solely amongst the Assured; already divided to 1902, £6,160,000.

Endowment-Assurance Policies are issued, combining Life Assurance at minimum cost, with provision for old age, and are singularly advantageous.

48, GRACECHURCH STREET, LONDON, E.C.

APPLICATIONS FOR AGENCIES INVITED.

"Contains all the constituents to support life."
—THE LANCET.

PLASMON

RUSKS,

GINGER,

SPORTING,

DIABETIC,

AND

WHOLEMEAL BISCUITS.

All Grocers and Stores.

HEREFORD.

THE CENTRE OF THE LOVELY WYE VALLEY

SENT FREE.

An artistic Booklet containing a series of views and descriptive matter of this delightful country and district.

Apply TOWN CLERK'S Office.

SULPHOLINE

SKIN LOTION.

Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, Entirely fade away.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

THE COLONEL TAKES THE 19TH (W/HOLE IN ONE!

Head Office: 11, SO. EXCHANGE PLACE, GLASGOW.

J. H. ROGER PROPR.

LESSEE OF

H.M. CUSTOMS (No. 15) BOND, JAMES WATT STREET, GLASGOW.

Special Quotations to Golf Clubs.

"COLONEL BOGEY" WHISKY.

GUARANTEED 7 YEARS OLD.

42/- PER DOZEN. CARRIAGE PAID.

THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.

Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS of every description, including TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT. MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.

Handsome Public Rooms, including 2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel. Telephone 56.

Terms from MANAGER.

CLEVEDON (Somerset).

SEASIDE HYDRO HOTEL.

Holiday, Health, and Pleasure Resort. Near Golf Links and Pier. Good centre for excursions by road, rail, or sea. Resident Physician. Fine Baths. Liberal Table.

SECRETARY, Hydro, Clevedon, Somerset.

LELANT, ST. IVES BAY, CORNWALL (close to golf links and station).—Furnished HOUSE, with plate and linen, to LET for Summer months; two large sitting rooms, six bedrooms, one dressing room, bathroom.—"T.B.H.," "Evelyns," Uxbridge.

SOUTHWOLD (best position on the Common; close to Golf Links).—To be LET, well Furnished, for September, the pretty and artistic HOUSE known as "Link's Cottage," containing square hall, two sitting and large recreation rooms, servants' sitting room, seven bedrooms (fourteen beds), bath-room; electric light and telephone.—Apply to Mrs. ROBINSON, on Property.

ON THE BOURNEMOUTH LINKS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations. High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hôte, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.

THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.

THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.

A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.

Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads. Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.

Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.

Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.

New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare, Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,

Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.

To be obtained from Thos. Cook, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON.

Telephone, 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade and commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.

Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors.

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL

SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.

Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.

Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill.

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau, 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 3os. Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address: "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY,

Within easy access of London.

THE BUSH HOTEL.

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers, inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 1s. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable, being on sand.

DEVONSHIRE'S DELIGHTFUL DRINK.—The very best beverage for GOLFERS is WHITEWAY'S PURE CYDER. Refreshing, cooling, and a panacea for Gout, Rheumatism, and Obesity. Booklets free from WHITEWAY'S, The Orchards, Whimple, Devon, and 22 and 23, Albert Embankment, S.W. Telephone 173 Hop.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

WULOAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E.

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer).

"'Is it a Private House or an Hotel?' is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels."

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGERESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29. Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

1, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

WANTED, on long Lease, about 200 ACRES of LAND, on sea coast, suitable for golf links.—Apply, with full particulars, "B. A.," c/o THE KING Office, 12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. Cox, New Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL.—Brinklea, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library, Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052.

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class. |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned, from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains.

ON BLUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY.

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.
Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Booklet and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

ZÜRICH.—DOLDER GRAND HOTEL, First-class English frequented house in extensive well-wooded grounds, 2,000ft. above sea level. Golf links in front of the hotel; tennis; motoring centre. Electric Tram and funicular service with Zürich Central Station (25 min.). Electro-magnetic therapeutical treatment (E. K. Muller's method).—Manager, E. DIELMANN.

SHERINGHAM, NORFOLK.

THE SHERINGHAM HOTEL,

ADJOINING GOLF LINKS (18 HOLES).

LARGEST HOTEL IN SHERINGHAM. Open all the year round. Handsome Dining Hall, 67ft. long. Numerous spacious Suites of Rooms commanding beautiful Sea and Land Views. Billiard and Smoking Rooms. Excellent and Improved Sanitary arrangements. Extensive Private Grounds. Lawn tennis, croquet. First-class Stables. Accommodation for Motors and Cycles. Through Trains from King's Cross, Peterborough, Birmingham, Leicester, etc.

Telegrams—"Sheringham Hotel, Sheringham."

National Telephone: No. 3. F. EDENS, Manager.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.
Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.
Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & Co.
Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.
MODERATE TARIFF.
Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months.
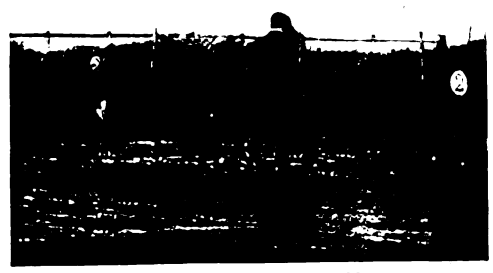
Perfect Sanitary arrangements.
Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year
Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel.—Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors, EMMERSON & HARRIS.



THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE

Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit.
Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE."
National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL.

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms.

Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

Digitized by Google

KELWAY'S PÆONIES

Of all cultivated flowers the Pæonies undoubtedly occupy the premier position as the gayest and most brilliant of border plants. They are, moreover, of an extremely hardy nature. Where the garden is situated matters little, Kelway's Pæonies may be relied upon to yield a glorious wealth of blossom.

HERBACEOUS BORDERS.

The Langport plan for Borders and Beds ensures a brilliant display of colour throughout the greater part of the year, and obviates barren patches in flower beds. Border "A," composed of a selection of showy, hardy, and easily grown perennials (see "Kelway's Manual of Horticulture, p. 18), and measuring 15oft. by 10ft., costs £13 13s.; other sizes at proportionate prices.

To obtain the best results for 1906, post your enquiries and instructions at once.

NOW IS THE TIME TO PLANT

Kelway's lovely new Pæonies, Delphiniums, Pyrethrums, Phloxes, Gaillardias, Roses, Carnations, Campanulas, Violets, Christmas and Lenten Roses, etc., etc.

GOLD MEDAL, St. Louis, 1904; GOLD MEDALS, London, Paris, and Chicago for improvements in old-fashioned flowers.

Carriage and package free for remittance with order.

KELWAY & SON,
THE ROYAL HORTICULTURISTS,
LANGPORT, SOMERSET.

THRESHER & GLENNY,

BY SPECIAL APPOINTMENT TO
THEIR MAJESTIES THE KING AND QUEEN AND H.R.H. THE PRINCESS OF WALES.

MILITARY AND SPORTING TAILORS AND GENERAL OUTFITTERS.

Clothing, Leather Goods & Furniture
Of every description for Travellers at Home and Abroad.

Camp Requisites for Sporting Expeditions.
ACTIVE SERVICE KITS.

Tents on view erected and all requisites for Military and Sporting Camp use.
Experienced Packers attend customer's residence.

WRITE FOR INFORMATION RESPECTING NECESSARIES FOR ALL PURPOSES.
ESTIMATES AND ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES TO

THRESHER & GLENNY,
152 & 153, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

42/-

CHARLES LEE & SON,

Specialist Ladies' Outfitters,
98 & 100, WIGMORE STREET
(ONLY ADDRESS).

CAUTION.—Messrs. Lee & Son have no branches, and warn the public against imitations of their goods.

An example in Finest Quality English Crêpe de Chine, with Valenciennes Lace Yoke and Guipure Points, 42/-.
A Blouse suitable for any figure.

POST ORDERS.—The Lady's Pictorial states:—"If you live in the country, have an account with Lee & Son, Wigmore Street; they send the choicest selection of goods by post, while they are cheap for the best Costumiers, Furriers, Lacemen, Specialists in Trousseaus, The Leewig Petticoat, Royal Crescent Veil, Hosiers, Glovers, Milliners, etc.

CHARLES LEE & SON.
WIGMORE STREET.

ST. JACOBS OIL

CURES

LUMBAGO, SCIATICA,

RHEUMATISM,

Neuralgia | Soreness
Bruises | Stiffness

And Bodily Aches and Pains.

In 1/1½ and 2/6 sizes.
Of all Chemists.

CONQUERS PAIN!

Digitized by Google

THE CHURCH DISPUTE IN SCOTLAND.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 451. SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 23rd, 1905. PRICE 6d.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

MR. E. E. MICHOLLS, J.P.

Prospective Conservative Candidate for the Monmouth Boroughs. (After the portrait by Sir W. B. Richmond, R.A., exhibited in the Royal Academy of 1904.)

(See page 795.)

Digitized by Google

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 451. Saturday, Sept. 23, 1905.

Editorial Offices—20, TAVISTOCK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephones—No. 2,748 GERRARD, AND 7,961 CENTRAL.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

THE KING IN THE NORTH.—From Rufford Abbey, where he spent a most enjoyable time, despite one or two days' bad weather, the King went on Monday to Edinburgh, reviewed the Volunteers, and proceeded thence to Glenquoich, where he spends the remainder of the week as the guest of Lord Burton. One incident in the journey to Edinburgh recalls a story that used to be told of Queen Victoria. The Royal train was put into a siding for a little time, as the King did not wish to arrive in Edinburgh too early, and for a similar reason Queen Victoria once had her train taken off the main line, and kept waiting. Two platelayers were walking down past the Royal special, and one remarked to the other, "They do say as the Queen be in that train." "Really now," was the reply. "And what be they a-doin', keepin' her waitin' in a sidin' for a durned express? I reckon some folks do want manners taught 'em." At Glenquoich the King has had some deer-stalking, and the sport this season being good, it is reasonable to hope that he will have had better luck than last year, which was not a good one, even for the Prince of Wales, who can hit most things that fly or run. The King will stay in Scotland for about three weeks.

THE QUEEN IN COPENHAGEN.—There is a remarkable gathering of European Royalties in the Danish capital just now, and the most noteworthy fact about the matter is that it is quite a family party. The King of Greece, Queen Alexandra, the Dowager Empress of Russia, the Grand Duke Michael, the Duke and Duchess of Cumberland, and Prince William of Schaumberg-Lippe (who is expected this week), have all gathered at the castle of Bernstorff. and the festivites which should have marked King Christian's birthday earlier in the year are taking place now. Among all these Royalties one might suppose that the Court Chamberlains would get slightly mixed in the order of precedence; but there is not likely to be a repetition of an incident that once marked a family gathering in the early history of Denmark. A chieftain of some note was invited to the wedding feast of his brother, and having some distance to go, arrived late, and was accommodated with a side seat. A cousin, sitting near him, remarked that he seemed to have been left out in the cold. The chieftain glared at the speaker for a moment, and then thundered, "Where I am, there is the head of the table!"

THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT'S TRAVELS.—One is accustomed to thinking of the members of our Royal Family as great travellers, but the amount of railway and motor-car journeys the Duke of Connaught has accomplished during the last two months must constitute something like a record. He is to extend his travels shortly, and at the end of this week arrives in Guernsey on a three days' visit to inspect the forces and defences there, and to unveil a memorial to the Guernsey men who fell in the Boer War. And immediately afterwards he will leave for South Africa to spend some three months' touring Cape Colony, Natal, the Orange River Colony, and the Transvaal. This will be the first official visit paid to the new colonies by a Prince of the Blood, though Prince Arthur of Connaught was out there for some time with his regiment. The Cape was not visited by King Edward when Prince of Wales, and only a very short visit was paid by the Duke of Clarence and Prince George of Wales (as he then was) during the cruise of the "Bacchante." The Duke of Connaught will be accompanied by the Duchess and Princess Patricia, and the voyage to the Cape and back will be made in a war-ship. In the course of his travels, one wonders if the Duke will come across the old Boer woman who retains such kindly memories of poor Prince Christian Victor. When her house was occupied by the British forces the Prince insisted on getting her a chair, and, taking her little grand-daughter on his knee, tried to get the mite to say "God Save the Queen." "No; never!" exclaimed the child. "He may save her if He likes; but I won't ask Him to, not for anybody."

Copyright.

THE KING AT DONCASTER.

Last week the King was in Yorkshire, staying at Rufford Abbey as the guest of Lord and Lady Savile. In addition to attending the race-meeting, he went for motor-car excursions in the neighbourhood, visiting Belvoir among other places.

M. LOUBET AND THE PENINSULA.—Next month the round of Royal and Presidential visits which has been preparing during the summer will begin with M. Loubet's departure for Spain and Portugal. The President of the French Republic is one of those men who always succeed in making friends, and King Carlos, musician, painter, and poet, as well as many other things, has so many tastes in common with M. Loubet that the pleasure King Carlos has said it will give him to see the President in Portugal is by no means merely "official." In Spain M. Loubet is also much liked, but it is to be hoped that King Alfonso will not be wanting to take his guest on any of those wonderful motor jaunts which are keeping his Ministers and his well-wishers in a continual state of fear lest something serious should happen. We are so accustomed to connecting the King of Spain with automobilism now that it seems strange to think that only a year ago we should have been writing in these columns about the interdict that his mother and his advisers had put upon the King's use of his first motor. Much dust has been blown up from the roads of Spain since then.

Digitized by Google

THE ROYAL REVIEW IN SCOTLAND.

Illustrations Bureau.

THE ARRIVAL OF THE ROYAL ARCHERS.

The third Royal Review of the Scottish Volunteer Forces was held by King Edward on Monday at Holyrood. The illustration shows the Royal Company of Archers, the King's Bodyguard in Scotland, marching to their station in front of the central pavilion, led by the Duke of Buccleuch.

Illustrations Bureau.

AFTER THE MARCH PAST AT THE EDINBURGH REVIEW.

The King and the Duke of Connaught leaving the parade-ground on their way back to Holyrood Palace. The King afterwards left for Glenquoich, where he is now staying as the guest of Lord and Lady Burton.

Digitized by Google

THE MARCH OF EVENTS.

(1) Miss N. E. Coote, winner of the Irish Gold Medal in this year's Croquet Tournament. (2) The presentation of the Freedom of the City of Worcester to Sir Edward Elgar. (3) The South of England Tennis Tournament. Miss Green. (4) Miss Boothby. (5) Miss Brown. (6) The opening match of the New Zealanders' tour. The game against Devon, won by the New Zealand XV. by 55 points to 4. (7) Miss Daniells, a competitor at the South of England Tennis Tournament.

(From photographs by Rouch, Bennett, Worcester, Hawkins, and Briach.)

Digitized by Google

THE MARCH OF EVENTS.

(1) The launch of the Italian battle-ship "Napoli." The "Napoli" was launched at Castellamare last week, the religious ceremony being led by the Archbishop of Castellamare, and the naming ceremony being performed by the Duchess of Aosta, who is shown in the above illustration talking to Vice-Admiral Mirabello, Minister of Marine. There were some 15,000 spectators. (2) The presentation to the cruiser "Hampshire." Last week Lady Curzon-Howe presented a replica of King Arthur's Table, which has been subscribed for by the ladies of Hampshire, to the armoured cruiser of that name. A large silver bowl was also presented to the ward-room mess at a luncheon given by the officers to Lady Curzon-Howe and the ladies' committee interested in the presentation. (3) The wedding of Lieutenant Herbert Hope, R.N., and Miss Kewley. On Saturday last a Naval wedding took place at Tunbridge Wells, the ceremony taking place at St. Mark's Church. The church path was lined by twenty-five petty officers, and they drew the bridal carriage from church to Oakleigh, thence again to the railway station. There were seven bridesmaids and two pages, who were dressed in sailor costume, with hat ribbons of H.M.S. "Excellent," to which establishment the bridegroom is attached.

(From photographs by Abéniacar, Gale and Polden, and Lankaster.)

Digitized by Google

THE CAVALRY MANŒUVRES

Knight, Aldershot.

SCENES IN BERKSHIRE DURING LAST WEEK'S OPERATIONS.

(1) General Sir John French Commanding-in-Chief. (2) The Duke of Connaught conversing with Lady Wantage. (3) "More haste less speed"—gunners in trouble. The 1st King's Dragoon Guards have a breakdown. (4) Major-General Scobell with Major Fuller, his A.D.C., and Mrs. Fuller. (5) On outpost duty. The 5th Lancers outside camp.

Digitized by Google

THE MARCH OF EVENTS.

Abéniacar.

THE CHURCH OF PARGHELIA.

The most noteworthy feature of the damage done by the earthquake is the extensive destruction of churches and monastries.

Abéniacar.

THE CHURCH OF STEFANACONI.

When King Victor Emanuel arrived in Stefanaconi the children crowded round him, kissing his hands and his riding-boots.

Abéniacar.

THE EARTHQUAKE IN CALABRIA.

Monteleone, a wonderful old city, perched among the mountains, and at one time the residence of Cicero.

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

THE technical experts who framed the rules for the Tourist Trophy Race, which was run in the Isle of Man last week, omitted one important factor from their calculations. With the praiseworthy intention of limiting the speed to a reasonable average, and ensuring that only genuine touring vehicles should compete, they restricted the allowance of fuel, and drew up elaborate regulations in regard to the weight of both body and chassis, their dimensions and fittings, load to be carried, and so on. The contest was to be a race, it is true, but at the same time a race tempered by discretion, engendered by the fear of running short of fuel before the distance had been covered. The experts forgot, and for that matter so did everybody else, that human nature is the same the world over, and that no one, least of all a motorist, cares to be outstripped by another. There may have been drivers who kept in mind throughout the race the Nemesis that might overtake them as the result of any failure to husband their somewhat slender allowance of petrol, but they were not much in evidence, and I think it may be safely said that the great majority drove their cars "all out" from start to finish. In some cases it was not the excitement of the contest that caused this seeming disregard of prudence, but the knowledge gained in practice spins, and the openly-expressed intention of these competitors to drive at the fastest speed of which their cars were capable, caused no small anxiety to the officials, as the course contains many pitfalls for the reckless or inexperienced.

The numerous accidents that occurred proved that these fears were by no means groundless; but, thanks to the special providence that seems to watch over the racing motorist, not a person received so much as a scratch.

Topical

THE TOURIST TROPHY RACE.
Mr. Astell's Orleans car rounding an awkward corner.

Copyright.

THE 20-H.P. MAUDSLAY AT THE FOOT OF SNAEFELL.
The race was run through some of the most charming scenery in the Isle of Man.

I think, however, that most people will agree that some method will have to be adopted of reducing the speed in future years, even at the risk of diminishing the spectacular interest of the race. The winner averaged close on thirty-four miles an hour, and not one of the fast cars experienced any difficulty in finishing the course on the fuel allowance. To a certain extent this result was due to the excellent state of the roads and the atmospheric conditions, which, so far as I could judge, were favourable to economy in consumption; but the fact that some of those in the first flight finished with more than a gallon of petrol to spare, seems to indicate that the allowance was too large. Up to the very end of the race it was freely prophesied that those cars which passed the enclosure at speeds well over forty miles an hour, would pay the penalty in the last round; but in the result only seven vehicles out of forty-two starters ran short of petrol, and none of these had at any time been prominent in the race.

The actual allowance was 9¼ gallons for the 208½ miles, equivalent to 1 gallon per 22½ miles, which at first sight seems none too much for cars ranging up to 20-h.p., over a course which includes some very steep and long ascents. As a matter of fact, eighteen finished, seven, as I have said, ran out of fuel, and the remaining seventeen met with various mishaps. Most of these were due to want of judgment in taking corners, and the destruction of wheels has probably never been equalled in a motor-race. It would be impossible here to describe all the accidents in detail, but I think the plucky repair of the Wolseley, which ran clean through a hedge into an adjoining field, is worthy of mention. The front axle and steering connections were badly bent, but, nothing daunted, the driver and his mechanic proceeded to put matters to rights. The axle was dismounted, placed in a fire, and straightened. The steering was also repaired, and after the parts had been reassembled the car continued the race, and did two circuits in very good time.

The Wolseley had an unfortunate day, as it was also run into by the Thornycroft, which badly bent an axle in the process. The latter car, pluckily driven by Mr. T. Thornycroft, continued the race in an apparently dangerous condition, and was finally placed hors de combat through the shedding of a wheel on the summit of Snaefell. An Argyll tried conclusions with a public-house shortly after the start, but managed to continue for a time, in spite of a broken radius rod and other damage. A Speedwell, a White Steamer, the Vauxhall, and the Cadillac, among others, collided with roadside obstacles through attempting to take corners too fast, and paid the penalty in shattered wheels. As to the other mishaps there is little reliable information, and in some cases the excuses put forward by disappointed competitors were obviously intended for public consumption.

Although the greatest praise is due to the makers of the Arrol-Johnstons, which secured the chief honours of the day by taking first and third places, it is somewhat doubtful whether the car, which was built expressly for the race, is quite of the type which the race is intended to encourage. The engine has, I understand, a very high compression, and is fitted with the now obsolete (for motor cars) "hit and miss" governor on the exhaust. Both these features made for fuel efficiency, but the latter certainly lessens the flexibility of the motor. Its performance was a marvellous one, and the more surprising as the makers have hitherto turned out only heavy solid-tyred cars expressly intended for rough Scottish roads. The full results are given on another page, so there is no need to set them out here. Special credit attaches to those firms who entered two cars and succeeded in completing the course in good time with both. A full-speed run of 200 miles over up and down roads abounding in sharp corners and steep gradients, and in many places possessing a surface far from smooth, is calculated to try the capabilities of a car to the utmost, and where the times for the different circuits indicated an absence of serious delays the achievement is one of which any maker may be proud.

Digitized by Google

The organisation of the race was beyond criticism, and the Automobile Club is to be congratulated on having successfully inaugurated a novel and useful form of competition which is certain to be repeated in future years. This year's contest was admittedly in the nature of an experiment, and the experience gained last week will have revealed the weak points in the present rules. One alteration that is obviously required is the raising or abolition of the maximum weight allowed for the chassis. The limitation of the fuel allowance is a sufficient check on the unduly heavy car, while the imposition of a minimum weight for both chassis and body excludes the flimsily-built machine intended to hold together for the race only. Many of the competitors came to the scales with standard cars, which were found to be greatly over-weight, and in order to get within the limit expedients were resorted to which were certainly contrary to the spirit, if not the letter, of the rules. Frames and levers were bored out, steps removed, under shields and mats discarded, and the proper bonnets replaced by coverings of cardboard or tin. One car went through the race with only one brake, while several removed their axle caps to save a few pounds. Nevertheless, it was too late to alter the rules, and if the committee took a lenient view of the more glaring instances of weight-cutting, the reason may doubtless be found in the natural reluctance to disqualify a competitor who had spent time and money in order to take part in the first of the Tourist Trophy contests.

RADIATOR.

Copyright.

THE TOURIST TROPHY RACE IN THE ISLE OF MAN.

Mr. Percy Northey, who was placed second, driving the 20 h.p. Rolls-Royce round the famous Hair-pin Corner.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

EDITED BY A. J. ROBERTSON.

THE competition for the Jubilee Vase of the Royal and Ancient Club attracted a large gathering of members to St. Andrews last week. Among the fair number of scratch and plus players present was Mr. A. G. Barry, the Amateur Champion, who owed four strokes. For the first three rounds Mr. Barry displayed admirable form, but, falling off in his game in the fourth round, he was thrown out of the competition more easily than had been expected. The final was played between Mr. W. E. Fairlie (plus 1) and Mr. Spencer Gollan (scratch). There was a large crowd to see the match, and though a high wind blew from the south-west, the play of both was extremely good and close. After a ding-dong match Mr. Fairlie won on the home green by a hole.

* * *

The Prime Minister is at present enjoying his annual golfing holiday at North Berwick, where, with Mr. Laidlay, Mr. Gerald Balfour, Mr. Alfred Lyttelton, Mr. R. Lyttelton, the Hon. Evan Charteris, and others, he takes part every day in a foursome or three-ball match. Lord Chelsea, Lord Chesterfield, Lord Sandhurst, and Sir Edward Sassoon, M.P., have also been a good deal on the links.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Asquith, who are staying at Glen of Rothes, Elgin, for the shooting season, have been playing a good deal of golf on the Lossiemouth course of the Moray Club. Mr. and Mrs. Asquith and their guests travelled over to Lossiemouth by motor-car, returning to Glen of Rothes in the afternoon when the day's golf was over.

* * *

At St. Anne's (writes the golfing correspondent of the Scotsman), where a charge of half-a-crown was made for admission to the course to see the recent International Professional Foursome, a somewhat amusing incident happened. Along with a friend, Braid and Herd walked down to the course about fifteen minutes before the hour at which play was to begin, but when about to proceed through the gateway they were "held up" by a member of the local police force, who asked them to produce their badges. "Badge," said Braid, "I have no badge. We are two of the players." "Can't 'elp that, gentlemen. You won't get in without a badge," replied the constable. "I'll tell you what it is," rejoined Herd, with a laugh, "there'll be nae play the day if you keep us out." But no amount of explanation could persuade the constable to allow the Scotsmen to pass through until their friend had gone forward to the club-house and brought one of the stewards to their assistance.

* * *

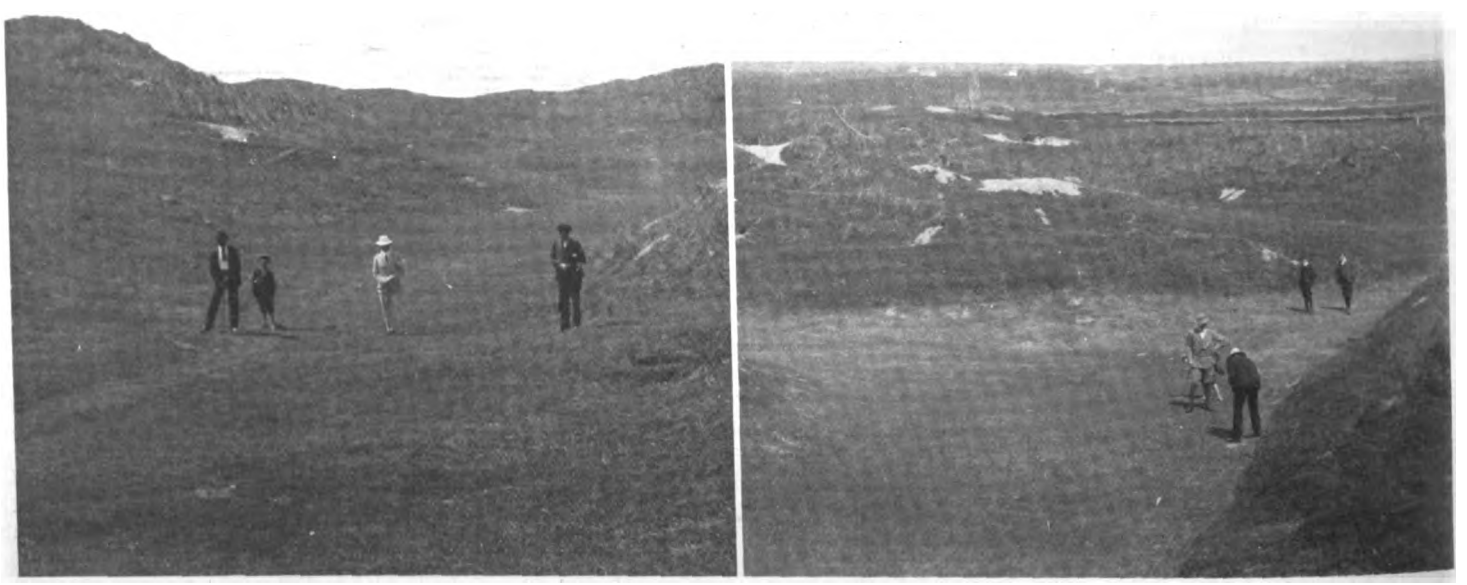
The cow, even on the golf links, is rarely credited with being a skittish animal. As a rule, she browses quietly, and neither heeds the shouts of "fore" when blocking the way to the green, nor does she realise the possibility of getting a hard knock from the driven balls that drop about her ears. But at Hawick the other day a cow on the golf course became suddenly nimble and curious about a ball driven off the tee by a player. As the golfer started towards his ball the cow also took it into its somnolent head to see what a golf ball was like. It forestalled the player, therefore, by some distance, sniffed enquiringly around the Haskell, found the odour to its liking, and picked it up in its mouth. The distressed golfer started to shout and run, in order to save his ball from precipitate mastication. The cow ran also, and then the links reverberated with the amused laughter of the player's comrades. In a while, however, the cow had time to become disillusioned of the Haskell morsel after licking the paint off, and the ball was dropped.

* * *

The golf week at Lucerne has been a busy as well as an animated one. The competitions connected with the Championship of Switzerland brought together in the final Mr. H. Gaw and Mr. A. H. Crosfield, a player known at Hoylake and Cannes. Over the thirty-six holes Mr. Crosfield was defeated by 5 and 4 to play. Lady Margaret Hamilton-Russell, who won the English Ladies' Championship three times, won the Ladies' Championship of Switzerland and the Colburn Challenge Cup. At the close of the meeting the prizes were

SOUTH OF IRELAND CHAMPIONSHIP.

Mr. Horace Castle (Chiswick) won the South of Ireland Championship at Lahinch last week by 5 and 3 against Mr. A. C. Lincoln (South Herts.)



THE LAHINCH LINKS.

A general view of the course at Lahinch, over which the South of Ireland Championship is played. The pictures show the "Dell" hole and the way to the 4th hole.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

distributed by Lady Margaret Hamilton-Russell, her own prizes being presented to her by Mr. H. Morgan, the captain of the Lucerne Club.

* * *

"Golf Faults Illustrated," by Mr. G. W. Beldam and J. H. Taylor, the well-known professional, is an interesting book which has been published by Messrs. George Newnes, Limited, price 3s. 6d. The articles bearing this title appeared as a series in C. B. Fry's Magazine, and their publication in that popular and widely-read periodical undoubtedly attracted a great deal of attention from golfers of all classes. The authors have, therefore, taken a wise course to embody so much valuable practical instruction in book form, so as to be more readily accessible not only to beginners in the game, but even to experts who believe that their own instruction cannot go further. Mr. Beldam and Taylor take the beginner in hand from the very first step, and show him by a wealth of beautiful photographic illustration, the product of Mr. Beldam's camera, which is the right and the wrong way to grip the club, to place the feet, to address the ball, and to swing. Taylor by his own play showing how the various stages of the game should be acquired, and Mr. Beldam by his masterly photographs and his perspicacious letterpress in analysing faults which the beginner should always guard himself from falling into, have combined together to produce one of the most informatory manuals of golf instruction that the beginner can consult.

BEXHILL GOLF CLUB.

A FEW years ago, Bexhill was quite a small village, lying some four miles west of Hastings. Nowhere in the South of England has any town sprung up so quickly. There is now an excellent golf club, which was founded in 1890. The Earl De La Warr, who is the landlord, was unanimously elected president, and Mr. A. J. Ballour, M.P., hon captain, and in 1892 Lord Cantelupe (who has since succeeded to the title) was captain of the club. So quickly did the club grow that in 1897 Mr. G. Graham was invited to accept the post of secretary, which position he has held ever since, the club now consisting of 260 members. Mr. H. S. Colt (of Sunningdale) was at one time on the committee.

The links, which are situated only five minutes' walk from the station, are divided into two parts by the railway. Originally the first nine holes lay on the right, parallel to the sea. Lord De La Warr, however, requiring some ground on which he could lay out Tea Gardens (which have never yet been opened), only seven holes are now available on that side; but additional land having been obtained, the other eleven holes are situated across the line.

The course was laid out by Douglas Rolland, who is the professional and greenkeeper, and I was glad to find him recovering from the severe rheumatism which has prevented him from playing for some time past.

The hazards are all of a most sporting nature, and most of the holes are very carefully guarded. The eighth, for instance, has a furze bank on the right, a narrow ditch on the left, and also in front. The palings of the cricket ground are just beyond the putting green, and there are two pot bunkers carefully placed to catch a topped drive from the tee. From the twelfth tee a magnificent panoramic view of

THE JUBILEE VASE AT ST. ANDREWS.
Mr. W. E. Fairlie, who beat Mr. Spencer Golian in the final by a hole, driving.

THE JUBILEE VASE.
Mr. Spencer Gollan, who is also known as the owner of race-horses, driving in the final along a line of spectators at St. Andrews.

THE JUBILEE VASE.
Mr. Spencer Gollan gets well out of an awkward bunker at St. Andrews.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

the sea is obtained, stretching from Hastings on the left to Beachy Head on the right, both of which can be plainly seen even on a dull winter's day. There is only one hole out of the eighteen from which the sea is not visible. The thirteenth is another extremely sporting hole. The tee shot is played across a wood, whilst in front, and on the right of the putting green, are a ditch and a few bushes. The fourteenth hole brings us to the furthest point on the links from the club-house, and is down by the Hastings new gas-works. At the sixteenth green we return again to the left of the wood which we encountered at the thirteenth hole, and the seventeenth tee shot is played across it again.

The amateur record for the green, 71, is held by Dr. Murdoch, the present captain of the club, and A. Mitchell, of St. Leonard's New Club, holds the professional record, 65. The course has, however, been considerably lengthened, and it is doubtful whether this score could now be achieved. The present "Bogey" score is 76. The last nine holes being some 500-yds. longer than the first nine holes, the outward "Bogey" score is 36, and homewards 40. The circuit of the course is about 5,000-yds.

Every facility is offered to visitors, the green fees being extremely moderate: One day, 2s.; three days, 5s.; one week, 7s. 6d.; and for one month, 20s. On a Bank Holiday, however, to avoid over-crowding, the charge is raised to 4s. There is ample accommodation for visitors at the various hotels and boarding-houses to suit all purses, whilst in the summer the sea-bathing and deep-sea fishing are alike excellent.

A. V. D. RINTOUL.

THE BEXHILL LINKS.

A view from the 16th tee, showing players at the 15th hole. The 16th green is just to the right.

GOLF AT BEXHILL.

General view of the first seven holes. On the right is the famous motor-car track.

A VIEW OF THE COURSE.

The 17th tee, which needs a good shot to carry the wood.

A FAMOUS PROFESSIONAL.

Douglas Rolland ("Dougie"), at one time the longest driver and one of the best match players living, playing a short brassie shot.

Correspondence.

"WHY WE WERE BEATEN."

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE KING."

SIR,—I am a member of the Dufftopper Golf Club, Sliceton. Perhaps you know it. We are only a dozen miles or so from St. Paul's, and on a fine Saturday afternoon the crowd round our first tee looks (from a distance) like a gathering of the unemployed.

Last Saturday was no exception to the rule. Walking up the path leading to the club-house I dexterously avoided a magnificently sliced tee shot (Vardon does not mention this useful accomplishment in his book—a most curious omission), and found my partner impatiently awaiting my arrival. I was certainly a little late, and, therefore, I received his upbraidings with meek resignation.

We were not kept waiting long—barely an hour and a-half. I do not wish to dwell on the game, being the unsuspected possessor of a modest temperament. I beat my man by 6 and 5, and played like a budding champion. Gashley, my partner, was playing rather above his form. Some of his divots were really beautifully cut. He informed me, however, at the turn (where I was 4 up) that he wasn't taking our game seriously. He said that I had kept him waiting too long at the tee, and had put him completely off.

It was then, Sir, that an illuminating idea struck me. I made a vigorous canvass of all the match players, and in each case the defeated one was good enough to explain the reason of his downfall. I append the list herewith and (for the moment) cease from comment:

SMITH v. PORKINS.—Smith won by 5 and 3. Porkins had been playing cards. He didn't go to bed till three o'clock on Saturday morning. He didn't expect to win, and only came out for a little fresh air. If he'd been playing his game he would have licked Smith's head off.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

THE PROFESSIONAL FOURSOME AT LYTHAM AND ST. ANNE'S.

(1) Taylor standing in the bunker; Vardon putting on the 18th green. (2) The crowd at the 9th hole. (3) The captain, Mr. E. Hulton and Mr. T. Pym Williamson, the secretary, discussing the play between the rounds. (4) The 4th tee in the afternoon; Herd driving, and Vardon watching the ball. (5) Braid and Herd on a hill; Braid plays a marvellous shot. (6) Braid driving at the 1st hole; Taylor and Mr. J. L. Low on the left. (7) Braid putting.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

A. H. Robinson.

LADIES' GOLF AT HARROGATE.

A view of the club-house and putting green. The ladies from left to right are: Miss Irvin, Mrs. Oliver (wife of the hon. secretary), Miss Mitchell, and Mrs. Harker.

SLOWBY v. BRAGGS.—Slowby won by 3 and 1. Braggs said that Slowby's methods would put Vardon off. Slowby (alleged Braggs) took about five minutes to play every shot. He wouldn't play an approach before he'd walked up to the green and drawn a map of it. As a consequence Braggs lost all interest in the match.

POTTHUNTER v. BIFFLEY.—Potthunter won by 2 up. Biffley was only out for smiting practice. He wasn't troubling about his irons. He went for everything, and reached the fourteenth in 2 (regular beauties). Biffley couldn't understand a chap always playing as if his life depended on it. Potthunter played short at the third and tenth, but that sort of thing didn't appeal to him (Biffley). He simply couldn't play a potty game, although he knew jolly well that he lost a lot of matches through his rooted distaste for "pawky" shots.

SMILER v. SNATCHEM.—Smiler won by 1 up. Snatchem said Smiler's win was right down comic. He (Snatchem) ought to have been at least 2 up. Smiler was playing putrid approaches ("daisy dribblers," nearly all of them), but by the Devil's own luck they nearly all stopped dead at the pin. And Smiler's putts—to call them flukes was to indulge in positive flattery. They were roarers!

HEELER v. BOUNCERBY.—Heeler won at the twelfth hole. Bouncerby didn't get a decent lie the whole round. Simply impossible to play out of them with anything less than a niblick. Golf under such conditions was, of course, out of the question. There were only about forty good lies on the course—and Heeler got them all.

ROBINSON v. TWEEZER.—Robinson won by 4 and 3. Tweezer was playing with an old ball, and in consequence got bunkered at the second and fourth. If he had played a new ball——

MAGSON v. KEENLY.—Magson won by 2 up. Keenly had to give Magson ten strokes according to handicap. Keenly said playing with duffers always put him off his game.

STEDDY v. LONGSMACK.—Steddy won by 3 and 2. Longsmack said the Dufftopper Links were awful bumble-puppy after what he'd been used to in Yorkshire. A good driver got no advantage, and there were only about three holes where you wanted a brassie. It might do for the doddering brigade, but it cramped Longsmack's game.

HARROW v. BYLES.—Harrow won by 8 and 7. Byles was trying Vardon's interlocking grip for the first time; he wasn't really thinking of the match.

TURFSWAT v. HITTENMISS.—Turfswat won by 3 and 2. Hittenmiss had the game in his pocket at the turn, but he wanted to make a match of it, and he let Turfswat snatch a hole or two. It was mistaken generosity, and Hittenmiss was a fool for doing it.

I fear, Sir, that here the list must end, but I ask you whether it does not once more demonstrate (if such demonstration were needed) the uniqueness and mystery of this wonderful game. For you will observe that in no single instance was the defeated one in the matches cited vanquished because he played an inferior game to that put up by his opponent. Does not this present golf in a new aspect, and at once remove it irrevocably from comparison with other commonplace games? In what other pastime, Sir, has the loser such a wealth of—er—explanations to account for his misfortune? It is time, Sir (in my humble opinion), that this new charm of the game received its recognition.—Believe me, Sir, yours enthusiastically,

A REFORMED DUFFER.

FIXTURES.

September 23.—Hanger Hill, Open Amateur Competition.
September 23.—Manchester, Autumn Meeting.
September 23.—Raynes Park, Autumn Meeting.
September 23.—Wallasey, Autumn Meeting.
September 23.—West Derby, Autumn Meeting.
September 23.—Rochester, Atkin Cup.
September 23.—Sundridge Park, Autumn Meeting.
September 25-30.—Burnham and Berrow, Autumn Meeting.
September 25.—Royal Guernsey, Autumn Meeting.
September 29.—Beckenham, Autumn Meeting.
September 29.—Brighton and Hove, Autumn Meeting.
September 29-30.—Acton, Autumn Meeting.
September 29-30.—Bushey Hall, Open Amateur Meeting and Challenge Cup.
September 29-30.—Hanger Hill, Autumn Meeting.
September 30.—Newhaven, Autumn Meeting.
September 30.—Royal Jersey, Autumn Meeting.
September 30.—Southport, Autumn Meeting.
September 30.—Matlock Bath, Autumn Meeting.

A. H. Robinson.

THE HARROGATE LADIES' CLUB.

The 2nd tee, Mrs. H. Oliver driving. To her right stands Mr. T. M. Irvin, Miss M. Irvin, Mr. H. Oliver (hon. secretary), and Miss Irvin.

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. LXII.—Mr. Edward E. Micholls, J.P., Prospective Conservative Candidate for Monmouth District.

THE Monmouth District (more popularly known as the Monmouth Boroughs) is not the outcome of any modern measure of electoral reform. The political union of Monmouth, Newport, and Usk is as old as Henry VIII.'s time, and a hundred years ago, when Newport in Cornwall and Newport in the Isle of Wight were each returning two representatives to Parliament (the "Honourable Sir Arthur Wellesley, K.B.," amongst them), Newport in the Welsh borderlands helped Monmouth and Usk to give the "next brother to the Duke of Beaufort" a seat in the House of Commons. The Monmouth Boroughs, under the old order of things, sent one member to Westminster, and they do the same to-day, with this difference, that Newport has in the interval become a place of great commercial importance, and, as an interesting travel-book recently published by the Great Western Railway clearly shows, is ripe for still further developments. During the past quarter of a century the political pendulum of the Monmouth District has oscillated pretty regularly between the Conservative and Liberal poles, Dr. Rutherfoord Harris, and afterwards Sir Joseph Lawrence, winning back the seat which Mr. Albert Spicer had wrested from the strong hands of the late Sir George Elliot. At the present moment, however, it seems probable that the Conservative success scored by Sir Joseph Lawrence four years ago will be repeated at the next General Election, as, in the person of Mr. E. E. Micholls, that party has secured a Prospective Candidate who is no novice in the art of electoral campaigning, and whose record, both as regards politics and philanthropy, is one of which any man might well be proud.

Born just sixty years ago in "Cottonopolis," where his grandfather had established a branch of the well-known business founded by his great-grandfather as far back as 1780, Edward Micholls was sent to the Edinburgh High School, where, like the late Duc de Montpensier and his brothers, he greatly profited by the admirable educational system pursued by the then rector, Dr. Schmitz. The house in Plymouth Grove occupied by his parents at the time of his birth was that in which Mrs. Gaskell wrote "Mary Barton," and they afterwards migrated to Grove House, now converted into the Whitworth Museum, and one of the sights of Manchester. After leaving Edinburgh Mr. Micholls went to Dresden, where he perfected himself in five languages, and acquired a fund of information which stood him in good stead when he went into the great cotton-spinning house, now extinct, but famous in the sixties, seventies, and eighties as Micholls, Lucas, and Co. of Manchester, Micholls, Lucas, and Co. of Kingston Mill, Stockport, and Lucas, Micholls, and Co. of London.

Of this firm Edward Micholls eventually became the head, his partner being Colonel F. Lucas, M.P., who matriculated in politics by fighting Mr. Perks in 1895, and five years later won the Lowestoft Division of Suffolk with a majority of 1,729. In early life Mr. Micholls married Miss Mary Beddington of Carshalton, who has been closely associated with her husband in carrying out the philanthropic and political schemes in which he has displayed so much constitutional energy. Mr. Micholls is an ardent and consistent supporter of Mr. Balfour, and an innate love of politics had a good deal to do with his final retirement from business pursuits five years ago. His militant Conservatism dates from 1868, when he recorded his first vote for Mr. W. Romaine Callender, a loyal supporter of the late Lord Beaconsfield. As a boy of ten Mr. Micholls well remembers Richard Cobden and John Bright dining with his father at Grove House; but at the present juncture he favours a change in the fiscal policy of the country, after the summoning of a conference of our kinsmen across the seas, to discuss fairly and freely the advantages of a closer union with the Mother Country from both a commercial and political point of view. He would on no account be privy to any legislative enactments or economical experiments which would make the lot of the working-man a whit harder than it now is.

Holyer.

MRS. E. E. MICHOLLS

Wife of the Prospective Candidate for the Monmouth Boroughs. (After a painting by Sir W. B. Richmond, R.A., exhibited in the Royal Academy this year.)

The mother of Mr. Micholls was a Behrens, born, by a curious coincidence, in the Moseley Street Mansion once tenanted by the Grants, the Cheeryble Brothers of Charles Dickens. The good work accomplished by Mr. and Mrs. Micholls is in strict accordance with Cheeryble tenets and traditions. Mrs. Micholls laboured indefatigably in Derbyshire for the organisation of an efficient plan of district nursing, and she has since rendered important services to the cause of education by co-operating with Lady Airlie, the Master of Trinity and Mrs. Montagu Butler, Sir J. Wolfe Barry, K.C.B., and Professor and Mrs. Lewis Campbell in founding a feminine Eton at Wycombe Abbey. She is also a member of the committees of the Chelsea Hospital for Women and the Queen Victoria Jubilee Nursing Movement. The exertions of Mr Micholls contributed not a little to the return of Stockport to the Conservative fold. He also made his influence felt in Derbyshire, where he was Ruling Councillor of the High Peak Division of the Primrose League. He is now a member of the Municipal Society of London. At the present moment he holds the post of Vice-president of the Western Division of the National Union of Conservative Associations. His fight for the Accrington Division of Lancashire was a memorable one, and in his two contests for the London County Council at Stepney and Norwood he succeeded in materially reducing the Liberal majority. He was recently chosen by the Conservative Central Office as a candidate for the Isle of Thanet, but retired rather than imperil the safety of a Unionist seat. Mr. Micholls is a member of the King's College Hospital Committee and of the Froebel Educational Institute. Since the unanimous acceptance of Mr. Micholls' prospective candidature for the Monmouth Boroughs at the next election, the Talbot and Tredegar Primrose League Habitation, of which Lord Tredegar is President, and Mrs. Micholls Deputy Dame President, has shown signs of increased power and prosperity, while unwonted vigour is manifesting itself in the ranks of the Monmouth Boroughs Conservative Association, as well as in the concerns of the local branch, which flourishes under the ægis of Lord Llangattock. When in London Mr. and Mrs. Micholls reside in Prince's Gate, and he has taken a lease from Mr. H. Addams-Williams of Llwyn Celyn, a good shooting estate in the very centre of the Llangibby country, where he preserves foxes with the care which might be expected from his record with the Cheshire Hounds, and from one who nine-and-thirty years ago played for the Gentlemen of Lancashire against Yorkshire and Warwickshire. He belongs to six first-class golf clubs, and has won the Bombay Cup at Wimbledon. In 1903 and 1904 he was secretary of the Buxton and High Peak Club, and did a great deal to promote its popularity.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

CLIENTS AND SALESWOMEN.

IT is ten o'clock in the morning. The pavement is blocked with people—struggling, pushing, swaying. They look, from a distance, like a plague of flies. What has occurred? Another motor accident? The conductor on the top of the steam tram reassures the travellers. It is the Printemps, the Magasins du Printemps, the great shopping centre, the affaire Jaluzot, quoi! The new management has placarded Paris with the announcement of an "Extraordinary Sale," and the call has been answered. Every newspaper has published an advertisement in thick characters on the fourth page, and by ten o'clock the interested Parisians, from all corners of the capital, have made a hasty toilet, and are battling for underclothing, carpets, ribbons, calico, on the pavement, in the streets, before the roughly-erected planks piled with every variety of merchandise. Many push their way to the front, and would enter the building that stretches through the Boulevard Haussmann, the Rue du Havre, and the Rue de Provence; but the doors are closed. There are others before them, and the vast emporium is full—full of swaying, struggling people within as without. For Parisians love a bargain, love the possibility of buying a yard of material under the ordinary price; or a parcel of silk, that they do not actually want, for the proverbial song; and the rush has been great, greater than had been expected. Let us remove the roof, like another Asmodeus, and peep inside any one of these establishments—and there are many of the same category—and "see how the wheels go round." It is no small undertaking to direct a business like the Printemps, the Louvre, or the Bon Marché! The inner workings are curious, and the experiences of a director would be food for philosophers. All classes of men and women congregate here—the best and the worst. There are appointments made and kept, generally in the reading-rooms; and many meetings that end at the altar are commenced here. Men walk in and out with no purpose of buying. They are probably seeking their wives or daughters, and wander from one department to the other; nobody can interfere with them, for they dress and move like gentlemen, and a shop is open to all. I happened once to be in the lace department at the Printemps, and was surprised at the cool manner in which a bill was paid and a couple walked away together. Sixty francs worth of Bruges had been bought by a quiet-looking little party; she followed the saleswoman to the desk; a man raised his hat and put the three louis on the counter; the lady smiled; and in another minute both were gone.

Géniaux, Paris.

AT THE PRINTEMPS.
"A pushing young particle."

The thefts committed here are serious items, and a special account is kept of them. In one of these establishments the yearly robberies attain the remarkable amount of £10,000. Fortunately for the proprietors, only a small quantity of goods are abstracted by professional thieves, who are generally well known and carefully watched by detectives on the premises. The majority are taken by ladies, respectable women, who cannot resist temptation, who, having spent all their ready cash in one thing or another, secrete, in their muffs or beneath their cloaks, some article that takes their fancy. These articles the management generally get returned. And this is their modus operandi. On the following day an employé calls on the lady, and politely, but decidedly, informs her that among the things she purchased and took away there was one for which, "by mistake," no charge had been made. This employé, an expert in these matters, never fails to impress the client, and invariably leaves with the stolen object under his arm. In this manner about £6,000 of the £10,000 find their way back to the shop. Who can account for this dishonest chord that suddenly vibrates in the mind of highly-respectable women, who go to church, pay their rent, and look with horror upon theft generally? They are not kleptomaniacs, for it may only happen once in their lives that they succumb to temptation. I leave it to psychologists to answer the question. The statistics in the "theft department" show that the stolen objects are mostly umbrellas, muffs, and remnants of lace.

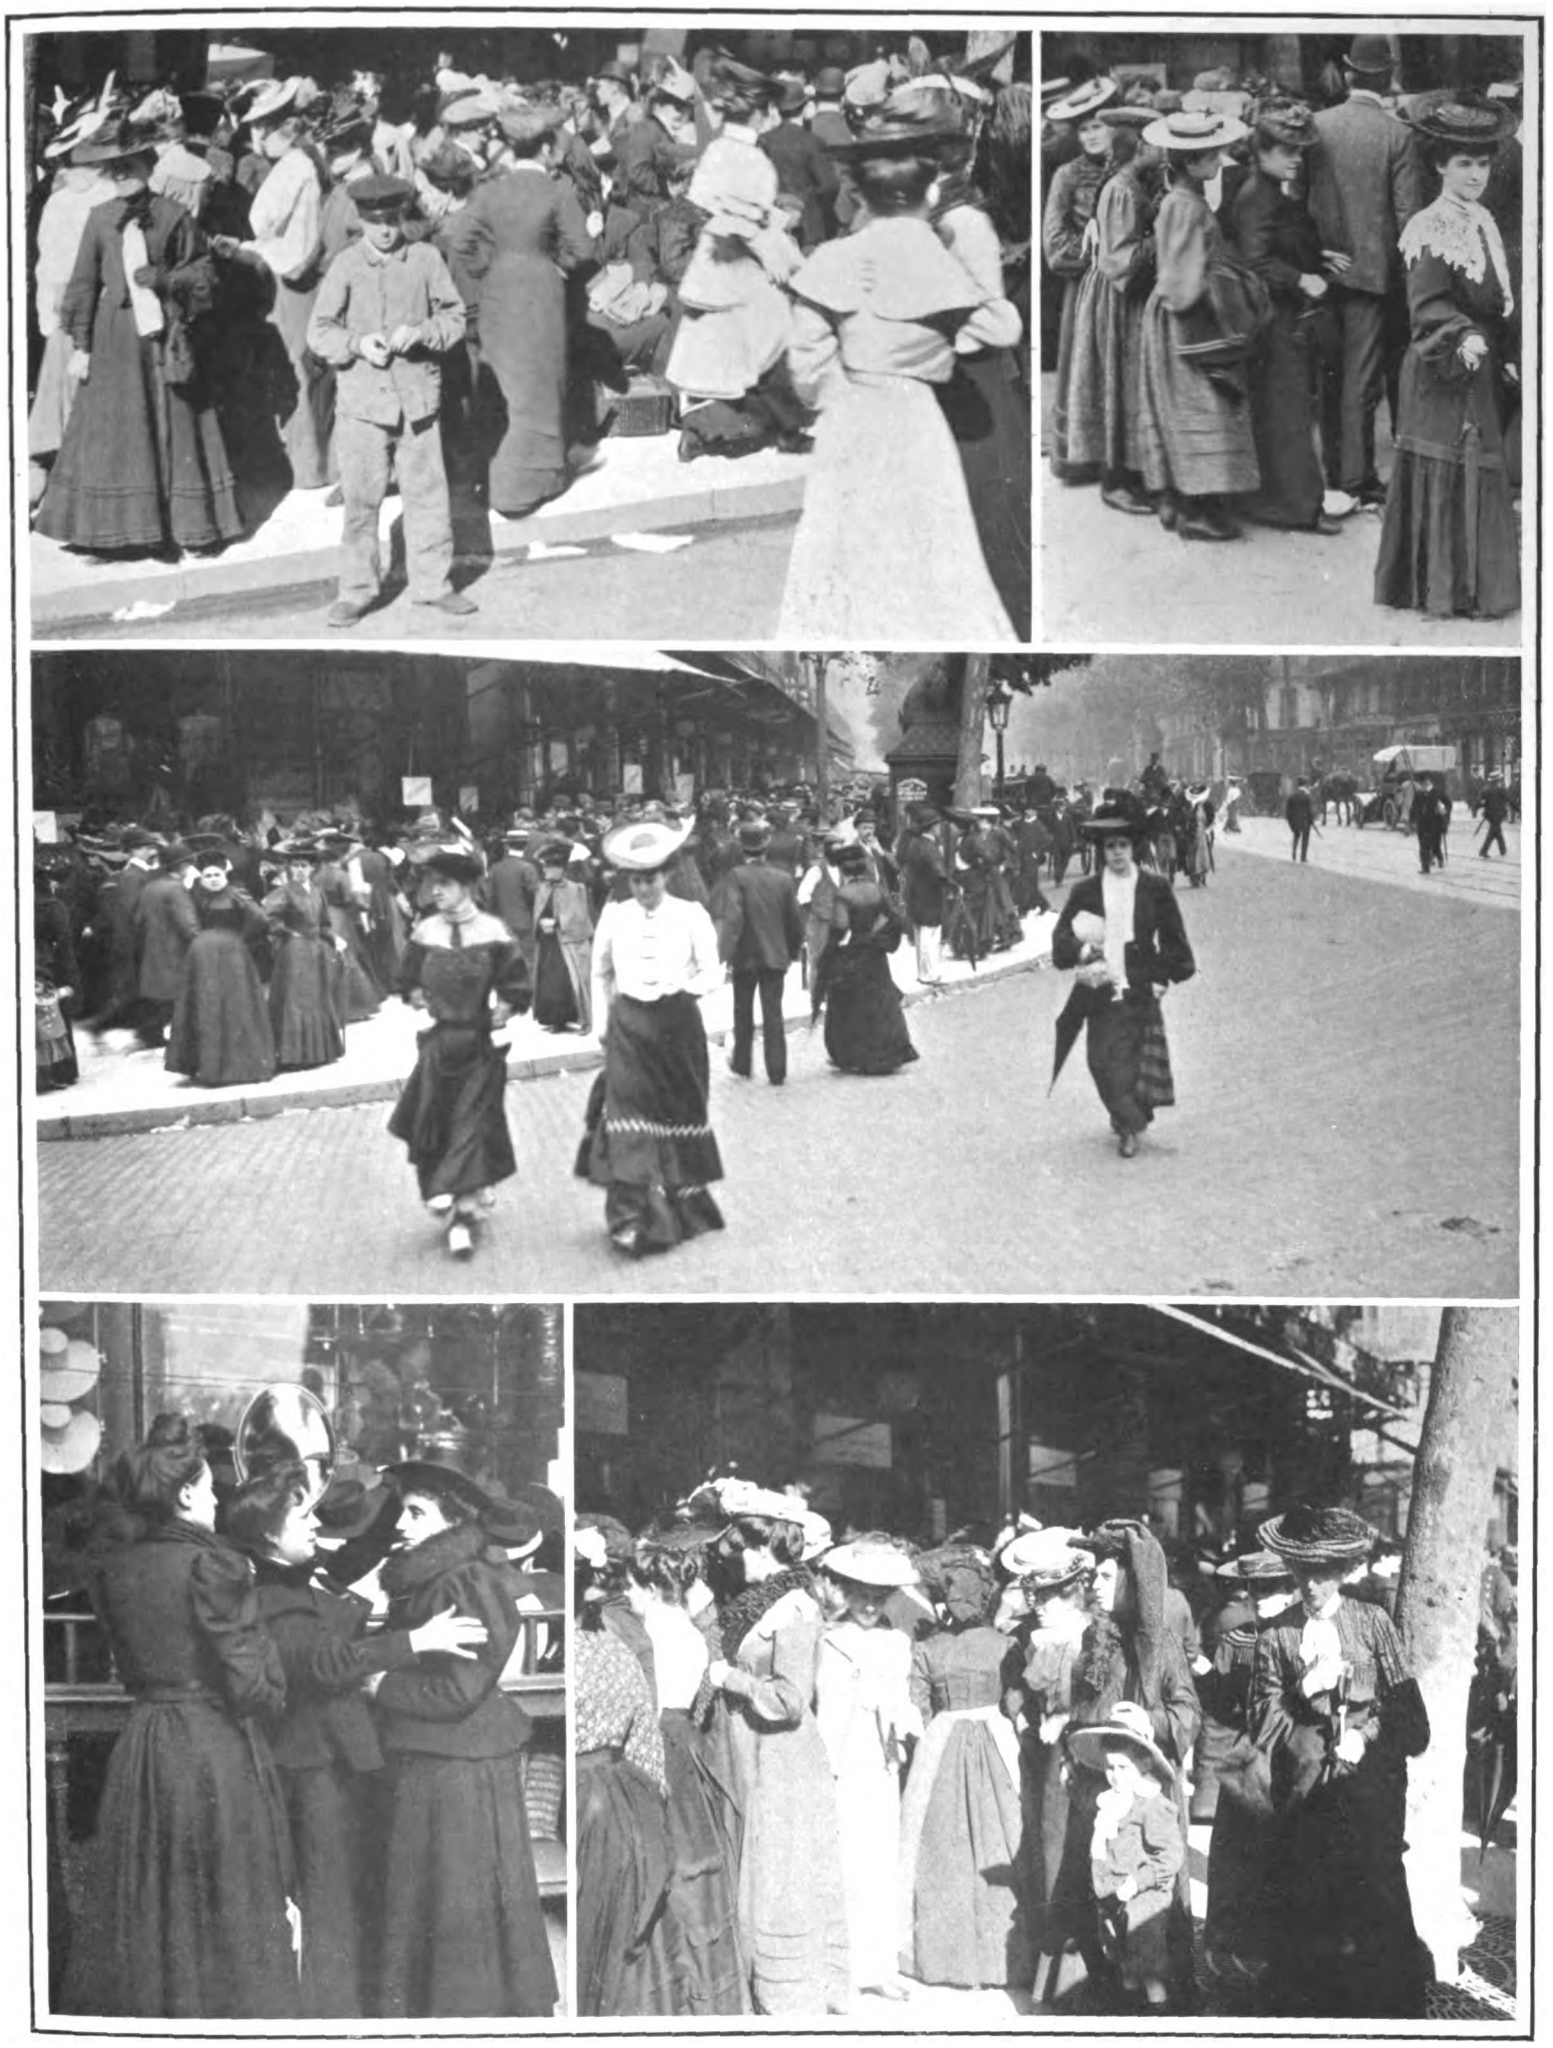
And now a word about the saleswomen. At most of these big emporiums the first year of a woman's services are not remunerated. She has her midday luncheon, composed of meat and a vegetable, cheese or fruit, and half a bottle of wine, beer, or milk; and an evening meal of the same description. Those who prefer to dine in their own homes are allowed about a shilling. They, however, are able to make a little money called guelte, by a small commission on the sales they make. This commission, the first year, rarely amounts to more then 10d. a day, because their time is chiefly occupied running errands for the senior assistants. The second year they receive £5 for their twelve months' services, and a "rise" of £4 on each succeeding year.

The system of fines is curious. Any employee arriving only half a minute

Géniaux, Paris.

OUTSIDE THÈ PRINTEMPS.
From a photograph taken during one of the autumn sales at the famous Paris bon marché.

Digitized by Google



AN AUTUMN SALE AT THE PRINTEMPS.

(1) A big sale day. (2) Purchasers waiting en queue. (3) On the Boulevard. (4) The new hat. (5) Some fair bargain-hunters.

(From photographs specially taken for THE KING by Paul Géniaux, Paris.)

later than eight o'clock is fined 10d. For the same money, however, she can give herself the luxury of being a whole hour late. But should she be unfortunate enough to arrive after the appointed time on a Saturday the punishment is doubled; as for some incomprehensible reason the management argue that an attendant unpunctual on Saturday would be also at fault on Sunday. Considering that on Sundays these large establishments are closed, it is difficult to understand how they come to this astounding conclusion. FRANCES KEYZER.

Digitized by Google

The Church Dispute in Scotland.

By OLIPHANT SMEATON, M.A., F.S.A.

Elliott and Fry.

THE VERY REV. ROBERT RAINY, D.D.

Principal of New College, Edinburgh, and first Moderator of the United Free Church.

Copyright.

THE REV. DR. CHALMERS

Leader of the Disruption movement in 1843, and first Moderator of the Free Church.

Moffat.

THE REV. COLIN BANNATYNE, M.A.

Minister of Culter, near Edinburgh; first Moderator of the legal Free Church.

ON October 31, 1900, in the great Waverley Market, Edinburgh, in presence of an audience estimated to number at least 5,000 people, the Free Church of Scotland consummated an incorporative Union with the United Presbyterian Church, the name of the combined body being "The United Free Church of Scotland," while the first Moderator was the veteran leader, the Rev. Principal Rainy, D.D.

On the previous day, in the respective Supreme Courts of the two contracting parties, the same question had been put, namely: "That this Church do now agree to enter into an incorporative Union with the Free Church" (or the United Presbyterian Church in the other case). In the Synod of the United Presbyterian Church the motion was agreed to without a dissentient voice; in the General Assembly of the Free Church by a majority of 643 against 27. This minority of 27 (consisting of twenty-four ministers and three elders) declined to enter the Union, claimed to be the Free Church of Scotland, and elected as their first Moderator the Rev. Colin Bannatyne of Culter, an eminently pious and spiritually-minded man (now Professor Bannatyne). At the same time, they took steps to declare their adherence to the Free Church principles of 1843; also that the inheritance and maintenance of these principles lay with them rather than with the United Free Church. To understand this claim it is necessary to revert still further back.

The Free Church of Scotland came into existence on May 18, 1843, at what is popularly known as "The Disruption." This historic event, which was the concluding scene in the exciting drama of the "Ten Years' Conflict," was waged over the question of "spiritual independence," the evangelical majority called "The Non-intrusionists" contending that the Church was free of State control in all spiritual matters, and that no minister could be "intruded" or settled over a people by a patron against their will. The Moderate minority, on the other hand, backed by the Law Courts and the Government, declared that the authority of the State was paramount in spiritual as in civil affairs. The Judicature decided against the evangelical majority's right to veto a presentation to a charge or living where a majority of the parishioners were opposed to it, whereupon that majority, led by Dr. Chalmers, one of the most eloquent men of his age, and, perhaps, the greatest spiritual force then existing in Britain, left the Church

Elliott and Fry.

THE EARL OF HALSBURY

Who heard the case on appeal, has been Lord Chancellor since 1895.

Elliott and Fry.

THE EARL OF ELGIN

The Chairman of the two Royal Commissions for investigation and settlement.

Elliott and Fry.

LORD ALVERSTONE

Who took the late Lord Shand's place on the second hearing of the appeal.

Digitized by Google

THE SCOTTISH CHURCH DISPUTE.

(1) Dr. Candlish, a Disruption leader, who has been described as being a chief instrument for expounding the principles, directing the spirit, and organising the government of the Free Church. (2) Dr. Adam Cairns, one of the famous preachers of the Free Church, who went to Australia on the discovery of gold there, and did much valuable work for the union of the Presbyterian churches. (3) Dr. James Begg, Minister of Newington, Edinburgh, one of the Ministers of the first General Assembly of the Free Church, who signed the Act of Separation and Deed of Demission. (4) The Rev. Dr. James Buchanan, a leader in the Disruption Movement of 1843, Convener of the Foreign Missions Committee. (5) Professor the Rev. Thomas Smith, Moderator of the Free Church in 1891. (6) The Rev. J. D. McCulloch, Principal of the Theological Hall, and Convener of Highlands and Islands Committee. (7) The Rev. Murdo McQueen, Minister of Kiltearn, Dingwall, and late Moderator of the Free Church. (8) The Rev. J. Kennedy Cameron, Minister of Brodick, Arran, Clerk of Assembly for the Free Church, Convener of Sustentation Fund. (9) The Rev. Alexander Whyte, the most eloquent of United Free Church Divines. (10) The Rev. William Blair, Minister of Leighton Church, Dunblane, and one of the Clerks of the General Assembly of the United Free Church. (11) The Rev. George Robson, one of the most cultured and scholarly Ministers of the United Free Church, who formerly belonged to the United Presbyterian Section. (12) The Rev. Alexander Lee, Secretary of the Sustentation and Highlands and Islands Committee of the United Free Church.

(From copyright photographs by Elliott and Fry, Moffat, and British Press Agency.)

Digitized by Google

Munro, Dingwall.

THE FREE CHURCH OF KILTEARN.

of Scotland along with 474 others, and founded the Free Church of Scotland. Though abandoning the Established Church, the Free Church of 1843 in its "Protest" asserted the following principle on establishments:

"And finally, while asserting the right and duty of the Civil Magistrate to maintain and support an establishment of religion in accordance with God's Word and reserving to ourselves and our successors to strive by all lawful means, as opportunity shall in God's good providence be offered, to secure the performance of this duty agreeably to the Scriptures, etc."

Such was the constitution of the Free Church.

The United Presbyterian Church was founded in 1847 by the Union of the "United Secession Church" (which hived off from the Establishment in 1733), and the "Relief Church" (which seceded from the State Church in 1762). These two sections, both before and after their Union, held strong views against all connection between Church and State, and urged, as a matter of right, a speedy disestablishment. Between these two great bodies, then, the Free and the United Presbyterian Churches, negotiations for Union began in 1863, being promoted by Drs. Candlish, Buchanan, Guthrie, and Rainy in the Free Church, and Principal Harper, Dr. Cairns, and Dr. Andrew Thomson in the United Presbyterian Church, while Dr. Begg, Dr. Thomas Smith, Dr. Moody-Stuart, Dr. Nixon, and other Free Churchmen, opposed it. So determined was the opposition of the minority, that the proposal had to be dropped in 1873, an Act, called the Mutual Eligibility Act, however, being passed in the Assembly of that year permitting congregations to call ministers from either body. Twenty-three years after, negotiations were resumed. The solid phalanx of objectors to Union had become greatly reduced by death, and those who now stood out against Union, although they possessed all the earnest determination and firm adherence to principles of their leaders of bygone years, had neither the commanding ability nor the recognised position of their predecessors. Still, they offered a noble and consistent resistance to what they considered to be a relinquishment of the principles of the Free Church. Among those who distinguished themselves in opposing the progress of the negotiations were the Rev. Colin Bannatyne, the Rev. J. D. McCulloch (now Principal McCulloch), the Rev. J. K. Cameron, Mr. Hay Thorburn, and Mr. Archibald McNeilage. As has already been stated, however, the Union was at length consummated on October 31, 1900, the Free Church entering it with 1,104 congregations, representing 296,085 members or communicants (exclusive of adherents), and the United Presbyterian Church with 594 congregations, representing 198,089 members, forming a total of 1,698 congregations, representing 494,174 members, and numbering, with adherents, over half a million. As to the numbers adhering to the minority in 1900, these are difficult to obtain, but the twenty-four ministers not entering the Union (who by this time have been joined by others) were followed by at least 10,000 members and adherents, the majority of them the pious-minded Highlanders of the North.

Munro, Dingwall.

THE FREE CHURCH, FORTROSE.

Munro, Dingwall.

THE FREE CHURCH AT ALNESS.

The grounds on which the minority took exception to the Union, and on which they based their judicial action, were that the funds of the Free Church could not legally or consistently be used for the endowment of voluntaryism, or the promotion of latitudinarianism, both of which they declared to be present in the United Free Church. They charged the latter with departing from the Westminster Confession of Faith by rejecting the doctrine of predestination, and that the United Free Church had also abandoned the Establishment principle, which the minority declared to be an essential principle in the polity of the Free Church. They therefore appealed to the Court of Session to declare them the legal Free Church of Scotland.

The case was first heard in what is known as the Outer Court before Lord Low, the

Digitized by Google

THE SCOTTISH CHURCH DISPUTE.

(1) Lord Young, who heard the case with the Lord Justice-Clerk, Lord Trayner, in the Second Division. (2) Lord Kingsburgh, President of the Second Division of the Court of Session, which heard the case upon the Reclaiming Note from the Lord Ordinary's decision. (3) Lord Low. In his Court, as Lord Ordinary, in the Outer House, the case was first raised. (4) Lord Trayner, one of the Judges who heard the case in the Second Division of the Court of Session. (5) Lord Kinnear, one of the Executive Commissioners to allocate the Church property under the Act. (6) Sir Ralph W. Anstruther, the third member of the Royal Commission to take evidence, appointed December, 1904. (7) Sir Thomas David Gibson-Carmichael, fourth member of the Parliamentary Executive Commission to allocate property. (8) Mr. Thomas Shaw, K.C., M.P., a member of the Law and Advisory Committee of the United Free Church. (9) Mr. R. B. Haldane, K.C., M.P., one of the Counsel for the United Free Church. (10) Lord Robertson, Lord Justice of Appeal, who heard the Appeal in the House of Lords. (11) Lord Lindley, one of the Lords Justices of Appeal. (12) Lord Overtoun, one of the leading elders in the United Free Church, and one of its Trustees.

(From copyright photographs by Elliott and Fry, Moffat, and Crooke, Edinburgh.)

Digitized by Google

Lord Ordinary, who gave his finding in August, 1901. His Lordship dismissed the action and decided against the Free Church, adopting the view maintained by the United Free Church, that the Establishment principle was not an essential and fundamental doctrine of the former Free Church, and that the Union did not involve the giving up by those entering the United Free Church of any doctrine or principle which formed an essential or fundamental part of her creed or constitution. The principal counsel on either side were, Mr. E. T. Salvesen, LL.B., K.C., for the Free Church, and Mr. C. J. Guthrie, M.A., K.C., for the United Free Church.

The case was then carried on a Reclaiming Note to the Second Division of the Appellate Section of the Court of Session, where, after being heard before the Lord Justice-Clerk (Lord Kingsburgh), Lord Young, and Lord Trayner, these three judges unanimously agreed with Lord Low, and one of them—Lord Young—even went further, holding that any two or more dissenting Churches may lawfully unite so as to form themselves into one Church, and that nothing more is necessary to Union than their own consent. The counsel were substantially the same on this occasion, save that Mr. Asher, the Dean of Faculty, was leader for the United Free Church.

The case was now appealed by the Free Church to the House of Lords, and in 1903 it was heard before the Lord Chancellor, Lords Macnaghten, Lindley, Davey, Shand, and Robertson, the counsel for the Free Church being Mr. H. Johnston, K.C. (now Lord Johnston), Mr. Edward T. Salvesen, K.C. (now Solicitor-General for Scotland), and Mr. J. Roberton Christie; while for the United Free Church there appeared the Dean of Faculty, Mr. A. A. Asher, K.C. (now deceased), Mr. R. B. Haldane, K.C., Mr. Charles J. Guthrie, K.C., and Mr. R. L. Orr. The case having been argued, the judges were preparing their decisions, when suddenly Lord Shand died. His decision had been written out, and was favourable to the United Free Church. His opinion, therefore, if delivered, with that of Lords Lindley and Macnaghten, would have left the Bench evenly divided, in which case the judgment of the Courts below—the Scottish Court of Session—would, by law, have become the finding of the higher tribunal. A rehearing of the whole case was rendered necessary, which began on June 9, 1904, before the remaining Lords, with the addition of the Lord Chief Justice, Lord Alverstone, and Lord James of Hereford. On August 2 the decision was given, five judges — Halsbury, Alverstone, Davey, James, and Robertson—declaring in favour of the Free Church, while two—Lindley and Macnaghten—dissented.

Mathieson, Edinburgh.
BUCCLEUCH-GREYFRIARS FREE CHURCH, EDINBURGH.

Munro.
THE FREE CHURCH, DINGWALL.

Munro.
THE FREE CHURCH, ROSSKEEN.

By this judgment the Free Church was vested with the whole of the property formerly held by the body prior to 1900. This amounted to over £1,000,000 sterling in invested funds, as well as colleges at home and abroad, missionary buildings all over the world, and all those churches and manses in Scotland which had not special clauses in their trust deeds. On October 23, 1904, the Court of Session made the House of Lords' judgment operative, which enabled the Free Church legally to claim its own, though it offered to delay taking possession until July, 1905, if only the United Free Church would give a guarantee that nothing would be taught in the colleges or churches contrary to what the Free Church claimed as its distinctive principles. This, however, the United Free Church refused to consider. Accordingly the Free Church demanded and was awarded by the Courts, the New College, Assembly Hall, the Church Offices, and about eighty churches.

The tremendous excitement and indignation aroused all over Scotland by the effects of the House of Lords' judgment, as the full scope of it began to be realised, at length showed the Government that something would need to be done to quiet the public mind in North Britain, otherwise serious consequences might ensue. But how was action to be taken? The decision of the Lords was unimpeachable in point of law from the standpoint from which they had viewed the case, viz., that when trust funds are under consideration, the law of trusts must recognise no exceptions. To permit tampering and tinkering with the laws, and particularly with the law of trusts, is a dangerous precedent to create. On the other hand, to everyone, save perhaps the interested parties, the fact was obvious that the Free Church was quite unable to administer the funds in accordance with the law of trusts, and that ere long they might find themselves brought up on a charge of breach of trust. What was to be done? The Legislature in its administrative

Digitized by Google

THE SCOTTISH CHURCH DISPUTE.

(1) Lord Davey, one of the Lords Justices of Appeal before whom the case was heard. (2) Sir John Cheyne, Chairman of a Commission to hear cases in which the Free Church claimed churches from the United Free Church. (3) Lord Macnaghten, one of the Lords Justices of Appeal who heard the case. (4) Mr. J. Hay Thorburn, Deputy Clerk and General Secretary for the Free Church. (5) Mr. R. Allevne Lee, Advocate, Secretary of the Royal Commission. (6) Sheriff Guthrie, who was one of the Counsel in the Scottish Courts for the United Free Church. (7) Mr. Robert Russell Simpson, W.S., one of the most important officials in the United Free Church. (8) The Rev. Dr. Ross Taylor, Moderator of the United Free Church when the Union took place. (9) Mr. Edward Theodore Salvesen, Advocate, Solicitor-General for Scotland, Counsel for the Free Church throughout the dispute. (10) The Rev. George Adam Smith, Professor of Old Testament Literature in Glasgow Free Church College. (11) The Rev. Archibald Henderson, Minister of Crieff, and Junior Clerk of Assembly. (12) The Rev. Dr. Marcus Dods, Professor of New Testament Literature in New College, Edinburgh.

(From copyright photographs by Elliott and Fry, and Moffat, Edinburgh, and others.)

Digitized by Google

capacity could alone provide both the bane and the antidote. Accordingly, after all attempts to bring about a compromise between the parties had failed, and after the United Free Church had shown its marvellous resources by subscribing in a few weeks £150,000 as an emergency fund, the Government appointed a Royal Commission, consisting of the Earl of Elgin, Lord Kinnear, and Sir Ralph Anstruther, to enquire into all the facts connected with the funds and properties of the Free Church, as to whether it could make use of them, and what action, if any, could be taken on the matter by legislation or otherwise. The Commissioners sat during January and part of February, 1905, and reported fully on the questions laid before them. On their report, the Government introduced a Bill into Parliament which speedily passed both Houses, under which an Executive Commission has been appointed, consisting of Lord Elgin (Chairman), Lord Kinnear, Sir Ralph Anstruther, Sir T. Gibson-Carmichael, and Sir C. B. Logan, to which the property has all been transferred for the purpose of making a just and suitable distribution of it between the two Churches. This Commission begin their sittings this week, and it is hoped that the work will be expedited as rapidly as possible, in order to do away with a situation which has done more harm to the spiritual life of Scotland than a century will repair.

Mathieson.

ST. COLOMBA GAELIC CHURCH, EDINBURGH
Which was taken possession of by the Free Church after the legislation.

THE SYNOD HALL, EDINBURGH
Where the defeated Church held its Assemblies.

Among the important churches of which the Free Church has obtained possession, either by legal action or by force, are Buccleuch-Greyfriars and St. Columba's Churches in the Presbytery of Edinburgh, Fortrose in that of Chanonry, Alness, Rosskeen, and Dingwall in that of Dingwall, Nairn in the Presbytery of Forres and Nairn, and Petty in the Presbytery of Inverness. They also commenced their Theological Session last year in the New College with sixteen students, some of whom, however, will not return. During that session they were compelled to ask the aid of lecturers and professors from the Original Secession, the Reformed Presbyterian and the Baptist Churches, in the persons of the Rev. Professor Morton and Mr. Hay Fleming of the first-named Church, the Rev. Dr. Kerr of the second, and the Rev. J. Urquhart, of the third, who assisted the regularly-appointed professor of the Free Church, Rev. Dr. Alexander. This year the Free Church proposes to do its teaching work wholly by its own ministers, the Rev. C. Bannatyne having been appointed professor and the Rev. J. D. McCulloch principal.

What the future holds in store for the legal Free Church it is hard to say. They are a small body, and the struggle for existence will be severe. If they have done nothing else they have shown a devotion to principle and a readiness to endure sacrifice and suffering that must always ensure them respect.

Mathieson.

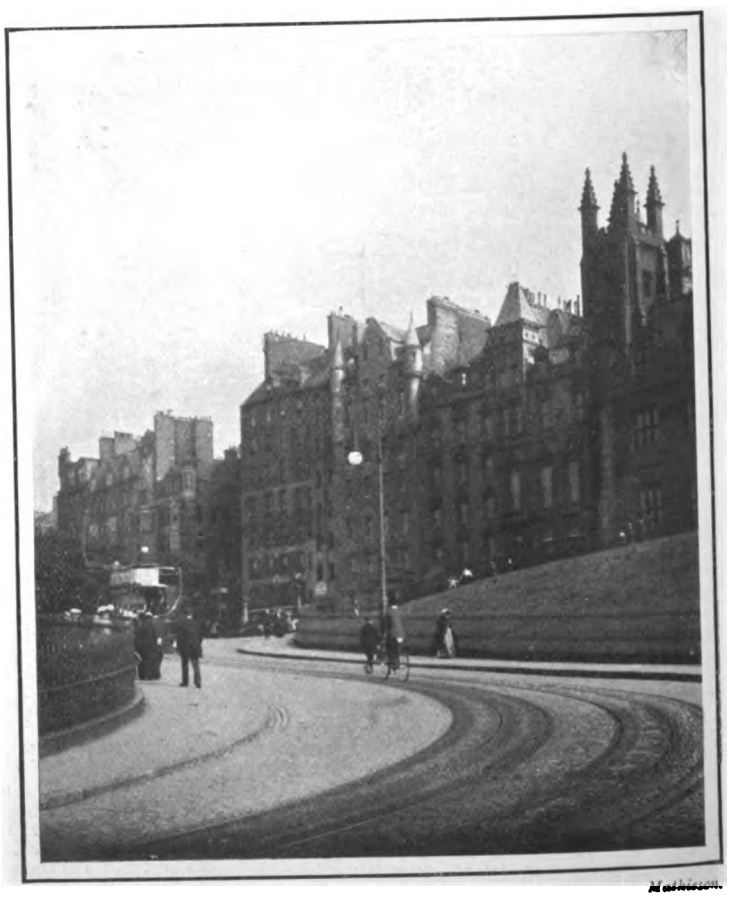
THE FREE CHURCH, ASSEMBLY HALL, AND COLLEGE, EDINBURGH.
This building, which is now in the possession of the legal Free Church, has many historical associations.



THE OFFICES OF THE FREE CHURCH, THE MOUNT, EDINBURGH.
This building also is now legally in the possession of the Free Church, who have removed the name of the United Free Church and insignia from above the doorway.

Digitized by Google

Royal Reviews in Scotland.

IT is not generally known that several reviews of Volunteers were held by the reigning Sovereign in the closing years of the last and early years of the present century, some of the corps then inspected bearing the same titles as are still in existence to-day. In 1799 George III. reviewed sixty-five corps in Hyde Park, when over 8,000 men were under arms. Amongst those were the Honourable Artillery Company, who fired the Royal salute; the St. George's, the Westminster, the Bloomsbury, the Temple, and the Finsbury. Another review was held on the same day the following year, when 11,200 men paraded, the Prince of Wales, as then Captain-General on this occasion, marching past at the head of the Honourable Artillery Company. Then again in 1803 the King reviewed 27,000 troops, while in 1814 the last of the old Volunteer Force of 1803 appeared in "review order" in Hyde Park on the occasion of the visit of the Allied Sovereigns. Most of these "Armed Associations," as many of them were then called, were raised between 1797 and 1803, and they were disbanded on June 30, 1814. Not until 1859 was the Volunteer Movement again set on foot.

The Royal review held in King's Park, Edinburgh, on Monday last, marks the third occasion under the present force of Volunteers on which the reigning Sovereign has shown a mark of signal honour and favour to the Scottish Volunteers.

Following the great review in Hyde Park on June 23, 1860—a function which first opened the eyes of the country to the fact that the force was one which must not be despised (although it is interesting to recall that The Times did not condescend to notice the event!)—Queen Victoria held a similar review in Edinburgh on August 7, 1860, when some 22,000 Scottish Volunteers were on the ground.

In a general order issued by the Adjutant-General after the event, it was stated that "Her Majesty could not see, without admiration, the soldier-like bearing of the different corps as they passed before her, and she finds, in the high state of efficiency to which they have attained in an incredibly short space of time, another proof that she may at all times surely rely on the loyalty and patriotism of her people for the defence, in the hour of need, of the freedom and integrity of the Empire."

The 1881 Review lives chiefly in the memory, not only of those who participated, but in that of the whole country, through the merciless downpour of rain which continued during the entire proceedings. As we have seen it stated: "The rain descended in files, in sections, in companies; it descended in battalions; it descended in brigades and divisions." It descended until there was not a dry stitch of clothing on any one man of the 39,473 present. By common consent, however, the function was a most successful one, the appearance of the men steady and soldier-like, while in physique they represented a body of which any country might be proud.

On Monday about 300 officers and 1,300 non-commissioned officers and men who took part in this event, again paraded before His Majesty, chief amongst them being the Earl of Wemyss, who, for the third time, led past his old regiment, the London Scottish, which he founded in 1859—a unique achievement. No man who was present has done more for the Volunteer Force, by pen, speech, and action, than the veteran Earl.

Copyright.

THE INSPECTION OF THE ROYAL SCOTTISH BY QUEEN VICTORIA AT EDINBURGH IN 1860.

This was the first review of the Scottish Volunteers since the inception of the movement.

Copyright

THE REVIEW AT GLASGOW BY THE PRINCE OF WALES IN 1876

On which occasion he, as Honorary Colonel of the Battalion, inspected the Sutherland and Caithness Regiments.

Copyright.

THE MARCH PAST OF THE ROYAL SCOTTISH BEFORE QUEEN VICTORIA AT EDINBURGH IN 1881.

A celebration of the coming of age of the Volunteer Movement, August 25, 1881.

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

SOME NORTHERN HEALTH RESORTS.

A. H. Robinson.

AT WOODHALL SPA.

Visitors taking the "cure" at the popular Lincolnshire health resort. A view showing the Pump-room, Baths, and Promenade.

IT is not everybody who can afford the luxury of a foreign "cure," or, on the other hand, are willing to submit to the inconveniences which it so frequently incurs. For such as these there are several of the home watering-places, within a few hours of the metropolis, which have imitated with conspicuous success the methods employed by their more fashionable rivals on the Continent. Take Woodhall Spa, for example. This charming little Lincolnshire village owes its present-day popularity entirely to its mineral waters, which contain a greater percentage of iodine than any other in Europe. On this account it has proved a most valuable curative agent in the treatment of scrofula and many other skin ailments, while for gout it is regarded as a sovereign specific. Like many other famous springs, the discovery was purely the result of accident. It appears that in the year 1811 the late Mr. John Parkinson fancied the locality as a likely place for coal, and during the sinking operations the workmen employed found their progress impeded by the outflow of a spring, and the project was abandoned. Little thought was given to the spring until some years after, when local interest was aroused by the proceedings of a half-witted native named Myrril, who was observed in the daily habit of filling a bottle with the water discharged from the well into a small stream that had attracted his attention. Others quickly followed the lead thus given, and, discovering the curative properties of the water—afterwards confirmed by Dr. Franklin, F.R.S., as the result of careful analysis—quickly spread its fame to other parts of the country.

And so Woodhall Spa has steadily continued to increase in popularity year by year. Originally the accommodation for patients was of a very primitive kind, consisting of a modest brick shed containing only one bath. The Woodhall Spa Company, Limited, however, quickly recognised the growing needs of this rapidly-rising resort, and have built a handsome pump-room and baths, embodying all the modern improvements found in the fashionable Spas on the Continent. The equipment of this establishment includes shower, lave and local douches, inhalation,

Photochrom.

THE OLD SULPHUR WELL, HARROGATE.

One of the oldest features of this famous Northern Spa is the old sulphur well, which did service until the present luxurious baths were erected. The autumn season at Harrogate is an ideal time in which to take the "cure."

Digitized by Google

respiration, and natural vapour baths from the heated mineral water can be applied wholly or locally. In addition to the Krewznach system, massage, as practised at Aix-les-Bains, is given when required. The entire building is heated throughout by warm water, thus ensuring a comfortable and equable temperature at all seasons of the year.

The comfort of visitors has been very carefully studied from almost every point of view. The Victoria Hotel, which adjoins the baths, and is the property of the same company, provides accommodation for about eighty guests. Here one can obtain the celebrated Bromo-Iodine waters, either for drinking or bathing purposes, without the necessity of stirring outside. There are several other first-rate hotels and hydropathic establishments, but the Victoria is the only one where the privilege may be enjoyed. The amusement of visitors has been carefully provided for by the directors of the Spa. For the golfer there is a capital nine-hole course adjoining the baths; well-kept tennis and croquet lawns are also available to those using the Spa. Hunting men will find Woodhall a convenient centre for the meets of the Southwold packs; it is also within an easy distance of the Blankney and Burton districts. For those bringing their hunters down with them the Spa provides first-rate stabling. Then good coarse fishing can be had in the Witham and Bain, and shooting for members of the Gun Club. Many places of interest can be visited in the neighbourhood, such as Kirkstead Abbey, Boston, which of course, possesses special attractions for American visitors, Scrivelsby Court, the historic seat of the Dymokes, Tattershall Castle, one of the finest specimens of mediæval brickwork in the country, and Somersby, the birthplace of Alfred Tennyson. The brook of which he sang

> "I come from haunts of coot and hern,
> I make a sudden sally,
> And sparkle out among the fern,
> To bicker down a valley," still ripples and sparkles by the old parsonage.

Situated in the heart of a beautiful woodland district, Woodhall can be reached within a comfortable three hours' journey from the metropolis by the expresses of the Great Northern Railway. For the sick or well it would be difficult to recommend a more delightful place for an autumn holiday than this pretty little Lincolnshire village, with its lofty pines and stately avenues.

To the north of Woodhall, in the adjoining county, lie two more famous Northern health resorts—Ilkley and Harrogate, as celebrated in their way, perhaps, as either Homburg or Carlsbad. It is almost unnecessary to commend to the health-seeker or holiday-maker two such well-known inland "cures." The discovery of Harrogate's famous Bogs Field Springs by Sir William Slingsby is an oft-told tale. Practically every kind of treatment can be indulged in at Harrogate, which possesses the most complete and up-to-date system of baths in this country.

The newest treatment of all is that administered by electricity. The process is an application of the alternate current by means of which 100,000 volts is passed through the patient without his feeling the least sensation. The effect is declared to be most exhilarating, while rheumatic patients are loud in their praises of the electrifying process. Both Harrogate and Ilkley—the latter situated in the lovely valley of the Wharfe—enjoy the purest and most bracing of air, an ideal situation, a plenitude of internal attractions and amusements, facilities for following almost any pursuit, and the proximity of exquisite country.

The country is seen, perhaps, to even better advantage now than in the middle of summer; while the air, which is always bracing, no matter how hot and oppressive in town, is deliciously fresh and health giving.

Photochrom.

THE GOLF LINKS, ILKLEY.

Like Harrogate, Ilkley is a favourite inland watering-place, not the least of its attractions being the fine and picturesque eighteen-hole golf course. It is also a most convenient centre from which to explore the valley of the Wharfe.

Ilkley is neither so fashionable nor so interesting a town as Harrogate, which is about four times the size; but for those who seek a really quiet and restful holiday, and have a fondness for long moorland rambles, it would be difficult to beat. There are numerous hydros where those wishing to undergo a "cure" can remain.

From London the Great Northern Company, in conjunction with the North Eastern Railway, run a number of daily expresses to these two favourite Northern watering-places, and until the end of September issue to holiday-makers and others special holiday contract tickets, available for a week or a fortnight, which cover any number of journeys anywhere between the stations for which they are available. This system gives the holder practically all the privileges of a season ticket, and is to be highly commended.

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

IT was the lot of the Royal Dart Yacht Club to bring the big class racing season of 1905 to a conclusion with its annual regatta at Dartmouth, on September 1. The Plymouth clubs arrived at the conclusion, early in the year, that the position at the end of the season was not one to be coveted, particularly in a year when the fixtures were in ordinary course falling late, and thus, by arranging their week's racing in July, left Dartmouth little option in the matter. In comparison with more recent years, the Dartmouth fixture should have been one of at least average interest; as it was, there was some excellent racing, but the boisterous weather of the preceding two days had been responsible for the absence of a few vessels, and the sport has not yet recovered to that extent that any club can view with equanimity even a moderate thinning out of the yachts whose presence may have been expected.

Dartmouth Harbour during regatta times usually presents a most attractive scene. The natural beauties of the harbour are such that it is difficult to imagine how they can be enhanced. When, however, both sides of the water-way are lined with scores of yachts, all displaying a profusion of bunting, the picture is one which no other regatta can rival, the lofty green slopes forming a pleasing background rarely seen in yachting pictures. Added to this, the town always endeavours to make regatta week attractive in other ways. No one can complain of dulness at Dartmouth. There is always plenty of fun in progress ashore, and at the end of the day's racing, there being little need for keeping anchor watch aboard the yachts, it is the custom for everyone to go ashore, and enjoy a turn on the roundabouts and visit the various shows in the fair, which is always a feature of the regatta. In this particular respect, Torquay is somewhat similar; but it is chiefly at the quaint old town of Dartmouth that yachtsmen give themselves over to the shore amusements. The regatta extends over three days, and includes small class sailing matches and rowing events inside the harbour, and this year, in addition to displays of fireworks, the front of the town was extensively illuminated every evening.

The townspeople put forth every effort to make the annual regatta attractive, and so the town identifies itself with the yachting fixture in a manner not attempted in other districts. Under all circumstances, it is hardly to be expected that yachtsmen will ever desert the fixtures in Torbay and at Dartmouth, late though they may come in the season. There is, however, one contingency that has to be taken into serious consideration in estimating the future welfare of these regattas, and that is the possibility of accidents to the yachts. This is a more serious matter for a club to contemplate, whose fixture comes at or near the end of the season, than for any whose regatta is earlier, as a yacht meeting with a mishap, necessitating extensive repairs, might not trouble to have them attended to with only one or two races to follow. There was an instance of this when Mr. Kennedy's yawl, White Heather, was dismasted in the Solent, and did not refit for the remainder of the season.

If this year's arrangements are adhered to, in future there will be only four days' racing after the Solent, and as two long passages have to be made in connection with these, fears are already entertained at the Western ports that more owners than at present may discontinue their season's racing with the close of the Solent regattas.

Kirk, Cowes.

ZINITA

65-ft. linear rater, built two years ago by Fife for Messrs. W. and J. C. Connell. The order was placed for her when it was expected that a class of these vessels would be formed, but her owners have had to be content with handicap racing. In the handicap classes she sailed as 92 tons Thames measurement.

The Royal Dart Club had an ideal day for its racing. The wind from the north-west had just that weight in it to make skippers doubtful whether or not to send biggest jack-yarders aloft; but as soon as one set the example, the others followed, though now and again some of the lighter-weather boats had as much as they could comfortably stand. The triangular course gave a reach, a run, and a turn to windward, so that, whatever any particular boat's favourite point of sailing might be, she had it at some time of the day.

Messrs. Connell's 65-footer Zinita was scratch vessel in the big handicap, and at the end of the first round looked like winning. The day was, however, not devoid of flukes, and once or twice vessels got lifts from slight shifts of wind, which enabled them to keep within their handicap times, while the heavier boats showed to advantage in the harder puffs, and Zinita had the barren honour of leading the fleet home, while the first prize went to Betty, which finished last, but well within her time. Valdora, in this race, threw away her chance by fouling the mark-boat at the start, and so disqualifying herself.

The race for 52-footers resolved itself into a duel between Sonya, the American craft, and last year's champion, Maymon, in which the latter was victorious after giving one of her best displays of sailing this season. In the first round she fairly beat Sonya on the turn to windward — the American's strong point.

As the vessels took up their anchorage in the harbour after the day's racing was concluded, they hoisted their strings of prize flags representing the season's winnings. Sonya flew twelve flags, while Maymon had just double that number. In the superior records of British boats in home waters against the latest Herreshoff production, designed and built specially for this class, students of form may take some consolation for our defeats in International racing in American waters. It has to be borne in mind, though, that Sonya has missed several races owing to mishaps, and a comparison of wins in proportion to the number of races sailed in will be of interest.

CORINTHIAN.

Digitized by Google

THE DONCASTER WEEK.

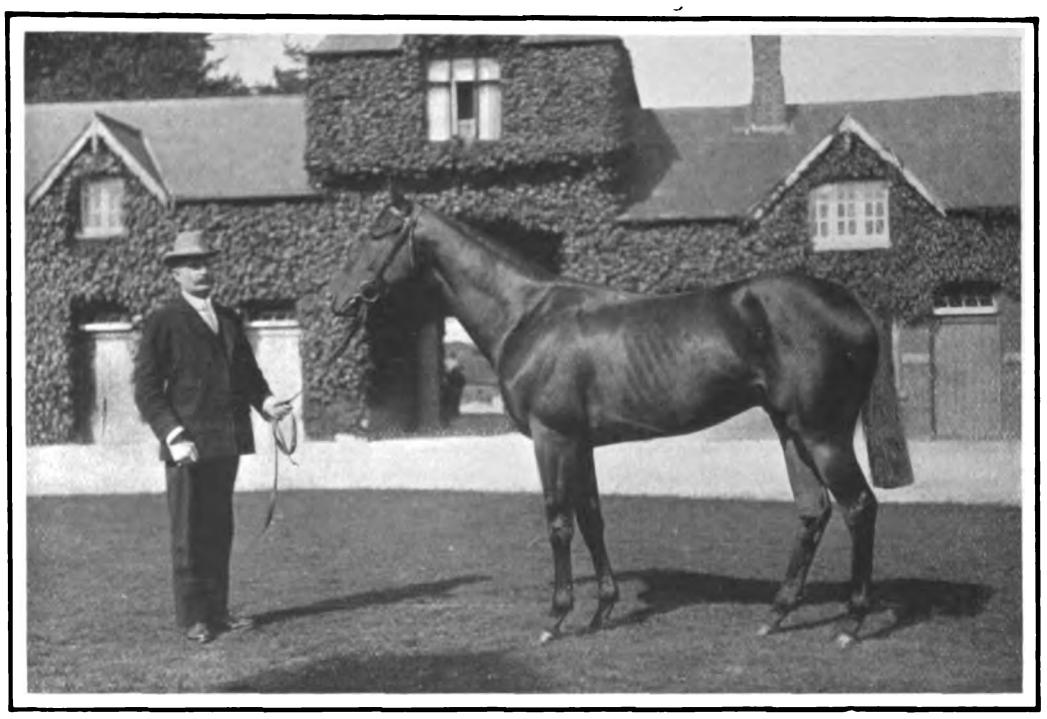
THE patronage of his Majesty and, to some extent also, the glorious weather which prevailed, attracted the attendance of what can only be described as a great multitude when the great Doncaster Meeting commenced on Tuesday, the 12th inst., with the race for the Fitzwilliam Stakes, which was easily won by Out o' Sight, ridden by Morny Cannon, Myrcia was second, and old Cossack showed that he still retains some of his speed by carrying his 9-st. 2-lb. into third place. It is an open secret that the connection between Mr. R. H. Henning and Brewer, his trainer, is about to cease. Curiously enough, just now Mr. Henning's horses cannot do wrong, and Best Light won the Doncaster Welter Plate for him, beating Flower Girl by five lengths, with Golden Saint filling the third place. Then came the Champagne Stakes, in which one had been looking forward to a meeting between Admirable Crichton and Black Arrow, for whom, owing to the absence of Major Loder's colt, the race was considered a certainty if he could be prevailed upon to start. This brilliant but erratic colt must, I fear, be written of as being completely unreliable, for he either could not or would not gallop when it came to racing, and finished a bad fourth behind Achilles, Victorious, and the colt by Diamond Jubilee out of Dame Agaeta.

Mr. R. H. Henning scored again in the Great Yorkshire Handicap, which was won by Airship (7-st. 8-lb.) by three-quarters of a length, after a pretty race with Mark Time (9-st.); a length and a half away Throwaway was third, and Henry the First, Fermoyle, and Sandboy were amongst the beaten horses. Very popular was the victory of Lord Fitzwilliam's Foresight in the Glasgow Plate, which he won by four lengths from a field of twenty runners.

The Fates were unpropitious with regard to the race for the St. Leger of 1905. There had been a prospect of witnessing a contest between the winner of the Derby and the Oaks, with the French champion joining in the fray; but "the best laid plans of men and mice oft gang aglev." The weather prevented the arrival of Val d'Or, and no sooner was it certain that he would not run, than another blow descended, and Cicero was scratched. Even that evil was not sufficient unto the day, for it shortly transpired that Cherry Lass was not well, and, well—it is certain that never before has such a ragged field gone out to battle for the St. Leger Stakes. There was little delay at the post, and when the horses settled down to their work Magon settled down with a slight lead from Royal Ward, Cherry Lass, and Polymelus. After going about half a mile Cherry Lass improved her position, followed by Challacombe, Llangibby, Nimay, and Royal Ward. A quarter of a mile from home Cherry Lass was beaten, and Challacombe, taking up the running, won easily by three lengths. The race was run in 3-min. 5 2-5-sec., which is the fastest time on record for the St. Leger.



W. A. Rouch.

MR. W. M. G. SINGER'S CHALLACOMBE.
Winner of this year's St. Leger. Trained by Alec Taylor.

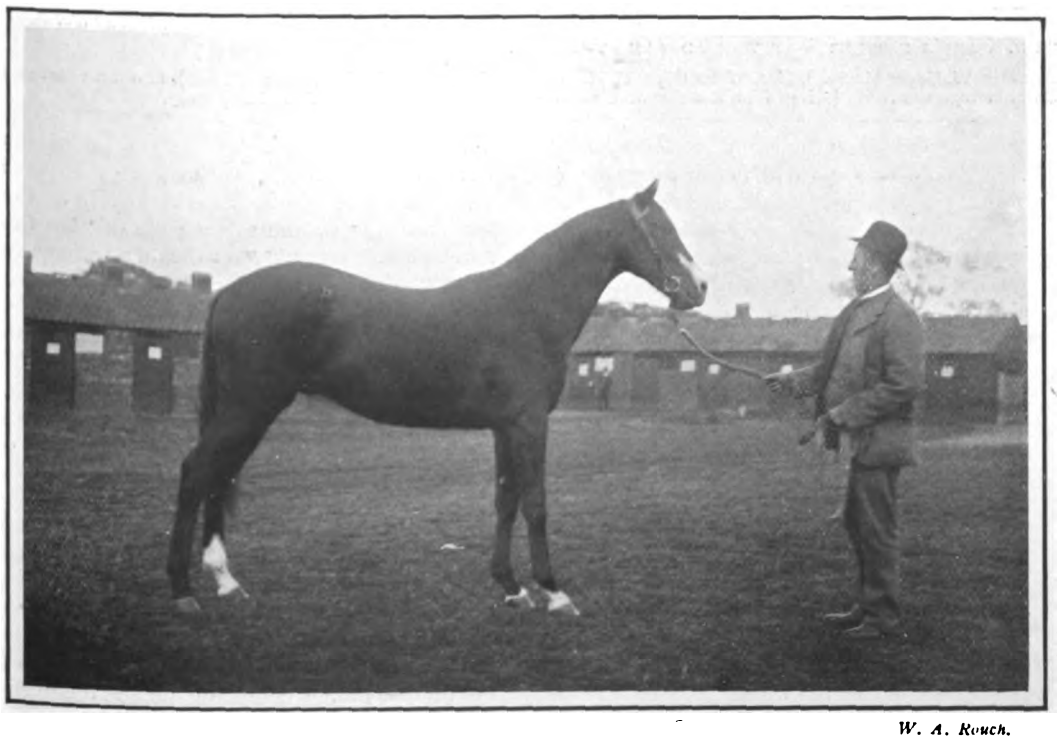
It never rains but it pours, and having won his first classic race Mr. Singer went on to annex the Rufford Abbey Plate with Harmony Hall; and Ulalume, running with her customary gameness, placed the Tattersall Sale Stakes to the credit of Sir E. Vincent by a neck, after a pretty race with Gals' Gossip.

The Cleveland Handicap, which has before now furnished a clue to the winner of the Cambridgeshire, was won by Rievaulx (carrying 6-st. 7 lb.) from Caravel (7-st. 8-lb.) and Sweet Katie (7-st. 10-lb.), and it should be remembered that although the judge's verdict was only three-quarters of a length in favour of the winner, it was a very meritorious performance, for after getting shut in coming round the bend, he extricated himself from his difficulties and won quite in the style of a good horse.

Very good indeed was the all-round sport provided by the racing on Thursday. The Portland Plate, for which seventeen competitors joined issue, was perhaps the principal event of the afternoon, and no more exciting struggle has been witnessed during the present season, nor do I think that Maher has ever ridden a more brilliant race. Those who are acquainted with the Doncaster course will appreciate the disadvantage under which Xeny laboured, owing to having been drawn on the far side of the course, and will realise the clever tactics of his rider, who, using the horse's tremendous burst of speed directly the barrier went up, was able to come right across and get the position on the rails. At the distance Xeny still held a slight lead, almost simultaneously Chelys challenged on the inside, and Thrush, Lord Toddington, and Melayr on the outside. A terrific struggle followed, in which Xeny, running with the utmost gameness, and beautifully ridden, remained victorious by a short head from Chelys, who finished the same distance in front of Lord Toddington. Mr. G. Faber, who has none too much luck in racing, won the Alexandra Plate with Mountain Rose, who, after being in difficulties, ran on very stoutly, and finally won easily by two lengths from Caio and Speculor. Mr. Jersey's pretty colours were seen to the front on Vergia in the Wharncliffe Stakes. Costly Lady added to the Heath House triumphs by winning the Scarborough Stakes, and Colonia made some amends to Colonel Hall Walker for his bad fortune with Black Arrow and Cherry Lass when she won the Rous Plate in good style from the Cydaria colt.

The race for the historic Doncaster Cup on the last day of the meeting was well worthy of its past reputation, and rarely has a keener struggle been fought out for the coveted trophy than that which resulted in the short head victory of Bachelor's Button from Mark Time, the nearest horse to them being Admiral Breeze, beaten into third place by eight lengths. The Prince of Wales's Nursery Handicap of 1,000-sovs. is often won by a youngster with a brilliant future before him, and on that account every one was glad to see the popular colours of Mr. L. de Rothschild victorious by the aid of his good-looking colt Radium, by Bend Or out of Taia, who won cleverly by half a length from Mr. F. A. Wigan's Sarcelle.

CAURIRE.



W. A. Rouch.

SIR TATTON SYKES'S BAY COLT
By Flying Fox—Flower of Wit, sold at the Doncaster Yearling Sales last week for 5,000 guineas.

Digitized by Google

Letters of a Playgoer to a Friend in the Country.

MY DEAR DEMETRIUS,—You want to know whether I have seen all the new plays. Yes, I have. And so, having answered your question, I remain, with kind regards, yours very sin—— Stay, though; I see a look of disappointment spreading over your cherubic countenance as you sit at your well-spread breakfast board. I can fancy your casting an aggrieved glance up at the ceiling, and then appealing for sympathy to Mrs. Demetrius across the table. In imagination I can hear your voice, "Well, I do think he might have told us something about them." Very well, Demetrius, so I will.

First of all, I know you want advice as to the theatre you should first visit when you next leave your quiet rectory to pass a day or two in London. On that point I have no hesitation. "The Prodigal Son" is the thing for you beyond a doubt. Mr. Walkley's epithet for it is "filling." You will get your money's worth at Drury Lane; no question about that. Also there is a real unction about Mr. Hall Caine's dramatic method which is certain to appeal to you. He handles his material in the large style, and his actors all take the cue from him nobly. The whole effect strikes one as being something over life-size.

Mr. Henry Neville, for instance, is the most impressive heavy father and Governor-General of Iceland that could be imagined. In reality, he would never have been allowed to remain in a post so unworthy of his magnificent manner. He would have been made king of somewhere, if not an emperor. I recollect once seeing Mr. Neville play an earl; it occurred to me that if he had been a duke they would have had to enlarge the theatre. Drury Lane is quite big enough already, so it is, on the whole, just as well that he is not given sovereign rank.

To Mr. Frank Cooper, too, the heroic style comes quite natural. He really is immensely effective. It is no wonder the house rises at him every night. Of course the part of the good brother who is sacrificed all through to the handsome scamp is one that, to some extent, plays itself, but not many actors could make so much of it as Mr. Cooper does.

Of George Alexander's Prodigal I would go further, and say that no actor I can think of would play it so skilfully. You see, the Prodigal is doing things all through the first three acts to make the audience dislike him. Yet it is necessary to the fourth act that he should retain some of their sympathy. Mr. Alexander suggests very cleverly that Oscar Stephensson is not really wicked, but only weak. He makes you feel that if it hadn't been for his wicked sister-in-law, he would have behaved himself and made his girl-wife happy, and never gone and cheated at baccarat in a Riviera casino.

But what a pity that would have been, for then we should never have seen the wonderful gambling-palace built up so solidly and gorgeously that one cannot believe it is put together and taken to pieces again every night. Nor should we have had his fine repentance scenes when, with whitened hair and a look of the "Silver King," he goes back to Iceland and tries to make amends for his folly and sin. So we ought to be grateful to the wicked sister-in-law for doing her part so well. By the way, if you have never quite realised what "twopence coloured" means, you will when you see Miss Nancy Price tackling this character with a lurid intensity that must be seen to be believed. From beginning to end, my dear Demetrius, you will revel in "The Prodigal Son."

I think you might perhaps like also "Dr. Wake's Patient," at the Adelphi. It will not put any strain upon your intellect. Mr. Jerome once recommended a book of his by guaranteeing that "it would not elevate a cow." This play would not overtax the mind of a sheep. It is chock full of the wildest improbabilities. Dr. Wake is a student at Guy's in 1894, and a Harley Street specialist in 1897! Dr. Wake's parents, an old farmer and his wife, have living near them in the country an earl and a countess, yet they do not know them by sight!! When their daughter is ill through losing her heart to Dr. Wake (not knowing who he is), because he looked after her when she had tumbled off her horse close to his father's farm, she is sent to consult a nerve specialist, who turns out to be no other than her unknown hero!!!

After this anything might happen. I fully expected the old farmer to throw off his disguise and declare himself to be Hawkshaw the Detective. The only person who amused me at all in the piece was Mr. Gayer Mackay, one of the two authors of it. He plays a foolish young fellow with a trick of strengthening all his adjectives with "abso*lute*ly," and is really funny. I am told I ought to admire Miss Braithwaite and Mr. Hallard as the lovers; you shall do it for me when you come to town.

If you stay at the Carlton, as you generally do, you will be nice and handy for "Oliver Twist," which is a very fair version of the novel, and has a genuine smack of Dickens about it. You will be able to look in at the Haymarket, too, and see a little of "On the Love Path." I think you will find a little quite enough. There is humour in the piece, but it is handled very economically. I reversed the judgment of the Carpenter and "said nothing but 'the butter's spread too thin.'" Still, Miss Ellis Jeffreys is a pretty woman, who knows how to wear smart frocks and smile; and Mr. Du Maurier has become a habit with a large class of playgoers. So, perhaps, the piece may go.

I should like to think "An Angel Unawares" is in for a long run. Miss Fanny Brough is an old favourite of mine, and the author is a chip of a famous old block; in other words, a son of Sir William Harcourt. It may do. I hope it will. But its theme lacks interest, I fear; not an uncommon complaint among the plays of the autumn season of 1905.

Believe me, dear Demetrius, yours very sincerely, SEPTIMUS STARR.

Ellis and Walery.

"DR. WAKE'S PATIENT," AT THE ADELPHI THEATRE.

Those shown in the above illustration are: Duff Wynterden (Mr. W. Gayer Mackay), Mrs. Wake (Mrs. E. H. Brooke), Andrew Wake (Mr. Charles Rock), two farm servants Dr. Wake (Mr. C. M. Hallard), Lady Gerania Wyn-Carteret (Miss Lilian Braithwaite), and the Earl of St. Olbyn (Mr. Alfred Brydone).

Digitized by Google

POPULAR SINGERS AT HOME.

XIX.—MISS CARMEN HILL

AT BEAUCHAMP LODGE, WARWICK CRESCENT.

Miss Carmen Hill is undoubtedly one of the most popular concert singers of the day, although probably one of the youngest, being born in Aberdeen in the early eighties. She studied at the Royal Academy of Music under Mr. Frederick King, and appeared in the production of "The Cherry Girl" at the Vaudeville Theatre. She has, however, given up the stage for the concert platform, and her rich and sympathetic voice made her one of the leading favourites at last season's Ballad Concerts.

(From copyright photographs specially taken for this paper.)

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

TO erect a tablet to mark the houses habited by dear dead men and women who were great may be a very laudable business. To write at length about every such erection by the London County Council or any other body is not possible; but we must comment on the house chosen for a tablet to indicate the residence of Leigh Hunt. Perhaps the County Council recognised the possibility that the house in Edwardes Square, Kensington—which has the strongest claim to recognition—may be demolished within the next few years; but Upper Cheyne Row, where Leigh Hunt lived during the period of his most acute pecuniary embarrassments, is hardly a happy choice. Carlyle has described the Cheyne Row household as "a poetical tinkerdom" without a parallel. In Leigh Hunt's family room, he said, "you will find half-a-dozen old rickety chairs, gathered from half-a-dozen different hucksters, and all seemingly engaged and just pausing in a violent hornpipe. On these and around them and over the dusty table and ragged carpet lie all kinds of litter—books, papers, egg-shells, scissors, and last night when I was there the torn heart of a three-quartern loaf. His own room above stairs, into which alone I strive to enter, he keeps cleaner. It has only two chairs, a bookcase, and a writing-table; yet the noble Hunt receives you in his Tinkerdom in the spirit of a king, apologises for nothing, and then, folding closer his loose-flowing 'muslin cloud' of a printed night-gown in which he always writes, commences the liveliest dialogue on philosophy and the prospects of man." In this house Leigh Hunt lived in daily fear of the unwelcome visitors which every knock at the door might bring.

A Poetical Tinkerdom

* * *

THE lineage of our village may be traced back to the rude forefathers of Gray's Elegy and the several villages of Goldsmith, Gilbert White, Mrs. Gaskell, Jane Austen, and Miss Mitford; and we had thought that, next to Miss Hayden, Miss Haverfield had caught the atmosphere of that Arcadian hamlet best of living writers. Our village has had numberless disguises; its folk have spoken every kind of dialect; it has been made the home of faded gentility; of upper, middle, and lower class humour; of studies in sordid gloom; of stark passions; of rose-coloured idyls. It has always interested us, and we have loved its people. "Badmanstow" we read with pleasure—akin, oddly enough, to our joy in the bludgeon italics of Cobbett's "Rural Rides"; but either a new genus has arisen, or Miss Haverfield has now lost her powers of observation, understanding, and sympathy. That new genus is not; so it is Miss Haverfield who must be blamed for the failure of any of the poor creatures in "Because of Jock" (Allen, 6s.) to quicken our interest. The book is just worth reading; but we would have preferred, say, a Hetty Sorrel before a Fan, an Adam Bede before a Major Thornton. Because of the law of contraries, we turn away to read again Crabbe's black tragedies and hard-edged portraiture—to wander, as it were, in a Childe Roland country: "Bog clay and rubble, sand and stark black dearth."

Because of Jock.

* * *

THOUGH there are two Tommies—old Tommy, the roué, and young Tommy, the prig—in "Tommy Carteret" (Ward, Lock, 6s.), Mr. Justus Miles Forman has made his principal figure a ghost. Old Tommy we despise; young Tommy we long to frog-march to the nearest haven for the weak of mind; the ghost we find a most unsatisfactory spook. We admire Lytton's spectre, because about it is nothing human; like the farmer's daughter in—was it not?—the "Bab Ballads," its "principal feature is eye." The vagueness of Milton's death—"what seemed his head," etc.—we can praise; but to us that wanchancy thing that "Loup'd and flang and capered on the Bass Rock" what time the creishy weaver sat at his loom, was, in essence, human. "Grandfather's siller tester" would, we know, have made him feel uncomfortable for all time; he would have loup'd and flang and capered nevermore. But he interested us; Mr. Forman's creature—no wanchancy thing—does not. Maybe we do not possess that "feel for a ghost" which Mr. Snell of the "Rainbow" deemed necessary; anyhow, we dislike the ghost of Mariana. She talks, loves, coquets, and wears a dressing-gown. We think we could dissolve her did we try.

No Wanchancy Thing.

* * *

IN a case of alleged horse-coping before the courts the other day, mention was made of a pony which, when put in harness, "started kicking like lightning," and "went round and round, and yelled." The vagaries and infirmities of the horse have figured largely in literature. Everybody will call to mind the steed on which Petruchio rode to his wedding—a horse "possessed with the glanders, and like to mose in the chine; troubled with the lampass, infected with the fashions, full of windgalls, sped with spavins, rayed with the yellows," etc. Don Quixote's Rosinante was a strange beast, but more sinned against than sinning, and American humorists have worked the horse hard. Max Adeler's steed, which led its owner a dog's life, and on being doctored by its groom because its (artificial) tail came off, knocked its stall to pieces, dislocated its off hind leg, and expired in frightful agony, is well known; and there is also the horse which Mark Twain rode in the Holy Land, with its infinite capacity for shying, and for getting itself into such embarrassing positions as that in the illustration which depicts the animal scratching its right ear with its off hind foot, to the consternation of its rider. Since the days of Regnault, the son of Aymon, who with his cousin Maugin the enchanter "faked" the steed Bayard to deceive Charlemagne, horse-coping has been a much-practised but not popular art. Did Dr. Primrose try a little amateur faking on his "blind, spavined, galled hack" Blackberry before disposing of him? He certainly left intending purchasers to find out for themselves that the beast was wall-eyed.

Vagaries.

FLEET STREET, SHOWING ST. DUNSTAN'S CHURCH, AS IT WAS WHEN LAMB WAS A BOY.

(From "The Life of Charles Lamb," by Mr. E. V. Lucas. Messrs. Methuen and Co.).

* * *

MR. JOHN BLOUNDELLE-BURTON'S new romance, "The Sword of Gideon," will be published by Cassell and Co., Limited, on the 29th inst. The narrative deals, in so far as the romance itself is concerned, with the adventures of a young English officer of the Cuirassiers, or 4th Horse, in his perilous attempt to remove from Liége a beautiful young compatriot who, while that city is in the possession of the French at the outbreak of the War of Succession in Spain, is unable to quit it. Those who remember Mr. Bloundelle-Burton's romance of "Across the Salt Seas"—which originally appeared in these columns—will recall the use made of this stirring period by the author when describing the Spanish and Naval portion of that great campaign, and will doubtless read with equal interest the moving story of "The Sword of Gideon" in its Flemish setting. The historical characters introduced are, it is perhaps unnecessary to say in this author's case, actual ones drawn from the best references obtainable; and the Earl of Peterborough (the "Mordanto" of Swift), De Violaine, the romantic French defender of Liége, many officers of the (now) 1st (King's) Dragoon Guards, and last, but not least, Marlborough himself, all play their parts in the story.

The Sword of Gideon.

* * *

THERE is an excellent idea underlying Mr. Masefield's book, "Sea Life in Nelson's Time" (Methuen, 3s. 6d.), but he has apparently devoted insufficient labour to mastering his subject, for there are mistakes and mis-statements scattered throughout the book which we should not have thought it possible for any serious Naval historian to perpetrate. Mr. Masefield's object is to show us a picture of the existence of the men who fought and won the battles of the Nile, Copenhagen, and Trafalgar. But he does not show us, as he should, the wonderful change that came over the Navy during the forty-seven years of Nelson's life; and where he has been unable to find information bearing on the period under consideration, he has simply turned to earlier or later authorities, and, without acknowledging his indebtedness, applies their remarks to a time with which they have no connection.

Nelson's Navy.

* * *

"THE STORY OF PET MARJORIE," the "bonnie wee croodlin' doo" whose poetic fervour and naïveté captivated the heart of Sir Walter Scott, was published only a few months ago, but a new edition is already called for. The opportunity has been taken to embody new matter, including Dr. John Brown's "Marjory Fleming" and original illustrations by Warwick Brookes. The newly-discovered "journals" of Pet Marjorie, with the child's innocent observations on men and things, are also included. Messrs. Simpkin, Marshall, and Co. have just published the book.

Pet Marjorie.

---

BOOKS TO READ.

The Improbable Idyl, by Dorothea Gerard. (Methuen.)
Shakespeare's Christmas, by "Q." (A. T. Quiller-Couch). (Smith, Elder.)
Starvecrow Farm, by Stanley Weyman. (Hutchinson.)
The Passport, by Richard Bagot. (Methuen.)
The Patient Man, by Percy White (Methuen.)
A Maker of History, by E. Phillips Oppenheim. (Ward, Lock.)
The Hundred Days, by Max Pemberton. (Cassell.)
Captain Maroon, by Robert Stuart. (Nash.)

Digitized by Google

BENGER'S FOOD FOR INFANTS, INVALIDS, AND THE AGED.

BENGER's FOOD can be enjoyed and assimilated when other foods disagree. It forms a delicate and highly nutritive cream, rich in all the elements necessary to maintain vigorous health, but entirely free from rough and indigestible particles, which often produce irritation in delicate stomachs.

To Messrs. Benger's Food, Ltd. March 3rd, 1904.
Gentlemen,
I notice you advertise your food for 'Infants, Invalids, and the Aged.' I do not come under any of these classes, yet I always use it for my last meal at night. I find it as useful in health as I did four years ago in diphtheria. It is so easily digested that having naturally a not too strong digestion I ensure a good night's rest. The Rev. H——

Benger's Food is sold in tins by chemists, etc., everywhere.

An unique Show of New HOME-SPUNS, etc., for Present Season's

GOLF AND SHOOTING SUITS.

A varied selection of all the Latest Patterns in several weights.

INSPECTION CORDIALLY INVITED.

HUMPHREYS & CROOK

(ESTABLISHED OVER 60 YEARS),

Naval, Military & Sporting Tailors,

OPPOSITE THE CARLTON.

3, HAYMARKET, LONDON, W.

THE SHORTEST AND BEST ROUTE from LONDON for the

LONDON SOUTH WESTERN RAILWAY

CHURCH CONGRESS AT WEYMOUTH.

EXPRESS CORRIDOR TRAINS. FROM WATERLOO STATION TO

WEYMOUTH

IN ABOUT 3 HOURS.

LUNCHEON AND DINING CARS.

Ladies' Compartments. Lavatory Compartments.

LUGGAGE IN ADVANCE.

THROUGH TRAINS TO WEYMOUTH from principal places in the Midlands and North of England.

Book "via South-Western Route."

For full particulars, write Mr. Henry Holmes, Superintendent of the Line, Waterloo Station, S.E.

CHAS. T. OWENS, General Manager

LONDON SOUTH WESTERN RAILWAY

IF YOU ARE BUYING

Any kind of Requisite for Travelling, it will pay you to send for

W. H. SMITH'S

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF

PORTMANTEAUX
TRUNKS
BAGS

And every description of Leather Goods and Travelling Requisites for Home and the Colonies.

Opposite the Abbey, BATH.

Maker of the ROSEBERY HAT BOX.

LORD ROSEBERY says: "It is an ingenious and useful Hat Box."

ECONOMY — HEALTH — PURITY — NO BEETROOT USED.

"GLEBE"

REFINED GENUINE

CANE SUGAR

AND

CANE GOLDEN SYRUP

GLEBE SUGAR REFINING CO., Greenock, Glasgow, and St. George's House, Eastcheap, London.

Digitized by Google

Leaves from a Collector's Note-book.

No LIX.—THE INFLUENCE OF WILLIAM BILLINGSLEY AND THOMAS PARDOE OF DERBY ON THE "POTTING" OF SOUTH WALES.

FINE EXAMPLES OF THE ART OF PARDOE.
From photographs of the originals in the Cardiff Museum.

THE story of both Swansea and Nantgarw porcelain has already been dealt with generally in these columns. The writer has reserved the careers and achievements of the two Derby "men of mark," who migrated from the English Midlands into South Wales, and there exercised a phenomenal and preponderating influence on the artistic development of the two great china manufactories which, less than a century ago, flourished within easy reach of both Monmouth and Cardiff, for separate consideration. In the interval it has been determined that the Cardiff Science and Art Museum, in which the finest specimens extant of the handiwork of Billingsley and Pardoe are to be found, is, in the near future, to become the National Museum of Wales. On the wisdom and prudence of the decision arrived at, its able curator, Mr. John Ward, F.S.A. (the historian of Billingsley and Pardoe, and the collector and classifier of their productions) is entitled to the congratulations of his brother antiquarians all over the world.

It is from photographs taken at Cardiff under the personal direction of Mr. Ward that the accompanying illustrations have been reproduced. Billingsley, it appears, entered the celebrated Derby works as an apprentice in 1774, where he speedily distinguished himself as an able and artistic flower painter, but it was not so much his skill as a draughtsman and colourist, as his persevering researches as a potter which paved the way for the future triumphs of Nantgarw. Making the production of a porcelain comparable to Sèvres his objective, he successively opened potteries at both Pinxton and Mansfield. Thence he moved to Torksey in Lincolnshire, but quitted it under an assumed name in 1808, going with his son-in-law to Worcester and Coalport. In 1811 they resolved to commence "potting" on their own account.

A SUPERB NANTGARW PLATE.
Decorated by Thomas Pardoe with ewer and flowers.

The sequel of their venture is thus related by Mr. Ward:

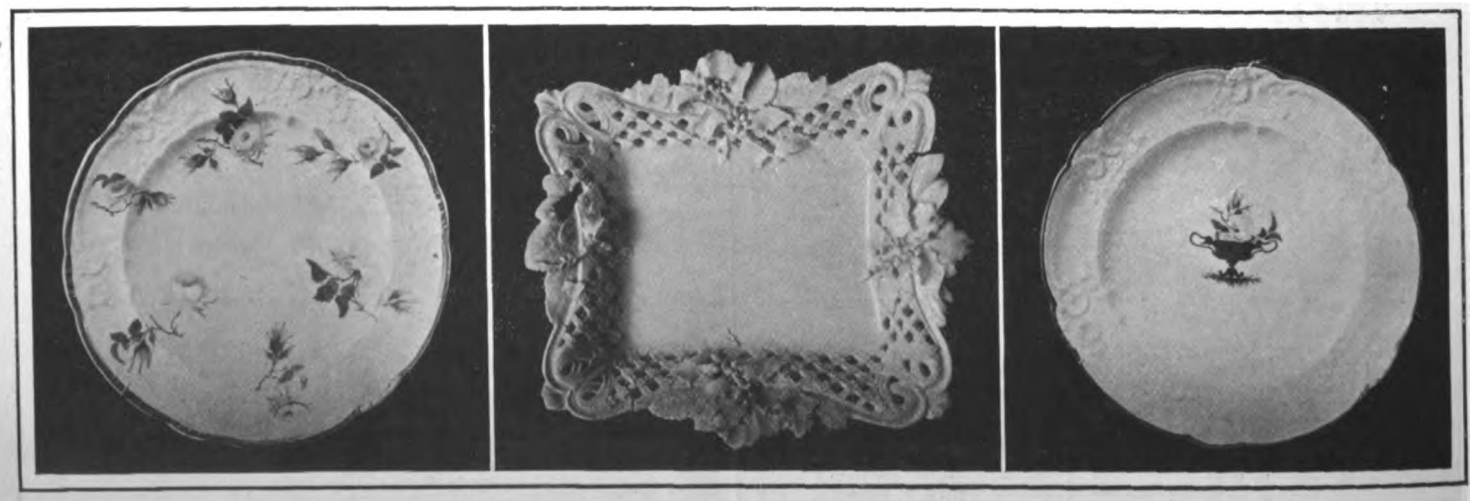
"Their slender capital of £250, augmented by £600 advanced by a public-spirited and versatile land surveyor of the county, William Weston Young, was soon used up. They, with Young's concurrence, made an appeal for Government patronage, submitting to that end examples of their work to the Board of Trade (one of which is now given by way of illustration). This, through a member of that Board, Sir Joseph Banks, led to a visit in 1814, from Mr. Dillwyn, the proprietor of the Cambrian Pottery at Swansea. This gentleman being favourably impressed made an arrangement with Billingsley (or 'Beeley' as he now called himself) and Walker, under which they removed to the above-mentioned pottery, and thus was introduced the manufacture of porcelain into Swansea. Disagreements between them and the proprietor, however, led to their return to Nantgarw in 1817.

"With pecuniary aid rendered by various local gentlemen the resuscitated works rapidly became so far a success that there was a considerable demand for the porcelain in the London market. Nevertheless in 1819 the partners were compelled to relinquish the concern through want of capital. This was followed by a sale, in which Mr. Young purchased all, or nearly all, of the plant and stock, and for two years longer he continued the manufacture on the spot under the management of Thomas Pardoe, a talented painter, who, like Billingsley, was a native of Derby, and had learned his art there, and who, probably, had already decorated much Nantgarw porcelain. Young in his turn found that his means were inadequate to make the manufacture a financial success, and after a spirited but fruitless appeal for local help in 1822 was reluctantly compelled to close the works. Thus ended the manufacture of porcelain at Nantgarw.

"Billingsley removed to Coalport, where he ended his days in 1828. His was a chequered career, and it is to be feared that he himself was responsible for much of his ill fortune; but it should not be forgotten that he willingly sacrificed everything to an attainment which, if never commercially successful, resulted, at all events, in the most beautiful porcelain hitherto made in Great Britain, and one that some experts have affirmed has not been surpassed since."

The skill and talents of these two remarkable men are at once apparent to those who visit the carefully-arranged China Gallery of the Cardiff Museum. An intelligent study of the specimens to be seen there is essential to those who avoid the danger of purchasing worthless counterfeits of what in reality is incapable of imitation.

B.



FINE EXAMPLES OF THE ART OF BILLINGSLEY.
The centre one shows a trial-piece made for the trade. From photographs of the originals in the Cardiff Museum.

Digitized by Google

MALLETT
& SON

hold and offer for sale specimens of the

HIGHEST QUALITY

OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE

as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.

EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.

AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.

(Two hours from Paddington.)

Rare Prints and Portraits

CARICATURES.

Speciality: Rarities of all sorts relating to

NAPOLEON and AMERICA.

GODEFROY MAYER,
41, Rue Blanche, Paris.

Catalogues issued. Rare Prints and Engraved Portraits sought for. Correspondence Invited.

Mr. Mayer's stock is probably the largest and finest in Europe. He specially caters for the wants and requirements of English and American extra-illustrators.

Old Brass Stand and Lamp.

THE MISSES

H. & I. WOOLLAN

(Under Royal Patronage)

are showing a

UNIQUE

Collection of

Antiques.

Chippendale, Sheraton, and Hepplewhite Furniture. Worcester and Lowestoft Services. Lace, Glass, etc.

Showrooms: First Floor.

28, BROOK STREET, GROSVENOR SQUARE, W.

ALWAYS READY FOR USE. NEVER REQUIRES GRINDING.

KROPP RAZOR

Each Razor in a Case.

BLACK HANDLES, 5/6. IVORY HANDLES, 7/6.

A PLEASURE TO USE.

Wholesale: OSBORNE, GARRETT & Co., London, W.

THE KING'S COLLECTORS' REGISTER.

For Spaces in the Register apply to "THE EDITOR."

WANTED.

AUTOGRAPHS AND LETTERS.

MSS of Admiral T. M. Hardy. Good letters wanted.—827, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Autograph Letter of the Rev. Edmund Nelson, of Burnham Thorpe. £2 offered.—829, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Complete copies of Fairburn's Journal of Naval Occurrences.—154, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

A Copy of an Admiralty Circular, published Jan. 1st, 1825, describing the naval uniform "which in pursuance of his Majesty's pleasure is to be worn by officers of the Royal Navy" Signed by J. W. Crocker, Secretary of the Admiralty, and containing coloured patterns.—179, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

A set of the Meteor, or loose plates from the same (temp. George IV.).—182, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

"The Sufferings of John Custos, a Mason," circ. 1780-85, published by M. Swinney, of Birmingham £1 offered.—183, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

A set or odd volumes of the Freemasons' Magazine. 10s. each offered.—184, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Parliamentary Directory or Hand-book for 1805—185, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Chat Books (illustrated) relating to Paul Jones.—186, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Copies of any Service Almanacs, especially that published by Harrison between 1880 and 1892.—187, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Good Impressions with good margins of engravings of old London, especially Covent Garden, the Temple, the Strand, Lincoln's Inn.—249, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Prints of Uniform of the Navy, by Rowlandson, Hull, Ulsdall, and Sharp, or any others.—261, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.—continued.

Information or Copies of any Prints showing Doggett, or any of the other pre-Macklin Shylocks.—202, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

View of Carlisle House, Soho, about 1780-1790.—264, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Aquatints of the Battle of Navarino, and the engagement between the "Shannon" and "Chesapeake," after Sir John Theophilus Lee.—265, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Contemporary Portrait of Fanny Burney prior to her marriage.—268, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Topographical Prints wanted; old Views of Sandleford Priory, Newbury; Shokerwick House, Bath; Wolfeton House, Dorset; or Shute House, Devon.—269, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Prints of any of the Ships in the Navy about 1755, especially those which took part in Admiral Byng's operations.—270, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Portrait of Sir Charles Somers, or Sumners, the discoverer of the Bermudas. £1 offered.—271, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Dorset Prints: Weymouth Bay, after Upham, dedicated to Princess Augusta, 1801; John Penn drilling Portland Legion of Volunteers; Litho Hulmando, after Upham, date probably 1810 or 1812 Good price offered.—272, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Gillray Caricatures (coloured): "John Bull taking a luncheon," 1798; "Roya Economy," George III. frying sprats and Queen Charlotte toasting muffins, 1791. 0s. each offered.—273, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Glass Transfer Pictures Wanted, high-class examples of portraits: D. and Mrs. Garrick, Queen Charlotte, Mrs. Piozzi and others. Good price offered.—526, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Wedgwood or Worcester Masonic Jugs, with the names and numbers of private lodges.—527, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

GOLD, SILVER, Etc.

Pair of very early Sheffield Ware Candelabra.—615, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

AUTOGRAPHS AND LETTERS.

A series of MSS. relating to Colonel Stephen Digby.—817A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Complete set of the World Newspaper, from its foundation down to 1896.—133A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

The Tichborne Trial, in 8 volumes (folio), in original boards, with presentation copy of Lord Chief Justice Cockburn's charge to the jury, 2 volumes.—134A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Exceptionally fine colour Print of Madame Récamier. Original Drawing of English military costume by Vernet.—223A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

GOLD, SILVER, Etc.

Really genuine and fine specimens of Sheffield Plate, in good condition.—608A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

An exceptionally beautiful Worcester Dessert Service; best period and very lovely decorative paintings.—524A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Five Glass Pictures of the Death of Nelson (all different).—525A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

THE Tourist Trophy Race in the Isle of Man was favoured by ideal weather, although a few heavy showers which fell shortly after daybreak rendered the course somewhat treacherous in places during the early hours of the contest. The weighing and examination of the cars occupied the whole of Monday and Tuesday, as in every case the body had to be separated from the chassis, in order to ascertain that both came within the prescribed limit. Wednesday was reserved for the measuring of the fuel allowance and the filling of tanks, which, together with every joint or opening in the petrol pipes and connections, were carefully sealed. The start took place at nine o'clock on Thursday morning, when forty-two cars were despatched at intervals of 1-min. by Mr. Woollen, the head-timekeeper.

* * *

The course was identically the same as that used for the Eliminating Trials in the spring, except that the actual starting point was on a side road leading by a steep decline to a point in the circuit close to Quarter Bridge. The cars were towed by horses from the storage tents and marshalled on the hill, so that when the word was given to go the driver had only to release his brakes and start his engine by letting in his clutch when the car had gathered sufficient momentum. Each competitor was accordingly enabled to commence the race with his precious store of fuel intact, and only one of the forty-two starters attempted to run his engine before the word to go was given.

* * *

The two 15-h.p. Orleans (a make which has a good name for economical consumption), the Rovers (which are very light), and the Arrol-Johnstons and the Rolls-Royces were the cars whose chances were most strongly fancied, but it was generally agreed that the contest was a singularly open one. Eight telephone stations had been erected at various points, and reports soon began to come through to the club enclosure near Douglas as to the progress of the cars, which showed that the order of starting was being rapidly varied.

* * *

The first to reappear were the two Orleans, which had started fifth and sixth respectively. Their times were 1-hr. 44-min. and 1-hr. 41-min. 28-sec., and their steady, silent running excited general comment among the spectators. Next came a Napier, followed by a Rolls-Royce, which had worked up from the seventeenth place in which it started. Only four failed to complete the first round, the absentees being Mr. Rolls's Rolls-Royce, a Speedwell, the Cadillac, and a Darracq. The fastest time was that of the Arrol-Johnston, driven by Mr. J. S. Napier, which covered the 52 miles 1 furlong in 1-hr. 32-min. 36-sec., Mr. Percy Northey's Rolls-Royce being second.

* * *

The next round saw the elimination of the Vauxhall, both the White Steamers, a Minerva, and the second Darracq. Thirty-three cars were still running, the fastest time for the two circuits being the 3-hr. 4-min. 57-sec. of the Arrol-Johnston. Mr. Northey was less than 3-min. behind, and the Vinot and Deguingand an easy third. By the next round the cars still running had tailed out considerably, and it was seen that the issue lay between the three mentioned so long as their fuel allowance was not exhausted before the finish. Further retirements reduced the number of competitors to twenty-eight, the two Thornycrofts, an Argyll, a Beeston Humber, and the Dixi failing to complete the third circuit.

* * *

The first car to finish was Mr. Northey's Rolls-Royce, but it was known that the Arrol-Johnston, which had started 23-min. later, was following hard on his heels. For some time the excitement was intense, but just as Mr. Northey's victory seemed assured the Arrol-Johnston was signalled, and passed the post 2-min. 8 2-5-sec. to the good. The winner's actual time for the 208¼ miles was 6-hr. 9-min. 14 3-5-sec., which works out at an average of 33·9 miles per hour. The following are the names of the other cars which completed the course and their times: 14-h.p. Vinot and Deguingand, 6-hr. 14-min. 35 2-5-sec.; 18-h.p. Arrol-Johnston, 6-hr. 36-min. 58 3-5-sec.; 16—20-h.p. Rover, 6-hr. 43-min. 53 3-5-sec.; 16-h.p. Swift, 7-hr. 1-min. 12 2-5-sec.; 15-h.p. Orleans, 7-hr. 7-min. 42 1-5-sec.; 14—16-h.p. Argyll, 7-hr. 10-min. 25-sec.; 15-h.p. Orleans, 7-hr. 19-min. 32 2-5-sec.; 18-h.p. Napier, 7-hr. 27-min. 44 3-5-sec.; 16—20-h.p. Standard, 7-hr. 28-min. 2 2-5-sec.; 16—20-h.p. Rover, 7-hr. 41-min. 33 3-5-sec.; 10—12-h.p. Peugeot, 7-hr. 58-min. 54 2-5-sec.; 15-h.p. Rykniel, 8-hr. 11-min. 44 1-5-sec.; 18-h.p. Napier, 8-hr. 17-min. 10 2-5-sec.; 14-h.p. Dennis, 8-hr. 26-min. 43 3-5-sec.; 20-h.p. New Simms Welbeck, 8-hr. 49-min. 8-sec.; 14-h.p. Dennis, 9-hr. 5-min. 48 4-5-sec. The only cars which were stopped from lack of petrol were the 14 h.p. Dixi and the damaged Argyll on the third round, and the 14-h.p. Clément, 20-h.p. Maudslay, 16—20-h.p. Humber, 14-h.p. Scout and 14—16-h.p. James and Browne on the fourth round.

A ROYAL MOTORIST.
King Victor Emmanuel on his new Fiat car.

Digitized by Google

1905.

MERCÉDÈS MODELS

HERKOMER TROPHY.

Winner: Standard 40 h.p. MERCÉDÈS,

BEATING 79 COMPETITORS.

18/28 Mercédès Tonneau built in 1905, painted and upholstered Mercédès red, cape hood over rear seats, folding glass screen back of front seats, only slightly used, complete with side lights, tail light and horn, usual tools. Inspection and trial invited. Price £775.

IMMEDIATE DELIVERY.
28/32 latest type, complete with side entrance coachwork.
40/45 latest type, complete with side entrance coachwork,
Painted and upholstered Mercédès Red.

IMMEDIATE DELIVERY.
18/28 fitted with Rothschild Limousine coachwork
A Car for all weathers.

Solo Concessionnairos:

Cannstatt Mercédès, Ltd.,

127/130, LONG ACRE, LONDON, W.C.

Telephone No.: 3320 GERRARD. Authorised Agents as under:— Telegraphic Address: "TRUENESS, LONDON."

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| London, J. E. HUTTON, Ltd. | Glasgow, RENNIE & PROSSER. | Liverpool, Chester, Preston & Manchester, J. A. LAWTON & CO., Ltd. |
| Leicester, H. A. HAMSHAW. | Edinburgh, J. CROALL & SONS. | Dundee, T. SHAW, Ltd. |

PLEASE MENTION THIS PAPER.

"FIAT" MOTORS, Ltd.

Telegraphic Address: "FIATISM, LONDON."
Telephone Nos.: 3171, 1849, 1869 GERRARD.

THE SUCCESS OF 1905

F.I.A.T.

CAN BE SEEN AND TRIED AT

37, LONG ACRE, W.C.

Sole Concessionnaires for Great Britain and Ireland:—

FIAT MOTORS, Ltd., 37 & 38, LONG ACRE, LONDON, W.C.

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day and To-morrow.

A NOVEL COAT IN ANACONDA SKIN.

(Messrs. Debenham and Freebody, Wigmore Street, W.)

(From a photograph taken at the Dover Street Studios.)

Digitized by Google

NEW ZEALAND

THE BRIGHTER BRITAIN.

A NEW COUNTRY of marvellous beauty, with a fertile soil and a splendid climate. No extremes of heat or cold.

No droughts. An abundance of water, yet no rainy season.

An Evergreen Land rich in natural products.

A GREAT SHEEP, CATTLE AND DAIRYING COUNTRY.

Cheap farms with helpful assistance to farmers by the Government. Reduced steamer fares from the United Kingdom to New Zealand for persons with small capital.

No private monopoly of Public Utilities; the Government owns and operates Railways, Telegraphs, Telephones and Insurance.

No Lock-outs! No Strikes!! Employment disputes adjusted by Arbitration!!!

NEW ZEALAND IS THE WONDERLAND OF THE WORLD.

Its Thermal Sights are unique in their extent, beauty and weirdness.

The Mammoth Geyser "Waimangu" (Black Water) hurls an immense mass of boiling water, mud and stones over 1,000 feet high.

Hot Mineral Water and Mud Baths; The Curative Baths of Rotorua, Te Aroha and Hanmer are world famous. Government doctors in attendance.

Baths. Gardens. Games. Music.

and picturesque. Here are lakes of great size and depth—canyons that surpass the greatest of other lands—dense forests with a tropical profusion of ferns and flowers—innumerable waterfalls—monoliths of granite many thousands of feet in height—glaciers, snowfields, and the peerless Sounds, with their 400 miles of inside sailing distance.

TRANSIT is convenient throughout New Zealand. Government railways, Express trains, Pullman and Dining Cars. Excellent coastal steamers. Splendid coaching routes. Hotels, good; charges moderate. Government Hotels, Spas, and Accommodation Houses in many of the principal tourist resorts.

Large Mail Steamers with every modern comfort and convenience leave Great Britain for New Zealand fortnightly. Duration of direct journey, 40 days; via Suez and Australia, 44 days; via Canada, 32 days; via San Francisco, 28 days.

The best time to visit New Zealand is during the summer months, from November to April.

ALL INFORMATION regarding Travel, Tourist Routes, Spas, Baths, Sport, etc., etc., is supplied free of charge by the GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENT OF TOURIST AND HEALTH RESORTS. Head Office, WELLINGTON, NEW ZEALAND. Branch Offices throughout the Colony. Information regarding access to New Zealand, Reduced Steamer Fares, Settlement, Commerce, Industries, Travel, etc., etc., also supplied at the Office of the High Commissioner for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, London—Mr. J. G. Gow, Commercial Agent for New Zealand, Durban, South Africa, also supplies general information respecting New Zealand.

STEAM CLOUDS AT WAIMANGU.

LAKE ROTOCHU.

MOKAU FALLS, LAKE WAIKAREMOANA.

The ALPINE SCENERY of New Zealand combines the distinguishing features of Switzerland, Norway and America. The Southern Alps extend for 300 miles. Mt. Cook, the highest peak, is belted by the largest glaciers in the temperate regions—the Tasman being 18 miles long and 2 miles wide. Near the foot of Mt. Cook is the Hermitage Hotel. Government guides, Alpine huts, and all necessary Alpine equipment available for use of visitors.

The LAKES of New Zealand are most pleasing in their charm of colour, contour and environment. Rotorua, Rotoiti, Taupo, and Waikaremoana in the North Island; Manapouri, Wakatipu, Te Anau, Wanaka, Kanieri and Mahinapua in the South Island are the most notable. The Lakes of the South Island are surrounded by mountain scenery of singular beauty and magnificence. Steamers and Power Launches. Good Hotels.

The WEST COAST FIORDLAND is indescribably wild

Minister for Tourist and Health Resorts: Hon. Sir Joseph G. Ward, K.C.M.G. Superintendent: T. E. Donne, Wellington, New Zealand. The Superintendent invites correspondence.

See Tourist Department's "Itinerary of Travel" and descriptive Guide Books.

An International Exhibition of Products, Manufactures, Arts, Sciences, Amusements, etc., etc., is to be held by the Government of New Zealand in Hagley Park, Christchurch City, commencing 1st November, 1906, and terminating April, 1907. Full particulars obtainable from the High Commissioner for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, S.W.

OKOROIRE.

HOT SPRINGS AND SANATORIUM HOTEL.

One of the finest Health Resorts in the Thermal District.

The first place of interest en route to Rotorua, New Zealand.

Delightful NATURAL HOT MINERAL BATHS, free to Guests. Sufferers from Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Affection of the Eyes, Skin Diseases, etc., are often permanently cured by these waters.

CLIMATE.—Beautifully clear and bracing atmosphere, charming surroundings.

SPORT.—The Streams in the hotel grounds are exceedingly well-stocked with Trout. Plenty of Game, viz: Pheasants, Virginian Quail, Wild Duck, Hares, and Deer. Lawn Tennis, Golf, and Croquet.

The drive from Okoroire to Rotorua is one of the most beautiful in New Zealand.

T. MARTIN,
Manager.

NEW ZEALAND.

THE GRAND HOTEL, ROTORUA.

Situated in the Centre of the Hot Lakes District.

Patronised by T.R.H. The Prince and Princess of Wales.

THE HOTEL is in the immediate neighbourhood of the beautifully laid-out Government Gardens, wherein are situated the celebrated "Priest," "Rachel," "Postmaster," "Duchess," and other mineral baths, the curative properties of which are world famous. It has magnificent and lofty apartments, spacious promenade, balconies, snug alcoves, and luxuriously-appointed drawing, music, conversation, reading, smoking, and billiard rooms, perfect sanitation, and is lighted throughout by electricity.

BATH CHAIRS and attendance provided to convey invalids to or from the various bath houses.

Tariff 12/6 per day inclusive.

W. J. LEES, Manager.

THE GEYSER HOTEL,

WHAKAREWAREWA, ROTORUA.

Situated in close proximity to the wonderful Geysers and Maori Settlement.

Visitors staying at the Geyser Hotel have continued opportunity of witnessing them as they can be seen plainly from the verandah of the Hotel, also of studying native life and customs.

The Hotel possesses its own private hot and cold curative mineral baths of which the most valued are the "Spout," "Oil," and "Carlsbad" Baths.

It has lately been greatly enlarged and re-furnished in a most comfortable manner. Electric light is established throughout the hotel and baths.

Coaches run regularly between Whakarewarewa, the Rotorua Sanatorium, and Government Gardens.

Tariff 10s. per day or £3 per week, inclusive. For a lengthened stay terms can be arranged.

CHAS. E. NELSON, Proprietor.

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

THE autumn season is now so far advanced that you can with safety put your mind on new sartorial creations. Although this last week has been unusually mild, still, the early mornings are chilly, and after sundown a fire has been welcomed already by many, and a cosy chat at dusk by the cheery firelight is a good opportunity of discussing what we shall order from amongst the thousand and one novelties awaiting us.

In hats I have seen some charming specimens, just arrived from Paris. Velvet in every possible colour and shape. One I think will be becoming to most faces was an improved mushroom shape, but elongated, and very much tilted over the face by means of a bandeau at the back, which was concealed by bows and loops of ribbon in the same shade as the velvet. The crown was swathed with folds of velvet, and at one side had a graceful osprey aigrette. The one I have in my mind was of garnet colour. Another was a rather large green velvet toque, also tilted very deeply over the face, but the bandeau was at the side in this case, and a white dove rested cosily amongst the folds of velvet; the rim was in quaint folds or plaits, and had small motives of dark embroideries. A charming picture hat in black velvet, with black ostrich tips curling gracefully over the brim and resting on the hair at one side, was most fascinating. A long, prettily-draped black chiffon veil hung in full folds almost to the waist. These hanging draperies are one of the newest features in millinery. Yet one more novel model occurs to me, that I must also describe to you. This was of a soft shade of olive green in a modernised French round sailor form, with rather a low round crown, which was wreathed with a double garland of green shaded roses, of the crumpled kind. This had a very high and full cache-peigne of innumerable soft silk loops and ends.

Bassano

A HOME DRESS OF BRODERIE ANGLAISE.
(Messrs. Charles Lee and Son, Wigmore Street, W.)

These novel shapes can all be seen at Messrs. Charles Lee and Son's of Wigmore Street, whose handsome home gown is here shown. The skirt is of white soie de Ninon, the lower part of sprigged net, with bouillonnés of the same; it has groups of tiny tucks in vandyked form, and full frills of lace. The upper portion, in polonaise form, is very charming in rich and elegant broderie Anglaise.

Our full-page illustration shows one of Messrs. Debenham and Freebody's very latest novelties in three-quarter fur coats. This is made from over a dozen selected skins of the anaconda, or South African snake. It is delightfully soft in texture and quite supple. The collar and cuffs are of the fashionable nutria, a South American rodent. This fur greatly resembles beaver, but has two very great advantages over the latter; and these are that the nutria costs just about half the price and is half the weight, which are naturally two great considerations. A pretty chinchilla toque is worn with this coat. Short Russian coats and boleros are very successful in this fur. There is a strong revival in sealskins this season. Sable, skunk, ermine, chinchilla, and all foxes will be much worn. For stone marten there is also a very great demand, especially as they now dye this to imitate Russian sables. The cost of this process is very great to get the right density. This firm purchased an enormous quantity of valuable furs in March, since which date the prices have gone up from 50 per cent. to 80 per cent. in mink and sables alone. They are, therefore, able to offer most advantageously their choice skins. The demand is greater than the supply in all good skins, and the rise in price is bound to increase in consequence.

A magnificent Russian sable bolero, made with the new wide sleeve, and combined with real lace, is one of the choicest models, and is known as the "Grosvenor," the price of this being £225.

The "Winifred," a nutria Russian coat, with long revers of embroidered silk or natural lizard-skin, is likely to be very popular, and costs only £14 10s. A seal musquash trimmed ermine is also a handsome little coat at £25. The "Olivia," a three quarter coat in this same fur, is admirably adapted for walking or evening wear, and is most reasonable in cost.

The scarf, in every possible skin and in the newest shapes, is to be had from the moderate sum of £2 15s. in the favourite mole-skin or beaver, and rises gradually in price, according to the skins selected, to £36 for one in finest quality Russian sable, with six natural tails. Fox stoles and scarves are to be had in every variety of colouring and quality.

Muffs are worn still very large, and some are elaborately trimmed with lace. A real gem is the "Badminton," of ermine and real lace, to be had from £20 to £25, according to quality.

Messrs. Debenham and Freebody make a speciality of motoring-coats for gentlemen, the racoon and leather coats being particularly recommendable. By the by, for motoring for ladies there is a rain and cold proof leather costume, which is delightful. It is supplied in most charming art shades of grey, green, fawn, and brown. This leather is as soft as a good glove, and is specially prepared for this firm.

One new and serviceable fur-lined coat in all shades of tweed at £6 6s. is a most desirable acquisition, and a full-length, double-breasted fur-lined coat, with fur collar and the new style of cuff, makes a most comfortable and stylish coat for all occasions.

R. D.

Digitized by Google

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Prevents the Hair from falling off.

Restores Gray or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.

Being delicately perfumed, it leaves no unpleasant odour.

IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin, or even white linen.

Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.

Ask your Chemist or Hair-Dresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.

Prepared only by the . . .

ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO., Ltd.,
33, Farringdon Road, London, E.C.

---

TO H.M. THE KING.

THE POPULAR
SCOTCH
IS
"BLACK & WHITE"
WHISKY.

TO H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.

Sole Proprietors: JAMES BUCHANAN & Co., LTD.,
26, Holborn, London, E.C.

---

BIRKBECK BANK

ESTABLISHED 1851.

Current Accounts. 2 % Interest allowed on minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
Deposits. 2½ % Interest allowed on Deposit Accounts.
Advances made. Stocks and Shares bought and sold.
Apply C. F. RAVENSCROFT, Secretary,
Southampton Buildings, High Holborn, W.C.

---

ESTABLISHED 35 YEARS (1870).

THE CHARING CROSS BANK.
119 and 120, BISHOPSGATE ST. WITHIN, E.C.,
and 28, BEDFORD ST., CHARING CROSS, London.

Assets, £694,403. Liabilities, £372,291. Surplus, £322,112.

Loans of £30 to £2,000 granted at a few hours' notice in town or country on mortgage of furniture, trade and farm stock, plant, crops, etc., without removal. Also on deeds, policies, and reversions. Distance no object. Easy terms.

2½ per cent. allowed on Current account balances.

DEPOSITS of £10 and upwards received on terms as under.
Subject to 3 months' Notice of Withdrawal 5 per cent. per annum.
" 6 " " 6 " "
" 12 " " 7 " "

Special terms for longer periods. Interest paid quarterly. The Terminable Deposit Bonds pay nearly 9 per cent., and are a safe investment. Write or call for Prospectus.

A. WILLIAMS, H. J. TALL, } Joint Managers.

---

NOURISH & FLOURISH!

For Infants & Invalids.

Finest Breakfast & Supper Food.

FRAME FOOD

succeeds when other Foods fail. Babies who, from digestive or other trouble, cannot assimilate their food, quickly thrive on Frame-Food (containing Wheat Phosphates which Build up the Frame).

Hundreds of Mothers' letters testify to this.

N.B.—If weakly Babies thrive, how good Frame-Food must be for the stronger Babies! They ALL thrive on it.

---

REPORT
Particulars of CASE
when a Shilling 1 lb. Tin shall be promptly sent
FREE for TRIAL
(Mention this paper.)

FRAME-FOOD CO., LTD.,
The Famous Factory, Standen Rd.,
Southfields, London, S.W.

---

NEEDN'T BE LATE!

Boot-cleaning brought to perfection—perfect polish—brilliant and glossy—pleasure to use it! JUST A SMEAR AND A RUB of

WREN'S BOOT POLISH.

They've been tested and proved for many years.

Send 7½d. in stamps for samples (black and brown), and put them to the test!

WREN & CO., NORTHAMPTON.

---

"MY OWN"
THE PERFECT TOBACCO

A Superb Mixture of
Matchless Tobacco.

Sold in 2oz., ¼-lb., ½-lb., and 1-lb. Tins. 6/8 per lb. Post Free.

'Mexdolla' Mexican Cigars

Composed of the Choicest Mexican Leaf raised upon Virgin Soil from Picked Leaves of the young Tobacco Plant.

Price 25/- per 100, post free.

Shipped direct from Vera Cruz by
FREDK. WRIGHT,
Cigar Importer, Cheltenham: 112, High St.; Gloucester: The Cross; and Bath: 17, Northgate.

---

THE CLOTH FOR GOLF SUITS.

"Hydea"

is the best English cloth—made of the best English wool—grown on the HYDE Farm, Gloucestershire. It is delightfully soft and elastic—absolutely the best for sportsmen—most durable for out-o'-doors—most handsome for town suits—long thread—refined finish.

THE KING WEARS IT,

and pays no more than you—because there's only one quality at one price. "HYDEA" is stamped on every two yards of the selvedge—that's how you may know it—that, and its excellent surface! Send for FREE Booklet:—

APPERLY, CURTIS & Co., Ltd.,
Dudbridge Mills, Stroud, West of England.

Digitized by Google

THE KING'S MENU.

POTAGE A LA COLBERT.

This is a favourite soup with most people, and one that is very easy to prepare. Cut into small regular pieces any vegetables that are in season, such as carrots, turnips, leeks, a few peas, and a little cauliflower; blanch these, and then wash well in several changes of water. Put them into boiling water, to which you have previously added salt, and cook until tender. Strain and put into any good clear stock you have ready — a little chopped parsley or chervil is an improvement — and let all this boil up together. Then poach an egg for each person, and serve at once, taking great care that the eggs are not broken in dishing up. Bread croûtons are not necessary with this soup when eggs are used as a garnish.

MOULES A LA MARINIERE.

There is, as a rule, a prejudice against mussels, but if properly treated there is nothing more to fear in them than in any other shell-fish. The best way is to place them in water for five or six hours before cooking them, renewing the water several times. By this means, not only do they throw off all impurities, but they gain in quality. After this proceeding put them in a casserole with some white wine, a glass to every four pints, or, if preferred, vinegar can replace the wine, some carrots cut in small pieces, a little onion, some finely-chopped parsley and thyme, and season with salt and pepper to taste. Place the casserole on a good clear fire, keeping it at first well covered, so that the shells can open. Shake them continually. When they open they are done. Remove one of the shells. When they are all thoroughly cooked serve them with part of the liquor in which they are cooked. The remainder of this liquor makes a very excellent soup, with the addition of a little onion, for the next day.

MAYONNAISE DE VOLAILLE.

Carve a nice plump chicken into pieces, and arrange on a silver entrée dish in compact form. Make a mayonnaise as from previous recipes, and pour over this. Decorate with prawns and hard-boiled eggs cut in halves.

POIRES MELBA.

Cut some good-sized pears in halves, and stew with two or three cloves and cherries until tender. Sweeten with Glebe sugar. These are served up on vanilla cream ices, and are a most delicious luncheon sweet. Any fruit can be treated in this same fashion. There are so many excellent brands of tinned fruits now, and with the practical ice machines, to be found in almost every household, this sweet will be found a most acceptable one.

SEASONABLE LUNCHEON.

POTAGE A LA COLBERT.

MOULES A LA MARINIERE.

MAYONNAISE DE VOLAILLE.

POIRES MELBA.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

GERMAN CELERY SALAD (Elsa).—Firstly, boil some small round potatoes (which can be obtained anywhere), and leave to cool, after removing the skins; then take a root of celeriac, cut into quarters, boil until tender, and also leave to cool. Then proceed to cut a boiled beetroot into slices. By this time the potatoes will be cold enough to cut into slices. Place these as you cut them in a large bowl, then add the celeriac, also cut small, and make a mayonnaise sauce and pour over the whole; well mix same.

HAMBURG STEAK, WITH BOILED TOMATOES AND MACARONI.—Chop a pound and a-half of steak, sauté half a green pepper, chopped fine, in a tablespoonful of butter; add this to the meat with a teaspoonful and a-half of salt and a few drops of onion juice. Press into a compact oval shape about an inch and a-half thick, keeping the edges and centre of equal thickness. Brush a broiler generously with bacon fat, holding close to a brisk fire, then five or six minutes at a little distance, turning each ten seconds. Turn from the broiler on to a hot dish and spread, with two tablespoonfuls of butter, creamed with a little finely-chopped parsley. Surround with macaroni in cream sauce and broiled tomatoes.

CHEESE STRAWS.—One cup of flour, two cups of grated cheese, one tablespoonful of butter, pinch of salt, one small teaspoonful of Borwick's Baking Powder, mix with water, and roll out like pie-crust, cut in strips, and bake a light brown; very nice with salad.

SCALLOPED CHEESE.—Take four slices of bread, remove the crust, butter each slice, and put in a buttered baking dish in layers, then finely chop one quarter pound of cheese and sprinkle over it some salt and pepper. Mix four well-beaten eggs with three cups of milk, and pour over the bread and cheese. Bake in a hot oven as you would bread pudding.

WALNUT CAKE.—One cup of sugar, four tablespoonfuls of butter, seven of sweet milk, one teaspoonful of corn starch, one and a-half cups of flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, the whites of two eggs well beaten, and one cup of finely-chopped walnuts. Mix the corn starch and baking powder together, stir the sugar and butter well together, add milk, then flour, and whites of the eggs. Beat thoroughly and then put in the walnuts well floured. Bake in a quick oven, and place half nuts on top when iced.

CHOU-FLEUR A LA SAUCE KARI.—Blanch and plainly boil the cauliflower until tender, then cut into pieces; place the pieces in a sauté-pan and pour an ordinary curry sauce over them, let it boil up, and then draw the pan to the side of the stove, and let it stay there for ten or twelve minutes; dish the pieces up in the form of cutlets, pour the sauce over them, and garnish round the cauliflower with little bunches of grated cocoanut, which have been warmed between two plates over boiling water. This is an excellent dish for luncheon or second course, or it may be served in the place of an entrée.

I think these are all the recipes you asked for, with the exception of a German apple cake, which I have not the space this week to give you.

BOSTON FIG PUDDING, ETC. (Kara).—This is a favourite American pudding, and I give you here the simplest way of making same. Stir one cup of any of the wheaten breakfast foods into two cups of scalded milk. As soon as the mixture becomes thick, remove from the fire, and stir gradually into a cup of figs, finely chopped, with one-fourth of a cup of suet shredded. Add half a cup of molasses, two well-beaten eggs, and one teaspoonful each of soda and salt. Turn into a three-pint mould and steam for three hours. Serve with any sweet sauce preferred.

CERVELLES AU BEURRE NOIR (J. D.)—Put the calf's or sheep's brains in strong salt water for an hour, skin them, put them in a sauce-pan, with a piece of salt and enough cold water to cover them, a tablespoonful of white Tarragon vinegar, three or four black and white pepper corns, a sprig of thyme, parsley, a bay leaf, one sliced onion, and let them come to the boil. Beurre Noir for sauce. Put about two ounces of fresh butter in a frying-pan, let it gently become a deep golden colour, then put in about two tablespoonfuls of the leaves of parsley that have been picked small, washed, and dried. Shake the pan, and as soon as the parsley is crisp, pour it, with the butter, over the dish, or into a sauce-boat. Put the pan again on the fire, and pour in a large tablespoonful of white Tarragon vinegar, let this just boil up, then pour it over the butter. Dust this over with a little coralline pepper. I am giving you Mrs. Marshall's recipe, as you particularly wished for same.

CHEESE RAMEKINS (Inquirer).—Soak two ounces of white bread-crumbs in a little new milk, then drain and pound them in a mortar with two ounces of mild cheese and half an ounce of butter till the ingredients are well mixed, then season to taste with salt, pepper, and mustard flour. Now work in the yolks of three eggs, and then mix in lightly the stiffly whipped whites of the eggs, fill the little china cases with the mixture, and bake for ten minutes or so till the tops are lightly coloured. Serve at once very hot. I can give you plenty of recipes for ramekin dishes. The little china dishes are purchasable for a few pence apiece at any of the stores or china shops. They are most useful for serving in individual portions otherwise unproduceable odds and ends, whether of fish, flesh, vegetables, sweets, or savouries.

MAYONNAISE DE VOLAILLE

(Specially prepared and photographed for this paper.)

"Pastry and Sweets: Practical Hints on their Preparation," is the name of a collection of most useful recipes which, written by an expert, combine daintiness, economy, and simplicity. For the present readers of THE KING may obtain presentation copies of it free, if they mention the paper when they write for it to Messrs. Alfred Bird and Sons, Devonshire Works, Birmingham. I would strongly advise those who may have occasion or are contemplating a seaside or country stay in lodgings to include in their luggage a copy of this book, and some packets of Bird's Custard Powder. With these and a spirit lamp a few minutes' preparation only is needed to make a variety of delicious, yet inexpensive sweets, made on the dining-room table without the least mess or fuss. Those who have suffered with the average landlady's heavy pastry, and stodgy unappetising puddings and moulds, will realise what a boon this is. Given a dish of delicious custard, however, ready flavoured to taste with vanilla, almond, lemon, etc., and a simple fruit compôte becomes a dish really "fit for a King," while the addition of an ounce or so of fine leaf gelatine transforms a pint of the custard into a delectable bavarois, either with or without the addition of fruit pulp, or juice, or glacé fruit, almonds, etc.; a spoonful or two of spirit or liqueur syrup can be added if liked. Also the addition of three-pennyworth of cream whipped till stiff, and mixed lightly into any of these stiffened custards, is, of course, a great improvement. Any bits of these bavarois—plain or with fruit syrup or liqueur, as suggested above—can be cut into small cubes or dice, diamonds, etc., and mixed into a mould of just liquid jelly make a very pretty harlequin jelly. These are only a few suggestions to indicate the numberless smart and attractive sweets which can be made in a few minutes with Bird's Custard Powder, without which no storeroom is properly stocked.

Digitized by Google

DEWAR'S WHISKY

A GUID AULD SCOTCH DRINK

Vegetables need a Sauce

to make them really palatable, and the best Sauces are those made with

Brown & Polson's "Patent" Corn Flour

as thickening.

The delicate flavour of this Corn Flour does not cover the natural flavour of the vegetables, but forms an agreeable complement.

Even such plain vegetables as leeks, carrots and turnips can in this way be made appetising.

Brown & Polson's Booklet "Simple Fish and Vegetable Sauces" contains 31 simple and easily made recipes compiled by an eminent cookery expert. A copy will be posted to any lady sending a penny stamp to Brown & Polson, Paisley.

The Uses of Cyder:

(a) as a health giver.

(b) as a delicious beverage.

MEDICAL men all over the country are rapidly becoming acquainted with the medicinal qualities of the high-class dry Cyders of Whimple, with the result that they are not only using these Cyders personally, but are constantly prescribing them in a variety of cases subject to dietic treatment.

It is a proved fact that regular consumers of Cyder are exempt from many distressing maladies, such as stone and gravel. Cyder is also an effective remedy for gout and rheumatism.

Not only the phosphorus, but the acids of the apple are of singular use for persons of sedentary habits, whose livers are apt to be slow of action. These acids aid the liver in its work of eliminating from the body the noxious matter which makes the brain heavy and dull, and causes rheumatism and other kindred ailments.

If you would drink Devonshire's Delicious Drink at its very best—if you would realise to the full what a really enjoyable drink Cyder is—you should procure only that brand which comes from the presses of Messrs. Whiteway & Co.

Whiteway's Cyders are made only of the pure juice from the finest English apples, and are absolutely free from chemical preservatives.

Write for Booklet, Price List, etc., to WHITEWAY, WHIMPLE, DEVON;

or 22 and 23, ALBERT EMBANKMENT, LONDON, S.W.

Henry Whiteway & Co., Ltd.

SAVORY & MOORE'S BEST FOOD FOR INFANTS AND INVALIDS

If the food given in infancy is the right food, strong bodies, powerful muscle, and energetic brains will be built up. It is for this reason that "Savory & Moore's Best Food" is so popular with mothers, nurses, and doctors, many of whom use it in their own families, and the most striking proof of its excellence is afforded by the fact that its use has been adopted in so many Royal Nurseries. Dr. W—— writes that he "finds 'Savory & Moore's Best Food' agrees better with children than any other, and always recommends it to his patients as being by far the best assimilated by delicate infants."

The value of "Savory & Moore's Best Food for Infants and Invalids" for convalescents, the aged, and those of weak digestion, is very great. It is enjoyed, and is well digested and retained, when every other food fails. One special reason why it is so much appreciated is that it may be prepared in so many different ways, without either its digestibility or nutritive value being in the slightest degree lessened or impaired.

"Savory & Moore's Best Food" is supplied by all Chemists and Drug Stores, in tins, at 1s., 2s., 5s. and 10s. A LARGE TRIAL TIN will be sent post free for six penny stamps by Messrs. Savory & Moore, Limited, Chemists to The King, 143, New Bond Street, London, W., to all who mention this paper, together with handbook of great interest to mothers, nurses, and those having the care of invalids.

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

A CHARMING souvenir album of the new Royal Mail steamer "Aragon" has just been published by the proprietors. It is beautifully printed on art paper, and bound in a tastefully-designed cover. The excellent illustrations with which it is provided show that everywhere the comfort of the passengers has been carefully considered, and the many modern improvements and conveniences are a characteristic feature of this fine vessel. Copies of the souvenir may be obtained at the head office of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company, 18, Moorgate Street, London, E.C., at 2s. per copy.

MANY interesting novelties in apparatus and appliances for photographic purposes were exhibited at the fiftieth annual exhibition of the Royal Photographic Society, which was held last Tuesday at the New Gallery, 121, Regent Street, W. One of the most interesting features of the Kodak display was the selection of splendid enlargements from negatives by her Majesty Queen Alexandra. The Queen seldom travels without her kodak, which, in fact, is one of her most constant companions, and her Majesty's collection of photographs is, therefore, both extensive and unique. One may note the strong evidence of artistic feeling in the selection of the subjects as displayed in the pictures chosen for exhibition, and the fact that they have stood enlargement so well is excellent testimony to her Majesty's technical knowledge of the art.

THE disaster to the Japanese battle-ship "Mikasa" recalls very forcibly the similar accident at Spithead in 1795, when the "Boyne" (98) blew up, and the earlier disaster near the same spot in 1701, when the "Edgar" (74) was also destroyed by an explosion at a time when the crew were merry-making with a number of friends from the shore. A curious painting by an unknown author (reproduced on this page) was formerly in the possession of Messrs. E. and E. Emanuel of the Hard, Portsea, and a copy of it was made for them by Mr. H. Coish. Messrs. Emanuel exhibited the original oil-painting at the Royal Naval Exhibition at Chelsea, and it is now in the possession of Mr. Barker of London.

LAST Monday week saw the completion of the Thames down river steamers' passenger service—so far as the New Palace steamers "Royal Sovereign" and "Koh-i-noor" are concerned—for they finished their sailings to Margate, Ramsgate, Deal, and Dover on that day. A large number of passengers were on the boats, thus the company concluded a very successful season.

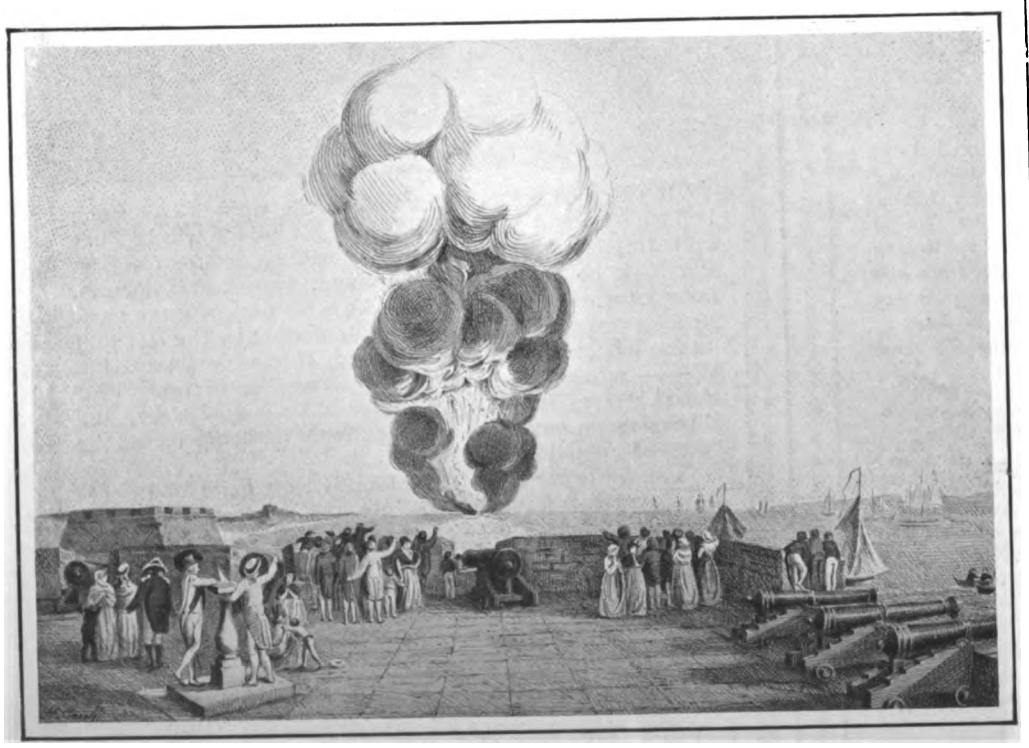
THE Crystal Palace Saturday concerts will be resumed on October 15, when Miss Marie Hall will give a violin recital. Herr Kubelik will appear the following Saturday, and the 28th inst will be devoted to chamber music by the London trio (Mme. Amina Goodwin, M. Simonetti, and Mr. Whitehouse). Three orchestral concerts will be given on November 4 and 25, and December 2, by the London Symphony Orchestra, with Mr. Landon Ronald as conductor, and the same organisation will be heard on December 9, with the Crystal Palace Choir, under Mr. Walter Hedgecock, in Dvorak's "Spectre Bride," the solos being taken by Miss Percival Allen, Mr. Lloyd Chandos, and Mr. Thos. Meux.

WITH the revival of the summer the Naval Exhibition, Earl's Court, still more strongly retains its hold on the popularity of the public. Last Tuesday and Wednesday the London Dahlia Union gave their annual display in the Princes Hall which was free to the exhibition visitors. There were numerous competitions this year, and a splendid assortment of beautiful blossoms of all types were on view. The excellent band of the Royal Artillery (Plymouth) began a week's engagement on Monday.

ONE of the latest additions to the Whitehall Series of Military maps, published by Messrs. Foster, Groom, and Co., is that of the Peninsular Campaign. It is boldly printed on stout paper, and should be specially useful to officers studying for the Military History Examinations. It clearly indicates the positions occupied by the opposing forces at the battle of Corunna, and is accompanied by a memorandum of the different engagements. An inset map of Spain is also provided, and the two are enclosed in a neat and serviceable wrapper.

A VERY popular programme has again been provided by Mr. Robert Arthur at the Kennington Theatre. The Moody-Manners Opera Company, which has been playing a different opera at each performance this week, has again proved a strong attraction, and have been playing nightly to full houses. The repertoire this week included "Faust," "Carmen," "Lohengrin," "The Bohemian Girl," "Tannhäuser," and "Maritana."

THE programme at the Brixton Theatre this week is quite up to the high standard which the management have so well maintained. "The Lights o' London," which has been presented this week by a specially organised company, under the direction of Herbert Hollister and Fred C. Drew, is still proving a great attraction.



THE BLOWING UP OF THE "BOYNE" OFF SPITHEAD IN 1795.

(From a drawing by H. Coish, after a contemporary painting in the possession of Messrs E. and E. Emanuel of the Hard, Portsea.)

Amusements.

HIS MAJESTY'S. MR. TREE.
Every Evening at 8.
Charles Dickens's
OLIVER TWIST.
Dramatised by J. Comyns Carr.
Fagin ... ... ... MR. TREE.
Nancy ... ... ... Miss CONSTANCE COLLIER.
Matinees Saturday, September 30th, and every following Saturday at 2.15.

CRITERION THEATRE, W.
Sole Lessee: Sir CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Manager: Mr. FRANK CURZON.
Every Evening at 8.30,
Mr. Frank Curzon's Company in
THE WHITE CHRYSANTHEMUM,
A new Lyrical Comedy. Written by Leedham Bantock and Arthur Anderson. Music by Howard Talbot. Mesdames Marie George, Millie Legarde, Isabel Jay, etc. Messrs. Rutland Barrington, Lawrence Grossmith, M. R. Morand, Henry A. Lytton, etc. Matinee every Saturday at 2.30.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: Sir CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Sole Lessee and Manager: Mr. FRANK CURZON.
At 8.50,
WHAT THE BUTLER SAW.
Preceded by Mr. Chas. Bertram at 8.20.
Matinee Every Wednesday and Saturday at 3.
Box Office now open. Telephone 4028 Gerrard.

DALY'S THEATRE.
Produced by Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES.
To-night and Every Evening at 8.15.
Matinee Every Saturday at 2.30.
THE LITTLE MICHUS.
By A. Vanloo and G. Duval. Music by Andre Messager.
Adapted for the English stage by Henry Hamilton.
Lyrics by Percy Greenbank.
Mlle. ADELINE GENEE in a NEW DANCE.
Box Office 10 to 10.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. FRANK CURZON.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
To-night at 8.15,
LADY MADCAP.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.15.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. FREDERICK HARRISON.
Every Evening, at 9.10.
ON THE LOVE PATH.
A Comedy in Three Acts by C. M. S. McLellan.
Miss Ellis Jeffreys and Mr. Gerald Du Maurier.
Mr. Arthur Williams, Mr. Eric Lewis, Mr. A. E. Matthews, Mr. Edmund Maurice, and Miss Jessie Bateman.
Preceded at 8.30 by a Comedy in one Act, called
A PRIVY COUNCIL.
Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.
Box Office now open 10 to 7. Tel. 2933 Gerrard.

GARRICK THEATRE.
MR. ARTHUR BOURCHIER, Lessee and Manager.
Every Evening at 8.30,
THE WALLS OF JERICHO.
By Alfred Sutro.
Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE.
Sole Lessee and Manager: CHARLES FROHMAN.
To-night at 8.30.
"CLARICE."
Mr. Thomas H. Burns, Mr. Francis Carlisle, Miss Lucille La Verne, Miss Adelaide Prince, Mr. William Gillette, Miss Marie Doro.

COMEDY.
Mr. WEEDON GROSSMITH's Season.
To-day, at 2.30 and 8.30,
THE DUFFER.
By Weedon Grossmith.
Matinees Wednesdays and Saturday at 2.30.

ADELPHI.
Lessee and Manager, OTHO STUART.
Every Evening at 8.30.
DR. WAKE'S PATIENT.
A Comedy by W. Gayer Mackay and Robert Ord.
Matinee Every Wednesday at 2.30.
Lilian Braithwaite, Elsie Chester, Hilda Thorpe, Mrs. E. H. Brooke, Edith Ostlere, Pamela Hope, etc. C. M. Hallard, W. Gayer Mackay, Herbert Grimwood, Alfred Brydone, Charles Rock, Adam Alexander, etc.
Box Office open 10 to 10. Tel. 2645 Gerrard.

PROMENADE CONCERTS. — QUEEN'S HALL.
To-NIGHT AND NIGHTLY AT 8.
QUEEN'S HALL ORCHESTRA.
Conductor: Mr. HENRY J. WOOD.
1/- to 5/-. Usual Agents, Chappell's Box Office, Queen's Hall, and Queen's Hall Orchestra (Ltd.), 320, Regent Street.
ROBERT NEWMAN, Manager.

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Lieutenant Colonel W. E. Brymer | 811 |
| The March of Events | 812 |
| The Services | 817 |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 818 |
| On the Links | 820 |
| The Styles of Eminent Players—No. XII—The Hon. Osmund Scott | 824 |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 25 |
| Under the Burgee | 826 |
| Yachts of the Year | 827 |
| The Church Congress at Weymouth | 828 |
| The Traveller—In and Around Weymouth | 834 |
| The Parisians of Paris—The Merry Midinette | 836 |
| From a Playgoer to a Friend in the Country—II. | 838 |
| The Racing Season | 839 |
| The Naval Colour-plate Books of Long Ago | 840 |
| Johnny Newcome in the Navy | vii. |
| Lords in Council | viii. |
| Literary Notes | x. |
| Leaves from a Collector's Note-book—No. LX.—Ecclesiastical Engraved Portraits. Some Famous Dorset Divines | xii. |
| Motoring Notes | xiv. |
| Fashions of To-day and To-morrow | xvi. |
| The King's Menu | xviii. |
| Here, There, and Everywhere | xx. |

TO LIBRARIES, CLUBS, HOTELS, Etc.

A Reading Case for THE KING can be had post free on application to the Publishers, George Newnes, Limited, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.

HOTELS.

ENGLISH HOTELS.

TORQUAY (Population 33,625).—PREMIER HEALTH RESORT. Unrivalled climate. Warm in winter. Sunshine-land. Charming drives and sheltered walks. 120 acres of public gardens. Piers.

TORQUAY. Irreproachable water supply and perfect sanitation. Theatre, concerts, and other musical attractions. Medicated baths of all kinds. Express trains from all parts.

For Illustrated Descriptive Books of Torquay, apply FREDK. S. HEX, Town Clerk.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

De Vere Hotel, from 10/6 per day. 'Phone 524.
Broadwalk Hotel, from 8/6 per day. ,, 858.
Prince of Wales' Hotel, from 10/6 per day. ,, 641. Kensington.

Electric Light. Lifts. Everything up to date. First-class cuisine.

BOURNEMOUTH HYDRO.

Sunny Site. Overlooking Sea. Every Bath. Ideal Residence.

EASTBOURNE.

THE HYDRO HOTEL.—A select Residential Hotel on South Coast, 120ft. above sea level. Large gardens, close to the sea. Tennis. Croquet. Bowling Green. Spacious Lounges and Public Rooms. 70 Bedrooms, also Suites, luxuriously furnished, electric light throughout. High-class cuisine. Table d'Hôte or à la Carte. Separate tables. Lift. Billiards. Private 'Bus. Nearest to schools and Links. Close to Parades. Motor Garage with repairing Pits. Lit by Electric Light. New Turkish Baths are now open. Week-End Terms. For inclusive Tariff (Illustrated), also Programme of Amusements, address—O. F. BERGANN, Manager. Telegraphic Address: "Hydrotel, Eastbourne." Telephone, No. 143, Eastbourne.

FOREIGN HOTELS.

BIARRITZ.

GRAND HOTEL.—Winter Season.—First-class establishment. Splendid situation, facing the sea. Patronised by the elité; rendezvous of English Society. Every comfort; excellent attendance and cooking.—MONTENAT, Manager.

AXENSTEIN (Lake Lucerne; 2,350ft. above sea level; electric railway Brunnen-Axenstein).—First-class Hotel. World-renowned climatic health resort; patronised by English society. "Axenstein is the loveliest spot I met with on my journey through Switzerland."—QUEEN VICTORIA.

TENERIFFE

HAS THE FINEST WINTER CLIMATE IN THE WORLD.

THE First-class HOTELS there are
the QUISISANA at Santa Cruz,
the AGUERE and CONTINENTAL at La Laguna, and
the MARTIANEZ (late Grand) at Port Orotava.
All under the Management of C. H. TRENKEL. Prospectus, etc., on application.

SHIPPING.

MOROCCO, CANARY ISLANDS, and MADEIRA LINE OF STEAMERS; 24 days for 20 guineas.—For particulars write Messrs. FORWOOD BROS., 46, St. Mary Axe, E.C.

Patronized by H.M. The King.

DOVERCOURT BAY, ESSEX,

HOTEL ALEXANDRA.

The Finest Health and Pleasure Resort on the East Coast. Delightful Climate. Bracing Air. The Hotel, which has recently been visited by H.M. KING, is luxuriously Furnished. Charming Situation. Facing the Sea. Electric Light. Excellent Cuisine. Tennis, Croquet. Motor Garage and Pit. 1 hour 40 minutes express from London.

For Illustrated Tariff, apply A. H. THIEM, Proprietor.

HEREFORD.

THE CENTRE OF THE LOVELY WYE VALLEY

SENT FREE.

An artistic Booklet containing a series of views and descriptive matter of this delightful country and district.

Apply TOWN CLERK'S Office.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
The charmingly situated Seaside Resort on the Dorsetshire Coast.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Unequalled for its Marine and Land Excursions. Golfing and Fishing.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Temperature higher than that of any other Seaside Resort. See daily reports.

SPA, BELGIUM.

(10 Hours from London.)

The Oldest Chalybeate Springs in the World.

Finest Bathing Establishment in Europe. Best cure for Anæmia, Chlorosis, and Heart Affections. Countless attractions, Steeplechases, Horse Show, Concerts, Theatre, Automobile Races, Golf, Balls. For programme write

BUREAU DE PUBLICITE, SPA.

NATIONAL PROVIDENT INSTITUTION

Estd. [1835.

For Mutual Life Assurance.

Accumulated Fund over £5,900,000.
Paid in Claims ... £12,250,000.

Profits: These are divided every five years solely amongst the Assured; already divided to 1902, £6,160,000.

Endowment-Assurance Policies are issued, combining Life Assurance at minimum cost, with provision for old age, and are singularly advantageous.

48, GRACECHURCH STREET, LONDON, E.C.

APPLICATIONS FOR AGENCIES INVITED.

"IT IS ABLE TO SUPPORT LIFE." - Lancet.

ONE CUP OF PLASMON COCOA

Contains more nourishment than 10 cups of any ordinary Cocoa, and is absolutely free from Chemicals.

In tins, 9d., 1/4, and 2/6.

ROSES FOR ENGLISH GARDENS.

By Miss GERTRUDE JEKYLL and Mr. E. MAWLEY.

Illustrated with 190 full-page Plates. 12s. 6d. Nett.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, Ltd., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

MAKING MONEY

I was born on a Maine farm. I have made some great successes in business. My greatest through Co-operation. I took $1,500 (£306:2:6) capital, supplied by Farmers, Women, Physicians, Clerks, Clergymen, etc., in Belfast, Maine, and in an honest, but very profitable business, earned and paid them through BELFAST NATIONAL BANK, $5,000 (£1,020:8:2) in Cash dividends in the first six months, $25,000 (£5,102:0:10) in cash dividends within the next year, and in 18 months I paid them in round numbers $330,000.00 (£67,346:19:2) CASH.

Every 4s. Earned £44:17s

E. F. HANSON, Ex-Mayor of Belfast, Maine., U. S. A. Ex-Pres. B. & M. L. R. R.

This is HISTORY. Reads like a fairy tale but it is TRUE. I made poor people rich. They helped me earn the riches. Just read that over again. I had $1,500. I earned and paid my stockholders $330,000 in cash in 18 months. Every stockholder got their share. That's my way of doing business. You must believe this statement is TRUE, for, if I were lying, I wouldn't tell you the place where I earned the money, and the BANK where it was paid.

I have learned the great value of the right kind of co-operation, learned how to make money fast in an honest, profitable business from which millions are made every year.

I now have a new business of the same kind, only my field is the world. It is incorporated under the laws of the State of Maine and the U.S. Gov't. Stockholders are absolutely protected from any liability. They are safe guarded by law. My plan one of extended co-operation. Stockholders everywhere who can give me information and lend their INFLUENCE. The dividends must be large.

I already have 4,000 stockholders in the U. S., Canada, England, Cuba, Mexico, Sandwich Islands, Gibraltar, etc. I want a few more. The shares are going fast. You can invest 4s. or £100. Monthly payments, if you wish. It will be safe and we will make it grow. This is no gambling or "shady" scheme. It's legitimate business. You will be treated squarely and honestly. I place 30 years of untarnished business record behind that statement. I only ask you in your own interest to INVESTIGATE. You shall have all the Proof you want. References, Bankers, Business Men, Church and Public Officials, etc. Send your address on a postal card. It will pledge you to nothing. It may mean your fortune. I will send a 24-page book,

"A Guide to Full Pockets,"

FREE. I will pay the postage. Don't be "A Brother to the Ox." Stop plodding. Lift your head long enough to ask me to prove every statement in this ad. This is your opportunity, don't miss it. Don't wait if you want something better than you have got. E. F. Hanson, 94-103 Wendell Street, Chicago, Ill., U. S. A.

ESTABLISHED 35 YEARS (1870).

THE CHARING CROSS BANK.

119 and 120, BISHOPSGATE ST. WITHIN, E.C., and 28, BEDFORD ST., CHARING CROSS, London.

Assets, £694,403. Liabilities, £372,291. Surplus, £322,112.

Loans of £30 to £2,000 granted at a few hours' notice in town or country on mortgage of furniture, trade and farm stock, plant, crops, etc., without removal. Also on deeds, policies, and reversions. Distance no object. Easy terms.

2½ per cent. allowed on Current account balances.

DEPOSITS of £10 and upwards received on terms as under.
Subject to 3 months' Notice of Withdrawal 5 per cent. per annum.
,, 6 ,, ,, 6 ,, ,,
,, 12 ,, ,, 7 ,, ,,

Special terms for longer periods. Interest paid quarterly. The Terminable Deposit Bonds pay nearly 9 per cent., and are a safe investment. Write or call for Prospectus.

A. WILLIAMS, H. J. TALL, } Joint Managers.

Lilies for English Gardens.

WRITTEN AND COMPILED BY
GERTRUDE JEKYLL.

Price 8s. 6d. Nett.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, Ltd., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

THE COLONEL TAKES THE 19TH W'HOLE IN ONE!

Head Office:
11,
SO. EXCHANGE PLACE, GLASGOW.
J. H. ROGER
PROPR.
LESSEE OF
H.M. CUSTOMS (No. 15) BOND, JAMES WATT STREET, GLASGOW.
Special Quotations to Golf Clubs.

"COLONEL BOGEY" WHISKY.

GUARANTEED 7 YEARS OLD.

42/- PER DOZEN. CARRIAGE PAID.

THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.

Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS
of every description, including
TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT.
MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.
Handsome Public Rooms, including
2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel. Telephone 56.
Terms from MANAGER.

CLEVEDON (Somerset).

SEASIDE HYDRO HOTEL.

Holiday, Health, and Pleasure Resort. Near Golf Links and Pier. Good centre for excursions by road, rail, or sea. Resident Physician. Fine Baths. Liberal Table.

SECRETARY, Hydro, Clevedon, Somerset.

LELANT, ST. IVES BAY, CORNWALL (close to golf links and station).—Furnished HOUSE, with plate and linen, to LET; two large sitting rooms, six bedrooms, one dressing room, bathroom.—"T.B.H.," "Evelyns," Uxbridge.

SOUTHWOLD (best position on the Common; close to Golf Links).—To be LET, well Furnished, the pretty and artistic HOUSE known as "Link's Cottage," containing square hall, two sitting and large recreation rooms, servants' sitting room, seven bedrooms (fourteen beds), bath-room; electric light and telephone.—Apply to Mrs. ROBINSON, on Property.

ON THE BOURNEMOUTH LINKS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations. High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hôte, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.

THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.
THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.
A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.
Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads.
Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.
Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.
Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.
New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare, Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,
Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.
To be obtained from Thos. COOK, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON.
Telephone, 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade and commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.
Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors.

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL.
SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.
Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head.

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.
Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill.

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau, 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 30s. Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address: "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY,
Within easy access of London.

THE BUSH HOTEL.

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers, inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 15. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable, being on sand.

DEVONSHIRE'S DELIGHTFUL DRINK.—

The very best beverage for GOLFERS is WHITEWAY'S PURE CYDER.
Refreshing, cooling, and a panacea for Gout, Rheumatism, and Obesity.
Booklets free from WHITEWAY'S, The Orchards, Whimple, Devon, and 22 and 23, Albert Embankment, S.W. Telephone 173 Hop.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the above ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

WULOAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E.

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer).

"'Is it a Private House or an Hotel?' is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels."

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGERESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29, Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

1, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

WANTED, on long Lease, about 200 ACRES of LAND, on sea coast, suitable for golf links.—Apply, with full particulars, "B. A.," c/o THE KING Office, 12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. Cox, New Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL.—Brinklea, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library, Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052.

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class. |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned, from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains.

ON BLUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY.

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.
Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Booklet and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

ZÜRICH.—DOLDER GRAND HOTEL, First-class English frequented house in extensive well-wooded grounds, 2,000ft. above sea level. Golf links in front of the hotel; tennis; motoring centre. Electric Tram and funicular service with Zürich Central Station (25 min.). Electro-magnetic therapeutical treatment (E. K. Muller's method).—Manager, E. DIELMANN.

SHERINGHAM, NORFOLK.

THE SHERINGHAM HOTEL,

ADJOINING GOLF LINKS (18 HOLES).

LARGEST HOTEL IN SHERINGHAM. Open all the year round. Handsome Dining Hall, 67ft. long. Numerous spacious Suites of Rooms commanding beautiful Sea and Land Views. Billiard and Smoking Rooms. Excellent and Improved Sanitary arrangements. Extensive Private Grounds. Lawn tennis, croquet. First-class Stables. Accommodation for Motors and Cycles. Through Trains from King's Cross, Peterborough, Birmingham, Leicester, etc.

Telegrams - "Sheringham Hotel, Sheringham."

National Telephone: No. 3. F. EDENS, Manager.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.
Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.
Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & Co.
Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.
MODERATE TARIFF.
Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months.
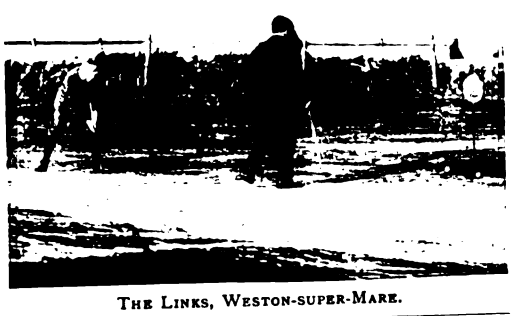
Perfect Sanitary arrangements.
Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year
Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel.—Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors, EMMERSON & HARRIS.



THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE
Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit.
Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE."
National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL.

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms.

Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

Digitized by Google

MAINTAINS ITS FORTY YEARS' REPUTATION FOR SUPERIOR QUALITY, PERFECT AROMA, AND UNIVERSAL POPULARITY.

Ask for MILD AND EXTRA MILD.

J. M. BARRIE says—

"What I call the 'Arcadia' in 'My Lady Nicotine' is the Craven Mixture, and no other."

Do not fail to give a trial to the "Craven" Cigarette.
"THE CIGARETTE OF DISTINCTION."

THE SHORTEST AND BEST ROUTE from LONDON for the

LONDON SOUTH WESTERN RAILWAY

CHURCH CONGRESS AT WEYMOUTH.

EXPRESS CORRIDOR TRAINS.

FROM WATERLOO STATION TO

WEYMOUTH

IN ABOUT 3 HOURS.

LUNCHEON AND DINING CARS.

Ladies' Compartments. Lavatory Compartments.

LONDON SOUTH WESTERN RAILWAY

LUGGAGE IN ADVANCE.

THROUGH TRAINS TO WEYMOUTH

from principal places in the Midlands and North of England.

Book "via South-Western Route."

For full particulars, write Mr. Henry Holmes, Superintendent of the Line, Waterloo Station, S.E.

CHAS. T. OWENS, General Manager

WHEN SELECTING FROM YOUR JEWELLERS A PATENT

GOLD 'SELF-CLOSING' BRACELET

BE SURE THAT YOU GET

SAUNDERS & SHEPHERD'S.

THE ORIGINAL MAKE.

UNSURPASSED FOR BEAUTY OF DESIGN AND WORKMANSHIP.

AS WATCH BRACELETS THEY ARE IDEAL.

N.B.—Every Bracelet stamped inside with Trade Mark "FLEXINE."

Wholesale only—SAUNDERS & SHEPHERD, LTD., LONDON.

42/-

CHARLES LEE & SON,

Specialist Ladies' Outfitters,

98 & 100, WIGMORE STREET

(ONLY ADDRESS).

CAUTION.—Messrs. Lee & Son have no branches, and warn the public against imitations of their goods.

An example in Finest Quality English Crêpe de Chine, with Valenciennes Lace Yoke and Guipure Points, 42/-.

A Blouse suitable for any figure.

POST ORDERS. — The Lady's Pictorial states:—"If you live in the country, have an account with Lee & Son, Wigmore Street; they send the choicest selection of goods by post, while they are cheap for the best Costumiers, Furriers, Lacemen, Specialists in Trousseaus, The Leewig Petticoat, Royal Crescent Veil, Hosiers, Glovers, Milliners, etc.

CHARLES LEE & SON.
WIGMORE STREET.

MODES.

MAISON LEWIS,

16, Rue Royale, PARIS.

Entrance, 422, Rue St. Honoré.

Place du Casino, MONTE CARLO.

7, Place de la Mairie, BIARRITZ.

210, Regent Street, LONDON.
W.

ST. JACOBS OIL

THE ESTABLISHED CURE FOR

RHEUMATISM

LUMBAGO, SPRAINS, SCIATICA.

"I should like to tell the public of the good St. Jacobs Oil has done me. When quite a boy I had a severe attack of Rheumatism, and could only walk with the aid of crutches, and in consequence I was obliged to give up my work. My parents used nothing but St. Jacobs Oil, and in a very short time I was again able to follow my occupation, and walk morning and night to work and home again, without using the crutches. I have felt nothing of the Rheumatism since, until last November, when I got very wet; but I am glad to say that with a few appliances of your Oil I was again set free.

"(Signed) W. DEACON,
"Rose Cottage, Bradford Street, Eastbourne."

January 12th, 1905.

Price 1/1½ and 2/6; of all Chemists.

CONQUERS PAIN!

Digitized by Google

THE CHURCH CONGRESS AT WEYMOUTH.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

VOL. XX. No. 452. SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 30th, 1905. PRICE 6D.

Wheeler, Weymouth.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL W. E. BRYMER.

Conservative Member for South Dorset.

(See page 825.)

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Digitized by Google

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 452. Saturday, Sept. 30, 1905.

Editorial Offices—20, TAVISTOCK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephones—No. 2,748 GERRARD, AND 7,961 CENTRAL.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

THE KING IN THE NORTH.—To be in Scotland and not been in neighbourhoods formerly associated with Jacobites or the Jacobite risings is very difficult, and in going from Invergarry to Mar Lodge at the beginning of the week King Edward only changed the date of the memories. Invergarry and the '45, Braemar and the '15, have this in common, that both saw, in part, the failure of their respective rebellions. But Braemar has in addition the honour of being the spot where the standard of rebellion was raised, though so prosaic are we to-day that the actual site of that historic event is now covered by an hotel. Mar's rebellion, as it is called, was a short-lived affair, and within six months the principals had fled to France. To-day, perhaps, the inhabitants of those delightful parts are more content to remember another event, which did more good to the Braes o' Mar than ever the rebellions would have done—King Edward's first visit to Deeside. It was fifty-seven years ago, and he was quite a little boy, and he and his brother both wore the kilt and the Balmoral tartan with its familiar grey pattern, and Queen Victoria, with her unfailing tact, had a Stuart tartan for her shawl.

THE KING AND THE CHURCH.—The world-wide interests of King Edward are forcibly brought home to us by the presentation of the lectern to the parish church at Bruton in the United States, in commemoration of the tercentenary of the foundation of the English Church in Virginia. Such an incident as this, dismissed by nearly all the daily papers in ten lines and less, is a wonderful instance of the thousand little matters that require attention. And it is just these "little things," the apparently trivial acts of thoughtfulness, which make King Edward so universally liked and respected. At home his interest in church matters is equally keen, and the little chapel of St. Nicholas in Carisbrooke Castle possesses the altar, reading-desk, organ, and candlesticks formerly used in Queen Victoria's private chapel at Osborne. St. Nicholas-in-the-Castle was a parish before the Norman conquest, but the present chapel is quite a new building.

THE KING IN THE NORTH. Woodhouse.

Glen Shiel, which is at the head of Loch Duich, which the King visited on Thursday last week, cruising round to Loch Hourn in Lord Burton's yacht "Chrysallis." It was of Loch Duich that King Edward remarked last year that he could not understand people going to Switzerland when they had such beauty spots in their own country.

THE PRINCE OF WALES'S TOUR.—The date of the departure of the Prince and Princess of Wales for India is drawing very near, and the "Renown" and "Terrible" will shortly leave Portsmouth for Genoa, where the Royal travellers are to embark. The Princess came back to town last week to complete her arrangements, and has been very busy ever since. The Earl and Countess of Minto are also getting ready to start for India, and a large number of well-known people will be going to the Shiny East during the next month. During the absence of their parents, the King's grand-children will probably spend a good deal of time in the Isle of Wight. Barton Manor, Osborne, which is still a Royal residence, is to be their home, and, being quite near the Royal Naval College, Prince Edward and Prince Albert will be in close touch with their future messmates. For it is quite certain that as soon as they are old enough both boys will undergo training for the Navy, although some little time must necessarily elapse, and then will be put under the regular régime in the same way that their father was.

THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT AND GUERNSEY.—It is rather more than forty years ago that the Duke of Connaught paid his first visit to the Channel Islands, and that was in company with Queen Victoria and the Prince Consort, when they were on a cruise among the islands in the Royal yacht. Fifteen years later he revisited the islands, travelling on that occasion in his own yacht, and while he was staying at Alderney an incident occurred which two people at least remember to this day. Prince Arthur's yacht was at anchor in the roadstead and the weather was rough. A small yacht with three people on board had put out to sea, but was forced to return and tried to anchor. The anchor, however, failed to hold, and seeing that the craft was in danger of drifting on the rocks the Prince ordered his yacht's boat away to rescue the passengers. They were taken off just in time, and landed safe, if not very dry, before they knew to whom they owed their thanks.

Digitized by Google

A FASHIONABLE WEDDING IN DUBLIN. Lafayette.

The marriage of Sir Philip Crampton Smyly, Chief Justice of Sierre Leone, to his cousin, Miss Eileen Smyly, was one of the most important events of the past week in Dublin. After the wedding a reception was held at the Royal College of Physicians. Among those shown in the above illustration are Miss Vivienne Smyly, Miss Phyllis Smyly, Miss Monty Tweedy, Miss Rose Tweedy, Miss Muriel Shaw, Miss Elizabeth Tweedy, Miss Nona Smyly, Miss Rachel Smyly, Miss Muriel Poe, Miss Sybil Plunket, Miss Constance Smyly, Sir William Smyly, Lady Smyly, Lady Smyly, Sir Philip Smyly, Dr. Tweedy, the Very Rev. the Dean of Christ Church, His Grace the Archbishop of Dublin, Rev. the Dean of Ossory, Colonel Owen, Mr. Jocelyn Smyly, Mr. Cecil Smyly, and Mr. Gilbert Smyly.

LORD GUERNSEY

One of the A.D.C.'s to Lord Minto, the new Viceroy of India.

LADY SHAFTESBURY

Who is to accompany the Princess of Wales on her visit to India.

Lafayette.

LORD FRANCIS SCOTT

Who has been appointed A.D.C. to Lord Minto, the new Viceroy of India.

THE HOUSE PARTY AT RUFFORD ABBEY. Knights-Whittome.

The guests at Lord Savile's Yorkshire house to meet the King. Reading from left to right, back row—Colonel Davidson, Mr. Rothschild, the Hon. Eleanor Brough m, Captain the Hon. R. Greville, Lord Savile, Earl of Crewe, Mrs. Vivien, Lord Brougham, and the Hon. J. Ward. Front row—Countess of Crewe, the Hon. Mrs. Greville, Lady Brougham, the King, Lady Savile, the Hon. Mrs. Keppel, and Mrs. Hwfa Williams.

Digitized by Google

THE MARCH OF EVENTS.

(1) The Eastbourne Tennis Tournament. Mrs. Hillyard, winner of the Ladies' Singles. (2) A general view of the courts at Eastbourne during the progress of the tournament last week. (3) The New Zealand Rugby Football Team. The remarkable success which the New Zealand team achieved in their first match was followed up during last week by victories over Cornwall and Bristol. In all the New Zealanders have scored 137 points in the three games, and have only had a dropped goal scored against them. (4) The Western Meeting at Ayr. In front of the grand stand. The Marchioness of Bute talking to Sir James Ferguson. (5) Foulke, the famous Chelsea goalkeeper, who was formerly connected with the Sheffield United Club.

(From copyright photographs by Lavis, Eastbourne, and others.)

Digitized by Google

THE MARCH OF EVENTS.

THE PRESENTATION TO THE CRUISER "ANTRIM." Lafayette.

Among the many presentations of plate and gunnery shields from the counties to their namesakes in the Navy, one of the most interesting was that from the people of Antrim to the armoured cruiser of that name. Three old Irish loving cups were copied, and the gifts presented by Sir George White recently at Larne. Among those seen in the above illustration are Sir George and Lady White, Colonel McCalmont, the Earl and Countess of Shaftesbury, Sir Hugh and Lady Smyly, Sir Daniel Dixon, M.P., Mayor of Belfast, and Captain Ingleneld commanding the "Antrim."

THE KING'S VISIT TO EDINBURGH. Young.

The huge concourse of people gathered to watch the Volunteer Review at Edinburgh last week were fortunate in having good weather for the occasion. From Edinburgh the King proceeded to Glenquoich, on a visit to Lord and Lady Burton; and at the beginning of this week proceeded to Balmoral, where he will be in residence until the middle of October.

Digitized by Google

THE PRIVY COUNCIL.—The Militant Chief Justice of New Zealand, Sir Robert Stout, is once more on the war-path against the Privy Council. That it no longer serves a high Imperial service may be granted. Apropos of this a good story is told of an Australian who was in London during the passage of the Commonwealth Bill through Parliament. It will be remembered that one clause was not respectful to the Privy Council, yet at a dinner he heard it extolled as "the one visible link of Empire." He was so impressed that he resolved to see it before he went to bed. "Drive me to the Privy Council, the glorious link of Empire," he said to a cabman, who drove to Leicester Square. A second try landed his fare at the Law Courts. But the Australian was determined, and on enquiry at the nearest police-station, he was told that "it might be in Downing Street." At one in the morning he appealed to the lonely night constable for the link of Empire. "There it is, sir," said the latter, pointing. "And what's that building opposite?" asked the Australian. "That's the Colonial Office—Mr. Chamberlain's," was the reply. The enquirer considered a moment. Then he said, "Joe's pretty cute. He keeps the big house for himself, and puts the link in an outbuilding." This is suggestive of the Colonial attitude on the Privy Council.

UNPOPULAR AUSTRALIA.—Mr. G. H. Reid, ex-Premier of Australia, has been telling a Sydney audience that the Commonwealth is the most unpopular country in the world. Indeed, he uses the fact as an argument for embracing the principle of universal service forthwith. This is pretty tall for a young country which is practically a Colony. But the truth of it is undeniable, or an Australian politician would never admit it in a public speech. Why it should be so is obvious. Australia is remote from the world, she has had no soul-stirring experiences, and the conditions of her development have been comparatively easy. She has, therefore, all the provincialism of the counties in England, with the boastfulness and irreverence of a new community. But time will alter all this, particularly as the Australian is a new type of the Anglo-Saxon. He is lean and long, gay and original, alert and quick-witted. When he has got over the youthful habit of teaching his grandmother to suck eggs he will be the most charming of good fellows in the Empire.

THE NEW HELLENISM.—Mr. Seddon's latest expression of the Imperial spirit would have delighted the late Professor Freeman, who could not forgive us for not founding Colonies on the Greek model. For the first time in our annals interest in a game is a State matter. For Mr. Seddon has given orders that the High Commissioner shall send out to the Government reports of the progress of the football team which has just arrived in England from New Zealand. His idea is that sport and games further the unity of the Empire, and, perhaps, he is right. It was certainly a bond of strength in the Greek world. But whether the taxpayer of Maoriland will like to pay for cablegrams at a shilling a word, informing him of the doings of a football team, however victorious it may be, is doubtful. He is not Hellenic enough for that. But originality is Mr. Seddon's strong point, and there is no end to it.

Sarony.

MISS MARIE DORO

Who is appearing with Mr. William Gillette in "Clarice" at the Duke of York's Theatre. Miss Doro is best remembered in London by her performance in "The Dictator," which had a successful run at the Comedy last spring.

THE CUSTOMS HOUSE.—The Customs House to-day is such a very business-like department that one hardly connects it with poetry and literature of the olden time. Yet one of the earliest customers, or collectors, in the English service was Chaucer, whose name is to be met with in many old documents connected with the Customs. There were many curious offices connected with the service in those days, among them the Aulnager, whose business it was to measure all cloths imported; the King's Butler, whose duties lay in examining cargoes of wine; and the Troneur, who is to-day known as the examining officer. Among dutiable articles in the Middle Ages were pipes, and hats and herrings were not allowed to be imported at all at one time. Handkerchiefs and cabbages were looked askance at, and labelled "superfluous," but sugar-candy and looking-glasses were held to be necessary articles. It was at Billingsgate that our earliest Customs House was established, in 979 A.D., Ethelred and his Witanagemote having decided that every small boat arriving at Billynggesgate should pay for toll or custom one halfpenny, a larger boat with sails one penny, a kell or hulk four pennies, and every boat with fish coming to the bridge one halfpenny or one penny, according to her size.

A WELL-KNOWN IRISH FAMILY.—One of the prettiest weddings celebrated in Dublin last week was that of Sir Philip Crampton Smyly, Chief Justice of Sierra Leone, and his cousin, daughter of Sir William Smyly, president of the College of Surgeons. The family is an old one, and has produced several brilliant members of the medical profession. The second baronet of the line was Sir John Crampton, who brought this country and the United States to the verge of war in 1856. It appears that he encouraged recruiting for the British Army, then fighting in the Crimea, and General Pierce, the President of the day, broke off diplomatic relations with him. So black did things look that Lord Palmerston reinforced the Fleet in Atlantic waters, but the gathering storm in the South and the good sense of the English people enabled the two Governments to settle the incident amicably. Sir John was afterwards Ambassador to St. Petersburg and Madrid. His second wife was a daughter of Balfe.

Digitized by Google

THE SERVICES

THE NEW SCOUT "FORWARD." West, Southsea

A new type of vessel, eight of which are just entering on active service. The "Forward" was built by the Fairfield Shipbuilding and Engineering Company, and arrived at Portsmouth last week on completion by the contractors.

THE BAND OF THE IRISH GUARDS Ball.

With the bandmaster, Mr. C. H. Hassell. This famous regimental band is now touring in Canada.

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

IT is a matter of common knowledge that the amount of dust raised by different cars varies enormously, even when they are travelling at the same rate of speed, though the precise reasons that lead to this discrepancy are at present somewhat obscure. Particular interest, therefore, attaches to the experiments which are being conducted by the Automobile Club from time to time as opportunity occurs. The importance of the problem was first recognised in the Reliability Trials of 1903, when marks were awarded for "dustlessness." The competing cars were required to run at varying rates of speed over a track strewn to the depth of half an inch with mill sweepings, the personal observations of the judges being supplemented by the camera. Upwards of 500 photographs were taken on that occasion, and the results were said to be extremely satisfactory, as showing the density and shape of the dust clouds raised by the different cars. The conclusions arrived at by the judges were embodied in a paper which they read before the Automobile Club towards the end of that year. The paper attracted a great amount of attention at the time, but, I am afraid, has long since been forgotten by the majority of motorists. The action of tyres in raising dust was compared to a broom. Each particle of the tyre, as it is released from compression at the moment of leaving the ground, springs back to its normal position, and carries with it the lighter portions of the road surface. It was pointed out, however, that the dust thus raised would quickly settle were it not for the disturbing influence of the currents caused by the movement of the bulk of the car. These disturbing elements the authors considered were the air thrown out sideways and the inrush of air after the car has passed. In order to lessen the volume of these currents they were of opinion that the under side of a car should be smooth and rise towards the rear, and be removed as far as possible from the ground. They also condemned flaring mud-guards, especially if they extended close to the surface of the road, and low-placed silencers and tool boxes.

The judges expressly stated that they did not regard the results of the trials as conclusive, and recommended further experiments, which, as I have said, are still being carried out by the club; at any rate, no practical effect has ever been given to their suggestions for lessening the dust nuisance, except in the case of one maker, who, with commendable enterprise, fitted all his cars with an under shield extending the whole length of the chassis and sloping upwards to the rear. There is little doubt, however, that in the main their conclusions were correct. From personal observations extending over many years I have no hesitation in saying that low-hung cars raise more dust than high ones, and that the worst offenders are those which have their fuel tanks placed beneath the rear of the chassis so that they only clear the ground by a few inches. I believe that these and other projections do more than merely disturb the dust raised by the wheels. It seems only natural that any body passing at a high rate of speed in close proximity to the road must have a bad effect. Presumably the air is first deflected downwards and then rises to fill the partial vacuum caused by the retreating mud-guard or fuel tank, and carries with it the lighter particles of the surface.

Topical

THE EARTHQUAKE IN ITALY.

The King of Italy, on his Fiat car, entering Monteleone after the earthquake.

Topical.

THE AUTOMOBILE CLUB'S DUST TRIALS AT MAIDENHEAD.

The scene on the Bath road at the finish of a third run down by Mr. W. L. Rourke on his 9-h.p. Cadillac.

There was one point in connection with the Tourist Trophy Race which seems to have struck every visitor to the Isle of Man, and particularly those who, like myself, had not been present at either of the Eliminating Trials for the Gordon Bennett Cup. One could understand why the inhabitants of the big towns, and particularly Douglas, were favourably disposed towards the motor-car, because the Automobile Club and the competing firms must have spent very large sums of money in the island since it first became the recognised home of motor-racing on this side of the English Channel. On the other hand, it was reasonable to expect that the people in the remoter districts would look with different eyes upon the horde of motor-cars which periodically descends upon their principal roads, and practically monoplises them for a week or two before every big event without conferring upon the ordinary users any direct benefit in return. There would have been a special excuse for a protest by the farmers on the occasion of the Tourist Trophy Race, as the harvest was still in full swing, and the absolute closing of fifty-two miles of main road for the whole of a particularly fine day must have caused a considerable amount of inconvenience. One, therefore, rather anticipated tales of discontent and surly faces, or at the least indifference to a spectacle which must have long since lost its novelty. It was, therefore, a pleasant surprise to notice the genuine enthusiasm that prevailed, and the friendly feeling that was everywhere displayed towards the motorist. On the day of the race the whole of the rural population seemed to be gathered round the course, and each car as it passed was cheered by the little groups of villagers who occupied every point of vantage. From early morning till late in the afternoon they stuck to their posts, and even when the official car went round with cans of petrol to help those competitors who were stranded from want of fuel, in many places the people were still waiting to give a final cheer to the belated ones. Civility and good nature seem to be characteristic qualities of the Manxmen, which impress themselves upon everyone who visits the island.

Digitized by Google

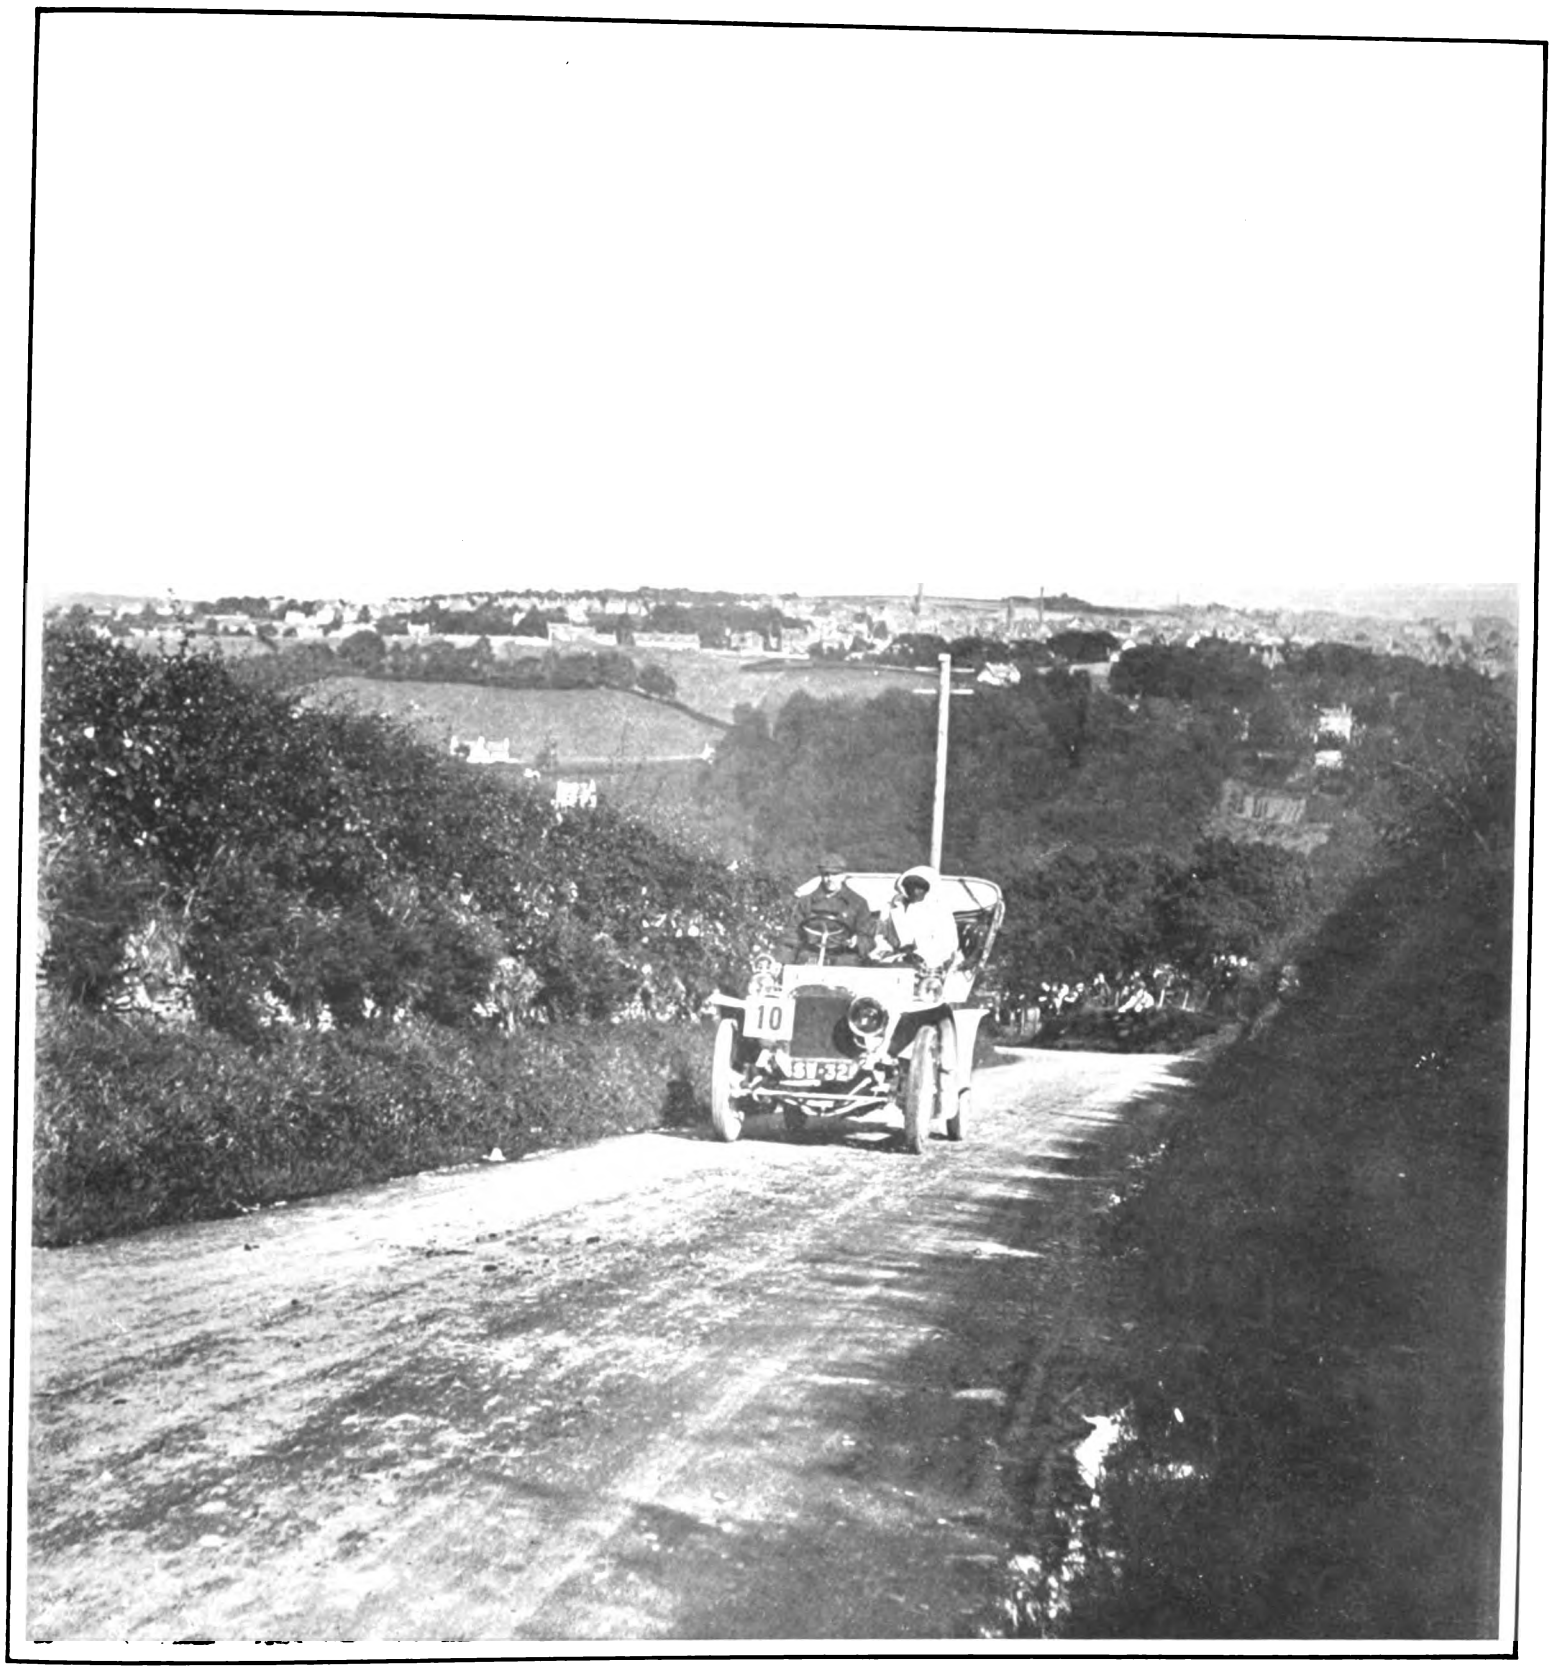
The beauties of the Isle of Man, and its advantages from the motorist's point of view, are hardly appreciated as they should be in the South of England. Taken as a whole the roads are very good, and the racing circuit by itself constitutes a pleasant half-day's run, which can be repeated a dozen times without weariness. There are straight level stretches where one can indulge in a burst of speed without danger, and winding tree-clad lanes where the surroundings invite a more leisurely pace. There are shady glens and wild moorland, varied by quaint old villages and modern towns. At places the road skirts the sea, and at others it plunges inland; but it is best of all when it climbs Snaefell, and offers views that embrace not only the whole of the island, but the distant coasts of England, Wales, Scotland, and even Ireland. There is a speed limit of sixteen miles in the country and a lower one in the towns, but no motorist who observes the courtesies of the road, and drives in a common-sense manner, has anything to fear from the authorities. There are many worse places than the Isle of Man in which to spend a quiet fortnight with a good car, and if one chooses the off season, when the trippers from the mainland have returned to their homes, the hotels will be found sufficiently comfortable to satisfy the most exacting.

RADIATOR.



Copyright.

THE RECENT HILL-CLIMBING COMPETITION OF THE SCOTTISH AUTOMOBILE CLUB (WESTERN SECTION).

Mr. Alan J. Ferguson on his 16—20-h.p. Argyll halfway up the stiff hill at Kirkfield, near Lanark, where the average gradient is 1 in 9. The town of Lanark may be seen in the distance.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

EDITED BY A. J. ROBERTSON.

ONE of the noteworthy meetings held in the early autumn in Scotland is the annual competition of the New Club at North Berwick. It is usually well attended, especially when the weather is fine; and this was the good fortune which fell to the lot of the players last week. Among the players who left the tee were the Prime Minister, Mr. Gerald Balfour, M.P., Colonel D. A. Kinloch, Lord Moncrieff, Sir W. Gardiner Baird, Mr. St. Clair Cunningham, Mr. T. Mansfield Hunter, Mr. Cecil Hutchison, Mr. J. E. Laidlay, Sir H. Meysey-Thompson, and the Hon. Evan Charteris. The club scratch medal was won by Mr. Cecil Hutchison with the fine score of 80. The next best scores were 83 by the Hon. Evan Charteris, and 85 by Mr. J. E. Laidlay and Mr. H. W. de Zoete. Mr. Charteris and Mr. Hutchison tied for the Dalrymple Handicap Cup, but by arrangement between the two players the trophy was taken by the first-named.

* * *

There is a large crowd of golfers playing at present over the two fine courses at Gullane, and here, too, several interesting competitions have taken place among the members of the club, as well as among the visitors. One of the recent competitions was an open foursome tournament, which was promoted by Mr. J. B. Stevenson. The final was played between Mr. A. W. Robertson-Durham and Mr. J. B. Stevenson against Mr. W. C. Sturrock and Mr. C. Taylor. The first-named players won the tournament by 3 and 2 to play. The open handicap tournament promoted among the ladies created a great deal of interest throughout the various rounds, and there were some close matches played.

* * *

The Scarborough Club held a very successful autumn meeting last week in fine weather. The Ladies' Challenge Bowl (thirty-six holes) was won by Miss Rosamund Taylor with a net score of 143, second place being secured by Miss Godfrey with one stroke more. The open competition of eighteen holes was won

Ullyett.

THE RECREATION OF A SAVANT.

Lord Avebury, better known to the public as Sir John Lubbock, is exceedingly fond of golf, and has a private course at his seat, High Elms, Farnborough.

by Miss C. Hanbury with a net score of 66, Miss Rosamund Taylor coming next with 69. Miss R. Taylor was the winner of the scratch prize with 91.

The Open Championship of the United States was played for last week at Hamilton, Mass. There was a good entry of British golfers, the professionals competing being almost wholly composed of players who had been trained on English and Scottish links. Mr. W. J. Travis was one of the competitors, and at the end of the first thirty-six holes he headed the list of the amateur players, though ninth on the scoring list among the professionals.

* * *

Private golf courses attached to large estates are one of the noteworthy features connected with the growing popularity of the game. Lord Rosebery is the latest landowner who has found it to be necessary to lay out a golf course on his fine estate on the shores of the Firth of Forth at Dalmeny. Nine holes have been laid out in the park adjoining Barnbougle Castle, and though the length of the holes is on the short side, it is certain that a great deal of enjoyment will be obtained by Lord Rosebery's guests at Dalmeny. It is to be hoped that the next development will be to induce Lord Rosebery himself to become as serious a student of the game as the Prime Minister himself.

* * *

Though the occurrence of a death on the golf links is by no means a rare event in these days of widespread popularity of the game, there is always a note of tragedy about the event which impresses the imagination of all those who either witness or read about it. The latest incident of this kind is the painfully sudden death of Mr. R. G. Henshall, manager of the Warrington branch of the Manchester and Liverpool District Bank, who died very suddenly on the links of the Appleton Golf Club, immediately after striking off his ball. Mr. Henry Roberts, a former Mayor of the borough, was Mr. Henshall's partner at the time.

Tresca, Paris.

GOLF AT DEAUVILLE.

Golf is now one of the fashionable amusements at this French watering-place. Baronne H. de Rothschild is playing off the tee, and the player with the club on the left is the Duc de Morny.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

THE LINKS AT HUNTERCOMBE.

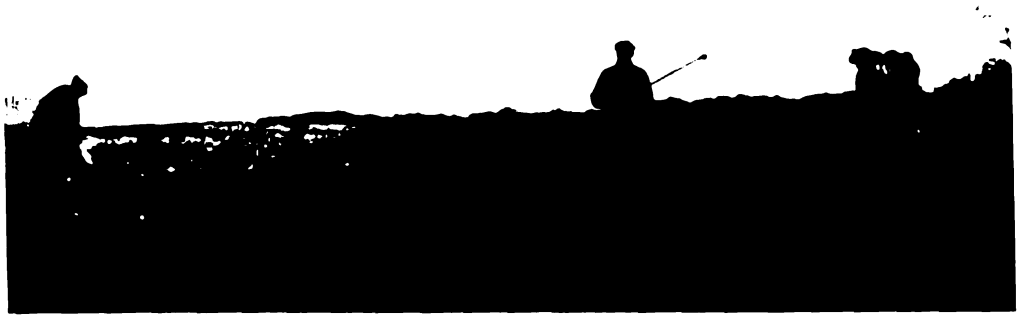
ESTABLISHED barely five years, Huntercombe can already claim to be about the finest inland course in Great Britain. The links are situated about six miles from Henley-on-Thames, and can be reached from London in an hour and a-half. Barely an hour in the train, and an excellent service of motor-cars complete the journey in half-an-hour, for the modest sum of 1s., the drive being through very picturesque country. The links are the property of Willie Park, who has laid them out most excellently and carefully. One of the features of the course is the amount of "head" play required, the wild hitter being invariably punished severely. The putting greens (which, taken as a whole, are about the largest I have seen anywhere) give a good putter a great advantage, besides rendering relief greens and auxiliary crosses, and similar abominations, quite unnecessary.

A beginning will soon be made to build the new club-house. Considerable difficulty has hitherto been met with in obtaining good pure water, which has now been obtained at a depth of 825-ft. The annual subscription to the club is £5 5s., and the entrance fee was raised last year from £3 3s. to £5 5s. Lord Howe is president of the club, and among the members of the committee are the Earl of Chesterfield, Lord Herbert Vane-Tempest, and Mr. A. J. Balfour, M.P.

The "Bogey" score is 80, but D. Stephenson, the local professional, holds the record with the low score of 72. The amateur record, held by Mr. H. C. Ellis and Mr. C. K. Hutchison, is 75—very sound golf, considering that the circuit of the course is 6,429-yds.



THE HUNTERCOMBE LINKS.

Mr. L. Palmer driving from the 14th tee, his sixteen year old dog Shot watching the ball—the dog has earned a reputation for finding lost balls; Mr. Breakspear and girl caddies on the right.

THE COURSE AT HUNTERCOMBE.

Mr. L. Palmer playing an approach putt at "Pandy," Mr. Breakspear on the right.

THE HUNTERCOMBE LINKS.

A view of the picturesque green at the 8th hole, with the quaint clump of old cottages in the background.

GOLF AT HUNTERCOMBE.

Captain Paulet in difficulties at the 9th hole; Mr. Cohen on the right.

The first tee is at the apex of an angle formed by two roads bordered by rows of gorse bushes, which form hazards for a pulled or sliced shot, with a bunker 100-yds. away in front. The green is guarded on the left by two bunkers, with gorse on the right and beyond. The second is a short hole guarded by two sand bunkers, but is very narrow, with gorse all the way on both sides. From the third tee it is best to play a little to the left to keep clear of a cottage garden. There is a little pond to catch a bad second, and the green is completely encircled by a chain of bunkers; a very accurate approach shot is therefore needed. The length of the hole is exactly the same as that of the first hole, 473-yds. The fourth hole, 220 yds., is a very good one-shot hole, with bunkers to the right and left of the green, and one in front to catch a topped ball. The fifth hole needs a good drive to clear the gorse on both sides, and a good second to cross the big bunker guarding the hole. The sixth hole, 143-yds., is an iron shot, with a bunker in front of the green and a hedge beyond. The seventh hole is one of the finest on the course. From the elevated position of the tee it is possible to see into seven different counties. The tee shot is played over some very rough ground, with a ploughed field on the left and a ridge on the right. Care is needed when approaching the green, which is rather sloping, with a steep bank and hedge beyond. The eighth is a very pretty hole, with a deep quarry to the left of the green beside the Oxford road; there is rough ground both beyond the green and also on the right. Two full shots are needed to reach the ninth green. There is a carry over some gorse from the tee, and there are bunkers forming a semi-circle in front of the hole. A very straight course must be kept at the tenth hole, 456-yds. There are bushes on both sides, and a bunker in front of the green. The eleventh is the longest hole on the course, 560-yds., with gorse both right and left all the way to the green. The twelfth hole is 215-yds., just a good drive to the green, with no special feature. The thirteenth ("Pandy") is a difficult green to keep on. The hole is up on a plateau, with a bunker beyond, similar to "Pandy" at Musselburgh. The fifteenth hole is a short one, 190 yds., with gorse bushes beyond the green. The sixteenth is a very pretty hole, 372-yds. long, with gorse beyond the green and a very big bunker, like "Perfection" at North Berwick, in front. The seventeenth is a splendid hole, with a hedge on the right, and a dense mass of gorse all the way along the left. There are several pot bunkers, and a sand bunker guarding the green. The eighteenth hole is very similar to the seventeenth, with a hedge on the right and gorse on the left. The green is surrounded with bunkers, with gorse beyond. The last two holes are both 400-yds. long.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

A. V. D. RINTOUL.

Correspondence.

THE PECKLE IN ITS RELATION TO OLD PHILP.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE KING."

SIR,—You were good enough to publish recently an artless verse of mine in the honour and praise of the peckle, written in the golfing tongue. It is with bitter tears I find Mr. Croome mentioning in the Evening Standard and St. James's Gazette for the 2nd inst., in one of the excellent series he has led so many of us to look forward to, that neither he nor any of the Westward Ho! men have been able to construe my inoffensive lay. This points to a neglect of the golfing tongue, which is nothing short of deplorable, and may go far to explain our recent disaster at Deal, a very valley of Achor to the Scottish golfer. But it was, rather, with regard to the relation of the peckle to the wise, great, and good Old Philp that I first wrote you. It may be remembered that when Mr. Lamb ushered his quaint misconception of what a club ought to be on a shuddering world, the tortured ghost of the great artificer made mournful protest:

A HUNTERCOMBE FOURSOME.

Lieutenant C. K. Hutchison and J. H. Taylor, standing; Willie Park and Mr. F. W. Maude, sitting.

"Think of the heirlooms ripe with age,
In dear, dead hands the trusted, tried!
'Tis Lamb has cursed the heritage,
Has wrecked the trust and dashed the pride.

"'Mid geck, and gibe, and fleer, and flout,
'Mid croak of heir and fiend's guffaw,
The melancholy thought will out—
''Deed, Mr. Lamb, I'm weel awa'!'"

It is not the case that Old Philp had been denied the priceless gift of pregnant invective. Shortly after the invention of the gutta, and before the lesson had been learnt of hammering the new ball to make it fly straight, one of his customers, who had been experimenting with balls weighted with lead filings, brought back several sorely-damaged clubs (which were at least his own by purchase) to their inspired maker, and was received with the indignant query: "Whitna deevil's been hashin' my bonny clubs yon gate?"

One shudders to think of his possible words had he, at the time of writing, known of Mr. Lamb's further outrage in naming his weapon after a notorious rapparee, who, until betrayal by his master, acted as lieutenant to the still more infamous Freney of the one eye, whose name is still used by Irish nursemaids to gall their small charges when off their putting: "Mickie, alannah, yez are putting loike a Freney, the divil!" Freney, in fact, is still a common name throughout Ireland for a one-eyed man; and it is a melancholy reflection that many of them require quite a quantity of John Jameson to reduce them to the level of the ordinary putter by seeing double.

It may, perhaps, be admitted that golfers should be allowed a language of some kind or other for esoteric intercommunication when surrounded by heathen outsiders; and Mr. Croome's word, on explanation, does really seem harmless and inoffensive in comparison with the use of the thing itself. In its origin, no doubt, the word savours of the term "tackety-face," which is a term of affectionate admiration applied by the youth of Fife—the birthplace of "O. P.," which he took pleasure in illumining for so many blissful years with the sunshine of his presence—to their brethren who bear traces of having suffered from the small-pox, instead of the myriad fernietickles borne by those whom the sun has kissed—while caddying, no doubt.—I am, etc. W. DALRYMPLE.

FIXTURES.

September 29-30.—Acton, Autumn Meeting.
September 29-30.—Bushey Hall, Open Amateur Meeting and Challenge Cup.
September 29-30.—Hanger Hill, Autumn Meeting.
September 30.—Newhaven, Autumn Meeting.
September 30.—Royal Jersey, Autumn Meeting.
September 30.—Southport, Autumn Meeting.
September 30.—Matlock Bath, Autumn Meeting.

GOLF AT HUNTERCOMBE.

A view of the 2nd green. Mr. George Riddell putting towards the hole; Mr. Edward Hudson waiting to play.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

GOLF AT OSTEND.

(1) Mrs. Alfnoth Butcher driving, Mr. Butcher walking forward. (2) Baron Oscar Van Loo, a well-known Belgian sportsman. (3) M. Edmond Drugman, one of the organising committee of the club at Coq-sur-Mer. (4) Panoramic view of the Royal Golf Club of Belgium, showing secretary's house and the tiny station where the train stops; the new automobile route in the foreground. (5) The club-house at Coq-sur-Mer and some of the members. (6) M. Albert Feyerick, a well-known Belgian sportsman. (7) On the home green (left to right): Mr. Gerald Blunt, Miss Dumbell, Mr. Dumbell, and Miss Blunt.

Digitized by Google

The Styles of Eminent Players.

XII.—The Hon. OSMUND SCOTT.

THE FINISH OF THE DRIVE.

THE FINISH OF THE BRASSIE SHOT.

THE FINISH OF THE CLEEK SHOT.

AMONGST all the various styles in golf Mr. Scott has one of the most taking, if not the most taking, I have seen. It is most graceful, powerful, and very effective, especially his long play. To see him hit a brassie shot out of a bad lie is one of the best things in golf. He will whip it out of anything, and away it goes, straight and low and far. Mr. Scott is essentially a wrist player; he has very graceful wrists, and knows thoroughly when to put them at work with the greatest success.

Mr. Scott is certainly a cosmopolitan golfer. He plays the game all over the British Isles; but I think his favourite course is Westward Ho! He is undefeatable there, and whenever they have medals or cups he generally manages to annex them, or, at least, to be very close. St. Andrews and Prestwick I know he likes. Prestwick he ought to like, for last May he all but took the highest honours. Abroad, too, his golf is well known. Biarritz is his rendezvous for the winter, and Pau also he knows well, both places where golf is the pièce de résistance. Wherever he goes he is welcomed, for a kinder partner or more courteous opponent it would be impossible to find.

Mr. Scott drives a beautiful ball, very far; he is one of the two or three who are the longest drivers in the world. His style is perfection; nothing can be easier, and the ball goes away so beautifully, very low at first and with a run on it at the end—exactly the style of ball the late Mr. Tait used to drive, though procured by totally different means. Notice in No. 1 how well through and high the hands finish, and how the right shoulder comes round. Mr. Scott is, I think, the only player of his class who plays in gloves. This, I fancy, is caused by using rubber grips, which undoubtedly cost him one or two strokes in the wet day of the final of the Amateur Championship. He has a very slow swing back, and an almost perceptible pause at the top of it.

In No. 2 we have a brassie shot. As I have said before, Mr. Scott excels with this club, playing the shot in the same manner as off the tee, and getting quite as far with it.

Nos. 3 and 4 are iron shots. Mr. Scott plays these entirely off his wrists. In No. 3, which was a full cleek shot, it will be noticed how straight the arms are, well out from the body, and not brought round at all.

In all Mr. Scott's strokes he has a curious habit of bending the left ankle; he does not move the foot in any way, simply turns sideways outwards on his ankle. It gives a peculiar appearance to several of his shots, and you think he has sometimes missed them. In his mashie shots Mr. Scott trusts more, I think, to knowledge of distance than to stop; for all his shots, however short they may be, seem to have a good deal of run on them, though, of course, he can play a stopping shot when necessary.

No. 5, putting. The only flaw I can find in Mr. Scott's game is his putting, and this of late years has almost become eradicated. He has taken to a most peculiar-looking "engine"—I forget who makes them—but what looks like a piece of bent gas-piping; the raised blade is so narrow that on grassy greens you cannot see it at all, and how the ball does not jump in the air and the putter go underneath it, has always been a mystery to me. Mr. Scott used to putt with a Mill's aluminium, and this I think he was wise to give up, as you require to strike the ball very true and hard with it, and this is just what Mr. Scott does not do. He hits very gently, and hardly comes through at all, anyway for short putts. Mr. Scott putts well enough, however, to beat most people, and this, after all, is what is required. Mr. Scott almost had the blue riband in his grasp this year, and I doubt not that in a year or two to come he will have seized it with a firm hand, with an intention to keep it. I can wish him no better luck than this. H. Ferrier-Kerr.

THE FINISH OF THE IRON SHOT.

THE PUTTING STANCE.

IN THE BUNKER.

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. LXIII.—Lieutenant-Colonel W. E. Brymer, Conservative M.P. for South Dorset.

THERE are few more interesting constituencies in the West of England than that which includes within its boundaries not only a large number of prosperous villages, the population of which is almost entirely agricultural, but historic Dorchester, the scene of many a political battle à outrance between the Ashleys and the Bankeses, and beautiful Weymouth—the picturesque scene of next week's Church Congress—described in the House of Commons "Companion" of a century ago as "one borough with two names, sending four members to Parliament." From the reign of Queen Mary down to the latter end of that of Queen Victoria, men of more than ordinary note figure on the muster-roll of the representatives of Weymouth and Melcombe Regis at Westminster. Great artists, like Christopher Wren and James Thornhill, were amongst them, as well as astute courtiers like Bubb Doddington, keen politicians like Lord Robert Spencer, and millionaires like Sir James Pulteney. Admiral Domett once sat for Weymouth, and in 1806, and again in 1807, only a few votes on each occasion deprived Weymouth of the signal honour of sending Nelson's friend, Sir Thomas Masterman Hardy, to the Lower House. From 1874 until 1885, when the electoral privileges of Dorchester came to an end, William Ernest Brymer of Ilsington House, Puddletown, sat for the capital of his native shire. Since 1891 he has represented in Parliament the Southern Division of Dorset, in which he lives, and where he enjoys the rare distinction of being regarded as a prophet in his own country, for it is given to very few men indeed to be as universally popular with all classes as the large-hearted squire of Ilsington, who is never so happy as when promoting the well-being of his tenantry, helping his poorer neighbours, or relieving genuine cases of distress in accordance with the tenets of the great Masonic Brotherhood in which he holds very high rank indeed.

In the golden age of Bath, the Brymers of Crowe Hall were well and favourably known amongst the eminent bankers in the City of Fashion. Many years ago Mr. John Brymer purchased Ilsington House, the old Dorset home of the Earls of Orford, and hence Colonel Brymer's right to a place amidst Dorset worthies. Like the sitting member for South Dorset, Mr. John Brymer was a staunch Conservative, representing Bridgwater in Parliament for over a quarter of a century, and dying in harness as one of the Knights of the Shire for Bedfordshire. From "Drury's House" at Harrow, where he spent five years, Colonel Brymer went in 1858 to Trinity, and notwithstanding his prowess as an oarsman, a cricketer, and a tennis and racquet player, duly took his B.A. degree, and three years later proceeded to that of Master of Arts. He found time, moreover, to take part in the early development of the Cambridge Rifle Volunteers. Colonel Brymer since then has hunted, shot, and fished to good purpose in many lands, but the greater part of his life has been devoted to the conscientious performance of his public duties in Dorsetshire, and the care and improvement of his property at Puddletown. Ilsington House is one of those comfortable old-world two-storied white buildings, with shady verandahs, slated roofs, and tall stone chimneys familiar to all lovers of Western England. It is surrounded by level lawns, beds filled with the brightest flowers, gravelled paths bordered by thick high hedges of box and yew, clumps of beeches, yews, and cedars, and a park which affords at every turn some fresh vista of sylvan scenery. The "glass" at Ilsington is the object of Colonel Brymer's particular solicitude; but he is prouder still of the well-built and roomy cottages which bear his monogram and the date of their construction, and have replaced the hovels for which Puddletown was notorious before the régime of the Brymers replaced that of the Walpoles. The squire of Ilsington holds the rank of lieutenant-colonel and honorary colonel of the Dorset Imperial Yeomanry. With the Freemasons of Dorset his popularity is unbounded. He has been a Grand Warden of England, and in him the Earl of Shaftesbury finds a most efficient and energetic Deputy Provincial Grand Master. He rules also over the Dorset Mark Master and Knights Templar, and once in the year a meeting of Provincial Priory takes place at Ilsington, where he dispenses a lavish hospitality worthy of the best traditions of the owner.

Ilsington House abounds in trophies connected with the sporting and political achievements of two generations of the Brymers; but there is nothing its present possessor values more than the superb piece of plate and illuminated address presented to him nine years ago by the Conservatives of South Dorset after his unopposed return to the House of Commons. In Parliament Colonel Brymer has taken a deep interest in all questions relating to the condition of the poor. He has granted allotments at fair rents to all who want them, and returns the whole sum which accrues from their occupancy in prizes to the most industrious and the most successful. He is also a practical farmer, and has acquired a knowledge of land improvement which the most scientific estate agent might envy. During thirty years he has fought no less than six contested elections—two in Dorchester and four in South Dorset. In 1874 his majority was 120; in 1900 it was 365.

Mr. Balfour has no more staunch or loyal supporter than Colonel Brymer; his Conservatism is as downright as one might expect from his long and useful record, and the electors of South Dorset may feel assured that the man who has made Puddletown what it is to-day is not one who would assent to any legislative measures which would in any way imperil the conditions of the tillers of the soil and the great mass of the labouring classes.

Smyth, Dorchester.

ILSINGTON HOUSE, PUDDLETOWN, DORCHESTER
The residence of Colonel Brymer, M.P. for South Dorset.

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

WITH the exception of a few matches here and there, chiefly of local importance, the season of 1905 has to be counted with the past. The 52-footers, as the only class of thorough-bred racers extant, naturally claim chief attention in the year's racing, although it must be frankly admitted that the class hardly sustained the interest that was expected of it. When early in the year it first became recognised that the racing in the class would be International in character, it was generally expected that the liveliest interest would thereby be excited; but it has produced far less than was created, for instance, some few years ago, when Niagara was brought across here by Mr. Gould, although, it must be borne in mind, in that instance the International element was more pronounced by the owner being an American.

In the present case the many mishaps that occurred to first one and then another of the boats in the earlier part of the season did much to deprive the racing of its interest; and when Moyana, the oldest boat of the quartette of which the class is composed, was seen to be creating the best record against two new vessels, as well as one by which she had been repeatedly defeated last year, it was felt that the boats could not be showing their true form, and interest waned. From a purely sporting point of view, however, the racing in the class has not been so interesting for some years past, owing to the fact that the season's prizes have been more evenly divided than is sometimes the case.

Mr. S. Butler's Fife-designed Maymon once more comes out top of the class, but her record does not equal that of last year; and Mr. Leuchar's Mylne-designed Moyana is a very close second. Perhaps the most remarkable feature of the racing has been Moyana's record. Until quite late in the season she was at the head of the list, and on the Clyde, during the "Fortnight," she won the special prize on points for the whole series of regattas in Northern waters.

Mr. W. P. Burton's new craft, Britomart, was somewhat disappointing in the earlier part of the season. She experienced some difficulty in getting her mast and gear to stand properly, and even when that was overcome her performances were far from satisfactory. In the Solent, however, she began to show an undoubted improvement in form. She had formerly made a poor show in turning to windward in any sort of a breeze; but from Ryde Week onward she gave a different account of herself, and somewhat unexpectedly developed a taste for hard weather, her best performances being in fresh winds. At the Royal Southern Regatta, when single reefed mainsails were the order of the day, she fairly beat Maymon, and also passed Sonya in the hard thrash to windward. Moyana on that day had obtained such a long lead at the start that she was practically sailing alone all day, and while the other three were paying close attention to each other, she was able to steadily increase her lead. At different periods of the race, however, Britomart unmistakably reduced the gap existing between them, and was really giving the best all-round display of any. The race, it will be remembered, was won by Maymon, after the others had retired—Moyana and Britomart as the result of accidents.

Mrs. Turner Farley's Sonya, the Herreshoff design, is at the bottom of the list on the season's performances, her total record being only six first prizes and five seconds. She lost one first prize by finishing on the wrong side of the mark-boat at Dover. On the other hand, one of her firsts was awarded on a protest. She has started fewer times than any of her competitors, and was particularly unfortunate with her masts in the earlier part of the year. She carried away her hollow mast before the racing season commenced, and took part in her first few matches with a solid stick. As soon as she had another hollow spar stepped she showed improved form, and won three matches. Her misfortune followed her on the Clyde, however, and ultimately another new mast was necessary for her to complete the season with. It is generally recognised that she is a better boat than is suggested by her somewhat meagre string of prize flags, and possibly she may give a different account of herself next year.

The records of a class for the whole of a season have always a most interesting bearing upon the prospects of the racing in that class for the following year. If any yacht should be hopelessly outclassed, and be considered not capable of improvement, there is but little inducement for her owner to bring her out again as a pure racer, and under those circumstances there is the possibility of a competitor being lost. This season's records are, however, such that there is every reason to believe that the whole quartette may be in commission again next year.

With a strong class now in existence, there is all the more likelihood of recruits being attracted to it, and already the names of two well-known yachtsmen have been mentioned as probable builders of 52-footers for next year. Although we may hope to see such a development, I feel that it would be premature at the moment to refer to the yachtsmen by name. Appended is a table of the records:

| | Starts. | Wins. | Second Prizes. | Total Prizes. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Maymon | 36 | 14 | 10 | 24 |
| Moyana | 34 | 12 | 8 | 20 |
| Britomart | 31 | 6 | 10 | 14 |
| Sonya | 27 | 6 | 5 | 11 |

CORINTHIAN.

Creak, Dartmouth.

DARTMOUTH HARBOUR.

The harbour during regatta times, viewed from any standpoint whatever, is most picturesque. As a rule there are several tiers of yachts moored on each side. The building in the background is the new Royal Naval College.

Digitized by Google

YACHTS OF THE YEAR.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Kirk, Cowes.

VENDETTA.

She was built for Admiral the Hon. Victor Montagu to race in the 40-rater class in 1893. She was designed by the late A. E. Payne, and was intended as a hard-weather boat, but the season in which she came out was remarkable for light airs. She has sailed this year in the cruiser handicap class under the flag of Mr. W. Abbott.

Digitized by Google

The Church Congress at Weymouth.

OCTOBER 3—7, 1905.

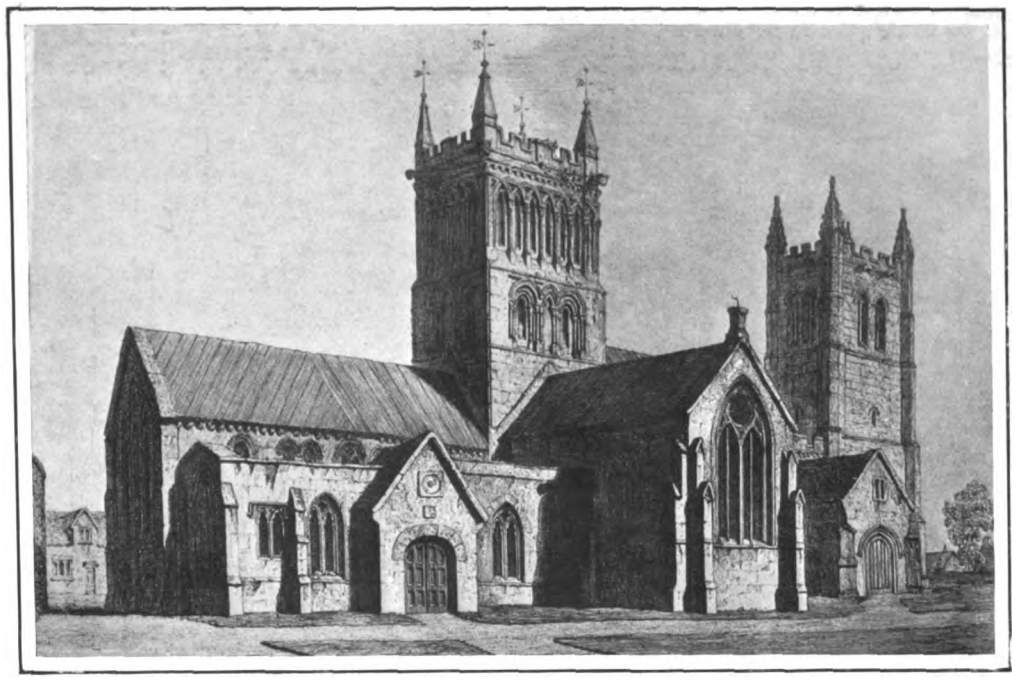
IT is eminently within the fitness of things ecclesiastical that the Diocese of Salisbury should at length receive a visit from the Church Congress, and that the county of Dorset in particular should have the opportunity of extending that hospitality which is so readily tendered on these interesting and instructive occasions.

For forty-five years in succession this autumnal meeting of representative Churchmen, both lay and clerical, has met in a different centre, and during that time it has flourished and grown in efficiency and comprehensiveness, so that now it more than realises the hopes and designs which the invitation to the first Congress, October 2, 1861, thus explains as its raison d'être:

"We are convinced that a zealous endeavour to stimulate the energies of the Church and to apply correctives to acknowledged defects of system from within are not less efficient measures of Church defence than the defeat of destructive attacks from without; and we believe that friendly discussion among Churchmen would greatly aid in devising remedies where needed, and in promoting unity of action."



WIMBORNE MINSTER, DORSETSHIRE.

In this remarkable old church, founded by Cuthburga, daughter of the King of Wessex, in 713, there are numerous interesting tombs, including that of King Ethelred, brother of Alfred the Great.

Such is the aim of the Church Congress, initiated by the zeal and foresight of the Venerable Archdeacon Emery, who still, after four decades and a-half, keeps his place at the helm with the post of Permanent Hon. Secretary. It carries on its work under the presidency and patronage of the Archbishops, Bishops, and a large number of the nobility and influential Churchmen, and has visited almost every English diocese, as well as Wales and Ireland.

In regard to historic associations and beauty of scenery, the locality of this year's Congress could scarcely have been more happily chosen. Weymouth is not only a well-built borough town, with 20,000 inhabitants, but is also a charming seaside resort, replete with all the attractions of a modern watering-place; whilst from an ecclesiological point of view Dorset, and especially the neighbourhood of Weymouth, is full of associations connected with the early history of the Church in Britain. The story of the visit of St. Joseph of Arimathæa to our shores may rest only upon tradition, but, nevertheless, the student of nomenclature may trace the legend of the Holy Thorn from Thorncombe Beacon on the coast near Bridport, to Thorncombe Thorn, in the parish where still the Yuletide blossoms may be plucked, and onward in a line to the Holythorn at Glastonbury, passing through Holythornes in Winsham, and Thorn Coffin, near Yeovil in Somerset, all these names dating from times immemorial.

But to pass from legend to history, Dorset had St. Aldhelm for its Bishop at Sherborne in A.D. 705, and his little chapel on St. Aldhelm's Head, near Swanage, is well worth a visit. Its vaulted roof is surmounted by a circular turret, which in ancient days held a brazier beacon-light to warn the ships off the cliffs in stormy weather, whilst the priest within the chapel prayed for the souls of the mariners—a practical example of the text, "Watch and pray." There was also another stone church built by St. Aldhelm in the neighbourhood of Wareham, where he had an estate, the walls of which were still standing in William of Malmesbury's day (1140), who tells us that no matter how fierce a storm raged without, there was always dry shelter within the roofless church, a fact vouched for by the shepherds who fed their flocks on the spot, and who had ceased to regard the occurrence as a miracle, so used had they become to it. St. Aldhelm occupies a chief place, therefore, in this year's Church Congress banner. St. Boniface, who went to Germany in 716 to evangelise the

THOMAS SPRAT, D.D., F.R.S.

Bishop of Rochester. Born at Beaminster, Dorset, 1635, died 1713.

EDWARD STILLINGFLEET, D.D.

Bishop of Worcester. Born at Cranborne, Dorset, 1635, died 1699.

ROBERT FRAMPTON, D.D.

Bishop of Gloucester. Born at Pimperne, Dorset, 1622, died 1708.

Digitized by Google

THE CHURCH CONGRESS AT WEYMOUTH.

(1) Bishop Webb, Dean of Salisbury, who speaks on "The Church and her Daughter Churches." (2) The Bishop of London, who preaches at the opening service. (3) The Bishop of Manchester, speaker on Religious Teaching in Secondary Schools. (4) Bishop Taylor-Smith, who speaks concerning soldiers. (5) The Bishop of Croydon, who speaks on Temperance. (6) Bishop Ridley, who preaches and speaks at Dorchester. (7) Bishop Mylne speaks on "The Ideal of Christian Marriage." (8) The Bishop of Derby speaks at Dorchester on "Church Services." (9) The Ven. the Archdeacon of Dorset, formerly Dean of Hobart and now Vicar of Charminster. (10) Bishop Montgomery, who speaks at Weymouth on the proposed Pan-Anglican Congress. (11) Bishop Cassels, who speaks at Dorchester. (12) The Bishop of Bath and Wells speaking at the meetings at Dorchester and Blandford.

(From photographs by Elliott and Fry and Maull and Fox.)

Digitized by Google

Royal Central.

THE REV. H. W. CARPENTER, M.A.
Precentor of Salisbury Cathedral. Hon. Secretary of the Weymouth Church Congress.

Elliott and Fry.

THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY
Who will be present at the Weymouth Congress.

Owen.

THE REV. T. J. WOODALL
Vicar of Britford. Hon. Secretary of the Subjects Committee.

Frisians, was a Wessex man, and drew many of his followers from Dorset, one of whom, St. Wite, Bishop of Buraburg, was among the fifty-two who were martyred with St. Boniface on Whitsun Eve, June 5, A.D. 755, and it most probably is to him, and not to any female St. Candida, that the ancient shrine of Saint White at Whitechurch, near Bridport, was erected.

In mediæval times Dorset for its size stood almost unrivalled in the richness and number of its ecclesiastical foundations. Of the five great Abbeys whose Abbots attended Convocation, robed in cope and mitre, Sherborne claims the first place in point of seniority, dating back into the seventh century. St. Aldhelm found it flourishing when he became the first Bishop of Sherborne in A.D. 705. The Abbey churches of Sherborne and Milton Abbas are in excellent preservation, whilst Cerne Abbas, Abbotsbury, and Bindon, all within easy excursion distance from Weymouth, are now in ruins. Of the collegiate churches Wimborne Minster, with its chained library, should find a place in the itinerary of every Congress visitor who has not seen it.

Jenkins.

THE RIGHT REV. JOHN WORDSWORTH, D.D.
Bishop of Salisbury, and President of the Church Congress. From the painting by Sir George Reid, F.S.A.

The four important nunneries of Dorset were at Shaftesbury, Came, Wimborne Minster, and Tarant Crawford, at the last of which places King John's daughter, the Queen of Scotland, and the famous Bishop Richard Poore, builder of Salisbury Cathedral, lie buried. There were also no less than twenty priories in the county, one of which was at Melcombe Regis, and to the Borough of Weymouth still belongs the famous "dying chair," still to be seen, along with one of the Armada treasure-chests, in the Town Hall, which was given by some Cardinal to that Dominican Priory, and which chair attained not only a great reputation, but also brought in a considerable income, from the superstition that to die while seated in it was a certain passport to eternal bliss. Of the eight mediæval hospitals and leper houses of the county, two were at Bridport and one at Dorchester, places at which some of the Church Congress meetings are to be held.

Passing to the notable ecclesiastics of Dorset, there have been seven Archbishops, including Cardinal Morton and William Wake; fifteen Cumming.

THE REV. C. ASKWITH, M.A.
Rector of St. Mary Melcombe, the parish church of Weymouth.

Gillingham,

THE INTERIOR OF MILTON ABBEY, DORSET.
Specially photographed for THE KING.

Elliott and Fry.

THE VEN. ARCHDEACON EMERY
Founder and Hon. Permanent Secretary of the Church Congress.

Digitized by Google

THE CHURCH CONGRESS AT WEYMOUTH.

(1) The Earl of Shaftesbury, who speaks on Christian Marriage at the Weymouth Congress. (2) The Right Hon. the Earl of Pembroke, one of the Patrons of the Congress. (3) Lord Hugh Cecil, speaker on Lay Work. (4) Mr. R. Bosworth Smith speaks on Mahomedanism. (5) Mr. T. Batty, Diocesan Secretary C.E.T.S., who will speak on Temperance. (6) The Hon. F. W. D. Smith, M.P., speaks on the Use of Wealth. (7) Miss Hilda Maud Templeman, Mayoress of Weymouth, hostess at the reception given by her father to the members of the Congress. (8) Mr. H. A. Huxtable, ex-Mayor of Dorchester and Town Clerk of Weymouth. (9) Alderman T. J. Templeman, J.P., Mayor of Weymouth for the fourth time, is giving a reception to the members. (10) Mrs. Summer, who speaks at the Women's Meeting at Weymouth, October 2. (11) Mrs. Creighton speaking at the Women's Meeting at Bridport, October 2. (12) Miss Elizabeth Wordsworth, a speaker at the Weymouth Women's Meeting.

(From photographs by Elliott and Fry, Wheeler, and Cumming.)

Digitized by Google

THE REV. A. S. METCALF
Rector of St. Peter's, Dorchester.

THE REV S. E. V. FILLEUL
Vicar of All Saints', Dorchester.

THE REV. CANON ROWLAND HILL
Rectory of Holy Trinity, Dorchester.

Bishops, including Robert Bingham and Giles de Bridport, both of Sarum, James Turberville of Exeter (died 1570), Walter Blandford of Worcester (died 1675), Robert Frampton of Gloucester (born 1622), Thomas Sprat of Rochester (born 1635), Edward Stillingfleet of Worcester (born 1635), Peter Mews of Winchester (born 1618); and in modern times, Bishop Handley Moule of Durham, and Bishop G. E. Moule of Mid-China.

Of other clergy of note Dorset can claim Thomas Fuller the historian, the writer of the "Worthies of England," who was chaplain extraordinary to Charles II. Poetry is well represented by the four priest-poets, Christopher Pitt of Pimperne, translator of the "Æneid"; George Crabbe, rector of Evershot and Frome, St. Quintin, whose poems "The Village" and "The Parish Register" are masterpieces of English verse; William Crowe, rector of Stoke Abbas, and public orator at Oxford, who has honoured this county in his matchless "Lewesdon Hill"; whilst last, but not least, William Barnes, rector of Came, has by his poems in the Dorset dialect endeared himself to all sons of Wessex.

It is hardly necessary to say that the Rev. John Wesley's ancestors for three generations were Dorset clergy, the first of whom, Bartholomew Wesley, lies buried at Lyme Regis, having been preacher at Charmouth in 1651, when he so nearly put the Roundheads successfully on the track of the fugitive Charles II. as the King de jure was attempting to escape to France after his defeat at Worcester.

Passing on, however, to Weymouth and its part in Church history, there is much of interest. It was from here in the fifteenth century that so many pilgrims set out on their way to the noted shrine of St. James of Compostella in Spain. The Pope had decided that a pilgrimage thither was for Englishmen of equal value to a journey to Jerusalem. Hence we find a licence was granted in 1413 to Richard Hill of Weymouth, to carry forty Werner.

THE REV. CANON WELDON, D.D.
Vicar of Holy Trinity, Weymouth.

pilgrims in his ship the "St. Leonard." Two years later Richard Nicholls got leave to take eighty pilgrims in the "Leonard of Waymouth." In 1428, John Pilipp, master of the ship "Holigost of Waymouth," had the same permission to carry and bring back 120 pilgrims; whilst in 1455 the good ship "James of Waymouth," owned by Henry Russell, the great-grandfather of the first Earl of Bedford, had licence to carry no less a personage than "James Butler, Earl of Wilts, the King's cousin, to go to St. James of Gallicia in Spain with thirty persons in his retinue."

Coming to Church architecture, the visitor asks why it is that Weymouth—or, rather, the united towns of Weymouth and Melcombe Regis—is so notably deficient. The fact is, Melcombe was only a hamlet of Radipole, and Weymouth was an outlying tithing of Wyke Regis. The latter could not boast of a church other than its distant parish church, and so one Sunday morning in 1377, when some French ships sailed into the bay, they found the place an easy prey, for everyone had gone to Mass at Wyke! This appears to have decided the Weymouth people to pay for a priest and church of their own, which Coker in the seventeenth century thus describes:

"Weymouth is but litle, consisting chiefly of one street which for a good space lyeth open to the sea and on the back of it riseth an hill of such steepness that they are forced to clymbe upp to their cha. peli by eighty stepps of stone, from whence you have a fair prospect of the towne and haven lying under itt."

Leland in 1538 wrote:

"By this towne on a hill ys a Chapelle of Ease, the paroche Churche ys a mile of."

It was dedicated to St. Nicholas, as was so often the case with seaside churches, and has been entirely destroyed, the present Holy Trinity Church dating from 1836.

With regard to Melcombe Regis, it possessed a chapel in 1298 which was not consecrated at that date, and which could not have lasted till 1427, for in that year John Rogers and Hugh Deverel, Esquires, founded Melcombe Priory, and in their petition to Neville, the youthful

THE REV. H. R. W. FARRER
Rector of Bridport.

THE REV. FRANCIS E. CORYTON
Vicar of St. John's, Weymouth.

THE REV. HERBERT PENTIN, M.A.
Vicar of Milton Abbas, Dorset.

Digitized by Google

Bishop of Salisbury, who was then aged twenty-three (though, by the way, the poetical licence of the Sherborne pageant describes him less than ten years after as "a particularly mild and gentle old man"), expressly state that "there is no place dedicated to God in Melcombe." At the Dissolution the Priory chapel became the parish chapel, and in 1605 it was enlarged into the parish church. It was dedicated to Our Blessed Saviour, and lasted up to 1815, when it entirely gave place to the modern St. Mary of Melcombe. Of the needless destruction of old churches in Dorset as a whole, of the complete snapping of the link with the past, and, where that has not been entirely effected, of the slippery and hideous glazed tiles which on floor and walls so often have replaced inscribed stones, armorial monuments, and matrices of ancient brasses, it may be truly said that neither the spoliation of the monasteries under Henry VIII, nor the iconoclastic zeal of the Roundheads, destroyed so many irreplaceable features of the Church architecture of Dorset as the so-called "Restorations" of the earlier part of the nineteenth century.

As to the Congress itself, great preparations have been made for its reception at Weymouth and neighbourhood. The Bishop of Salisbury, the Archdeacons of the Diocese, and an influential Executive Committee, both of clerics and laymen, have been working for months past. Precentor Carpenter, the Secretary, and the Rev. T. J. Woodall, the Secretary of the Subjects Committee, have issued a programme of great promise. First of all on Sunday, October 1, special preachers from all parts of the world will give addresses at Weymouth, Dorchester, Bridport, Blandford, and other churches of South Dorset in preparation for the week.

The next day, Monday, 2nd, the Congress assembles, and the Bishop of London addresses women's and men's meetings. Tuesday has a very full programme. There is the formal reception by the Mayor and Corporation, followed by the sermons of three Bishops in the opening services held in the three Weymouth churches. Then the President's address, followed by papers and discussions on the Old Testament, on Wealth, and on Temperance. Wednesday and Thursday, the 4th and 5th, are filled up with such interesting subjects as revivals, lay work, marriage, education, women's work, Army, Navy, and prison work, with a reception by the Mayor on Thursday evening. On the afternoon of the 5th, at 2.30 p.m., the Masonic members of the Congress will be welcomed at a meeting of "All Souls' Lodge" by the Master, Mr. Henry Cox, when a paper will be read by Mr. John A. Sherren, on "The Church's Debt to Freemasonry." Lord Shaftesbury, the Bishop of Barking, and other prominent "brethren" are expected to be present.

Friday's work will be principally of a devotional nature. The morning subjects are, "How to Deepen Conviction of Sin," "How to Combat Indifference," "How to Strengthen Individuality," "How to Enlighten Conscience," whilst the afternoon will be occupied with the consideration of Christian Science and Faith Healing, Town and Village Nursing, and the Visitation of the Sick.

Whilst these meetings are being held at Weymouth, the neighbouring towns of Dorchester, Blandford, and Bridport have a smaller programme of meetings of the same nature, with a promising list of representative speakers.

Amongst those assisting at the Weymouth Congress are the following eminent Divines, viz.: The Archbishops of Canterbury and York; the Bishops of London, Durham, Bath and Wells, Gloucester, Rochester, Worcester, Manchester, Truro, Derby, and Croydon; Bishops Mylne, Montgomery, Cassels, Ridley, Taylor-Smith, and Ingham; the Deans of Salisbury, St. Patrick's, Windsor, and Hobart; Archdeacons Dundas, Burrows, Cornish, Harris, and David; and Chancellors Worlledge and Bernard; the Warden of Keble; Canons Allen Edwards, Camber-Williams, Dugmore, Rowland Hill, Jelf, J. C. Wright, Sowter, and Weldon; Prebendaries Eardley-Wilmot and H. E. Fox; Professors Kirkpatrick and Sadler; and the Revs. Dr. Fry, Dr. Weitbrecht, H. S. J. Woollcombe, A. Daldy, T. Collins, J. G. Simpson, A. W. Robinson, J. Llewellyn Davies, J. F. Bethune Baker, J. N. Figgis, W. Crouch, Morley Stevenson, S. Bickersteth, H. R. W. Farrer, C. Askwith, S. Schor, A. P. Hill, C. E. L. Cowan, St. G. H. W. Caulfeild, W. Carlile, G. Harford, T. Boughton, E. F. Noel-Smith, W. S. Swayne, T. K. Allen, and D. G. Davis. Amongst ladies who are expected to speak are Lady Hammick, Mrs. Creighton, Mrs. Sumner, Miss Elizabeth Wordsworth, Miss Amy Hughes, Miss Strahan, Miss Alice Ravenhill, Miss Clifford, and Miss Yeatman. The following well-known laymen figure in the programme: The Earl of Shaftesbury, Lord Chelmsford, Lord Hugh Cecil, the Hon. F. W. D. Smith, M.P., Sir H. Bemrose, Bart., H. Syndercombe Bower, Bosworth Smith, C. R. Buxton, H. Philips, T. Batty, Dr. W. Collier, F. Fletcher, General Mackinnon, General Owen Hay, G. A. King, Captain Prior (C.A.), Colonel Walter Marriott-Smith, J. C. Medd, Vice-Admiral Swinton Holland, Eugéne Stock, Basil Thomson, H. Goldstone, P. P. Pennant, Paul Swain, and Colonel R. Williams, M.P.

An exceptionally interesting feature of the Congress is the "Ecclesiastical, Educational, and Art Exhibition." It will be opened by the Bishop on Saturday, September 30, at 3 o'clock, three days before the Congress begins. For its accommodation a temporary building, lighted by electricity, has been erected close to the Sidney Memorial Hall. In it will be seen an interesting collection of examples of the work of representative firms of ecclesiastical furnishers, organ-builders, stained-glass painters, and publishers. Various sisterhoods and schools of embroidery will display their handicraft, and Church societies of all kinds will supply an object-lesson of the activity and comprehensiveness of the Church. Close by in the Drill Hall will be housed quite the most interesting loan collection that has ever been brought together at any Congress. Amongst items of interest too numerous to mention, the several unique specimens of Dorset ancient Church plate will attract attention, whilst the service-books and chasuble lent by the Dean and Chapter of Salisbury cannot fail to claim the notice of students of the Sarum Use. Book-lovers will find a fine collection of rare editions of the Bible and Prayer-book. The Dorset Boroughs will lend their maces, chains, and other civic insignia. Earl Nelson is lending some of his Nelson relics, which, in view of the fact that it is the very month of Trafalgar, and within a few days of the exact date of the centenary of that famous battle, ought to appeal to the national sentiment of visitors to the Congress of the National Church. Dorset coast parishes recorded their relief at the removal of the great strain of threatened invasion by entries such as these in their churchwarden's accounts: "Paid ye ringers when News of ye Glorious Victory came"—"Paid ye ringers when Poor Nelson was buried." And last, but not least, the Bishop of Salisbury's portrait, painted by Sir George Reid, will be exhibited previous to being presented to his Lordship as the united gift of the diocese on the completion of the twentieth year of his episcopate.

Given fine weather, there can be little doubt that this year's Congress at Weymouth will leave a permanent mark for good, not only on the Church in Dorset and the Diocese of Salisbury, but also on the whole Church of England. "Unity is strength," and the aim of the Congress is for unity. No organisation properly worked could be more conducive to a broadening of the mind and a banishing of that parochial narrowness which sometimes seriously hampers the work of the Church at large. And so with the centenary of Trafalgar close at hand and Nelson's signal before us, it may be well to lay to heart the victories which have been achieved by individuality in unity, and to say that "England's Church expects that every man will do his duty." A. M. B.

Copyright.

THE INTERIOR OF SHERBORNE ABBEY, DORSET.
From a rare water-colour drawing, circa 1825.

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

IN AND AROUND WEYMOUTH.

Photochrom.

THE PARADE AT WEYMOUTH.

The picture conveys a good idea of the handsome wide promenade at this popular watering-place, which is often referred to as the "English Naples," owing to its lovely situation.

UNUSUAL interest attaches to the pretty Dorset watering-place where the Church Congress meets next week. At this season of the year, when the cold, treacherous east winds are already beginning to make their presence felt, there are few more sunny or sheltered spots to be found anywhere around the English coast; while its accessibility from the metropolis—reached in about three hours by the expresses of the South Western and Great Western Companies—is a matter of some consideration for the health-seeker.

Although some thousands of holiday-makers annually pass through Weymouth on their way to and from the Channel Islands, but very few remain long enough to appreciate the several advantages it offers to those in search of health and sunshine. In common with the rest of the Wessex Coast, Weymouth enjoys an extremely low rainfall, and, what is perhaps of even greater importance, a sunshine record rivalling that of Jersey, which stands first in the British Isles. Apparently these claims have long been recognised by the medical profession, for we read that Weymouth was the spot chosen above all others as being best suited to George III. during the period of convalescence following his long and severe illness. Mention of the Royal visit recalls the following amusing passage from the diary of Mme. d'Arblay, at that time Mistress of the Robes to Queen Charlotte. The incident refers, of course, to George III.'s first sea bathe at Weymouth. "They have dressed out every street with labels 'God save the King.' The bathing-machines make it their motto over all their windows, and those bathers that belong to the Royal dippers wear it in bandeaus on their bonnets to go into the sea, and have it again in large letters round their waists to encounter the waves. Think of the surprise of his Majesty when, the first time of his bathing, he had no sooner popped his Royal head under the water than a band of music concealed in a neighbouring machine struck up 'God save great George our King.'"

The fashion set by Royalty a hundred odd years ago largely accounts for the present-day popularity of Weymouth among health-seekers and others. Of the old town but few traces remain. A new Weymouth has sprung up, to which the name of Melcombe Regis has been given, and which quite outstrips its predecessor in size and importance.

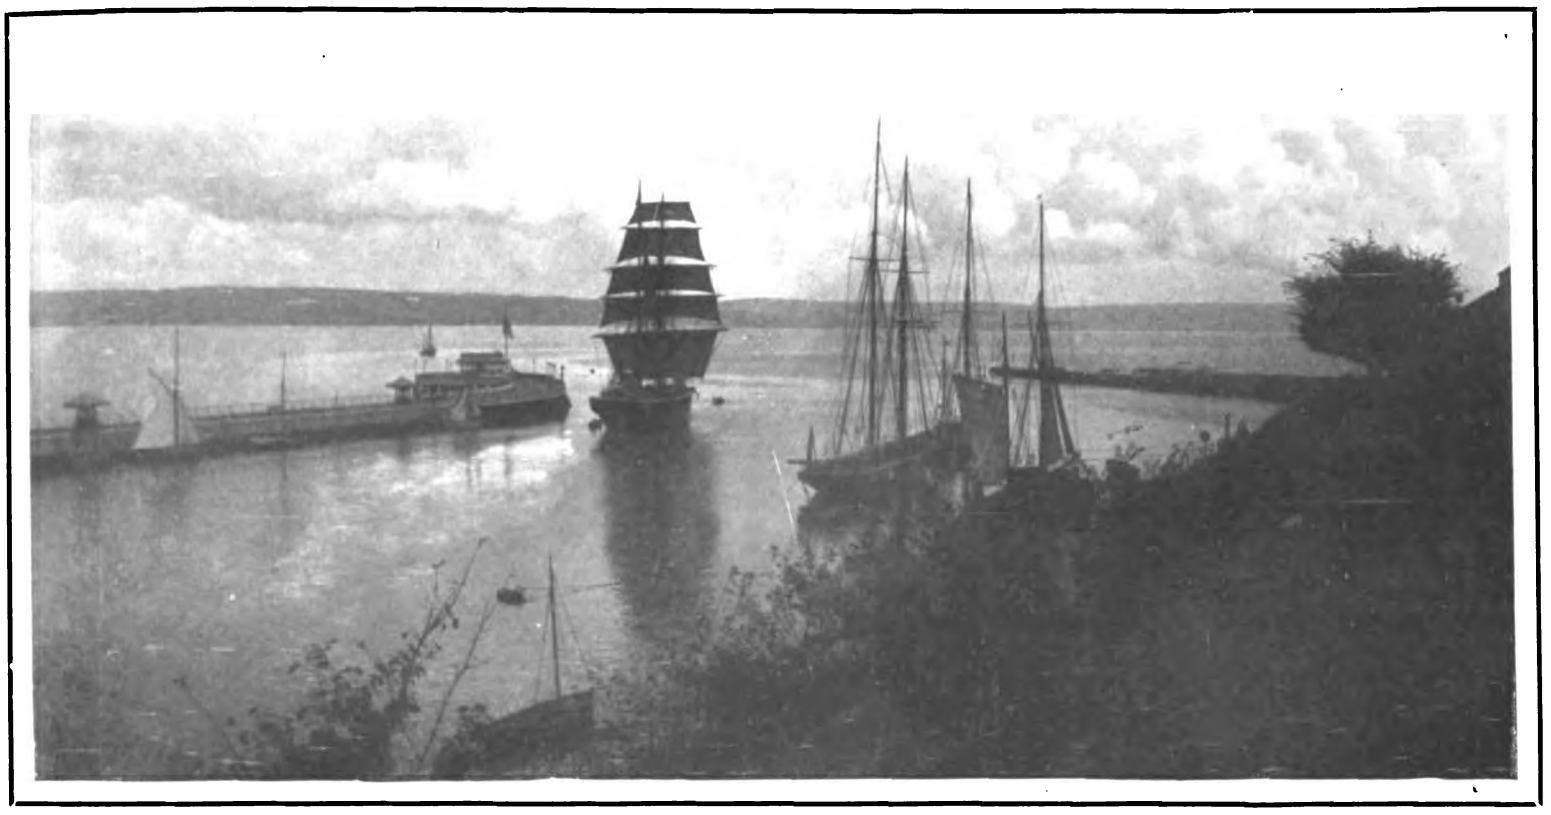
The situation of Melcombe Regis is unique in more ways than one. It is surrounded by water on three sides, the front, which faces

Photochrom.

A GENERAL VIEW OF THE PICTURESQUE TOWN OF WAREHAM

One of the oldest in Wessex. In St. Mary's Church, on the right of the picture, Edward the Martyr was buried, but his remains were afterwards removed to Shaftesbury. The church is also said to have been the burial-place of the early Saxon kings.

Digitized by Google



MOONLIGHT AT WEYMOUTH.

A beautiful night effect in the harbour, whence the fine mail steamers of the Great Western Railway leave daily for Jersey and Guernsey.

east, being built around a beautiful bay, nearly five miles wide, of which the inhabitants have cause to be proud. Weymouth Bay, with its safe anchorage for yachts, has often been likened to the famous Bay of Naples; certainly it is without a rival on the South Coast. But apart from its pure air and vast stores of sunshine, its fine sweep of promenade, and unequalled facilities for boating, bathing, and yachting, Weymouth offers yet additional charms to those who delight in the making of excursions by land and sea. The historic and literary associations have cast a romantic spell over the whole of Wessex, and this feeling has to a large extent been further intensified by the writings of Thomas Hardy. At least a day, or more if time permits, should be devoted to the grand old town of Dorchester, with its charming shady walks and interesting Roman remains. Here also one can view the workhouse, described by Hardy in his well-known novel "Far from the Madding Crowd," and Max Gate, near the old Toll House, the home of the famous novelist. The Napier Almshouses, built nearly three hundred years ago, are also of interest. Upwey and its picturesque Wishing Well may be included in the excursion to Dorchester. The island of Portland is also within easy distance of Weymouth by steamer, train, or road. Apart from the interest which naturally attaches to the convict establishment and church, there is some remarkably fine cliff scenery and curious fossils. The island of Portland possesses a special attraction for the American visitor, in Pennsylvania Castle, which was built by a descendant of the historic family early in the nineteenth century. Another favourite excursion is that to Lulworth Cove, to which steamers run two or three times a week. One can also go by rail as far as Wool, continuing the journey by bus. The Cove, which has been hollowed out by the ocean, is a delightful, picturesque little retreat, with every facility for safe bathing, boating, fishing, etc. Lulworth boasts some of the finest cliff scenery in Dorset. Close to Wool are situated the ruins of Burdon Abbey; there is also a fine old red-brick Jacobean manor house, now used as a farm, which was once the manor of the D'Urberville family, and which readers of "Tess" will recall. There are innumerable other places of equal interest which can be visited within a day's excursion, including Cerne Abbas, with its monster figure cut in the hillside, Sherborne, Lyme Regis, Bridport and West Bay, Abbotsbury, and Swanage.

DORCHESTER FROM THE RIVER FROME.

The county town of Dorchester is a favourite excursion for visitors staying at Weymouth. It contains some of the most interesting antiquities in the county. Thomas Hardy, the well-known novelist and a native of Dorset, resides at Max Gate, near the old Toll House

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

THE MERRY MIDINETTE.

IT is striking twelve. The Rue de la Paix, the Place Vendôme, are deserted; there is a sleepy air about the street that was so full of life an hour ago. A solitary cab crawls disconsolately to the nearest wine-shop. It is the luncheon hour, and there will be no more fares for the present. Suddenly there is a sound of laughter, a rippling merry sound, and in another moment the pavement is full of people, girls and women mostly, hurrying from the workshops of the big dressmaking and millinery establishments, rushing from one side to the other to shake hands with a "pal," and marching towards the Tuileries across the Rue de Rivoli, two, three, four, five abreast, arm in arm.

Happy, light-hearted midinette! Whatever may be her fate in the future, for the present she has no cares. She is poor, but she is young and healthy, and Paris is kind. A sunny day, a stone bench, a chum to talk to and share her admiration for the blue sky, the birds, the changing leaves, the sweetness of the air. She wants no more.

Two have darted through the crowd and disappear down the Rue des Petits Champs. They seem excited, they run. What can be the matter? A budding love affair? An appointment? You look sadly after the little figures, and embroider dark spots on the scene. next. And the story must be good and pure to suit these children, who cut out and paste together the chapters as they appear, and pass them on to friends, finger-marked and smudged with tears.

There are black sheep among this army of workers, unavoidably. And here lies the danger. Mothers whisper, "Beware of the men, my honeys." But it is not men whom they have to fear; they hear more of life and wickedness from a girl companion than ever a man would tell them. Inspectresses, however, watch over the flock, and will tell you that the girls are more interested in romance than reality, and love to picture the palaces and fêtes where the dainty laces and wondrous satins that they sew will grace the fairest of women. Sometimes the clients of the great houses are old and plain, but not for the midinette who works for them.

Midinette is a new word, a word invented by a Parisian writer for the produce of Parisian soil, the Paris work-girl. Neither in Lyons nor Bordeaux, nor any of the great work centres, will you find the same stamp of girl. She grows in the light of the city, and flourishes by the pleasures the city offers. Pleasures she can take on Sundays, the one day in the whole week she is free to wander in and out of museums, churches, picture galleries open to all. These, however, are for wet

Géniaux.

DURING THE LUNCHEON HOUR.
A party of midinettes, the work-girls of Paris.

When they reappear again, still laughing, with a mysterious package in one hand, you laugh too, as they pass you, for you know the grease and the scent of deux sous de frite, and the joy the crackling of those potato chips will give. They carry them to the sunniest corner of the old garden, draw a couple of chairs to the chosen seat below the terrace, and lay out their meal. There is a piece of sausage that can be cut into many fine slices with the little pocket-knife, a pear that will divide beautifully, a slice of bread and jam, the fried potatoes, and a pint of coffee in a wine bottle. What more can mortal desire!

They eat and drink, and shake the crumbs to the impudent sparrows watching from the bough, and then the real enjoyment begins. The halfpenny paper is unfolded, and the little heads are bent over the feuilleton, the story of children changed at their birth, of love and crime, of virtue rewarded, of the hundred and one incidents in hovels and palaces that the "serial" novelist crowds into the daily chapters that delight the romantic reader. Sometimes four or five girls meet to hear how "the count saved the maiden," and one reads, while the others sit, arm in arm, intently listening. Each buys the paper in turn, for halfpennies are not plentiful among the youngest members of the princely trade. They may one day become saleswomen, or principals, but for the present they are but little apprentices and work-girls, and a sou is a sou. The novelist knows his public, and how the last lines of the day's supply must make them eager for the days. When the sun shines, and it shines winter and summer, the midinette prefers to be in the open air; she can be seen in the Jardin des Plantes, in the Bois on her bicycle, on the penny steamers that run to Meudon and its shaded woods. Everywhere she is happy; it is in her nature to live in the present for the few years of her youth.

Her dress is plain, but there is something in the way she pins her hat upon her neatly-coiled hair that she has in common with all Parisians. She will hold her woollen skirt in her hand as she crosses a road, and show as graceful an outline, and as pretty a foot and ankle, as any of our mondaines. She will carry a hat-box and be followed by as many old beaux as can keep up with her; and she knows she is followed, and hastens the pace; and sometimes turns her head, but never stops. She delights in tiring them, these wicked old men who seem to have no other occupation than to follow a midinette. But she laughs and distances them. They are no match for nimble sixteen.

In a few years she will marry, some expert mechanic, as a rule, and will work by the day in private families, adding a few francs to the weekly expenses of her home. But she always remains the romantic girl, even at five-and-twenty, and will tell you how she made her husband grow a beard like Philip in the "Maître de Forges," the work-girl's ideal. She may rise socially, become an employer of labour, but she never gets beyond Georges Ohnet. But what matters as long as she is happy!

FRANCES KEYZER.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

LUNCH-TIME WITH THE MIDINETTES.

(1) At their favourite corner. (2) A mid-day meal. (3) In the Place Vendôme. (4) Lunch in the Tuileries Gardens. (5) Novelettes after lunch.

Digitized by Google

From a Playgoer to a Friend in the Country.—II.

MY DEAR DEMETRIUS,—Did you ever know a man who made a good will for himself without the trained aid of a lawyer? Did you ever hear of a man who designed a house fit to live in without the assistance of an architect? Is it not a by-word among doctors that the most paying class of patients are those misguided people who have tried to diagnose and remedy their own ailments?

To the first two questions your reply will, I am sure, be "No"; to the third "Yes." Very well, then, can you explain to me why on earth actors will insist on writing plays for themselves instead of calling in a professional dramatist? Professional dramatists are men whose business is writing, creating character, making fiction pass for real life. They are men who have spent their lives thinking, not acting. They are more or less skilled labourers in the business of exciting the emotions of the human heart.

Yet actors flatter themselves that they can do without the professional dramatist altogether. They think a knowledge of the tricks of the stage is sufficient equipment for a maker of plays. What a huge mistake they make! Even the box-office shows their folly. They are always complaining that people won't go to the theatre. Of course they won't, to see plays like "Clarice" and "Dick Hope"! No more would you eat your dinner if the cook determined to do without the butcher, and went out and murdered a sheep with her toasting-iron. A pretty mess she would make of it! But not a greater mess than actors make when they write their own plays.

Mr. Gillette is an actor who has the power, more than any actor I have seen, to play the part of a strong man. In "Secret Service" he made the air sizzle with reserved force. In "Sherlock Holmes" he convinced one that the detective was a man of brains and iron. Yet when he writes a play for himself he contrives that he shall play the part of an utterly backboneless creature, with no more solidity or common-sense about him than a mannequin d'osier. You could make a better man than Dr. Carrington out of tea-leaves.

Carrington, like all stage guardians, is in love with his ward. When the ward's aunt proposes that she shall marry someone else, instead of saying, as a man would, "Well, first of all, I am going to ask her to marry me," this waxwork guardian acquiesces tamely in the suggested arrangement. The ward is more sensible. She loves her guardian, and she says "No!" to the other man. But even then the guardian's imbecility causes any amount of trouble.

The other man, who is a doctor, too, accuses him (that is the only word for it) of being in a galloping consumption, which will carry him off within a year. Naturally one expects Carrington to tell him his diagnosis is nonsensical. He feels perfectly well. No symptoms of lung weakness have troubled him. Even an ordinary man, with no medical knowledge, would hesitate about accepting a verdict of this kind from his declared rival in love. Not so Dr. Carrington. He resigns himself to his fate without a murmur. In order to get his ward out of reach of infection, he says he hates the sight of her; that instead of helping him with his work, she hinders him; that she is a nuisance and the bane of his life. Not until he has driven her away by his maniacal reproaches does he begin to suspect his rival's duplicity.

What does he do then? Go to some other doctor for a second and more impartial opinion? Not a bit of it. He pretends to have poisoned himself, and by wriggling and groaning and spitting and making faces he frightens the other man into confessing the fraud. Then the girl, who at this moment has conveniently turned up again, walks into his arms, and the yawning audience is at last permitted to go home.

That is one actor's play. "Dick Hope" is another. Here the central figure is a tippling major, played by Mr. Kendal, who gives a life-like imitation of the Village Idiot. The major and the vicar of the parish both love a certain middle-aged Marjorie Lyall. Marjorie loves the vicar, but in a spirit of unthinkable self-sacrifice promises to marry Dick Hope if he will keep sober for a year. He only breaks out once during the year, and at the end of it she declares herself ready to keep her promise. It is revealed to the major, however, that she loves the other man and not him, and so he nobly gives her up, behaving at this juncture more like the Village Idiot than ever.

That is literally the whole plot of the play. The characters introduced for purposes of padding are a curate, who giggles and plays the concertina, a pair of preposterous children, and an old woman puppet in black bugles, who seems to have stepped straight out of some play of thirty years ago. There is no more life or reality in the piece than there is in a mechanical rabbit. Perhaps you say that a mechanical rabbit is an ingenious piece of mechanism, even though it cannot counterfeit Nature. Granted; but then one does not sit and watch a mechanical rabbit for three mortal hours on end, as I sat and watched "Dick Hope."

It is quite plain to me, my dear Demetrius, that we shall never get a drama worth twopence until it is clearly understood that, while it is the business of actors to act plays, it is the business of men of letters to write them. Publishers don't themselves write, or get clerks in their offices to write, the novels they publish. They know the novel-reading public have too much judgment to put up with that sort of thing. When playgoers are educated up to that level, we shall get better plays generally, but not before.

Meanwhile we must be thankful that there is one theatre to which a man can take his brains. I mean the Court Theatre, where they are playing "John Bull's Other Island." Don't miss that, my dear Demetrius, or if you do, don't put the blame on your faithful adviser, SEPTIMUS STARR.

Play Pictorial.

"THE WHITE CHRYSANTHEMUM" AT THE CRITERION.

Sin Chong (Mr. M. R. Morand) introduces the crew of the Admiral's gig to a few little Japanese girls.

Digitized by Google

THE RACING SEASON.

JUST about this period of the year some strange ferment of the blood sets in; it becomes impossible to settle down to work. Instinct compels one to hang about the gunmakers' shop windows, and a magnetic attraction draws one to where the makers of fishing-tackle dwell. The very air of London becomes irritating and offensive. If a gust of wind does by any chance meet one at the corner of a street, liteless and evil smelling though it be, from somewhere in one's memory comes the strong flavour of an ocean breeze. Back to one's hearing comes the surging swish of the water as the boat, held up to windward, curtsies till her lee rails are all awash, and the throbbing song of the helm tells one that the craft is a living sentient creature, and is doing her best in the teeth of the freshening breeze. Them be things of the past my masters, but never mind, "It is better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all." I am not quite sure of the truth of the saying, but at all events it is well to have heard the challenge of an old cock grouse, and it is good to have seen him fall, clean killed as he winged his way at top speed over the butt. It is pleasant to remember the early morning plunge into the swirling pool, and the long, hard stalk that followed. No tame sport this—your wits and endurance pitted against the cunning, wariness, and instinct of the stately stag, with the feel of the smooth stock of the rifle against one's cheek, the steady even pressure of the trigger, and the feeling, half of triumph, half of sadness, as the splendid beast collapses in answer to the shot. Have you ever awakened just before the dawn and seen the white mists of the night unrobing the moors and the mountains to the glory of day? Have you ever heard the trumpet note of a highland bull proclaim that day has dawned? Does the screech of the reel when a clear run fish makes his first wild dash for the freedom that shall never more be his ever sound in your ear? Et puis! What on earth has all this got to do with racing? For the life of me I do not know, unless it be that the half empty enclosures at the various meetings remind one that others have gone, where we, too, fain would be. Thus, too, "things" are apt to become obtrusive. An old gun-case has a nasty knack of suggesting thoughts which it might just as well keep to itself. A long wooden rod-case that has not been opened for years tells you just now that inside it there is, amongst others, the rod with which you killed that last big fish. Well! What of it? It was fun; very good fun, too, while it lasted, and, after all, there is a music of its own in the beat of the flying hoof; the high indomitable courage of a thorough-bred race-horse as he fights his way inch by inch to the front compels one's admiration. There is plenty of interest to be found in watching the career of a two year old which one has perhaps known since his foalhood days, and if one can lay one's finger upon a weak spot in a handicap there is a pleasant feeling that life is not altogether an empty dream.

W. A. Rouch.

MR. W. M. G. SINGER'S PHYLLOXERA, BY TYRANT—BURGUNDY.
Winner of the September Handicap at the Windsor Meeting.

W. A. Rouch.

MR. SIMONS HARRISON'S BAY YEARLING COLT BY PERSIMMON—ELLA TWEED.
Bought at the Doncaster Bloodstock Sales by Sir R. Jardine.

There is a fairly general concensus of opinion that the results of the Doncaster sales of blood-stock afford a tolerably clear indication of the tone of the money market, and, therefore, of trade and business in general. If this view be correct then the country is in a fairly prosperous condition, for the total of 92,627 guineas realised by the 281 yearlings disposed of at the recent sales has not been equalled since 1895, when the result of the four days' sale amounted to 103,425 guineas. The average price of the animals sold is also not without interest, the mean figure this year being nearly 330 guineas, and it may serve to draw attention to the value of breeding as an industry, if it is realised that at the Doncaster sales alone no less than 908,492 guineas have been expended in the last ten years.

Dwellers in the Midlands love a bit of sport, and a crowd assembled on the far side of the course when the Warwick Meeting commenced. Average racing prevailed during the afternoon, but beyond noting that the Warwick Handicap was easily won by Mr. G. Cottrill's Rose Ronald, also by winning the Castle Plate on old Thunderbolt Maher brought the number of his winning rides to 86, and thus tied so far with Wheatley for premier honours among the jockeys, and the brilliant performance of Imperial II. under the crushing burden of 10-st. in the Members' Plate there is little to record. The Yarmouth Corporation must be pleased with the result of the recent meeting. With racing in full swing all over the country it is barely possible to refer to the smaller details of the week's sport, the best of which took place at the Western (Ayr) gathering. Mr. G. G. Tod may well feel proud of the enthusiastic reception accorded to himself, his trainer, and his jockey when G. M'Call squeezed Powder Puff first past the post in the Ayrshire Handicap of 1,000-sovs. The weights in the Free Handicap are very interesting as relating to the estimate held by the handicapper of the chances of several of the horses entered for the great back-end handicaps, and it will doubtless be noticed by readers of these notes that Transfer represents Val d'Or at 8-st. 2-lb. in the Cambridgeshire.

CAURIRE.

Digitized by Google

The Naval Colour-plate Books of Long Ago.

JOHN BRAHAM and Samuel James Arnold, who were jointly responsible for "The Death of Nelson," came into the world in the same year, 1774, and both survived till the fifties of the last century. Men and women still alive have heard Braham sing the famous song, of which he was the first interpreter, and Arnold, who had seen Garrick as a boy, lived to witness the opening of the Great Exhibition of 1851. Charles Dibdin, Arnold, and Braham did much to fan the flame of Naval enthusiasm which followed the dearly-won victory of Trafalgar, and the later actions with the French, the second battle of Copenhagen, and, above all, the triumph of the "Shannon" over the "Chesapeake," helped materially to keep it aglow till Frederick Marryat came upon the scene, and in 1829 began the publication of his series of nautical novels with "The Naval Officer." In 1840 Jack was even more dearly loved by the British public than in 1805. The colour-plate books of this interesting period are gradually becoming rarer and rarer, and those dealing with the Navy now command at least three times the price they did only twenty years ago, while the advance in caricatures on the same subject and sailor-songs with colour-print headings (often admirably executed) is even more marked. Alfred Burton wrote his "Adventures of Johnny Newcome" in 1816. They were published ten years later by Messrs. Simpkin and Marshall, with fourteen plates by Rowlandson "from the author's designs." The illustrations will certainly survive any interest which Burton's "poem in four cantos," labelled with the motto "Dulce bellum in expertis," may have ever excited. Imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, and almost simultaneously a second "Johnny Newcome" made his appearance, once more in the guise of "a poem in four cantos," adorned with colour-plates. The author on this occasion is a sailor—"John Mitford, Esquire, R.N."—who discards the Latin line for the verse:

"A greenhorn, piping hot from shore,
Hark! Johnny Newcome is the roar;
Here's Johnny Newcome! Thrice three cheers.
Sounds through the Cockpit, Births (sic), and Tiers."

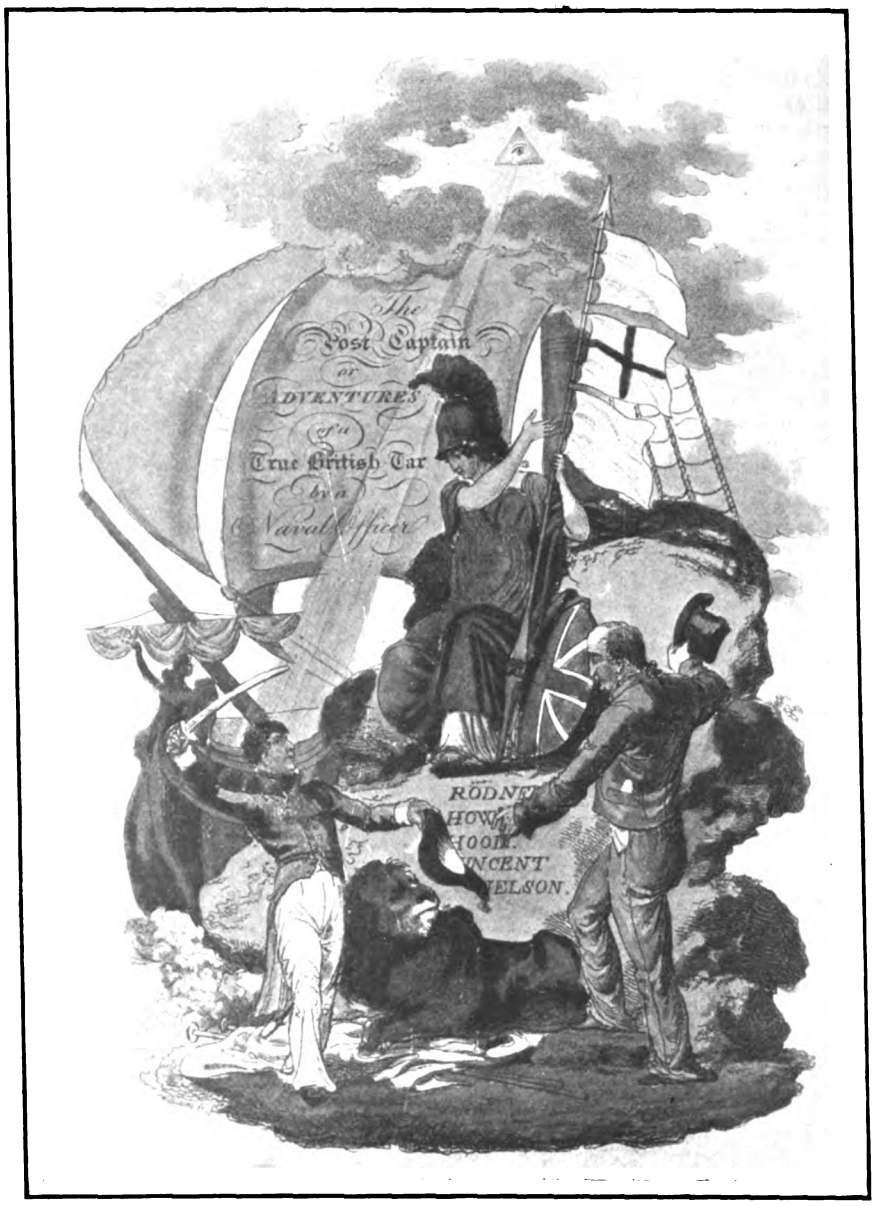
The artist is Williams, the author of so many nautical "skits," and his colour-plates in "Johnny Newcome" number nineteen. They are of very unequal merit. But John Mitford of Mitford Castle, Northumberland, Esquire, seems to have desired to "point a moral," for he dedicates his work, not with the boisterous effusion of Burton, but soberly and seriously, to "The Captains, Lieutenants, Warrant Officers, and Non-commissioned Officers of the British Navy" as "a tribute of affectionate regard to their valour and their virtues," and with a view "to promote a mitigation of their sufferings and compel power (sic) to do justice to their merit and worth." "The Post Captain," without date, is of the same period. The writer is "A Naval Officer," the illustrator Williams, and the publisher J. Johnson of Cheapside. The "poem" is divided into sixteen chapters. It is illustrated by twenty-four plates and a coloured title-page, in which Britannia, the British lion, and two sailors are very much mixed. Beneath it run the lines:



FRONTISPIECE TO "THE POST CAPTAIN"
Written by a Naval officer, and illustrated by Williams.

"When Bowsprit heard me first impart
Our great Commander's story,
With ardent zeal his youthful heart
Beat high for Naval glory."

Last, but not least, of these charming and characteristic books comes "Greenwich Hospital, a series of Naval Sketches, descriptive of the Life of a Man-of-War's Man, by an Old Sailor," with twelve illustrations by George Cruickshank. The son of the "Old Sailor," Mr. Barker, is still alive (although "Greenwich Hospital" appeared in 1826), and his grandson, the well-known autograph expert, Frederick Barker, died only the other day. Mr. Barker's life-long association with Cruickshank was a singularly happy one, and after his death the "Old Sailor's" son looked after Mrs. Cruickshank's interests, and disentangled a good many of the artist's financial complications. "Greenwich Hospital" is a handsome quarto; the other three colour-plate books are large octavos. Robins and Co. were the publishers of the joint production of Messrs. Barker and Cruickshank. When it was given to the public the artist was in the zenith of his power and popularity, and his illustrations are of a very high order. The subjects are "Billy Culmer and his Goose," "Jack's Trump of Defiance," "Flying Artillery," "Sailors Carousing," "The Point of Honour," "Battle of the Nile," "Davy Jenkins," "Paying Off," "Sailors on a Cruise," "A Witness," "Crossing the Line," and "Scud Hill.' The last two are possibly the best. The last-named deals with an incident in the career of Nelson.

Of the two versions of "Johnny Newcome," that for which Alfred Burton and Rowlandson are jointly responsible is the most readable. It was written in 1816, and advertised in 1817, but did not appear till the following year. The versification of Burton is also certainly superior to that of Mitford, while Rowlandson's plates, as regards drawing, vigour, and colour, are infinitely more artistic than those of Williams, whose best work will be found in an exceedingly rare little colour-plate book entitled "Little Hydrogen, or the Devil-on-two-sticks in London." In his "Johnny Newcome" sketches Williams shows frequent carelessness, and the peculiar fascination of Rowlandson is wholly lacking. The plot in both stories is of the thinnest, but John Mitford appears to have been a man with a grievance, who had to "point a moral" as well as "adorn a tale." He subordinates the adventures of his hero to a consistent desire to alleviate the condition of all classes of officers in the British Navy, to whom the volume is inscribed in a pompous dedication dated from Mitford Castle, Northumberland. A desire to "mitigate suffering" and "compel p wer (sic) to do justice to merit and worth," however laudable in itself, is not calculated to induce that boisterous merriment which the readers of the rival production will thoroughly enjoy and appreciate. Both books, however, throw a lurid light on the rough-and-tumble life of the British tar during the decades which immediately followed the death of Nelson at Trafalgar.

Digitized by Google

Johnny Newcome in the Navy.

FROM COLOURED ILLUSTRATIONS BY ROWLANDSON AND WILLIAMS.

(1) Martial law in the gun-room. Cobbed for sleeping on his watch. (2) At the Plymouth Theatre. The junior officers' box. (3 and 4) Crossing the line. A Johnny Raw, after witnessing the treatment meted out to his messmate, goes through the same experience himself. (5) At the capture of an enemy's battery. The surrender of the garrison. (6) On shore. The captain relates his adventures. (7) The midshipmen's berth. The toast of the disappointed seniors. (8) The quarter-deck before battle. The signal midshipman brings the captain his sword.

Digitized by Google

Lords in Council.

IN the Committee Rooms of the Houses of Parliament the Members of the Legislature meet to discuss matters of moment in a non-spectacular manner, for their deliberations are conducted in private, without the presence of the reporter through whose agency the proceedings of Parliament are made the property of the nation at large. Of all the Committee Rooms—and there are several—the one which it is safe to say the public knows best by repute is the famous No. 13, in which the Members of the Irish Party used to meet, and there some of the most striking episodes in the history of our time took place when the late Charles Stewart Parnell was the leader of that section of the House, and was everywhere hailed as the uncrowned King of Ireland.

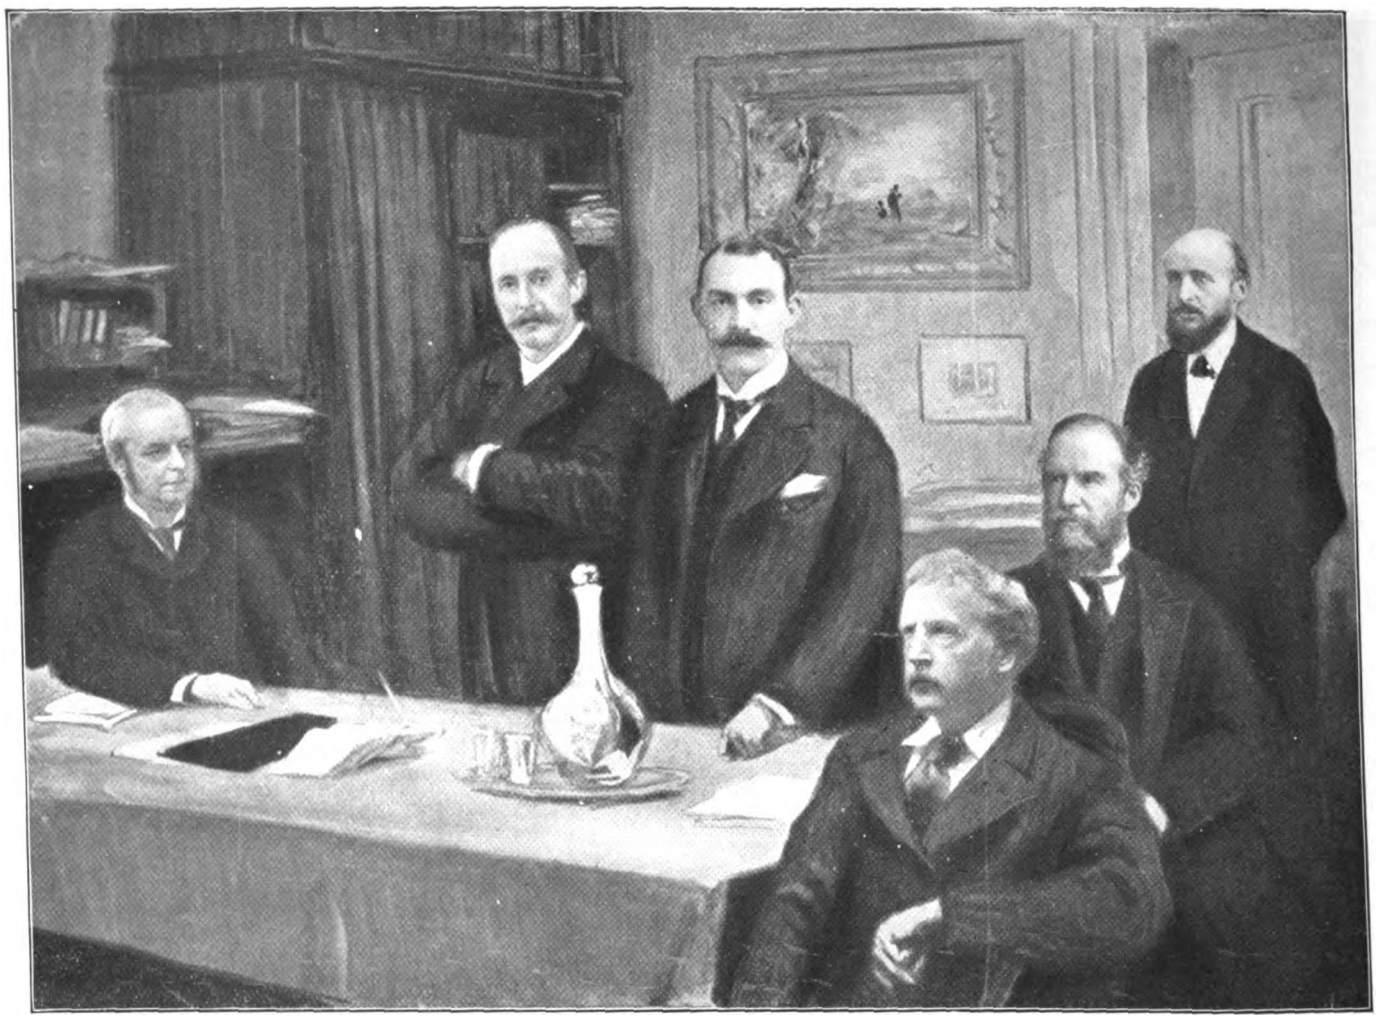
Plain, simple rooms are these Committee Rooms, like the one in the illustration, in which are gathered together several Members of the Upper House. Among the varied subjects which such men have to consider, and consider carefully, none is of more vital importance than those which concern the health of the nation, for though it is an axiom that you cannot make people moral by Act of Parliament, it is nevertheless a fact that you can make them healthy, if only by banishing the causes which tend towards disease. Examples of this will readily occur to everyone—the law which, until the conscientious objection clause was introduced, compelled people to have their children vaccinated under divers penalties, and the recent enactment to prevent expectoration in the streets, with a view to stopping the dissemination of the germs which produce consumption. In the war against consumption, which has during the last few years been a matter of world-wide concern, no regulation has been more beneficial than this, though it is but a single move in the right direction.

Much remains to be done, though among that "much" there are many things which legislation cannot effect, and they must therefore be left entirely to the individual to practise—both the individual who is, unfortunately, tainted with the disease and the individual who would save himself from infection, whether he lives among those who are already contaminated, or merely wishes to protect himself from the possibility of chance infection.

How, it will be asked, can this be done? Among many ways there is one which is very simple. The mouth of the consumptive necessarily harbours many germs of the disease, and though it seems scarcely credible, it is, nevertheless, a fact that few people breathe in a proper way, through the nostrils alone, but take in a considerable, if not the greater, part of the air they need through the mouth. In this way the germs of consumption and, for that matter, of other diseases which are always floating in the atmosphere get into the mouth, and finding there, in the interstices between the teeth and on the gums, tiny particles of food which have remained since the last meal, obtain the best possible conditions for increasing and multiplying in the extraordinarily rapid manner which is their characteristic, thus adding another possible mode of infection to the more ordinarily recognised ones.

It therefore follows "as the night the day" that, by keeping the mouth absolutely clean, in a chemical or physiological, not in the ordinary sense, the microbes are deprived of this feeding-ground, while if they can be killed off as they enter the mouth, the possibility of their doing any harm becomes nil.

Happily, every one of these conditions is to be obtained by the use of Odol, the famous dentifrice and mouth-wash, which each of the well-known noblemen whose picture appears in the illustration has endorsed in the most exceptional manner. The Duke of Argyll, to whom belongs priority of place by his rank, apart altogether from the fact that he is the King's brother-in-law, has caused his secretary to write that "Odol appears to him an excellent preparation," while the Earl of Carlisle writes: "I have tried Odol and find that it is a pleasant mouth-wash," and the Earl of Dartmouth, who, as the Hon. William Heneage Legge, was for many years a Member of the House of Commons, also states: "I have tried Odol and like it." Lord Burton, too, the head of the brewing firm of Bass, goes even farther than this, for he writes: "I am using Odol regularly and think highly of it," while Lord Avebury, whose name future generations of working men will keep alive as long as a single Bank Holiday is preserved to the nation, and who has made a distinct reputation for himself as a scientist by his observations on bees, ants, and other insects and animals, gives his opinion in the words: "I find Odol very pleasant."



LORDS IN COUNCIL WHO HAVE GIVEN THEIR VERDICT FOR ODOL.

Pleasant and agreeable it undoubtedly is, as everyone avers who has ever made the acquaintance of this delicately perfumed and delightfully refreshing preparation. It is, however, much more than this. It is an antiseptic of the most powerful character. Unlike other antiseptics, its peculiar constituents are produced when it comes into contact with the living tissues of the mouth and the chemicals Nature has placed there or caused to be secreted by the glands which open into the mouth. Becoming active in this way, Odol not only completely stops the decay of any food substances which may have lodged between the teeth, but it destroys all microbic germs of a more serious nature which may be in the oral cavity, so that it prevents the possibility of infection. For this reason, also, it is the ideal dentifrice, for by destroying the germs it prevents them attacking the enamel and sensitive parts of the teeth, and so causing decay.

J. JAMES.

Digitized by Google

A GIRL'S PROBLEM.

FOOD THAT RESTORES AND MAKES HEALTH POSSIBLE.

The nervous strain of modern office work will undermine and break down the health unless Nerve and Brain cells are rebuilt daily by proper food

A young lady who was ordered by a food specialist to eat Grape-Nuts says:—

"For about twelve months I suffered severely with gastritis. I was unable to retain much of anything on my stomach, and consequently was compelled to give up my occupation. I took quantities of medicine, but I continued to suffer, and soon lost fifteen pounds in weight. I was depressed in spirits and lost interest in everything generally. My mind was so affected that it was impossible to become interested in even the lightest reading matter

"After suffering for months I decided to go to a stomach specialist. He put me on Grape-Nuts and my health began to improve immediately. It was the key-note of a new life. I found that I had been eating too much starchy food which I did not digest. I soon proved that it is not the quantity of food that one eats, but the quality

"In a few weeks I was able to go back to my old business of doing clerical work I have continued to eat Grape-Nuts for both the morning and evening meal. I wake in the morning with a clear mind and feel rested. I regained my lost weight in a short time. I am well and happy again and owe it to Grape-Nuts." Name given by Grape-Nuts Co., 66, Shoe Lane, London, E.C.

Grape-Nuts

Hancocks & Co

Corner of Bruton St & New Bond St W.

W. HARBROW'S Iron, Wood & Portable Buildings.

STEAM JOINERY of every description.

Works:

SOUTH BERMONDSEY STATION, LONDON, S.E.

Plans and Estimates free on application.

BUILDINGS, ANY SIZE, DESPATCHED AT A FEW DAYS' NOTICE.

STABLE.

Two stalls, loose box, coach-house & harness room, hay loft over. Size 38ft. by 14ft.

Price about £90

REVERSIBLE SHELTER,

7ft. 6in. by 7ft. 6in.

Suitable for the accommodation of Patients undergoing the open-air treatment.

Price, including Turn-table ... ... £25

PAVILION FOR FOOTBALL, GOLF OR CRICKET.

| Size. | | Supplied. | | Erected. | | Verandah. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 20ft. by 10ft. | ... | £37 0 0 | ... | £42 0 0 | ... | £3 10 0 |
| 25ft. by 12ft. | ... | 42 5 0 | ... | 47 10 0 | ... | 4 15 0 |
| 30ft. by 12ft. | ... | 49 5 0 | ... | 57 0 0 | ... | 5 10 0 |
| 40ft. by 12ft. | ... | 66 15 0 | ... | 73 15 0 | ... | 7 15 0 |

MOTOR HOUSE.

| | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 13ft. by 10ft. | ... | On Rail | £15 0 0 | ... | Erected | £18 0 0 |
| 15ft. by 10ft. | ... | ,, | 16 0 0 | ... | ,, | 19 10 0 |
| 22ft. by 10ft. | ... | ,, | 19 5 0 | ... | ,, | 24 5 0 |
| 26ft. by 12ft. | ... | ,, | 22 15 0 | ... | ,, | 29 0 0 |

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

WE are very fond of making fun of French mistakes, in the spelling and use of English names, for instance, and one of our literary journals not long ago devoted two paragraphs to pointing out the errors in the introduction to a French translation of an English work. But sometimes the laugh is on the French side. Not long ago there was sold in London the official despatch from Lord Collingwood, of October 24, 1805, announcing the death of Nelson and the victory of Trafalgar. One sentence in the despatch was to the effect that as soon as the weather improved Lord Collingwood would send "the Pickle" to England.

A "Howler."

Now a cocksure scribe on a certain morning paper in London, in recording the tale, felt it incumbent on him to explain what that phrase, "the Pickle," meant, and having no knowledge of the facts himself, and perhaps no time to ask anyone who did know, informed his readers that "the Pickle" meant the spirits in which Nelson's body was preserved. Perhaps it was a sense of delicacy that made Lord Collingwood mention "the Pickle" when what, if our scribe was right, he really meant was its contents. The fact that this amazing explanation contained the characteristic words "of course" is our excuse for calling the writer of it cocksure. We let the incident pass unnoticed at the time, partly in the hope that no one else would notice it, and be the means of bringing ridicule on our Press. But, alas! the French, who do know something of these matters, have got hold of the story, and are making all the fun of it that it deserves. If anyone laughs at their mistakes in future they will only have to say "Pickle!" Let us hope that they will spare us, and not try the entente cordiale too severely by their use of a perfect weapon.

* * *

A NEW volume of the English Men of Letters is always welcome. We awaited Mr. Birrell's book on Andrew Marvell (Macmillan) with some anxiety, because his "Hazlitt" was a work that deeply disappointed all the admirers of that sterling essayist and critic. In "Andrew Marvell" he has retrieved his failure. There are flashes of characteristic "birrelling," as it is called—a sort of sprightly, gossipy humour that, sparingly used, is delightful; but the book as a whole is a sober and able study of an interesting man. Marvell will never be a widely-read poet. There are three things that are enough for most readers, and all three in the invaluable "Golden Treasury." One is the "Horatian Ode upon Cromwell's Return from Ireland," a difficult and rather crabbed work, which, pretending to glorify Cromwell, makes Charles the central figure for admiration, and contains the well-known lines:

Andrew Marvell.

"He nothing common did or mean
Upon that memorable scene;
But with his keener eye
The axe's edge did try;

Nor called the gods, with vulgar spite,
To vindicate his helpless right;
But bowed his comely head
Down, as upon a bed."

* * *

THEN there is the "Thoughts in a Garden," also famous for a few first-class lines:

"Annihilating all that's made
To a green thought in a green shade."

Eden without Eve.

and the epigrammatic, if not very polite sentiment:

"Such was that happy garden-state
While man there walk'd without a mate . . .
Two paradises 'twere in one,
To live in Paradise alone."

And the third is the all-beautiful "Song of the Emigrants in Bermuda."

* * *

THE two first-mentioned are particularly interesting. Mr. Birrell has readjusted, to a great extent, the traditional view of Marvell's politics. He is commonly held to have been, after Charles's fall, a Republican and a Dissenter; Mr. Birrell proves him to have been neither, but a Constitutionalist, if one may so call him, a man who stood for the Constitution—King, Parliament, and Established Church. With regard to the second, the "Thoughts in a Garden," we should like to believe, and (speaking without book) do believe, that it was written about Marvell's own garden at Highgate. His house there has been pulled down; but the evidence for his having lived on the spot (it is on the right-hand side of the hill that runs down from St. Joseph's Church, past the Waterlow Park towards the hospital) warrants the existence of the brass plate erected in the wall to commemorate the fact. Nearly opposite, in the beautiful old house known as Cromwell House (are we right in believing it to be now a girls' school?), lived Ireton with his wife, Cromwell's daughter Bridget.

His Politics and His Garden.

* * *

THE other poet in our illustration is Abraham Cowley, of whose poems a complete edition has just been published in the Cambridge English Classics (Cambridge University Press), edited by Mr. A. R. Waller. Cowley, who was born in 1618, was the son of a Fleet Street grocer. He had a good education, and published a book of poems as early as his fifteenth year. He, too, was much concerned in the politics and troubles of his day, for while he was secretary to Lord Jermyn, afterward Earl of St. Albans, he was employed to cypher and decypher the correspondence between the King and Queen. He followed Henrietta Maria to Paris, and it is possible that his loyalty to the King's cause abated a little; at any rate, he returned to England and lived there more or less unmolested until the Restoration brought him some reward, though not all he had hoped, for his services. Cowley is a "metaphysical" poet, as Dr. Johnson called that school. His wit, according to that stern critic, consisted mainly in "the discovery of occult resemblances in things apparently unlike." He is as full of "conceits" as an egg is full of meat. But he wrote one beautiful lyric, "Awake, awake, my lyre!" which is as sweet and melodious as anything in our language.

Abraham Cowley.

* * *

MR. STANLEY WEYMAN has written a very interesting novel in "Starvecrow Farm" (Hutchinson). The book falls somewhere between a romance, pure and simple, and a study of character. The hero is anything but a romantic hero, being a middle-aged martinet of a retired naval captain. But the heroine, Henrietta, is delightful. The period is that of Peterloo and the Manchester Riots, a troubled time, when the country was full of desperate men who hung on to the fringe of the honest party of reformers, represented by Burdett and Wilberforce, and took advantage of the national uneasiness to work their own dastardly schemes. It is into the hands of such men as these that Henrietta falls, and her adventures (which will be read with breathless interest by Mr. Weyman's many admirers) are long before they are happily ended. In "The Man" (Heinemann), Mr. Bram Stoker takes hundreds of pages to tell a story that might well have taken but half the number. There is no little profundity in Mr. Bram Stoker's reading of character, and if his heroine, Stephen Norman, is too rich, too beautiful, and too clever for common human clay, the reader can discount her excellence for himself as he goes along. What comes of rich young ladies disregarding convention and proposing to young gentlemen is the theme of Mr. Stoker's book, which patient persons with no pressing business on hand may succeed in reading through.

Some Novels.

* * *

MRS. KATE DOUGLAS WIGGIN has written in "Rose o' the River" (Constable) a very pretty sentimental story, so slight as to be hardly more than a breath, as if from some garden on a summer day. Rose is a pretty girl, Stephen Waterman an honest young farmer, Claude Merrill a dapper little man who sells gloves in a shop in Boston (for the scene of the book lies, of course, in America). It was natural, perhaps, that Rose should be attracted by the dapper little man, and natural that honest, deep-hearted Stephen should take her apparent fickleness very much to heart; but we were sure all along that things would turn out right in the end. The end is the prettiest thing in a pretty story, and slight as the whole tale is, it is well worth reading through. There is some fairly humorous humour introduced in the person of Rose's grandfather, a lazy old man, who has done nothing but talk all his life, but does that with remarkable persistency and vigour.

Rose o' the River.

TWO SEVENTEENTH CENTURY POETS.

The portrait of Andrew Marvell (on the left) is from a very rare engraving by Engleheart after J. Thurston. Abraham Cowley (on the right) is taken from the old Universal Magazine.

BOOKS TO READ.

A Wanderer in Holland, by E. V. Lucas. (Methuen.)
Starvecrow Farm, by Stanley Weyman. (Hutchinson.)
Rose o' the River, by Kate Douglas Wiggin. (Constable.)
The Improbable Idyl, by Dorothea Gerard. (Methuen.)
Brendle, by Marmaduke Pickthall. (Methuen.)
The Hundred Days, by Max Pemberton. (Cassell.)
Stars of Destiny, by L. Parry Truscott. (Unwin.)
The Yarn of Old Harbour Town, by W. Clark Russell. (Unwin.)
Michel de Montaigne, by Edward Dowden. (Lippincott.)
Andrew Marvell, by Augustine Birrell. (Macmillan.)
The Life of Charles Lamb, by E. V. Lucas. (Methuen.)
Sir Joshua Reynolds, by W. B. Boulton. (Methuen.)
Dante the Wayfarer, by Christopher Hare. (Harpers.)
With Togo, by H. C. Seppings Wright. (Hurst and Blackett.)

Digitized by Google

The Royal Hotel
WEYMOUTH.

An Ideal Resort for Pure Air, Health and Sunshine.
Very Moderate and Inclusive Terms.

THE Royal Hotel is the only modern and up-to-date hotel in Weymouth. Directly facing sea. Electric light throughout. Perfect sanitation. All public rooms, private sitting rooms, and most bedrooms face the sea and command the most charming views of Weymouth Bay and Cliffs. Excellent cuisine, choice wines, garage for 30 cars, inspection pit. Petrol on sale. Descriptive tariff sent free on application.

ARTHUR J. HOLLAND (Proprietor).

B. MORRIS,

General Draper, Outfitter, and Complete House Furnisher,

77, 78, 81 & 82, St. Mary Street,
WEYMOUTH.

N.B.—Patterns and Estimates sent on application Free of Charge.

ANTIQUE DEALER,
JEWELLER, AND SILVERSMITH.

Thomas Baker,

2, Charlotte Row.
ESPLANADE,
WEYMOUTH.

AUCTIONEER,
VALUER,
HOTEL BROKER,
HOUSE, ESTATE &
INSURANCE AGENT,
AND
ACCOUNTANT.

F. W. FULLER, F.A.I.

33, St. Thomas Street,
WEYMOUTH.

Local Telephone No. 65.

GEORGE MUMFORD & SONS,

Army and Navy Tailors,

LADIES' COSTUME, JACKET, AND HABIT MAKERS.

HOSIERS, HATTERS, GLOVERS,
AND
GENERAL OUTFITTERS.

Agents for Burberry Waterproofs and the Cellular Clothing Co.

ST. MARY STREET. WEYMOUTH.

The KING'S ARMS HOTEL
DORCHESTER.

THE LEADING FAMILY & COMMERCIAL HOTEL.

HEAD QUARTERS OF THE AUTOMOBILE CLUB.

FULL PARTICULARS AND TARIFF ON APPLICATION.

W. G. WILSON, Manager.

HUBERT BARRETT.

Old and Valuable Paintings
CAREFULLY AND SKILFULLY RESTORED.

Coloured and Plain Prints
(HOWEVER DAMAGED OR VARNISHED) CLEANED, REPAIRED, AND RESTORED GENERALLY EQUAL TO THE ORIGINAL STATE.

Collections
RESTORED AT OWNERS' RESIDENCES.

All matters dealing with Pictures write to
HUBERT BARRETT, PICTURE EXPERT, DORCHESTER.
SOME OLD PAINTINGS AND PRINTS FOR SALE.

Digitized by Google

Leaves from a Collector's Note-book.

No. LX.—ECCLESIASTICAL ENGRAVED PORTRAITS. SOME FAMOUS DORSET DIVINES.

HUMPHREY HENCHMAN, D.D.

Bishop of Salisbury, who assisted the escape of Charles II., 1651. Sometime a Dorset incumbent.

CARDINAL REGINALD POLE (1500—1558)

The scion of an ancient Dorset family.

WILLIAM WAKE, D.D. (1657—1737)

Archbishop of Canterbury. Born at Blandford, Dorset.

THE art and practice of portraiture in England commenced in the monastic houses, and, as might be expected, the earliest known attempts at serious likenesses, or "counterfeit presentments," are those of kings and ecclesiastics. Little reliance can be placed on those "heads" which are older than the early years of the sixteenth century. The last four centuries have given us about 15,000 well-known and clearly-identified portraits of those classified somewhat enigmatically by the early Victorian toastmaster as "the bishops and clergy, and ministers of all other denominations." The last-named division can alone claim at least 5,000 portraits of "ministers" for their share, leaving about twice that number, roughly speaking, to the Establishment. There are several large collections of ecclesiastical portraits in existence outside our museums and art galleries. Methodist collectors, both in England and America, are particularly enthusiastic on the subject, and one of them has got together and catalogued over 3,000 specimens. One of the most beautiful early authentic portraits is that of Archbishop Laud. It is to be found in the Antwerp edition of the "Englisches Memorial," which bears the date 1648. The author was Arnt Pieters. Little Dorset has probably given the Empire more divines than any other county of its size, and it is to be hoped that a series of their portraits, made as complete as possible, will be placed in the Loan Collection at Weymouth, to which Lord Nelson has, it is understood, promised to send many hitherto unseen relics of his heroic great-uncle, whose centenary will be celebrated a fortnight after the Congress closes.

It may be taken for granted that portraits of St. Aldhelm, John Morton, Archbishop and Cardinal, Bishops Bingham, Giles de Bridport, and other Dorset "worthies," are more or less imaginary; but a reproduction is now given of an apparently reliable one of Cardinal Pole, who expired at Lambeth on the same day as Queen Mary died. The portrait of William Wake of Blandford, Primate of all England, is interesting; and visitors to Weymouth will remember that loyal Humphrey Henchman, one of Bishop Wordsworth's predecessors, who rendered important help to Charles II. while on his journey from Trent House to Shoreham (October, 1651), was once a parish priest at Portland. Thomas Fuller, the able author of the "Worthies of England," deserves a very high place on the muster-roll of Dorset divines. He held the benefice of Broadwindsor contemporaneously with Henchman's tenure of a cure of souls in Portland. John Wesley the elder of Charmouth, Winterbourne, Whitchurch, and finally of Melcombe Regis, was a very remarkable man. He had a famous "disputation" with Gilbert Ironside, Bishop of Bristol and Hereford (also a native of Dorset), of whom no engraved portrait exists. His son, Samuel Wesley, was a Dorset man, both by birth and education. He was born in the parsonage house of Winterbourne, and educated at Dorchester Grammar School, where, in all probability, Dr. Handley Moule, the living representative of Dorset on the bench of bishops, received a portion of his education. Dorset's second archbishop is Thomas Lindesay of Armagh. The total number of Dorset bishops is fourteen. The county, moreover, can boast with legitimate pride of its four priest-poets—Christopher Pitt, George Crabbe, William Crowe, and William Barnes.

B.

SAMUEL WESLEY, M.A.

Rector of Epworth. Born at Winterbourne, Whitchurch, Dorset, 1661. Father of John Wesley, the founder of Methodism.

THOMAS FULLER, B.D.

The learned author of the "Worthies of England." Rector of Breadwindsor, Dorset, during the Civil Wars.

JOHN WESLEY

The elder son of Bartholomew Wesley of Charmouth, Dorset. Ejected from his benefice 1662, and died at Melcombe Regis.

Digitized by Google

MALLETT
& SON

hold and offer for sale specimens of the

HIGHEST QUALITY

OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE

as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.

EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.

AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.

(Two hours from Paddington.)

Old Brass Stand and Lamp.

THE MISSES

H. & I. WOOLLAN

(Under Royal Patronage)

are showing a

UNIQUE

Collection of

Antiques.

Chippendale, Sheraton, and Hepplewhite Furniture. Worcester and Lowestoft Services. Lace, Glass, etc.

Showrooms: First Floor.

28, BROOK STREET, GROSVENOR SQUARE, W.

Rare Prints and Portraits
CARICATURES.

Speciality: Rarities of all sorts relating to

NAPOLEON and AMERICA.

GODEFROY MAYER,
41, Rue Blanche, Paris.

Catalogues issued. Rare Prints and Engraved Portraits sought for. Correspondence Invited.

Mr. Mayer's stock is probably the largest and finest in Europe. He specially caters for the wants and requirements of English and American extra-illustrators.

MAGGS BROS.,

109, STRAND, W.C., LONDON, ENGLAND.

Dealers in RARE BOOKS AND FINE LIBRARY EDITIONS OF STANDARD AUTHORS, Voyages and Travels, Early Printed Books, 1st Editions of 17th, 18th, and 19th Century writers, Illustrated Works. Also Rare Portraits, Line, Stipple, Mezzotints, and Colour Engravings, and Autographs.

Recently issued—Illustrated Catalogues of Rare Books, Voyages and Travels, Engravings, Autographs. Price 6d. each.

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY OF SPORT.

SHOOTING.

(In Two Vols.)

Edited by Mr. HORACE G. HUTCHINSON.

Price 25 - Nett. (12/6 Nett. per Vol.)

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock St., Strand, W.C., and by GEORGE NEWNES, LIMITED, 7-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

THE KING'S COLLECTORS' REGISTER.

For Spaces in the Register apply to "THE EDITOR."

WANTED.

AUTOGRAPHS AND LETTERS.

MSS. of Admiral T. M. Hardy. Good letters wanted.—827, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Autograph Letter of the Rev. Edmund Nelson, of Burnham Thorpe. £2 offered.—829, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Complete copies of Fairburn's Journal of Naval Occurrences.—154, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

A Copy of an Admiralty Circular, published Jan 1st, 1825, describing the naval uniform "which in pursuance of his Majesty's pleasure is to be worn by officers of the Royal Navy." Signed by J. W. Crocker, Secretary of the Admiralty, and containing coloured patterns.—179, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

A set of the Meteor, or loose plates from the same (temp. George IV.)—182, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

"The Sufferings of John Custos, a Mason," circ. 1780-85, published by M. Swinney, of Birmingham. £1 offered.—183, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

A set or odd volumes of the Freemasons' Magazine. 10s. each offered.—184, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Parliamentary Directory or Hand-book for 1805—185, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Chat Books (illustrated) relating to Paul Jones.—186, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Copies of any Service Almanacs, especially that published by Harrison between 1880 and 1892.—187, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Good Impressions with good margins of engravings of old London, especially Covent Garden, the Temple, the Strand, Lincoln's Inn.—249, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Prints of Uniform of the Navy, by Rowlandson, Hull, Ulsdall, and Sharp, or any others.—261, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc. - continued.

Information or Copies of any Prints showing Doggett, or any of the other pre-Macklin Shylocks.—202, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

View of Carlisle House, Soho, about 1780-1790.—264, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Aquatints of the Battle of Navarino, and the engagement between the "Shannon" and "Chesapeake," after Sir John Theophilus Lee.—265, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Contemporary Portrait of Fanny Burney prior to her marriage.—268, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Topographical Prints wanted; old Views of Sandleford Priory, Newbury; Shokerwick House, Bath; Wolfeton House, Dorset; or Shute House, Devon.—269, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Prints of any of the Ships in the Navy about 1755, especially those which took part in Admiral Byng's operations.—270, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Portrait of Sir Charles Somers, or Sumners, the discoverer of the Bermudas. £1 offered.—271, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Dorset Prints: Weymouth Bay, after Upham, dedicated to Princess Augusta, 1801; John Penn drilling Portland Legion of Volunteers; Litho Hulmando, after Upham, date probably 1810 or 1812. Good price offered.—272, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Gillray Caricatures (coloured): "John Bull taking a luncheon," 1798; "Royal Economy," George III. frying sprats and Queen Charlotte toasting muffins, 1791. 6s. each offered.—273, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Glass Transfer Pictures Wanted, high-class examples of portraits: D. and Mrs. Garrick, Queen Charlotte, Mrs. Piozzi, and others. Good price offered.—526, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Wedgwood or Worcester Masonic Jugs, with the names and numbers of private lodges.—527, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

GOLD, SILVER, Etc.

Pair of very early Sheffield Ware Candelabra.—615, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

AUTOGRAPHS AND LETTERS.

A series of MSS. relating to Colonel Stephen Digby.—817A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Complete set of the World Newspaper, from its foundation down to 1896.—133A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

The Tichborne Trial, in 8 volumes (folio), in original boards, with presentation copy of Lord Chief Justice Cockburn's charge to the jury, 2 volumes.—134A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Exceptionally fine colour Print of Madame Récamier. Original Drawing of English military costume by Vernet.—223A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

GOLD, SILVER, Etc.

Really genuine and fine specimens of Sheffield Plate, in good condition.—608A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

An exceptionally beautiful Worcester Dessert Service; best period and very lovely decorative paintings.—524A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Five Glass Pictures of the Death of Nelson (all different).—525A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

GENERAL satisfaction has been expressed at the success that attended the first Tourist Trophy Race, and the makers are already entering vehicles for next year's event. Much interest has been excited in connection with the Arrol-Johnston cars, which showed such remarkable speed and fuel economy in the Isle of Man, and succeeded in taking first and fourth places out of forty-two starters in the race. Their victory was not unexpected by those who were aware of the excellent form they had shown in practice spins; but to the general motoring public, which associates the name of the firm with a high and short vehicle running on solid-tyred wheels of large diameter, the result came as a great surprise.

* * *

A few particulars of the winning cars may therefore be of interest as showing how greatly the new Arrol-Johnstons vary from their predecessors. The motor, which is the same in principle as that fitted to the well-known "dog-carts" which have made the firm famous, is placed transversely in front of the frame, instead of, as heretofore, high up in the body of the car with the axis of the cylinders arranged longitudinally. The two horizontal cylinders have a bore and stroke of 4¾-in. and 6½-in. respectively. Instead of the explosion taking place in the cylinder head, there are two pistons, which work in opposite directions, the charge being compressed and ignited between the two. The crank shaft lies beneath the cylinders, and receives the thrust of the pistons through the medium of connecting rods and rocking levers. The inlet valves are of the atmospheric type, and placed immediately above the exhaust valves.

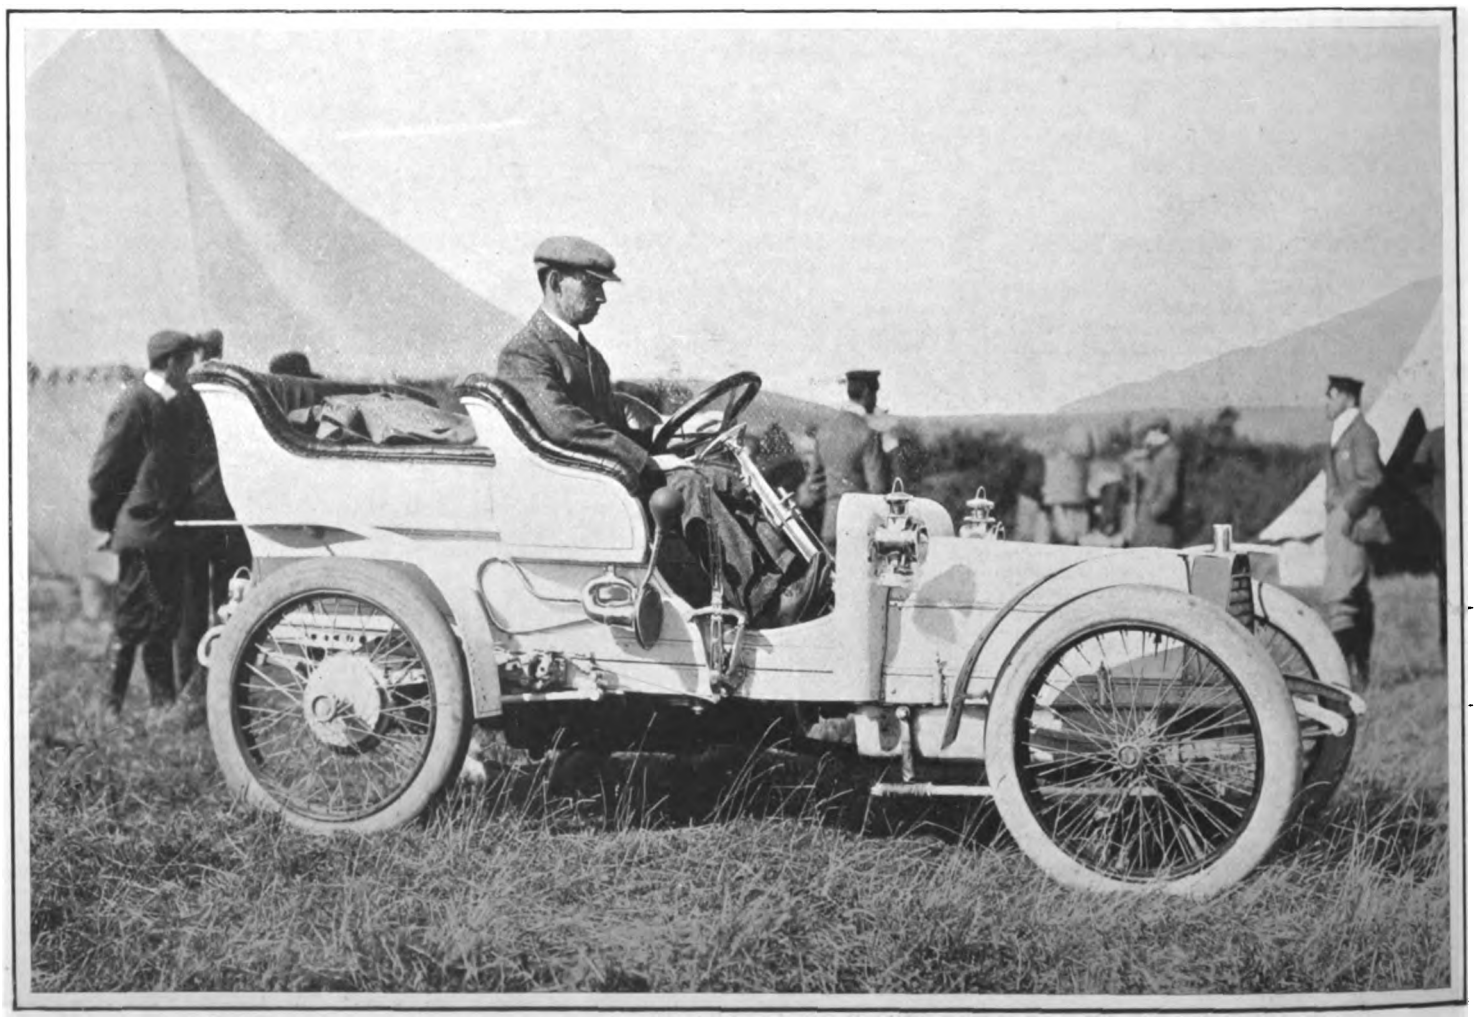
It is in connection with their governing mechanism that the Arrol-Johnstons have aroused most criticism. Mr. Napier, the designer, has reverted to the old "hit and miss" governor on the exhaust, which many motorists will remember as forming a feature of the old Phœnix Panhard engines and other motors of that date. In this system the exhaust valve is prevented from opening when the engine exceeds its normal number of revolutions, with the result that no fresh charge is drawn into the cylinders until the speed is reduced. In the Arrol-Johnston, however, the governor can be set by hand to "cut out" at any desired speed, so that the flexibility of the motor is not materially impaired. There is also a hand throttle, which acts on the carburettor. The transmission mechanism consists of a metallic clutch of the multiple-disc type and a change-speed gear, which gives a direct drive to the live rear axle on the top speed, which is geared to forty-five miles an hour. In order to give smooth running and lessen the strain on the transmission gear a spring drive is incorporated in the propeller shaft.

* * *

The scheme inaugurated by the Automobile Club for granting certificates to paid drivers for skill in driving and for mechanical proficiency, is meeting with a considerable amount of support from private owners and firms in the trade. Examinations will be held by the club during October in the following districts: 16th, Coventry; 17th, Birmingham; 18th, Manchester and Liverpool; 19th, Sheffield, Huddersfield, and Leeds; 20th, Leicester, Nottingham, and Derby; 24th, Oxford, Reading, and Swindon; 25th, Bristol, Bath, Gloucester, Cheltenham, and Taunton; 26th, Exeter and North Devon; 27th, Plymouth, South Devon, and Cornwall. Candidates can obtain full particulars from the secretary to the Board of Examiners, 119, Piccadilly.

* * *

The forces of prejudice and vested interest have been defeated in a signal manner at Llandrindod Wells. The proprietors of the Lake Hotel, Llangammarch Wells, recently purchased a motor-waggonette, capable of carrying seventeen passengers, for the purpose of making the surrounding country, and their own district in particular, better known to the visitors staying in the neighbourhood. Application was made to the Llandrindod Wells Urban District Council for the necessary licence to ply for hire within their boundaries. The licence was refused, with the poor excuse that sufficient vehicles had already been licensed. As a matter of fact, there are no public motor-cars in the neighbourhood, and few, if any, of the livery-stable proprietors would care to run the trip between the two places, on account of the number of hills that have to be overcome, one ascent having a gradient of 1 in 6. Moreover, we can state from personal knowledge that the road is remarkably free from traffic, and eminently suitable for a powerful motor-car. Nothing daunted, the proprietors determined to run the service, notwithstanding the obstruction of the District Council. They have accordingly invited all the visitors staying at the hotels in Llandrindod Wells to take a free trip to Llangammarch Wells, whence they can return by train or, at their option, by the car at the cost of 3s. The distance of the double journey is about thirty-four miles.



THE 18-H.P. ARROL-JOHNSTON CAR.

This car, the winner of the recent Tourist Trophy Race, is an entirely new departure from previous types built by the firm. It was constructed specially for the contest.

Digitized by Google

1905.

MERCÉDÈS MODELS

HERKOMER TROPHY.

Winner: Standard 40 h.p. MERCÉDÈS,

BEATING 79 COMPETITORS.

18 28 Mercédès Tonneau built in 1905, painted and upholstered Mercédès red, cape hood over rear seats, folding glass screen back of front seats, only slightly used, complete with side lights, tail light and horn, usual tools. Inspection and trial invited. Price £775.

IMMEDIATE DELIVERY.
28 32 latest type, complete with side entrance coachwork.
40/45 latest type, complete with side entrance coachwork,
Painted and upholstered Mercédès Red.

IMMEDIATE DELIVERY.
18/28 fitted with Rothschild Limousine coachwork.
A Car for all weathers.

Solo Conoossionnairos:

Du Cros Mercédès, Ltd.,

127/130, LONG ACRE, LONDON, W.C.

Telephone No.: 3320 GERRARD.

Authorised Agents as under:—

Telegraphic Address: "TRUENESS, LONDON."

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| London, J. E. HUTTON, Ltd. | Glasgow, RENNIE & PROSSER. | Liverpool, Chester, Preston & Manchester, J. A. LAWTON & CO., Ltd. |
| Leicester, H. A. HAMSHAW. | Edinburgh, J. CROALL & SONS. | Dundee, T. SHAW, Ltd. |

PLEASE MENTION THIS PAPER.

The performance of the 16-20 H.P.

1906 MODEL

208½ Miles—Non-Stop.
Average speed 29½ miles per hour.
Full load carried equal to four passengers.
Petrol Consumption 26½ miles to the gallon.
Standard Side-Entrance Body used.

SWIFT CAR

in the

TOURIST TROPHY RACE.

NOTE.—The Petrol consumption of the Swift Car was lower than that of any other competitor using a four-cylinder engine.

SWIFT MOTOR CO., LTD.,

127, LONG ACRE, LONDON, W.C.

Works: COVENTRY.

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

THE autumn modes are showing a decided tendency towards the strictly tailor-made gowns. Some of them that I have seen are most delightfully cut, and the line is perfect. What is, after all, more charming to look upon than a well-formed woman in a perfectly-cut gown? The time has gone by when an Englishwoman's figure was supposed to be correct; when she was straight up and down and no curves. Now she is as amply developed as our foreign sisters. What Nature does not provide her with, art steps in and supplies, but so artistically that it defies detection. Look into a hairdresser's saloon for a few minutes, and see what wonders art works there, and what great possibilities there are. But to return to our tailor-made gowns. There seem to be boleros in many styles, some fitting the figure like a glove, others fitting at the back and with a shaped stitched band of the same material outlining the waist, whilst the upper portion stands somewhat away from the figure. These are mostly made with narrow embroidered vests, some in white cloth, with coloured conventional designs running down each side; others have flat pleats, with coloured velvet vests and cuffs and collars. The skirts are very varied. They fit the figure perfectly and plainly three parts down, and then flare out very wide at the feet. They are worn very much strapped in self material, some in waved designs, others quite plain, but all so planned as to give height to the wearer. Pastel shades seem to be the favourites in plain Melton cloths, although the russet and mouse brown tweeds are almost as much worn. Of course, the plain cloths are always more dressy and look better form, although for hard wear the tweeds will find no rivals. All the leading firms are still very chary of showing their newest Paris goods, and are waiting until "Quality" returns to town, and only then shall we really definitely know what are the recognised Paris modes.

A GIRL'S EVENING DRESS AND CLOAK OF WHITE MOUSSELINE DE SOIE.
(Messrs. Charles Lee and Son, Wigmore Street, W.)

I saw a very charming opera coat at Messrs. Charles Lee and Son's of Wigmore Street the other day, of very heavy cream guipure lace in a most handsome design. It had long full open sleeves, and was lined with white satin and chiffon. There were also some elegant Irish lace coffee jackets which greatly took my fancy. In hats and veils Messrs. Lee have always a choice selection.

A charming evening gown, perfectly simple, yet with an indescribable grace about the tout ensemble, is here illustrated; and for a young girl what can be prettier. It is of white mousseline de soie, over Oriental satin, and has two full ruches at the bottom of the skirt. The bodice is a full bébé style, with short sleeves of lace and a pretty tucker. Small blush roses in a narrow trail ornament this, and an Oriental satin waist-band finishes the graceful whole. A very dainty and original evening wrap is worn with this. It is in the form of a little loose-pleated bolero in ivory panne, from beneath which fall long, full flowing ends of accordion-pleated crêpe de chine, with prettily-designed double ruches. The sleeves have likewise very full hanging wings. This is an ideal débutante's dress, I think—it is so innocent-looking and so unpretentious. The Directoire still leads, so far, but I cannot help thinking it will not be a lasting mode, for it does not suit many people; but for those who can wear this, it is a style that is quite apart.

I am told that wings are to be much better worn than feathers, and these wings are being made in the most lovely tints. Velvet hats and toques are very much trimmed with these new wings, which are assuming very novel shapes.

As regards lingerie, everything is in the form of combinations now. Those princess night-dresses that I described to you some weeks back have become general favourites; likewise the cache-corset and knicker combination in fine nainsook and laces. There is yet another garment in combination form which has a still more intimate relation, and that for health's sake all women should wear, and I am glad to see it becoming so general now. One firm have done an enormous business in this one article alone, and in it they excel more than any firm I know. This is gradually doing away with the unsightly and bulky bicycling knickers or divided skirts, for we cannot afford any unnecessary fulness under our tailor garments, which must cling closely to the form.

Fruit Luncheons at Messrs. B. Shearn and Son's.—This is the age of enterprise and novelty indeed, and Messrs. B. Shearn and Son of Tottenham Court Road deserve a gold medal for their welcome innovation of fruit luncheons. In their new and beautifully-arranged premises, fragrant with flowers and the appetising aroma of every kind of seasonable fruits, you sit surrounded by palms as in a winter garden. The fare placed before you consists of a dainty dish of every variety of fruit for the modest sum of 6d., and this is of such excellent quality that you feel like "Oliver," and want more, which leads you into the extravagance of a 1s. dish. I found it so satisfactory that I should like to institute fruit breakfasts also. R. D.

(From a photograph taken at the Dover Street Studios.)

Digitized by Google

THRESHER & GLENNY,

BY SPECIAL APPOINTMENT TO
THEIR MAJESTIES THE KING AND QUEEN AND H.R.H. THE PRINCESS OF WALES.

MILITARY AND SPORTING TAILORS AND GENERAL OUTFITTERS.

Clothing, Leather Goods & Furniture
Of every description for Travellers at Home and Abroad.

Camp Requisites for Sporting Expeditions.
ACTIVE SERVICE KITS.

Tents on view erected and all requisites for Military and Sporting Camp use
Experienced Packers attend customer's residence.

WRITE FOR INFORMATION RESPECTING NECESSARIES FOR ALL PURPOSES.
ESTIMATES AND ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES TO

THRESHER & GLENNY,
152 & 153, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

G.W.R.

WEYMOUTH the NAPLES of ENGLAND

MOST COMFORTABLE ROUTE from LONDON.

TRAIN SERVICE, WEEK-DAYS.

| | | a.m. | a.m. | a.m. | a.m. | p.m. | p.m. | p.m. | p.m. | p.m. | p.m. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| PADDINGTON | dep. | — | — | 9 40 | — | 12 35 | | — | 5 0 | 6 30 | 9 15 |
| READING | ,, | — | — | 10 29 | — | 1 24 | — | — | 5 51 | 6 4 | 10 10 |
| BRISTOL (Temple Meads) | dep. | 6 0 | 8 40 | 10 15 | 11A20 | — | 1 10 | 4A24 | 5A33 | 7 35 | 11 0 |
| WEYMOUTH (Town) | arr. | 9 18 | 12 16 | 1 35 | 2 55 | 4 15 | 5 10 | 7 50 | 9 7 | 11 5 | a.m. 2B0 |

A Stapleton Road. B—Landing Stage, Wed., Fri., and Sun. mornings.

| | | a.m. | a.m. | a.m. | a.m. | a.m. | p.m. | p.m. | p.m. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| BIRMINGHAM | dep. | | 7 30 | — | 10 20 | 11 12 | 12 27 | 4 5 | 7 50 |
| OXFORD | ,, | 2A50 | 9 10 | 9 35 | 12 23 | 1 3 | 2 33 | 6 0 | 9 40 |
| WEYMOUTH (Town) | arr. | 9 18 | 1 35 | 2 55 | 4 15 | 7 50 | 9 7 | 11 5 | a.m. 2B0 |

A—Monday mornings excepted. B Landing Stage, Wednesday, Friday, and Sunday mornings.

| | | a.m | a.m. | a.m. | a.m. | p.m. | p.m. | p.m. | p.m. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| SWANSEA | dep. | — | 6 15 | 8 30 | | 1 30 | 2 40 | — | 5 45 |
| CARDIFF | ,, | 6 5 | 7 46 | 10 10 | 11 20 | 3 15 | 4 25 | 5 30 | 9 30 |
| WEYMOUTH (Town) | arr. | 12 16 | 1 35 | 2 55 | 5 10 | 7 50 | 9 7 | 11 5 | a.m. 2A0 |

A—Landing Stage, Wednesday, Friday, and Sunday mornings.

TOURIST TICKETS — ALL THE YEAR ROUND — WEEK-END TICKETS

For full information of Train Services, Fares, etc., etc., send a postcard to Superintendent of Line, Paddington Station, W.

JAMES C. INGLIS, General Manager.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Prevents the Hair from falling off.
Restores Gray or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.
Being delicately perfumed, it leaves no unpleasant odour.
IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin, or even white linen.
Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.

Ask your Chemist or Hair-Dresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.

Prepared only by the . . .
ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO., Ltd.,
33, Farringdon Road, London, E.C.

BIRKBECK BANK

ESTABLISHED 1851.

Current Accounts. 2 % Interest allowed on minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
Deposits. 2½ % Interest allowed on Deposit Accounts.
Advances made. Stocks and Shares bought and sold.
Apply C. F. RAVENSCROFT, Secretary,
Southampton Buildings, High Holborn, W.C.

WHELPTON'S PURIFYING PILLS

For Indigestion, Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Sea Sickness.

INVALUABLE FOR LADIES.

8, 14, and 33 stamps.

G. WHELPTON, 4, Crane Court, Fleet St., London.

SULPHOLINE SKIN LOTION.

Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches,
Entirely fade away.

Southalls' Towels
"SANITARY, ABSORBENT," ANTISEPTIC and of DOWNY SOFTNESS

THE ORIGINAL AND BEST.
IN PACKETS (containing one doz.) from 6d. to 2s. SAMPLE PACKET of three size O, and one each size 1, 2 and 4, post free for six stamps on application to the LADY MANAGER, 17, Bull Street, Birmingham.
SOUTHALLS' SANITARY SHEETS (for Accouchement), in three sizes, 1s., 2s. and 2s. 6d. each.
From all Drapers, Ladies' Outfitters and Chemists.

RHEUMATISM.
BLAIR'S GOUT PILLS.

The only Remedy that Relieves and Cures all Rheumatic Complaints. Sure, Safe, and Effectual. All Chemists and Stores, 1/1½ & 2/9 per box

MEDICAL GALVANISM

HAS CONQUERED some of the most obstinate complaints after all other remedies have failed.
HALE'S IMPROVED ELECTRIC BELTS and BATTERIES for wearing next the body without blistering or injuring the skin. These appliances are
PERFECT GENERATORS OF ELECTRICITY, and are most comfortable in wear. Price One Guinea.
RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, and GOUT are speedily REMOVED by this powerful Agent.
ELECTRIC BELT and SUSPENSOR, price 42s., for MEN, for VARICOCELE, Nervous Debility, and Exhaustion, Bladder Weakness, etc.
Pamphlets Gratis. Consultations Free.

HALE & SON, Medical Galvanists,
117, CHANCERY LANE, LONDON.

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE

TEOFANI'S

HIGH-CLASS

CIGARETTES.

TEOFANI'S Cigarettes receive the Highest Awards at all International Exhibitions, and are Sold by Leading Purveyors throughout the WORLD.

TEOFANI & CO., LONDON.

"Contains all the constituents to support life."
—THE LANCET.

PLASMON

RUSKS,
GINGER,
SPORTING,
DIABETIC,
AND
WHOLEMEAL BISCUITS.
All Grocers and Stores.

Digitized by Google

THE KING'S MENU.

THE Saturday menu is generally rather difficult of selection for the housewife. She does not want fresh joints, and there are generally so many little odds and ends over from the days before that can be used up advantageously that I am giving you an example of how an appetising little dinner can be arranged at very little cost and avoiding all waste.

A SATURDAY DINNER.

POTAGE CREME DE SANTE.

FILETS DE MERLUCHE A LA LANE.

AUBERGINES FARCIES.

BŒUF EN ROULADE.

FLAN AUX POMMES.

BEIGNETS D'ANANAS.

POTAGE CREME DE SANTE.

Boil some potatoes in any stock you may have in your stock-pot. Add some celery (any outside sticks can be used as well), onions—two or three large-sized ones—carrots, a little leek, and chervil. Cut all these into fairly small pieces, add plenty of pepper — coralline if available—and salt, and let this all cook gently, taking care that it does not catch, which can be avoided by an occasional stirring. When thoroughly cooked, which will take quite two hours, rub the whole through a wire or hair sieve. Replace in the saucepan, and keep hot until ready to serve up. Then let it all come to the boil, remove from the fire, and stir about half a pint of single cream into it. Should cream not be handy, milk will answer likewise.

FILETS DE MERLUCHE A LA LANE.

Take an average-sized fresh haddock and make half-a-dozen small filets of it. Boil until tender. Do not neglect to put plenty of salt in the water you boil it in, also a small button onion, and a dash of vinegar. These give a flavour to the fish and make it firm and flaky. Keep hot over a steamer while you prepare your sauce. For this you require the yolks of four eggs and the juice of two or three lemons, according to the quantity of juice they yield. Beat the yolks thoroughly in a bowl, and add the lemon juice with a generous touch of salt and pepper; then take a cupful of the fish stock and stir into the bowl which contains the eggs and lemon; then add another cup of stock, according to the quantity of sauce required. Pour into a small enamel saucepan, or, better still, an earthenware casserole, and heat it to almost boiling point, stirring it all the while. Do not let it boil, or it will curdle; but directly it thickens to the consistency of a boiled custard, which it should do in ten minutes, pour it over your fish filets which you have ready in a hot dish over the steamer, and serve at once. This will be found to be an extremely palatable sauce, and can be used with any white fish. It is especially good with blanquette de veau, and equally nice with boiled fowl.

AUBERGINES FARCIES.

Split your aubergines, scoop out half their contents, which you chop finely, and then take a little butter and mix with it by means of a wooden spoon, two or three chopped mushrooms (preserved ones will answer the purpose equally well), two or three shallots, a little fat bacon, parsley, salt, and pepper; fill the aubergines that you have previously sprinkled with salt and drained off all moisture, cover with bread-crumbs, and bake in a pie dish. At this season of the year the cost of a fair-sized aubergine is about 3d., and this mode of cooking will be found very palatable to most people who are fond of vegetables.

AUBERGINES A LA PROVENCALE

are also prepared in the same manner, with the addition of oil and a little garlic.

BŒUF EN ROULADE.

Take some lean beef—if you have had a piece of topside of beef the day before, cut two or three thin slices off this joint and cover between two plates until the following day—cut into neat pieces about four or five inches square. Beat them well, the same as a steak. Make a mixture of the following ingredients in a small bowl: Two or three anchovies, parsley, a little sweet basil, and chop these all finely. Add plenty of salt and pepper and a little grated nutmeg. Divide this mixture so that each piece of beef has an equal quantity, to which add a nice piece of fat bacon. Then roll each piece of meat with its contents neatly, and wind some coarse white thread around each roulade so that they keep the shape. Next you melt some butter in a casserole, and brown each roll of meat, turning them so as to brown thoroughly. Then remove them, and add to the sauce a good tablespoonful of flour, pepper and salt to taste, and a little stock. If no stock is to hand, add a little boiling water. Replace the roulades after removing the threads, and let them cook very gradually on the stove with the lid well down. The sauce should be thick and brown. Dish them up neatly, pour the sauce over them, and garnish with a little lemon and watercress.

This dish can be made with meats that have already been cooked, but will not then be so nourishing. A little Lemco must in this case be added, and do not remove the binding threads until serving up. Veal can be treated also in this way, and will be found a very piquant dish.

FLAN AUX POMMES.

(Specially prepared and photographed for this paper.)

FLAN AUX POMMES.

This is prepared with a short crust, very simply made, which is a capital crust for almost any kind of sweet pies or tarts. You dry your flour well and put it into a basin with a pinch of salt, two tablespoonfuls of castor sugar, and half a pound of clarified lard or dripping. Knead these all up together with the hands. The best way is to rub them through until all ingredients are reduced, then add only sufficient water to form a dough ball. Roll it out once only, and line your tin or pie dish. The fruit should be scalded when soft fruit is used, and partially cooked when apples are chosen. The addition of a few currants is an improvement. A syrup is then poured over the fruit just before dishing up. This is the recipe asked for last week by "Elsa."

BEIGNETS D'ANANAS.

Make an ordinary batter of milk, flour, and one egg, to which add a pinch of salt. Take the remainder of a tinned pineapple cut in thin slices, which again quarter. Have ready your frying-pan, with plenty of boiling lard or clarified dripping; then fry over a clear fire your quarter pieces of pine, immersed in the batter mixture. Drain on blotting paper. Keep hot, sift some Glebe castor sugar over each beignet, and serve up immediately.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

SIMPLE AND QUICKLY-MADE CAKES (Eva).—You ask me to tell you of one or two inexpensive and quickly-made cakes. I think you will find the following answer your purpose:

COCOANUT CAKES.—Into half a pound of flour mix a quarter of a pound of ground rice. Rub into this three ounces each of butter and lard. Add six ounces of castor sugar, one teacupful of desiccated cocoanut, and a dessertspoonful of baking powder. Whip the whites of two eggs to a froth, and add to the rest of the ingredients. If not sufficiently moist add a little milk. Bake in a moderate oven, on a well-greased baking slab, dropping the mixture on to it, not too closely together. Do not open the oven door often. With a properly-regulated oven ten to fifteen minutes should suffice to bake them a golden brown.

CHOCOLATE CAKES.—These little cakes have always proved very successful, and are so simple that any child can make them. Take a piece of butter the size of an egg and cream it, adding gradually one cupful of castor sugar, one cupful of milk, a well-beaten egg, two cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of Borwick's baking powder, and one cupful or a little more of grated chocolate. Stir well together until all the ingredients are thoroughly well mixed, then drop with a spoon in small quantities on to a well-greased baking tin, and bake in a rather quick oven. Ten minutes ought to be sufficient time to allow for these.

MUSHROOMS AND EGGS (Country Cousin).—Yes, mushrooms and eggs you will find mix capitally. I have always found the following one of the best modes of preparing them: Stew half a pound of mushrooms in milk, and thicken with the yolk of a raw egg and bread-crumbs. Line a pie-dish with this mixture, and break into it as many raw eggs as you wish to use; cover these with the remainder of the mixture, and cook in the oven for ten minutes. This is a very favourite breakfast dish in the country, where both mushrooms and eggs are abundant. You also want to know of a way of cooking eggs (fried) so as to ensure their coming hot to table. I generally cook them like this: I use the empty collop shells for this purpose, which look appetising, and retain the heat admirably. I put a tiny piece of butter into each shell and place it on the closed top of the kitchener or gas stove; into these I break one or two eggs respectively, according to the size of the former, I then sprinkle each with salt and pepper, and when fairly set, which takes about three to four minutes, serve in the shells on a heated dish, garnished with parsley, lettuce, or watercress.

SCALLOPED POTATOES (Potato Maid).—You will find this an excellent recipe for utilising cold potatoes: Put a layer of cold sliced potatoes in a suitable dish and season with salt, pepper, butter, and a little onion chopped very finely; dredge a little flour over this, then add another layer of potatoes and seasoning. Continue this until you have used up your stock of potatoes. Heat enough milk to cover this, and pour over the whole before putting in the oven; cover with a dish or plate, and bake for half-an-hour or three-quarters, according to oven heat, then remove your cover and brown. A little grated cheese—Parmesan for preference—is a great improvement, but is not absolutely necessary. This is the American mode of scalloping potatoes.

KARA.

Digitized by Google

LEMCO"

We constantly receive letters like the following :—

"I can testify as to the quality of your extract as I am a frequent user of same. I am sorry to find that several times when I have asked for Liebig's Extract, I have had palmed off on me an inferior article which, when tasted, had nothing like the flavour of yours. I shall take care to order it as Lemco in future."

In order to avoid incidents of this sort customers should always order our extract as "LEMCO."

"LEMCO" is made from the progeny of pure bred British Oxen.

It contains the essence of more beef and better beef than its imitations.

That is why "LEMCO" lasts longer and is cheaper to use than other extracts.

Every particle of "LEMCO" is absolutely pure—genuine beef essence that gives to Soups, Sauces, Gravies, and all savoury dishes a superb richness and delicacy of flavour that no other meat extract can equal.

The original and only genuine Liebig Company's Extract of Beef.

LEMCO, 4, Lloyd's Avenue, London, E.C.

"MATCHLESS"

IS THE # KING

OF

METAL POLISHES.

Buttons says:
"It's a topper."

Free from Acid, Poison and Grit.

MANUFACTURERS:—
THE "MATCHLESS" METAL
POLISH CO., LTD.,
LIVERPOOL.

7/10ths of ALL

Your little ills will find relief in

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

For HEADACHE,
For BILIOUSNESS,
For INDIGESTION,
For TORPID LIVER,
For CONSTIPATION,
For SALLOW SKIN,
For the COMPLEXION.

Very small, and easy to take as sugar.

Purely Vegetable.

Genuine must have signature

PRICE 13½d.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

The Medical Editor of the "Echo" writes in that paper:

"I have been in the habit for years of smoking the 'Flor de Dindigul Cigarettes' or miniature Cigars. They are cheap, and to my idea purer than American or Cuban, and the flavour is far more agreeable."

FLOR DE DINDIGUL CIGARETTES.

ALL TOBACCO LEAF, NO PAPER.

SWEET AROMA AND FASCINATING FLAVOUR.

9 Gold Medals awarded for Excellence.

1d. each; 8/- per 100. Everywhere and from

BEWLAY & CO., Sole Importers, 49, Strand, W.C.

Tobacconists to the Royal Family.

PRICE'S CANDLES.

GOLD MEDAL
PALMITINE
FOR DINING & DRAWING ROOMS

GRAND PRIZE
PARASTRINE
FOR USE UNDER SHADES

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

Another device of the Canadian Government for bringing before the British public the enormous resources of the Dominion of Canada and for the purpose of attracting emigrants to the colony, is the issue of a series of picture post-cards. They are beautifully coloured, giving representations of townships, farmsteads, wheat growing, cattle raising, threshing corn, flour mills, and various incidents connected with farm life, and they depict in a vivid manner the possibilities placed before the emigrant by the Canadian Government. A series will be forwarded to anyone on application to Mr. W. T. R. Preston, the Canadian Commissioner of Emigration, 11-12, Charing Cross, London, S.W.

Mr. Wentworth Croke, by arrangement with Mr. Tom B. Davis, produces at the Apollo Theatre this week "The Gay Lord Vergy." It is frankly an opera bouffe, and this is the description attached to the title by the management and the authors. The scene is laid in France during the time of the Crusades, and the costumes may, therefore, be expected to be quaint and fresh to the eye of London. The plot follows the adventures of Le Sire de Vergy, his wife Gabrielle, and his dearest friend Le Sire de Coucy. The music is, for the greater part, by M. Claude Terrasse, but a number of musical interpolations have been penned by Mr. Theo Wendt, to the lyrics of Mr. Arthur Sturgess. Mr. Sydney Ellison, by permission of Mr. George Edwardes, is producing the opera.

A pretty little photograph mount for the table or sideboard is the Kodak Louis XV. folding-screen, a three-fold mount with red silk ribbon hinges, the colour being an unobtrusive shade of art green with a lithographed design in grey around the border. The photographs slip in at the sides or bottom, and are thus easily removable when a change is desired. These attractive mounts are supplied for quarter-plate and 3A Folding Pocket Kodak or post-card pictures at 6d. each, and are well worth the figure asked.

Trafalgar Day this year will be marked at Earl's Court by the distribution of all the receipts to Naval charities. A specially attractive programme has been prepared for that day.

Miss Grace Chalmers, who is touring in "The Christian," was specially selected by Mr. Hall Caine to play the rôle of Glory.

Ash, Blackpool.

MISS GRACE CHALMERS

As Glory in "The Christian" on tour.

Although this young actress possesses wonderful histrionic abilities, she was not educated for the stage, neither does she come of a theatrical family. "That actresses are born, not made," was never better illustrated than in this instance. Miss Chalmers has received numerous offers to appear in London.

Miss Ida Conquest, whose portrait we reproduce on this page, is one of the best-known leading ladies in America. She was for a long time with Mr. John Drew, and afterwards with Mr. William Gillette, and her appearance in England as leading lady for Mr. William Collier, which has been arranged

MISS IDA CONQUEST

A well-known American actress, who is appearing in this country as leading lady for Mr. William Collier.

by Mr. Charles Frohman, will give the English public an opportunity for the first time of seeing an American leading lady who has created during the last six years as many as twenty different parts.

The Lyceum, which has been closed for some weeks in preparation for the ballet "Excelsior," reopened last week. The programme, which should prove a very acceptable one, includes many popular turns. Wrestling again promises to become an important feature in music hall entertainments, and this week Hackenschmidt is reappearing at the Oxford.

Mr. George Dance's Company with "The Duchess of Dantzig" proved an enormous attraction at the New Theatre, Ealing, last week, and such an excellent rendering of this popular comic opera was given that the large audiences are not to be wondered at. Miss May Glenn takes the part of the Duchess, and sings and acts well, being ably supported by Mr. Leonard Griffiths as François Lefebvre.

The annual general meeting of Carreras, Limited, will be held this week, for the purpose of considering the directors' report and statement. A further dividend of 7½ per cent. (making 10 per cent. for the year) will be recommended. The year's profit, after writing off all advertising, and providing for depreciation, bad debts, etc., is £23,607 17s.

"Le Matin" of September 15 announces that Redfern has been awarded the Grand Prix in the Liege Exhibition for the best collection of dresses. It will be remembered that this firm obtained the Grand Prize in the recent St. Louis Exhibition in competition in the French section with all the French dressmakers.

Visitors to Weymouth who stay at the Royal are always sure of comfortable quarters, good catering, and every attention. Weymouth is a very favourite holiday resort now, and the Royal Hotel, being in a prominent position—the best in the town—has an endless succession of patrons throughout the season. The decorations and sanitary arrangements are of the most modern description, and everything possible is done to keep the hotel up to the highest standard of elegance.

Amusements.

His Majesty's. Mr. Tree.
Owing to structural alterations Mr. Tree has transferred "Oliver Twist" to the WALDORF THEATRE.
Every Evening at 8.
Charles Dickens's
OLIVER TWIST.
Dramatised by J. Comyns Carr.
Fagin ... ... ... Mr. Tree.
Nancy ... ... ... Miss Constance Collier.
Matinee To-Day (Saturday) and
Every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.
Seats booked for His Majesty's Theatre will be transferred to the Waldorf Theatre.

Criterion Theatre, W.
Sole Lessee: Sir Charles Wyndham.
Manager: Mr. Frank Curzon.
Every Evening at 8.30,
Mr. Frank Curzon's Company in
THE WHITE CHRYSANTHEMUM,
A new Lyrical Comedy. Written by Leedham Bantock and Arthur Anderson. Music by Howard Talbot. Mesdames Marie George, Millie Legarde, Isabel Jay, etc. Messrs. Rutland Barrington, Lawrence Grossmith, M. R. Morand, Henry A. Lytton, etc. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.

Wyndham's Theatre.
Proprietor: Sir Charles Wyndham.
Sole Lessee and Manager: Mr. Frank Curzon.
At 8.50,
WHAT THE BUTLER SAW.
Preceded by Mr. Chas. Bertram at 8.20.
Matinee Every Wednesday and Saturday at 3.
Box Office now open. Telephone 4028 Gerrard.

Daly's Theatre.
Produced by Mr. George Edwardes.
To-night and Every Evening at 8.15.
Matinee Every Saturday at 2.30.
THE LITTLE MICHUS.
By A. Vanloo and G. Duval. Music by Andre Messager.
Adapted for the English stage by Henry Hamilton.
Lyrics by Percy Greenbank.
Mlle. ADELINE GENEE in a NEW DANCE.
Box Office 10 to 10.

Prince of Wales' Theatre.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. Frank Curzon.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
To-night at 8.15,
LADY MADCAP.
Matinee Every Wednesday at 2.15.

Haymarket Theatre.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. Frederick Harrison.
Every Evening, at 9.10.
ON THE LOVE PATH.
A Comedy in Three Acts by C. M. S. McLellan.
Miss Ellis Jeffreys and Mr. Gerald Du Maurier.
Mr. Arthur Williams, Mr. Eric Lewis, Mr. A. E. Matthews, Mr. Edmund Maurice, and Miss Jessie Bateman.
Preceded at 8.30 by a Comedy in one Act, called
A PRIVY COUNCIL.
Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.
Box Office now open 10 to 7. Tel. 2933 Gerrard.

Garrick Theatre.
Mr. Arthur Bourchier, Lessee and Manager.
Every Evening at 8.30,
THE WALLS OF JERICHO.
By Alfred Sutro.
Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.

Duke of York's Theatre.
Sole Lessee and Manager: Charles Frohman.
To-night at 8.30.
"CLARICE."
Mr. Thomas H. Burns, Mr. Francis Carlisle, Miss Lucille La Verne, Miss Adelaide Prince, Mr. William Gillette, Miss Marie Doro.

Adelphi.
Lessee and Manager, Otho Stuart.
Every Evening at 8.30.
DR. WAKE'S PATIENT.
A Comedy by W. Gayer Mackay and Robert Ord.
Matinee, Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.
Lilian Braithwaite, Elsie Chester, Hilda Thorpe, Mrs. E. H. Brooke, Edith Ostlere, Pamela Hope, etc. C. M. Hallard, W. Gayer Mackay, Herbert Grimwood, Alfred Brydone, Charles Rock, Adam Alexander, etc.
Box Office open 10 to 10. Tel. 2645 Gerrard.

Promenade Concerts. — Queen's Hall.
To-Night and Nightly at 8.
QUEEN'S HALL ORCHESTRA.
Conductor: Mr. Henry J. Wood.
1/- to 5/-. Usual Agents, Chappell's Box Office, Queen's Hall, and Queen's Hall Orchestra (Ltd.), 320, Regent Street.
Robert Newman, Manager.

Digitized by Google

DR. JOHNSON'S BREWERY

THE KING

CORNELL UNIVERSITY
APR 12 1905
LIBRARY.

VOL. XX.—No. 426.
REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O AS A NEWSPAPER.
SATURDAY, APRIL 1st, 1905.
Published Weekly. PRICE SIXPENCE. Subscription Price per annum, post free, Inland 29s. 2d. Foreign, 39s.

"The Times" says—

"The Dunlop Company has every reason to be satisfied with the endurance shown by manufactured in England."

DUNLOP TYRES

A BRITISH invention made by BRITISH labour; moderate in price, and of the HIGHEST QUALITY.

NEW BOOKLET—"DUNLOP MOTOR TYRES"—GRATIS AND POST FREE.

DUNLOP TYRE Co., LTD., Aston, Birmingham; and 14, Regent Street, London, S.W.

"Sanitas" the ONLY NIOE DISINFECTANT

For Domestic use and Washing Wounds.

"SANITAS" is Fragrant, Non-Poisonous, Does not Stain Linen, and is devoid of all objectionable qualities. It Purifies the Air by its active Oxygen and rapidly Kills all Disease Germs.

1s. Pint Bottles and 5s. Gallon.

ALSO OIL, EMULSION, POWDER, SOAPS, INHALERS, &c.

THE "SANITAS" CO., Ltd., Locksley St., Limehouse, London, E. (New Address).

"NO BETTER FOOD."—DR. ANDREW WILSON, F.R.S.E., etc.

FRY'S PURE CONCENTRATED COCOA. 300 GOLD MEDALS, ETC.

NOT A STIMULANT MERELY FOR THE MOMENT, BUT A PERMANENT AND AGREEABLE FORM OF NOURISHMENT.

WHY is the Sale of HOLBROOK'S SAUCE Increasing daily?

Because it is the PREMIER SAUCE of the World.

PICKERING'S 'KHAKI-BLANCO.'

"Khaki" cleaned regularly with this article keeps a good colour, and always looks like new. . .

For Cleaning and Renovating "Khaki" Accoutrements, Helmets, Shoes, etc.

Everybody knows the merits of Pickering's Blanco for whitening all articles of Buckskin Leather or White Canvas; and now Pickering's have met the want of the day by introducing "KHAKI-BLANCO," a similar preparation to Blanco, but of a "Khaki" colour; it is prepared in a most careful manner to ensure an Evenness of Colour, and contains nothing at all injurious to any "Khaki" article to which it may be applied.

White belts and other military equipment, buckskin, and canvas shoes, etc., can be made khaki colour by the application of "KHAKI-BLANCO," and this will in nowise interfere with their being re-whitened with Blanco at any future time.

Sold at Canteens, also by Ironmongers, Saddlers, Brushmakers, etc.

Sole Manufacturers: JOSEPH PICKERING & SONS, LTD., SHEFFIELD.

Branch Office: St. George's House, Eastcheap, London, E.C.

The best remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

Safest aperient for delicate Constitutions, Ladies, Children, and Infants.

THE CLIFTON GRAND SPA HOTEL.

Commanding position facing the Suspension Bridge. Beautiful Terraced Gardens and Pleasure Grounds skirting the River Avon and facing the far-famed Leigh Woods and Nightingale Valley. Perfect and Modern Installation of nearly every description of Baths. Tariff on application.

Telegrams:—"SPA, BRISTOL."
Telephone No. 5655, BRISTOL.

Address: MANAGER.

PERRY & TURNER, LTD., BRISTOL.

MAKERS OF THE

PREMIER BROUGHAM WAGONETTE.

STOKES CROFT, BRISTOL, FREDERICK ST., CARDIFF.

Digitized by Google

— FOR WASHING HOLLAND IT DELIGHTS THE DUTCH —

SUNLIGHT SOAP

For Holland Dresses, Holland Covers, Holland Blinds, and all Household Washing.

A CLEAN SOAP FOR CLEAN PEOPLE.

LEVER BROTHERS, LTD., PORT SUNLIGHT, CHESHIRE.

The name LEVER on soap is a guarantee of Purity and Excellence.

Digitized by Google

The Correct Method OF Feeding

The old idea of trying to make a young infant adapt itself to an unsuitable food is wrong. Every sensible mother knows that a farinaceous food which nourishes a child of 12 months would make a baby of one month ill. Never give a starchy food to children under five or six months of age, as young infants cannot digest starch, and the giving of such foods has much to do with the illness and malnutrition amongst young children.

The only sensible and rational plan is to give suitable foods adapted to the age and growing needs of the child, and this is provided by

The 'Allenburys' Foods.

Milk Food No. 1.

For Infants from birth to three months of age. So like mother's milk that it can be given alternately with the breast with perfect comfort to the child.

The 'Allenburys'

Milk Food No. 2.

For babies between the ages of three and six months. Simply No. 1 strengthened to meet the increasing wants of the baby. It stimulates and strengthens the digestive organs.

The 'Allenburys'

Malted Food No. 3.

For children of six months and upwards. The best food for developing the digestive powers of the child. It promotes the formation of firm flesh and strong bone.

A Pamphlet on Infant Feeding and Management sent free on request.

ALLEN & HANBURYS Ltd.,
37, Lombard St., LONDON, E.C.

U.S.A.: Niagara Falls. Australia: Sydney. Canada: Toronto. S. Africa: Cape Town.

---

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE

TEOFANI'S

HIGH-CLASS

CIGARETTES.

TEOFANI'S Cigarettes receive the Highest Awards at all International Exhibitions, and are Sold by Leading Purveyors throughout the WORLD.

TEOFANI & CO., LONDON.

---

To H.M. THE KING

THE POPULAR

SCOTCH IS "BLACK & WHITE" WHISKY.

To H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.

---

SULPHOLINE SKIN LOTION.

Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches,
Entirely fade away.

---

The True Time-Saver, WATERMAN'S IDEAL.

Always ready to write, always right, always easy when writing.

Waterman's Ideal adds minutes to the value of the working hour. It is the writer's right hand.

From 10/6. In Silver and Gold for Presentation. Of Stationers, Jewellers, etc. Dainty illustrated booklet on Pens post free from L. & C. HARDTMUTH, 12, Golden Lane, London, E.C.; New York, 173, Broadway.

---

MEDICAL GALVANISM

HAS CONQUERED some of the most obstinate complaints after all other remedies have failed.

HALE'S IMPROVED ELECTRIC BELTS and BATTERIES for wearing next the body without blistering or injuring the skin. These appliances are

PERFECT GENERATORS OF ELECTRICITY, and are most comfortable in wear. Price One Guinea.

RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, and GOUT are speedily REMOVED by this powerful Agent.

ELECTRIC BELT and SUSPENSOR, price 42s., for MEN, for VARICOCELE, Nervous Debility, and Exhaustion, Bladder Weakness, etc.

Pamphlets Gratis. Consultations Free.

HALE & SON, Medical Galvanists,
117, CHANCERY LANE, LONDON.

---

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Prevents the Hair from falling off.

Restores Gray or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.

Being delicately perfumed, it leaves no unpleasant odour.

IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin, or even white linen.

Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.

Ask your Chemist or Hair-Dresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.

Prepared only by the . . .

ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO., Ltd.,
33, Farringdon Road, London, E.C.

---

РУБЛЬ КОФЕ

The Coffee of the Epicure.

ASTOUNDING FREE OFFER.

Just send a postcard and we will forward quite Free of all Charge to the first 100 applicants of our famous ROUBLE COFFEE.

A FREE PACKET

THE METATA AGENTS,
17k, Devonshire Square,
LONDON, E.C.

| Price per lb. | Samples post free |
|---|---|
| 2/4 | 8d. |
| 1/10 | 6d. |
| 1/6 | 4d. |

ROUBLE COFFEE

---

THE GARDEN.

WEEKLY, PRICE 1d.

20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.

---

No Breakfast Table complete without

EPPS'S

The Cream of Cocoas.

COCOA

The Most Nutritious and Economical.

Digitized by Google

HOLBROOK'S
GENUINE WORCESTERSHIRE
SAUCE

"As good as heart can wish."

Henry IV. (2) Act 1, Sc. 1.

Printed by Hudson & Kearns, 83, 85 & 87, Southwark Street, S.E., and Published by them at 20, Tavistock Street, London, W.C., and Geo. Newnes, Ltd., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

OCT 11 1905

THE KING

VOL. XX.—No. 452.
REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O. AS A NEWSPAPER.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 30th, 1905.

Published Weekly.
PRICE SIXPENCE.
Subscription Price, per annum, post free,
Inland, 29s. 2d. Foreign, 39s.

THE CLOTH FOR GOLF SUITS.

"HYDEA"

is the best English cloth - made of the best English wool—grown on the HYDE Farm, Gloucestershire. It is delightfully soft and elastic - absolutely the best for sportsmen—most durable for out-o'-doors- most handsome for town suits—long thread—refined finish.

THE KING WEARS IT,

and pays no more than you—because there's only one quality at one price "HYDEA" is stamped on every two yards of the selvedge - that's how you may know it—that, and its excellent surface! Send for FREE Booklet —

APPERLY, CURTIS & CO., Ltd., Dudbridge Mills, Stroud, West of England.

BRIGHTON MOTOR RACES.

The WORLD'S RECORD for the standing kilometre and TWELVE FIRST PRIZES were won on double as many as upon any other.

DUNLOP TYRES,

THE SAUCE OF THE UNIVERSE!

HOLBROOK'S

GENUINE WORCESTERSHIRE

SAUCE.

ASK FOR

FRY'S "FIVE BOYS" MILK CHOCOLATE.

BRITISH MILK AND BRITISH LABOUR.

PERRY & TURNER, LTD., BRISTOL.

MAKERS OF THE

PREMIER BROUGHAM WAGONETTE.

STOKES CROFT, BRISTOL, FREDERICK ST., CARDIFF.

THE CLIFTON GRAND SPA HOTEL.

Commanding position facing the Suspension Bridge. Beautiful Terraced Gardens and Pleasure Grounds skirting the River Avon and facing the far-famed Leigh Woods and Nightingale Valley. Perfect and Modern Installation of nearly every description of Baths. Tariff on application.

Telegrams:—"SPA, BRISTOL."
Telephone No. 5655, BRISTOL.

Address: MANAGER.

Digitized by Google

"I always take Antexema Soap with me."

Our Great Free Gift Distribution

WE want to introduce "Antexema Soap" to the public because we are confident that "Antexema Soap" only needs to be known to be appreciated, and only appreciated to be asked for in the future; hence it is that we are making a great free gift distribution as per offer at foot.

No woman is beautiful if she has not a delicately-tinted complexion, free from spot or blemish, and a luxuriant growth of beautiful hair. It is not pretended that "Antexema Soap" will alter either form or features, but it is merely a statement of fact to say that "Antexema Soap" will prevent blackheads, pimples, and red, rough, oily skin, and render it clear, pure, fresh, and healthy, and make the hair silky and glossy.

If you treat your skin with proper consideration you will find your reward not only in improved looks, but in better health. Realise for a moment that on the surface of your skin there are no fewer than seven million pores, and every one of these seven millions has its proper work to do, and if the pores fail to do their work you can neither be healthy or look healthy. Imagine, then, how the health must inevitably suffer if hundreds of thousands of these pores are stopped up or clogged with impurity of any kind, and then you will see how exceedingly important it is to use "Antexema Soap," and so keep the pores open as Nature intended, and enable them to perform their functions thoroughly.

Once more we ask the question "What soap do you use?" because so many people seem satisfied with a soap that merely takes off the surface dirt, and leaves it still stopping up the pores. You must use soap, then why not use a soap possessing such great virtues as "Antexema Soap," the soap that beautifies, and which, by cleansing the pores as well as the surface, maintains skin health and beauty? It is a charming soap to use, possessing as it does the fragrance, refreshing, healing, and antiseptic virtues of the pine forest.

For washing the head you need to be very careful about the soap you use. A coarse soap with excessive alkali makes the hair dry and brittle, whilst a soap containing free fat will make the skin greasy and so attract dirt. "Antexema Soap," on the contrary, completely cleanses the scalp, makes the hair grow in a healthy fashion, and any tendency to baldness is counteracted by its use. "Antexema Soap" lathers beautifully, and makes hard water soft, so that is an ideal soap for a shampoo.

There is no soap equal to "Antexema Soap" for washing baby. It preserves the beauty and bloom of baby's dainty skin, and makes the lovely flossy hair even more bright and exquisitely soft. Coarse common soap should never be used for baby's bath, as it not only spoils the skin and injures the hair, but gives rise to chafing and skin irritation, and makes baby miserable and fretful.

"Antexema Soap" is supplied by Chemists and Stores at 6d per tablet; or three tablets in a box for 1s. 6d. Or if you send a sixpenny postal order for a sixpenny tablet of "Antexema Soap," it will be forwarded enclosed in a handsome tortoise-shell soap case decorated in gold, which will be an ornament to your dressing table and most convenient for packing in your dressing case. Write immediately, mention THE KING, and address your letter to The Antexema Company, 83, Castle Road, London, N.W. There is no time like the present.

HIGHEST QUALITY
TURKISH TOWELS
AND SIMILAR GOODS.

SOFT AND ABSORBENT.

THE "OSMAN" TURKISH TOWEL.
THE "OSMAN" TURKISH BATH SHEET.
THE "OSMAN" TURKISH BATH MAT.
THE "OSMAN" TURKISH BATH GOWN.

THE "OSMAN" Turkish Goods enumerated here are an absolute necessity in every household. They are a luxury, but not expensive, and can be obtained at prices within reach of every one. Be sure to buy the "Osman" brand and avoid imitations.

Made by BARLOW & JONES LIMITED, MANCHESTER;

And Sold by all High-class Drapers and Upholsterers.

Digitized by Google

Sheffield Triennial Musical Festival.

THE KING

THE TIMES says:—
"For variety of interest, and excellence of illustration, THE KING has no superior in the pictorial press."

OCTOBER 4, 5 & 6, 1905.

The issue of THE KING for OCTOBER 7 will contain:

I. POLITICAL PEN PICTURE: COLONEL SIR HOWARD VINCENT, K.C.M.G., C.B., Conservative M.P. for Central Sheffield, and one of the Patrons of the Festival.

II.—TRAVEL ARTICLE ON SHEFFIELD AND ITS NEIGHBOURHOOD.

III.—FOUR-PAGE ILLUSTRATED ARTICLE ON THE SHEFFIELD MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

IV.—COLLECTOR'S NOTE-BOOK ARTICLE: OLD SHEFFIELD PLATE.

THE MOST APPROPRIATE MEMENTO OF SHEFFIELD'S GREAT MUSICAL WEEK.

On Sale everywhere from October 4. Order from all Booksellers, and of GEORGE NEWNES, Ltd., 3-12, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.

A Retrospect!

Among the many attractions which THE KING offers weekly to its readers, "On the Links" for Golfers, and "Political Pen Pictures" for political readers, figure strongly.

POLITICAL PEN PICTURES is an established feature of THE KING, consisting of a descriptive article of Members, or prospective Members, of the House of Commons. A full-page frontispiece of the subject invariably accompanies these articles. Since the inauguration of this department the following gentlemen have formed the subject of article and frontispiece.—

| | |
|---|---|
| Mr. A. E. W. MASON | August 27, 1904. |
| Mr. A. W. H. PONSONBY | September 3, 1904. |
| Mr. A. RENDELL | October 15, 1904. |
| Mr. J. J. HAYE | October 22, 1904. |
| Mr. J. E. SEARS | October 29, 1904. |
| Alderman W. H. DAVIES | November 5, 1904. |
| Mr. A. E. DUNN | November 12, 1904. |
| Mr. T. J. LENNARD | November 19, 1904. |
| Mr. A. W. WILLS, | November 26, 1904. |
| Mr. W. H. DICKINSON | December 3, 1904. |
| Mr. R. W. PERKS | December 10, 1904. |
| Mr. F. T. LEYLAND SCARISBRICK | December 24, 1904. |
| Alderman A. WAKERLEY | December 31, 1904. |
| Alderman L. L. MORSE | January 7, 1905. |
| Mr. DONALD MACLEAN | January 21, 1905. |
| Mr. STEPHEN COLLINS | January 28, 1905. |
| Mr. J. MEIR ASTBURY | February 4, 1905. |
| Mr. R. LAIDLAW | February 18, 1905. |
| Mr. R. A. GERMAINE | March 4, 1905. |
| Mr. G. P. GOOCH | March 26, 1905. |
| Mr. S. J. POCOCK | April 8, 1905. |
| Captain MALCOLM KINCAID-SMITH | April 22, 1905 |
| Mr. R. WHITE | May 6, 1905. |
| Mr. TIMOTHY DAVIES, L.C.C. | May 27, 1905. |
| Mr. S. K. HOCKING | June 10, 1905. |
| Mr. H. GREENWOOD | June 17, 1905. |
| Mr. G. A. HARDY | June 24, 1905. |
| Mr. A. H. BURGOYNE | September 10, 1904. |
| Sir V. CAILLARD, K.B. | October 1, 1904. |
| Mr. A. S. BENN | December 17, 1904. |
| Mr. A. FELL | February 11, 1905. |
| Mr. J. KEBTY FLETCHER | February 25, 1905. |
| Sir H. JOHNSTON, K.C.B. | March 11, 1905. |
| Major DALRYMPLE WHITE | April 15, 1905. |
| Mr. D. B. HALL | April 29, 1905. |
| Mr. P. ROSE-INNES | May 13, 1905. |
| Colonel WELBY | May 20, 1905. |
| Mr. SANDERS | June 3, 1905. |
| Mr. ION H. BENN | July 8, 1905. |
| Mr. JOHN BURNS, M.P. | September 24, 1904. |
| Alderman C. W. BOWERMAN | January 14, 1905. |

THE KING

Of all Booksellers. Sixpence Weekly.

Digitized by Google

van Houten's Cocoa

ECLIPSES ALL OTHERS

Pure JAEGER Wool

Reasons for Dr. Jaeger's Reforms.

Dr. Jaeger's Reforms of Clothing and Bedding are based on the scientific adaptation of the body's covering, by day and by night, to the nature of the skin, and to its exhaling or perspiring function, so important to the body's general health.

These requirements were found to be fulfilled only by porous fabrics of Animal Wool, while plant fabrics (Linen and Cotton) are antagonistic to them.

The Jaeger Underwear has four principal features:—

1.—Pure, unadulterated, and undyed wool, not chemically treated.
2.—Porous stockinet web, so soft as not to irritate the most sensitive skin.
3.—Protection against draught at front and back.
4.—Splendid wearing quality, and non-liability to shrink.

The Jaeger Day and Night Wear, made throughout of pure porous Wool, tends to constantly drain the tissues of superfluous fat and water. The flesh thus becomes literally hardened, and the body is fitted to resist the attacks of epidemic and other disease germs, which, when the tissues are spongy and watery, find a more favourable soil to multiply in.

The great influence of Clothing upon Health is dealt with in Dr. Jaeger's very interesting "Health Culture," which will be forwarded free on application to any Jaeger Depôt. Illustrated Catalogue also free.

LOOK FOR THE LABEL! To checkmate the dishonest use of the name of JAEGER, look for the label on each article, and insist that the goods be invoiced as "JAEGER."

The JAEGER natural wool UNDERWEAR is GUARANTEED against SHRINKAGE.

The Jaeger United Garment (Patent).

The most comfortable form of Underwear yet devised. It combines either Vest and Pants or Shirt and Pants. Does not "ride up," or get out of place.

Price from - - - 14/6.

Write for Price List (No. 24) containing Patterns and 230 Illustrations. Post Free.

LONDON—
126, Regent Street, W.
456, Strand (Charing Cross), W.C.
30, Sloane Street, S.W.
115, Victoria Street, S.W.
85 and 86, Cheapside E.C

BATH—10, New Bond Street.
BRIGHTON—59, East Street.
EASTBOURNE—6, Grove Road.
EDINBURGH—1191, Princes Street.
GLASGOW—16, Buchanan Street.
LEEDS—23, Commercial Street.

LIVERPOOL—58, Church Street and 4, Castle Street.
MANCHESTER—18, King Street.
NEWCASTLE—6, Northumberland Street.
PLYMOUTH—9, George Street.

The JAEGER GOODS are sold in most towns. Address sent on application to Wholesale and Shipping Office 95, Milton Street, London, E.C.

LOOK FOR THE LABEL! To checkmate the dishonest use of the name of JAEGER look for the label on each article, and insist that the goods be described as JAEGER on invoice.

Printed by HUDSON & KEARNS, Hatfield Street Works, Stamford Street, S.E., and Published by them at 20, Tavistock Street, London, W.C., and GEO. NEWNES, Ltd. 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google